an office furnished by the board of county commissioners, in which the books, records, and papers pertaining to the probate division shall be deposited and safely kept by the probate judge. The board shall provide suitable cases for the safekeeping and preservation of the books and papers of the court and furnish such blankbooks, blanks, and stationery as the probate judge requires in the discharge of official duties. CASE NOTES AND OAG

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. A Probate Court located in the courthouse, being a court of general jurisdiction, has a paramount right to use of space therein necessary for the proper and efficient operation of such court, however, the necessity for such space presents a question of fact and such court is entitled to such space as against other branches of government only where it is shown that such space is reasonably necessary as distinguished from being merely desirable: State ex rel Finley v. Pfeiffer et al, 163 OS 149, 56 OO 190, 128 NE(2d) 57.

2. This section authorizes the county commissioners to furnish designated books; but compensation for copying or recording cost bills in such books cannot be allowed, unless there is some statutory provision for it: Commissioners v. Millard, 4 NP 53, 4 OD 419 [affirmed, Millard v. Commissioners, 13 CC 518, 7 CD 115].

3. Under GC § 2419 (RC § 307.01) and this section it is the duty of the county commissioners to provide suitable files and cases for the safe-keeping and preservation of the books and papers of the probate court, and the probate judge is without power to purchase the same out of the appropriation made for the administrative expense of his office, pursuant to GC § 10501-5 (RC § 2101.11): 1942 OAG No.5465.

§ 2101.02 Judge of probate division; election; qualifications; term.

Every six years, in each county having a separate judge of the probate division of the court of common pleas, one probate judge shall be elected who is qualified as required by section 2301.01 of the Revised Code. He shall hold office for six years, commencing on the ninth day of February next following his election.

HISTORY: GC § 10501-1; 114 v 320; 116 v 481; 123 v 467; 125 v 107 (EF 10-2-53); 133 v H 7. EF 11-19-69.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The qualifications for the office of probate judge not having been prescribed by the constitution, the general assembly has power to fix and determine the essential qualifications for the office. Pursuant to that authority the legislature in this section prescribed two alternative tests of qualification: training and experience by serving in the office as probate judge immediately prior to the election in question, or admission to the practice as an attorney and counselor at law: *State ex rel Lippincott v. Comment

Uniform rules of practice in the probate courts of Ohio were approved by the supreme court of the state of Ohio on February 24, 1932, [For rules of practice in the probate courts of Ohio, approved by the Supreme Court, February 24, 1932, see ADDAMS and HOSFORD'S OHIO PROBATE PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Davies revision] with "explanations", by the probate code committee of the probate judges' association. However, there is grave doubt as to the constitutionality of this section. On March 14, 1933, the following letter was written by Chief Justice Weygandt of the supreme court of Ohio to Hon. William C. Wiseman, judge of the probate court of Montgomery county at Dayton, Ohio:

"In answer to your communication with reference to the Rules of the Probate Courts of Ohio, we have again examined Section 10501-13, General Code, and have some question as to its constitutionality and cannot at this time make any final declaration in regard to it. Sufficient is it to say that the rules proposed by the probate judges' association and approved by this court last year might be followed by your court so far as practicable, and if additional rules, not inconsistent with the Constitution and the state statutes, seem necessary to you in the transaction of your business, you are of course privileged to adopt them.

"The approval which this court has already given the rules submitted by the probate judges' association is not to be regarded as a finality, as such approval, granted upon request of the association, involved no concrete case. In the event a record should come before us, involving the conflict of any such rules with the Ohio Constitution, the state statutes or the decisions of this court, we should, of course, give the matter careful consideration."

In 8 OBar 447, it is stated that Judge Hugh R. Gilmore transmitted to the Ohio supreme court a draft of rules for the common pleas court of Preble county, prepared under the provisions of GC § 12223-47. In a letter, after acknowledging receipt of the rules, Chief Justice Carl V. Weygandt wrote to Judge Gilmore:

"After due consideration of the matter the court has instructed me to advise you of its adherence to the views expressed in the case of Meyer v. Brinsky, 129 Ohio St. 371 [2 OO 373]. Courts are vested with inherent power to establish rules regulating their proceedings and facilitating the administration of justice. Under the Constitution of Ohio the supreme court has no control over the rule-making power of other courts except through the usual testing process of proceedings in error. You are therefore at liberty to promulgate your court rules in the usual manner without first submitting them to this court for approval.

"In order that there may be no confusion about this matter I am sending a copy of this letter to the presiding judge[s] of the constitutional courts of the state, namely the courts of appeals, the courts of common pleas and the courts of probate."

In Meyer v. Brinsky, 129 OS 371, 2 OO 373, 169 NE 291, a rule of the Lake county common pleas court required the employment of local co-counsel by counsel actually of record but not maintaining an office in that county. It was held that while courts are vested with inherent power to establish rules regulating their proceedings and facilitating the administration of justice, nevertheless court rules must not contravene either the organic law or a valid statute and must be reasonable in their operation. The rule in question was held invalid because when the supreme court of Ohio has duly admitted a person to practice as an attorney and counselor at law, the privilege thereby conferred is not restricted to one county but is statewide and cannot be abridged by a local court rule.

9. A board of county commissioners acting pursuant to RC § 325.17 to fix the compensation of deputies, assistants and other employees of a probate court must, by reason of this section, appropriate the amount deemed necessary by the judge of such court, subject to the limitation set by such section, in the absence of an abuse of discretion by such judge: 1965 OAG No.65-32.

10. Revised Code § 2101.11 permits but does not require the board of county commissioners to approve a budget for the probate court which exceeds the amount collected in the preceding year by that court: 1968 OAG No.68-094.

1. Under USRS § 2165, before the amendment of June 29, 1906, 34 Stats at L 596 et seq (Session I, c 3592), any state court which had a common law jurisdiction and a seal and a clerk had jurisdiction to grant naturalization to aliens; and accordingly a probate court had such jurisdiction, although it did not have a general common law jurisdiction. Accordingly a plea in abatement which sets forth that one of the grand jurors who returned an indictment was an unnaturalized citizen, is not supported by sufficient evidence if the record shows that such juror was duly naturalized by the probate court of Ohio before the amendment of June 29, 1906: Bell v. State, 7 App 185, 27 OCA 353, 29 CD 48.

2. General Code § 1594 (now GC § 10501-15 [RC § 2101.12]), which provides in part for a bond record to be kept by the probate court, contemplates that only such bonds as have been taken and approved by the probate judge will be carried into the record of bonds, and a bond found in such record is presumed to have been approved by the probate court: Rowe v. Aetna Casualty &c. Co., 69 App 291, 24 OO 74, 42 NE(2d) 706.

3. This section does not require the probate judge to keep a court calendar: Commissioners v. Millard, 4 NP 53, 4 OD 419 [affirmed, Millard v. Commissioners, 13 CC 518, 7 CD 115]; Stark v. Clark, 17 CC(NS) 398, 24 CD 135 [affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 586].

4. A probate judge, having recorded a birth or death certificate, is without authority to change his records, but may, by amendment, correct his records to conform to the facts contained in the original instrument when an instrument was erroneously recorded. He has no authority to supply a missing birth or death certificate or to supply supplemental information to an incomplete certificate: 1940 OAG No. 1744.

5. By virtue of GC § 10501-5 (RC § 2101.12), the probate court is required to keep books to incorporate the records and data mentioned in subsections 1 to 13. Therefore said probate court, by order duly entered, may include in one book, provided the same is as required by GC § 10501-16 (RC § 2101.12), the records and data mentioned in subsections 5, 6, 7, 8 and 11 of GC § 10501-15 [RC § 2101.12, subsections (E), (F), (G), (I) and (L)]. However, inheritance tax proceedings should be kept in a separate book in view of GC § 5348-7 (RC § 5731.48): 1948 OAG No.3489.

6. The probate court, by order duly entered, may include in one book, provided the same is properly indexed, the dockets mentioned in subsections 2, 3, 4 and 9 of GC § 10501-15 [RC § 2101.12, subsections (B), (C), (D) and (J)]: 1948 OAG No.3489.

7. A probate court may make up a record in so far as same is required by RC §§ 2101.12, 3107.14, 5123.37, 5123.38 and 5731.48, by microfilming or other duplication process as authorized by RC § 901, provided the original documents are maintained on file and until their eventual destruction is accomplished only in accordance with the provisions of RC § 149.38. 1955 OAG No.5667. (1950 OAG p.39 overruled.)

8. Proceedings in adoption cases should be separately recorded in a book kept for that purpose and separately indexed, in accordance with RC § 3107.14, and should not be journalized or generally recorded as provided by RC § 2101.12(E), (G): 1959 OAG No.652.

9. The probate court is required to keep books wherein shall be incorporated the records and data mentioned in subsections (A) to (O) both inclusive of RC § 2101.12: 1967 OAG No. 67-060.

10. The probate judge may properly include in one book, provided the same is properly indexed, the dockets mentioned in subsections (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (G), (H), (I), (J) and (L) of RC § 2101.12: 1967 OAG No. 67-060.

§ 2101.13 Probate judge shall make entries omitted by his predecessor. (GC § 10501-8)

When a probate judge, whether elected or appointed, enters upon the discharge of his duties, he shall make, in the respective books of his office, the proper records, entries, and indexes omitted by his predecessors in office. When made, such entries shall have the same validity and effect as though they had been made at the proper time and by the officer whose duty it was to make them, and such judge shall sign all entries and records made by him as though such entries, proceedings, and records had been commenced, prosecuted, determined, and made by or before him.

HISTORY: GC § 10501-8; 114 v 320 (322); 125 v 903 (960). Eff 10-1-53. For an analogous section, see former GC § 1586.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. This section, providing that when a judge of a probate court "enters upon the discharge of his duties, he shall make . . . the proper records, entries, and indexes omitted by his predecessor," places upon such successor judge the duty to perform nondiscretionary acts omitted by his predecessor, but does not place upon him the duty to make a journal entry allowing attorney fees, which involves the exercise of discretion: State ex rel Egbert v. Leiser, 67 App 350, 21 OO 303, 36 NE(2d) 874.

2. In addition to the probate court's inherent common law power to enter judgments nunc pro tunc, this section, specifically empowers the probate judge to make entries omitted by his predecessor and in a combined probate-juvenile court this statute also applies to the juvenile court: In re Howell, 74 OLA 217, 140 NE(2d) 347 (JC).

§ 2101.14 Care and preservation of papers; time stamp. (GC §§ 10501-6, 10501-38)

All pleadings, accounts, vouchers, and other papers in each estate, trust, assignment, guardianship, or other proceeding, ex parte or adversary, which are filed in the probate court shall be kept together, and upon the final termination or settlement of such case, cause, or proceeding shall be preserved for future reference and examination. Such papers shall be properly jacketed, and otherwise tied, fastened, or held together, numbered, lettered, or otherwise marked in such manner that they may be readily found by reference to proper memoranda upon the docket, record, or index entries thereof, which memoranda shall be made by the probate judge. Certificates of marriage, reports of births and deaths, and similar papers not part of a case or proceeding, shall be arranged and preserved separately in the order of their dates or in which they were filed. As used in this section "case" or "cause" includes all proceedings in the settlement of any estate, guardianship, or assignment, except as provided in section 2101.141 [2101.14.1] of the Revised Code.

The probate court shall provide a time stamp and shall stamp on all papers filed in said court the day, month, and year of the filing thereof.

HISTORY: GC §§ 10501-6, 10501-38; 114 v 320 (321, 329); 125 v 245. Eff 10-2-53. For an analogous section to GC § 10501-6 see former GC § 1585.

This section, prior to the 1953 amendment, was identical to the above except that in line 21 of the first paragraph after the word "assignment" the words "except as provided in section 2101.141 [2101.14.1] of the Revised Code" were not included therein. It was in effect only during the one day of October 1, 1953.

[§ 2101.14.1] § 2101.141 Disposition of obsolete papers.

The vouchers, proof, or other evidence filed in support of the expenditures or distribution stated in an account, which has been filed in the probate court, may be ordered destroyed or otherwise disposed of after a period of twenty-one years has elapsed from the date of its filing, as provided in this section.

Said vouchers, proof, or other evidence of expenditures or distribution may be ordered destroyed or otherwise disposed of after such period of time has elapsed and the account with which they were filed has been approved and settled and recorded, as provided by law at the time of its filing, and the estate has been closed or terminated and there has been a compliance with section 149.38 of the Revised Code. If at the time of the filing of an account it was not required by law to be approved and settled, said requirement shall not be a condition of the precedent to an order for the destruction or other disposition of the vouchers, proof, or other evidence of expenditures or distribution filed with said account.

When the vouchers, proof, or other evidence filed in support of expenditures or distribution stated in an account are microfilmed, they may be ordered destroyed immediately after such record is made and, if required by law, after the approval and settlement of said account.

The inventories, schedules of debts, accounts, pleadings, vouchers, wills, trusts, bonds, and other papers filed in the probate courts by fiduciaries, appointed by said courts and all pleadings filed and court entries for the determination of inheritance tax under former sections 5731.01 to 5731.56 of the Revised Code, and estate tax under sections 5731.01 to 5731.51 of the Revised Code, and all documents filed or received and entries made by the court in conjunction with the instruments referred to in this section, after having been recorded, if required by law to be recorded, may be ordered microfilmed and destroyed at any time after closing or termination of the administration of the estate, trust, or other fiduciary relationship, and may be ordered destroyed or otherwise disposed of without microfilming after a period of twenty-one years has elapsed from the closing or termination of the administration of the estate, trust, or other fiduciary relationship and after there has been a compliance with section 149.38 of the Revised Code.

Nothing herein shall apply to records pertaining to estates on which inheritance tax temporary orders are pending.

Prior to the order of the court directing the destruction or disposition of said vouchers, proof, or other evidence of expenditures or distribution, any party in interest, upon application filed therefor, may have said vouchers, proof, or other evidence of expenditures or distribution recorded, upon payment of the costs incident thereto.

An estate, trust, or other fiduciary relationship shall be deemed to be closed or terminated when a final accounting has been filed, and if required by law at the time of filing said account it has been approved and settled.

6. The limitation of a maximum of ten dollars in probate court fees chargeable in an estate, the assets of which do not exceed five hundred dollars, does not apply to a proceeding for settling a claim for wrongful injury: In re Crum, 31 NP(NS) 105.

7. When acting as judge of a juvenile court, a probate judge may not tax any costs against delinquent, dependent or neglected children, except the costs which may be taxed against delinquent minors under eighteen years of age by virtue of GC § 1654 (see now RC §§ 2151.41, 2151.99): In re Costs, 3 OLA 625.

8. The ten dollar limitation contained in item 48 [(vv)] of this section, applies to the total amount of fees chargeable by a probate judge against an estate, the assets of which do not exceed five hundred dollars in value, regardless of the nature or number of independent proceedings which may be involved in the administration of such estate: 1932 OAG No. 4784.

9. When the new 1933 fees become effective, an entry made by the probate judge providing for a discount of fees, under GC § 10501-45 (RC § 2101.20), is terminated and the probate judge shall charge the new schedule of fees for the remainder of the year 1933: 1933 OAG No.1633.

10. The word "estates" as used in item 48 [(vv)] of this section refers to the estates of deceased persons as well as to estates of living persons in guardianship or trusteeship proceedings under proper jurisdiction of the probate court, where the assets of such estates do not exceed five hundred dollars in value. As a consequence, the ten dollar limitation applies to the total amount of fees chargeable by a probate judge against such estates, the assets of which do not exceed five hundred dollars in value, regardless of the nature or number of independent proceedings which may be involved in the administration of such estates: 1933 OAG No.1782.

11. The term "assets" as used in par. 48 [(vv)] of this section, in connection with the word "estates," includes real estate which is available for or may be appropriated to the payment of the debts of an estate: 1935 OAG No.3977.

12. Costs of legal advertising or printer's fees for the publication of notice of appointment and other notices necessary to be made or published in the probate court, are not such costs as are referred to in subsection 48 [(vv)] of this section, and are properly chargeable by the probate judge in addition to the ten dollars minimum fee in estates not exceeding five hundred dollars in total value: 1937 OAG No.441.

13. When a person requests a certified copy of a journal entry or proceeding to the probate judge, judge shall base his charge upon this section. If such person presents a copy of the original journal entry or proceeding to the probate judge, with a request that he certify the same to be a correct copy, he should be governed by GC § 2901 (RC § 2303.20): 1939 OAG No.1454.

14. If the copy of the journal entry, record or proceeding is made by a deputy of the probate court, working after office hours, typing charges made by such deputy are matters of personal concern between the deputy and the person requesting the copy and are not made the subject of statutory regulation: 1939 OAG No.1454.

§ 2101.17 Fees from county treasury.

The fees enumerated in this section shall be paid to the probate court from the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor which shall issue upon the certificate of the probate judge and shall be in full for all services rendered in the respective proceedings as follows:

The probate judge may keep order in his court and has authority throughout the state to compel performance of any duty incumbent upon any fiduciary appointed by or accounting to him. The probate judge may punish any contempt of his authority as such contempt might be punished in the court of common pleas.

If a person neglects or refuses to perform an order or judgment of a probate court, other than for the payment of money, he shall be guilty of a contempt of court and the judge shall issue a summons directing such person to appear before the court, within two days from the service thereof, and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. If it appears to the judge that such person is secreting himself to avoid the process of the court, or is about to leave the county for that purpose, the judge may issue an attachment instead of the summons, commanding the officer, to whom it is directed, to bring such person before such judge to answer for contempt. CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The probate judge has no power to imprison for contempt for disobedience of an order to deliver to a receiver appointed by the probate judge, money received in order to defraud creditors. Such order of the probate court is a summary order given without opportunity for a hearing, which is necessary to constitute due process of law: White v. Gates, 42 OS 109.

2. Under RC § 2101.23, which limits the jurisdiction of the probate court to enforce its orders or judgments by contempt of court proceedings to instances of neglect or refusal to perform an order or judgment "other than for the payment of money," an order of the probate judge, seeking to compel the payment of money in the form of increased salaries by the members of the board of county commissioners to probate court employees, is not enforceable by contempt of court proceedings: In re Contempt of Court, 30 OS(2d) 182, 59 OO(2d) 188, 283 NE(2d) 126.

(I) To authorize the completion of real contracts on petition of executors and administrators;

(J) To issue writs of habeas corpus, and determine the validity of the caption and detention of the persons brought before it on such writs; the probate court may refer the petition to the court of common pleas when the petitioner is detained on a charge, indictment, or conviction of having committed a felony or misdemeanor under the laws of the United States, this state, or under an ordinance of any political subdivision of this state;

(K) To construe wills;

Comment

Subdivision (K) is for the purpose of giving to the probate court concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas court to construe wills. The General Assembly has never enacted a statute expressly giving this jurisdiction to the probate court, but the committee believes that in the settlement of accounts and the determination of other matters it is frequently necessary and desirable that the probate court shall have power to construe the will. Subdivision (L) covers declaratory judgments. The court of common pleas now has concurrent jurisdiction in the matter of declaratory judgments. Subdivision (M) provides that the probate court shall have jurisdiction to direct trusts instead of forcing such cases into equity.

1. General Code § 11215 (RC § 2305.01) is an old and general statute, while this section is recent and special; therefore, under the canons of statutory construction, the latter must take precedence over the former: Unger v. Wolfe, 134 OS 69, 11 OO 483, 15 NE(2d) 955.

2. While the authority of the court under a proceeding is very broad for the purpose of discovering concealed or embezzled assets, it is not broad enough to litigate all the issues in a case where there has been no concealment of assets. To that extent there is a limitation upon the "plenary power" granted to probate court in the [next to] the last paragraph of this section: Goodrich v. Anderson, 136 OS 509, 17 OO 152, 26 NE(2d) 1016.

3. Under this section the probate court has "plenary power at law and in equity fully to dispose of any matter properly before the court," unless otherwise provided by statute. There is no statutory provision which limits or denies to that court power to hear and determine fully and completely all questions raised by exceptions to an inventory of the assets of a decedent's estate: Bolles v. Toledo Trust Co., 136 OS 517, 17 OO 156, 27 NE(2d) 145.

3.1 The probate court has jurisdiction to hear exceptions to the account of the superintendent of banks in charge of liquidation of an Ohio bank as to a trust for which such bank, before its liquidation, was trustee through appointment by that court; to settle such account; to surcharge the bank as such trustee; and to direct the superintendent of banks to such trustee; and to direct the superintendent of banks to issue a certificate of claim against the assets of such bank to and in favor of a successor trustee; but such court does not have jurisdiction to render a money judgment against the bank or superintendent of banks, or to determine the character of the claim as to preferences, or to impress a lien upon property held by the bank as trustee, in favor of the successor trustee: In re Binder, 137 OS 26, 17 OO 364, 27 NE(2d) 939.

3.2 It is the duty of the probate court to require of the guardian of the estate of a minor a full account of the guardian's care or lack of care of the assets belonging to the ward. It is the duty of the probate court to fix the liability, if any, of a guardian for his failure on final settlement to account fully for the estate of the ward: In re Zimmerman, 141 OS 207, 25 OO 326, 47 NE(2d) 782.

3.3 By the constitution and statutory enactments, the probate court is invested with the power and jurisdiction to adjudicate a matter relating to the title to and status of personal property, where, during the administration of a decedent's estate in such court, decedent's widow files her petition asking for a declaration that certain personal property is an asset of the estate and must be administered as such, as against the claim that such property was effectually disposed of by the decedent during his lifetime through a written declaration of trust: In re Morrison, 159 OS 285, 50 OO 291, 112 NE(2d) 13.

3.4 No relief for a probate court estate, upon a complaint to the probate court pursuant to GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), can be given except with respect to property of such estate: In re Sexton, 163 OS 124, 56 OO 178, 125 NE(2d) 880.

3.5 By virtue of GC § 10501-53 (RC § 2101.24), and GC § 12102-4 (RC § 2721.05), one who as trustee under a will and as an individual is interested in a provision of the will authorizing the removal of certain of testator's real estate from the trust and the substitution of a sum of money to take its place may bring and maintain an action for a declaratory judgment in the probate court to secure a determination and declaration as to his obligations as trustee and as an individual with respect to such matter and as to the rights of the trust beneficiaries, where there is a present bona fide dispute between or among those concerned as to the interpretation of the will and doubt exists as to the proper interpretation: Sessions v. Skelton, 163 OS 409, 56 OO 370, 127 NE(2d) 378.

3.6 Where the assets of an estate have (in accordance with the terms of a will) been distributed to life tenants, the estate has been closed and the final account has been settled and determined, and the life tenants die, in the absence of a motion, filed in accordance with RC § 2109.35 to vacate the order of the probate court, such court lacks jurisdiction to entertain an application by the remaindermen to commit securities formerly in the estate to a trustee: State ex rel Beedle v. Kiracofe, 176 OS 149, 27 OO(2d) 25, 198 NE(2d) 61.

3.7 The probate court has plenary power at law and in equity fully to dispose of any matter properly before the court unless the power is expressly otherwise limited or denied by statute: Wolfrum v. Wolfrum, 2 OS(2d) 237, 31 OO(2d) 501, 208 NE(2d) 537.

3.8 The determination by the probate court in the summary proceeding provided for by RC § 2115.16 that assets should be included in an estate makes the question of title res judicata as between all parties to the proceeding, but the judgment of the probate court may be attacked in a subsequent action by other interested persons who were not parties to the proceeding in probate court: Cole v. Ottawa Home and Savings Assn., 18 OS(2d) 1, 47 OO(2d) 1, 246 NE(2d) 542.

4. The last paragraph of this section is an added provision definitely granting equity power to the probate court on all matters properly before the court: Abicht v. O'Donnell, 52 App 513, 6 OO 462, 3 NE(2d) 993.

5. The probate court has jurisdiction to give full relief in assignment proceedings, including the sale of mortgaged premises, free from the inchoate dower interest of the husband who did not sign the assignment agreement by his wife; and such jurisdiction cannot be defeated by the mortgagee instituting foreclosure proceedings in the common pleas court under a mortgage signed by both the husband and wife: Madigan v. Dollar Bldg. &c. Co., 52 App 553, 6 OO 478, 4 NE(2d) 68.

5.1 Where the probate court has acquired jurisdiction of the subject matter of a proceeding brought by an administrator to sell the real estate of a decedent to pay the debts of the estate, the common pleas court is without jurisdiction in an action subsequently brought by a mortgagee to foreclose a mortgage on the same property: Home Building and Savings Co. v. Sanford, 59 App 302, 13 OO 90, 18 NE(2d) 127 [see also 59 App 294, 13 OO 86, 18 NE(2d) 126].

5.2 The probate court does not have jurisdiction, in a proceeding upon exceptions to the inventory filed in a decedent's estate, to determine the title to real or personal property that had been duly transferred, and possession thereof delivered, by the decedent before her death: In re Brunskill, 63 App 529, 17 OO 265, 27 NE(2d) 492.

6. The grant of a limited equity jurisdiction to the probate court, under the provisions of GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33) and this section, does not oust the court of common pleas from its original equity jurisdiction to declare void the judgments and orders of the probate court for lack of jurisdiction: Young v. Guella, 67 App 11, 21 OO 66, 35 NE(2d) 997.

7. The specific grant of power to the probate court as contained in GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33) and this section does not confer upon such court general equity jurisdiction: Hooffstetter v. Adams, 67 App 21, 21 OO 70, 35 NE(2d) 896.

8. Every legal intentment must be indulged in to support the validity and regularity of an administrator's assignment to two defendants of his cause of action against them and a third defendant to set aside fraudulent transfers of accounts by the decedent making him insolvent unless defendants elect to pay the value of the accounts to the administrator, in view of the broad powers now vested in the probate court by virtue of this section: Kause v. Gemin, 69 App 494, 24 OO 210, 38 NE(2d) 96.

9. Under this section the probate court has jurisdiction to order an administrator to pay a debt incurred by him in the administration of the estate, even where there is an issue of fact. The administrator has no right to a trial by jury under such circumstances: In re Kaffenberger, 71 App 201, 26 OO 17, 48 NE(2d) 885.

10. Jurisdiction of the probate court to redetermine its order or modify its order or instruct its fiduciary is not limited by the power conferred by GC § 5339 (RC § 5731.20), but includes broad powers conferred by GC § 10501-53 (RC § 2101.24): In re Shafer, 74 App 33, 29 OO 233, 56 NE(2d) 926.

10.1 GC § 11925 et seq conferred jurisdiction on the court of common pleas to authorize sale of realty held in testamentary trust: State ex rel Ehmann v. Schneider, 78 App 27, 33 OO 391, 67 NE(2d) 117.

10.2 The power of a court to render a declaratory judgment by virtue of provisions of the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act does not empower the court to expand its jurisdiction over subject matter: Sherrets v. Tuscarawas Savings and Loan Co., 78 App 307, 34 OO 21, 70 NE(2d) 127.

11. Where the administratrix of an estate files an action in the probate court of a county against a savings and loan company, a resident of such county, and the receiver of a park association, a nonresident of such county, the petition in the action charging fraud in the decedent's oral transaction with the park association and seeking a declaration of rights to a certain stock certificate of the company alleged to have been given by the deceased to the association as consideration in such transaction, an order of dismissal of the petition is justifiable, the court having no jurisdiction of the subject matter of the action and there being an improper joinder of parties defendant: Sherrets v. Tuscarawas Sav. &c. Co., 78 App 307, 34 OO 21, 70 NE(2d) 127.

12. In controlling the administration of a testamentary trust, the probate court, under the jurisdiction vested in it by this section, has the power to determine the validity of a deed obtained from the beneficiary of the trust, where the validity of such conveyance is challenged on the ground of undue influence, mental incapacity or fraud: In re Stuckey, 80 App 421, 36 OO 117, 73 NE(2d) 208.

13. The probate court, under this section, has authority to authorize a trustee for a missing person to bring an action for equitable partition of lands in which the missing person owned a fractional interest: In re Parrett, 86 App 162, 41 OO 20, 90 NE(2d) 425.

14. General equity powers are not conferred on the probate court under this section: In re Dickey, 87 App 255, 42 OO 474, 94 NE(2d) 223.

15. This section gives the probate court, in matters within its jurisdiction, the authority to exercise equity powers in disposing of matters where there is no legal remedy or where the legal remedy is inadequate: In re Dickey, 87 App 255, 42 OO 474, 94 NE(2d) 223.

16. Under Const. Art. IV, § 8, and GC §§ 5340 and 10501-53 (RC §§ 5731.21 and 2101.24) the probate court is vested with plenary equity jurisdiction to hear and determine an application, filed after term, to modify an order determining inheritance taxes paid through a mistake of fact: In re Beckman, 91 App 42, 48 OO 236, 107 NE(2d) 538.

16.1. Where probate court, in proceedings by village against township for a division of property, made an order of division of funds and assets, such order terminated the jurisdiction of the court, which jurisdiction did not continue over the divided property so as to enable the court to entertain a proceeding by the village attorney to impress such property with a lien: Eastlake v. Davis, 94 App 71, 51 OO 279, 114 NE(2d) 627.

16.2 This section modifies or limits the jurisdiction conferred on the common pleas court, with reference to the specific provisions incorporated therein, including jurisdiction to construe wills, in which respect GC § 11215 (RC § 2305.01), is repealed by implication: Van Stone v. Van Stone, 95 App 406, 53 OO 438, 120 NE(2d) 154.

16.3 The probate court has the power to appoint a trustee for personal property bequeathed to a spendthrift life tenant (remainder to her children) in order to protect the property, even though the will expressly provides otherwise: In re Miller, 95 App 457, 54 OO 98, 121 NE(2d) 26.

16.4 General Code § 10509-185 (RC § 2113.58), the purpose of which is to protect the interests of remaindermen under wills, contains two distinct remedies, either of which the court, in a proper case, may apply; the provisions of that section do not operate as a limitation on the plenary jurisdiction conferred on the probate court by Const., Art. IV, § 8, and this section: In re Miller, 95 App 457, 54 OO 98, 121 NE(2d) 26.

16.5 In an action for a declaratory judgment brought by a person in possession of personal property claimed by the executor of decedent's estate and which the party in possession claims by virtue of a gift inter vivos, a probate court has jurisdiction to determine the title to such personal property: Renee v. Sanders, 102 App 21, 2 OO(2d) 7, 131 NE(2d) 846.

16.6 Where services are rendered by an attorney for a widow in effecting a settlement of all her rights and claims in and to the estate of her deceased husband the probate court has jurisdiction to hear and determine an application by the attorney for the allowance of compensation out of the estate; but, although it may have been fortuitous for the estate that a settlement of many problems may have been effected, such circumstances do not justify payment of attorney fees by the estate: In re Estate of Colosimo, 104 App 342, 5 OO(2d) 24, 149 NE(2d) 31.

16.7 The language of this section and RC § 5303.-03 does not subtract from or limit the full jurisdiction of the common pleas court in an action of ejectment to determine the legal title to land, be it by will, deed or otherwise, upon which to award possession of land: Avery v. Avery, 107 App 199, 8 OO(2d) 91, 157 NE(2d) 917.

16.8 A probate court has inherent power to vacate, after term, a judgment procured by fraud: In re Adoption of Sladkey, 109 App 120, 10 OO(2d) 304, 161 NE(2d) 554.

16.9 The probate court was without jurisdiction to declare the validity of a purported contract, in a declaratory judgment action, where such contract had no bearing on the assets of the estate, duties of the executor, or the court's supervision of the administration of the estate: In re Martin, 115 App 515, 21 OO(2d) 166, 185 NE(2d) 785.

17. The issue whether a release of a negligence claim executed in the probate court is void may be determined by a common pleas court in an action therein to recover for personal injury damages caused by such negligence: Carpenter v. Pontius, 119 App 383, 28 OO(2d) 12, 200 NE(2d) 682.

17.1 By virtue of the provisions of Art. IV, § 8, Ohio Constitution, and Title 21 of the Revised Code, a probate court has jurisdiction to pass upon a claim against an estate filed individually by one of the co-administrators of such estate; but such court has no jurisdiction in such proceeding to examine into a claim of such estate against such co-administrator and her husband for moneys allegedly owing the estate on promissory notes: In re Stutz, 1 OApp(2d) 188, 30 OO(2d) 212, 204 NE(2d) 248.

17.2. A probate court does not have jurisdiction of an action in which plaintiff seeks an order that a trustee (not appointed by such court) of an inter vivos trust turn over to plaintiff, the surviving spouse of the deceased settlor, property delivered by the settlor, prior to her death, to, and held by, such trustee: Purcell v. Cleveland Trust Co., 6 OApp(2d) 235, 35 OO(2d) 427, 217 NE(2d) 817.

17.3. As an incident to a hearing upon exceptions to an inventory pursuant to RC § 2109.58, the probate court has jurisdiction to determine the issue of a common law marriage: In re Soeder, 7 OApp(2d) 271, 36 OO(2d) 404, 220 NE(2d) 547.

17.4. A probate court is without jurisdiction to entertain an original action wherein plaintiff seeks to obtain a declaratory judgment by that court that an ordinance of a municipality is unconstitutional as it relates to plaintiff's property, together with injunctive and equitable relief; a declaratory judgment rendered by such court, without jurisdiction, is void and of no effect: State ex rel Mayfield Heights v. Bartunek, 12 OApp(2d) 141, 41 OO(2d) 222, 231 NE(2d) 326.

18. It was not the purpose of the General Assembly, by the enactment of the uniform declaratory judgments act, to alter or broaden the jurisdiction of the probate court over parties and subject matter, but only to provide a new procedural device or vehicle of relief in the disposition of the matters properly coming before it: State ex rel Mayfield Heights v. Bartunek, 12 OApp(2d) 141, 41 OO(2d) 222, 231 NE(2d) 236.

18.1 Where there is no repugnancy in a will creating a trust and it is not against public policy, such trust cannot be judicially terminated before the objects of the trust have been fully accomplished: Collins v. First National Bank, 20 OApp(2d) 1, 49 OO(2d) 1, 251 NE(2d) 610.

18.2 Generally, a change in circumstances and the needs of beneficiaries do not justify a court termination of a trust created in a will to meet the change in circumstances and conditions: Collins v. First National Bank, 20 OApp(2d) 1, 49 OO(2d) 1, 251 NE(2d) 610.

18.3 The probate court and the court of common pleas have concurrent jurisdiction of an action to foreclose a mortgage on the real estate of a deceased mortgagor of whose estate an administratrix has been appointed and qualified, when it is necessary to sell the real estate to pay decedent's debts, and the court which first acquires jurisdiction thereof retains it to the exclusion of the other: Government Nat. Mtg. Assn. v. Smith, 28 OApp(2d) 300, 57 OO(2d) 453, 277 NE(2d) 233.

18.4 The probate court has jurisdiction of an application of an heir to the administratrix of an estate for an allowance for attorney fees incurred when he resisted a claim against the estate previously allowed as valid, which claim was substantially reduced through the applicant's efforts, such jurisdiction being granted by Art. IV, § 8 of the constitution and by this section: In re Helfrich, 3 OO 162 (CP).

18.5. Under this section the probate court has no authority to terminate a testamentary trust: In re Rich, 3 OO 315 (PC).

19. A trust provision that payments from the principal might be directed by the probate court of a county in Ohio, if necessary for the education or maintenance of minor children or if the best interests of the children required such payments, was construed as a rule to govern the probate court in deciding whether to direct payments from principal, and not as a condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction and therefore open to inquiry in other tribunals: Harvey v. Fiduciary Trust Co. (Mass.), 11 OO 77, 13 NE(2d) 299.

20. The judgment of a probate court in Ohio making an award out of trust funds to attorneys who secured the creation of the trust, the situs of which was in Massachusetts, was not res judicata on the issue of jurisdiction by virtue of the trust deed which purported to give Ohio courts jurisdiction, where it did not appear that the Ohio courts rested their supposed jurisdiction upon the trust deed rather than upon the statutes of Ohio, and where the defendant trustee had ceased to be a party to the proceeding before judgment on appeal was rendered: Harvey v. Fiduciary Trust Co. (Mass.), 11 OO 77, 13 NE(2d) 299.

21. The power of the probate court to hear and determine the question whether or not conservancy district assessments levied after the death of the testator should be charged against [income of the life tenant or against] the interest of the remaindermen, comes within the general jurisdiction of the probate court as provided by this section: Reibold v. Evans, 13 OO 409 (PC) [affirmed, 65 App 123].

22. Since January 1, 1932, the probate court, under the provisions of this section, has jurisdiction to construe a post-nuptial contract upon exceptions filed in an inventory, to determine whether such contract bars an allowance of a year's support, and an allowance of property not deemed assets in favor of the surviving widow of a decedent: In re Crabtree, 15 OO 487 (PC).

23. Jurisdiction of probate court to determine title to allegedly concealed assets under this section and GC §§ 10506-67, 10506-77 (RC §§ 2109.50, 2109.56). (Case note.) 18 OO 535.

24. The probate court can determine title on exceptions to an inventory, but it is a matter of discretion whether a summary proceeding should be employed or the exceptors ordered to pursue other remedies: In re Brady, 21 OO 374, 6 OSupp 284 (PC).

25. Under this section the probate court has specific authority to render declaratory judgments, and also additional authority conferred by GC § 12102-1 (RC § 2721.02): Smith v. Smith, 26 OO 541 (PC).

26. Under the provisions of GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33) and this section probate court has same power as common pleas court to vacate or modify its orders or judgments after term, on equitable grounds, unless the power is expressly otherwise limited or denied by statute: In re Vanderlip, 27 OO 123, 12 OSupp 123 (PC).

27. Jurisdiction of the probate court in Ohio to render declaratory judgments is conferred by Const., Art. IV, § 8, by this section, and by the present uniform declaratory judgments act, GC §§ 12102-1 to 12102-16 (RC § 2721.01 to 2721.15): Meyers v. Johnston, 28 OO 334 (CP).

28. Outside of the thirteen subjects named in this section, of which the probate court has jurisdiction, none of the jurisdiction actually conferred upon the probate court is exclusive unless specifically so provided by statute: Williams v. Jones, 42 OO 323 (CP).

29. There is no statute conferring upon the probate court exclusive jurisdiction over a suit against an administrator and the decedent's son to declare them trustees of certain property: Williams v. Jones, 42 OO 323 (CP).

30. The probate court has the power to correct a mistake in papers filed therein, and it is the duty of that court to correct an injustice: In re Schick, 44 OO 42 (PC).

30.1 A probate court has jurisdiction to render a declaratory judgment deciding whether or not the beneficiary of an inter vivos trust has capacity to take where that question is interwoven with the administration of the estate: National City Bank v. Baldwin, 21 OO(2d) 145 (PC).

30.2 The court of common pleas does not have jurisdiction to appoint a general guardian for an incompetent person: In re Stephens, 30 OO(2d) 325, 202 NE(2d) 458 (PC).

30.3 The appointment by the probate court of a guardian of an incompetent's person and estate will not interfere with the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas in a pending divorce action over the "assets of the marriage": In re Stephens, 30 OO(2d) 325, 2 OMisc 47, 202 NE(2d) 458.

30.4 In ruling on petition, asking for the construction of the terms of a will, probate court has jurisdiction to pass on the question of the validity of an inter vivos trust which petitioner's decedent believed he had created: Knowles v. Knowles, 33 OO(2d) 218, 4 OMisc 153, 212 NE(2d) 88 (PC).

30.5 The power of the probate court in relation to a decedent's estate is strictly limited to matters involving the enhancement or depletion of such estate and the distribution of its assets to the lawful heirs: In re Porter, 46 OO(2d) 180, 17 OMisc 136, 243 NE(2d) 794.

30.6 A probate court has no jurisdiction to consider the validity or effect of a contract between the distributee of a decedent's estate and one who contracted to collect their share of the estate for a percentage thereof, where the purported contract has no bearing on the assets of the estate, the duties of the administrator or the court's supervision of his administration: In re Porter, 46 OO(2d) 180, 17 OMisc 136, 243 NE(2d) 794.

30.7 Revised Code § 2101.24 which grants the probate court authority to make inquests respecting insane persons subject to guardianship, also provides that such jurisdiction is exclusive unless otherwise provided by law: In re Appropriation for Highway Purposes, 47 OO(2d) 420, 19 OMisc 81, 246 NE(2d) 626 (CP).

30.8 Where the court of common pleas, pursuant to the provisions of RC §§ 2945.37, 2945.38, and 2945.40, has found the accused "insane" and has committed him to Lima state hospital until restored to reason, the probate court lacks exclusive jurisdiction to make an order binding upon the common pleas court relating to the competence or sanity of the accused: In re Appropriation for Highway Purposes (Lands of Moser), 47 OO(2d) 420, 19 OMisc 81, 246 NE(2d) 626 (CP).

31. An action for money damages is not within the jurisdiction of the probate division of the common pleas court, although filed as a counterclaim to an action within the jurisdiction of that division by a trust adviser named in a will being administered under its authority: Kindt v. Cleveland Trust Co., 55 OO (2d) 53, 26 OMisc 1, 266 NE(2d) 84 (CP).

31.1 Though the jurisdiction of the probate court in Ohio is limited to testamentary trustees, it does not preclude the court from following the assets of a testamentary trust into an inter vivos trust, in furtherance of its jurisdiction of the testamentary trust, in order to fully dispose of the issues properly before it: Dollar Savings and Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 61 OO(2d) 134, 32 OMisc 81, 285 NE(2d) 768.

31.2 The common pleas court acquires jurisdiction of a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, although the mortgagor is dead, where a petition is duly filed and process issued and served, and such jurisdiction is not lost by the executor of the mortgagor filing in probate court, the following day, a petition to sell realty to pay debts of the estate: Home Owners Loan Corp. v. Roth, 24 OLA 693.

32. A judgment of the court of common pleas, in an action for declaratory judgment, ordering the distribution of assets of an estate in the hands of the executor thereof is invalid by virtue of this section, giving the exclusive right to order the distribution of estates to the probate court: Mally v. Kekich, 47 OLA 120, 71 NE(2d) 305 (App).

33. Even though the probate court has the power to control the conduct of trustees under this section, ex parte orders without notice are not binding upon the life tenant: Holmes v. Hrobon, 61 OLA 113, 103 NE(2d) 845 (App).

33.1 The probate court is a court authorized to determine the validity of claims of all claimants to decedent's property. Since the petition (in common pleas court) states an ordinary action in replevin and fails to assert reasons why the probate court cannot grant the relief requested under the statutes vesting responsibility and authority in the administrator, an action does not lie in the court of common pleas: Service Transport Co. v. Matyas, 63 OLA 236, 244.

33.2 A probate court does not have general equitable powers, but only such equity powers as are necessary in disposing of matters properly before it where there is no legal remedy or where the legal remedy is inadequate, and where the only question properly before the probate court was one of law, there could be no appeal on questions of law and fact: MacLean v. J. S. MacLean Co., 71 OLA 590, 133 NE(2d) 198 (App).

33.3 Where probate court, on petition to sell real estate, found that deed from decedent to his grandson conveyed title to the real estate and that it was not an asset of the estate, such ruling terminated the court's jurisdiction precluding further determination of the issue of whether the state of Ohio had waived priority under trust mortgage executed by decedent upon receiving aid for aged: Piatt v. Piatt, 65 OLA 284, 114 NE(2d) 441 (App).

33.4 The words "such jurisdiction" used in this section apply to jurisdiction of the probate court over the matters expressly enumerated in that section of the statute, and the term "plenary power at law and in equity" does not contemplate a grant of general equity jurisdiction to the probate court, but rather a limited grant of equitable jurisdiction in order that the probate court may fully dispose of matters properly before it: Fellers v. Belau, 87 OLA 54, 178 NE(2d) 530 (CP).

33.5 The probate court has jurisdiction under this section to render declaratory judgments: Ireland v. Cleveland Trust Co., 80 OLA 94 (PC).

33.6 Under authority of this section, the probate court has full power to hear and determine any matter properly before it, unless the power is expressly otherwise limited or denied by statute: In re Smith, 67 OLA 409, 120 NE(2d) 632 (PC).

33.7 The question of whether or not plaintiff is entitled to the return of his property, title to which he put in the name of the deceased under mistake of fact or because of the fraudulent conduct or representation of (his supposed wife) made by her during her lifetime states a cause of action coming within the equity power of the court of common pleas and the fact that defendant is an administrator does not oust it of such jurisdiction: Carter v. Birnbaum, 68 OLA 97, 113 NE(2d) 102.

33.8 Since the amendment to the General Code of Ohio giving courts of probate "plenary power at law and in equity fully to dispose of any matter properly before the court, . . ." the principles which originally guided courts of chancery in the exercise of their equitable jurisdiction over guardians and wards are now equally applicable to probate courts of Ohio: Dorfmeier v. Dorfmeier, 69 OLA 15, 123 NE(2d) 681 (PC).

33.9. General Code § 10501-53 (RC § 2101.24), providing that "The probate court shall have plenary power at law and in equity to fully dispose of any matter properly before the court . . ." adds nothing to the jurisdiction conferred upon such court by const. art. IV, § 8: Foerster v. Foerster, 71 OLA 129 (PC).

34. The action of an Ohio probate court in removing for neglect and incompetency an executor under a will during the pendency of an action to contest such will in the common pleas court of the same county, is not subject to review by a federal court: Pettiford v. George, 125 F(2d) 144, 22 OO 460.

35. General Code § 10510-10 (RC § 2127.08) and this section were held not unconstitutional as violative of Art. IV, § 8, Constitution of Ohio: Hatch v. Buckeye State Bldg. &c. Co., 32 NP(NS) 297.

36. Where divorce actions are pending in probate courts by reason of the jurisdiction conferred on such courts under former GC § 10494 (repealed, 114 v 320 [475]), prior to January 1, 1932, the date upon which the repeal of said section becomes effective, such jurisdiction continues by reason of GC § 26 (RC § 1.20): 1931 OAG No.3856.

37. Under the provisions of this section a probate court does not have jurisdiction in action on rejected claims, and cannot assert jurisdiction over such claims through a petition for declaratory judgment: Mainline Const. Co. v. Warren, 11 OMisc 233, 40 OO(2d) 509, 227 NE(2d) 432 (PC).

45. This statute establishes the law to the effect that the jurisdiction of a probate court once acquired over an estate is exclusive of every other probate court: State ex rel Black v. White, 132 OS 58, 7 OO 165, 5 NE(2d) 163; In re Crist, 89 OS 33, 105 NE 71; Children's Home v. Fetter, 90 OS 110, 106 NE 761; Addams v. State ex rel Hubbell, 104 OS 475, 135 NE 667.

46. The probate court of county of decedent's residence, first appointing administrator, acquired jurisdiction exclusive of any other court (former GC § 10498 [see now RC § 2101.24]), and prohibition lies against the second court appointing administrator: State ex rel Taylor v. Gregory, 122 OS 512, 172 NE 365.

47. The exclusive jurisdiction of a probate court referred to in this section does not apply when otherwise provided by law: State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE(2d) 84.

48. By reason of GC § 10501-53 (RC § 2101.24), the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction, unless otherwise provided by law, as to all matters specifically set forth therein and as to all matters pertaining directly to the administration and settlement of estates: Jacobsen v. Jacobsen, 164 OS 413, 58 OO 239, 131 NE(2d) 833; Wolfrum v. Wolfrum, 2 OS(2d) 237, 31 OO(2d) 501, 208 NE(2d) 537.

51. Under the provisions of this section, the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction as to the allowance of fees to an attorney for his services in the unsuccessful prosecution of an application for the removal of the guardian of an incompetent: Unger v. Wolfe, 134 OS 69, 11 OO 483, 15 NE(2d) 955.

53. In view of the "exclusive" jurisdiction and "plenary" power, both legal and equitable, given the probate court by this section, fraud on the part of a fiduciary must be challenged in that court: Neidecker v. Neidecker, 63 App 416, 17 OO 135, 26 NE(2d) 929.

54. By this section the probate court is given, inter alia, exclusive jurisdiction over the administration of decedents' estates: Saluppo v. Santangelo, 71 App 185, 26 OO 10, 48 NE(2d) 903.

55. Under this section, conferring plenary power upon a probate court to dispose of any matter properly before it, which power is exclusive "unless otherwise provided by law," such court has exclusive jurisdiction to make such an adjudication, irrespective of such a captioned pleading, when the prayer therein asks for a determination not only of the names of the heirs but also of the interest each inherits: Speidel v. Schaller, 73 App 141, 28 OO 252, 55 NE(2d) 346.

56. The grant of exclusive jurisdiction to the probate court by this section, is subject to the general limitation found therein, to wit, "such jurisdiction shall be exclusive in the probate court unless otherwise provided by law": Haag v. Meffley, 89 App 471, 46 OO 274, 103 NE(2d) 37.

56.1 This section confers on the probate court exclusive jurisdiction in a distinct and separate action limited to and characterized as an action having its sole end and purpose the construction of a will: Avery v. Avery, 107 App 199, 8 OO(2d) 91, 157 NE (2d) 917.

56.3 This section, spelling out the jurisdiction of the probate court provides that the court may direct and control the conduct that executors, administrators and other fiduciaries: In re Ferris, 19 OO(2d) 428, 182 NE(2d) 78 (PC).

56.4 The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to direct and control the conduct and settle the accounts of executors and administrators and order the distribution of estates: Border v. Ohio Sav. & Trust Co., 55 OO(2d) 410, 26 OMisc 273, 267 NE(2d) 120 (CP).

56.5 The probate court in which a decedent's estate is being administered has jurisdiction to determine what rights, if any, the administratrix of the deceased's estate has in a purported oral lease of land occupied by the deceased at the time of his death: In re Logan, 71 OLA 391, 131 NE(2d) 454 (PC).

57. Exclusive jurisdiction to direct and control the conduct of fiduciaries and settle their accounts is conferred upon the probate court by the provisions of this section: In re Binder, 25 OLA 472 (CP).

58. This section vests in the probate court exclusive jurisdiction to control the conduct of testamentary trustees and to settle their accounts: Gregg v. Kent, 27 OLA 628.

58.1 Where the probate court of one county has lawfully and properly assumed jurisdiction over the estate of a minor and appointed a guardian of such estate, the jurisdiction of such probate court is exclusive and the attempted appointment of another as guardian by the probate court of another county, even at the request of the ward, is null and void: In re Kollmeyer, 64 OLA 578.

59. Under the provisions of GC §§ 10508-7 (repealed, 119 v 394 [425], § 11), 10509-112 (RC § 2113.-

14) and this section, the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to appoint an administrator of the debtor's estate and to hear and determine all questions arising in the case: United States v. First Nat. Bank, 54 FSupp 351, 28 OO 445.

60. General Code § 10501-52 (RC § 2101.46) vests in the probate court exclusive jurisdiction of suits, the subject matter of which relates to the conduct of defendant as an executor or administrator in the settlement of his accounts: Truss v. Clouse, 23 OLA 610.

61. The fact that the guardian has removed from the state, taking the trust funds with him, does not oust the probate court of its jurisdiction over such guardianship which has already attached: Netting v. Strickland, 18 CC 136, 9 CD 841.

62. An application to a probate court in one county for administration, though it be refused, excludes any other probate court from acting: In re Worthington, 4 OD(NP) 381.

63. Jurisdiction of an action involving an alleged breach of fiduciary duties is lodged in the probate court, and the federal court was without jurisdiction over the subject matter: Starr v. Rupp, 421 F(2d) 999, 53 OO(2d) 169, 25 OMisc 224.

65. Where a widow is administratrix of her husband's estate and daughters have presented claims of varying amounts for loans to their deceased father, an order of an Ohio probate court approving such claims, made after formal request for ruling, notice and public hearing at which oral evidence was introduced, is a decision on the merits within treasury regulations which provide for acceptance in such cases of determinations of local courts as to the amounts of claims, even though the order is by consent: Goodwin's Estate v. Commissioner, 51 OO 73, 201 F(2d) 576.

66. A probate judge who ordered sterilization of plaintiff acted wholly without jurisdiction in the matter and hence was not protected by the doctrine of judicial immunity, where there was no set of conditions or circumstances under Ohio law which would permit the probate judge to order plaintiff to submit to sterilization, and where the proceeding which resulted in plaintiff's sterilization commenced on an affidavit filed by the county child welfare board alleging that plaintiff was a feeble minded person: Wade v. Bethesda Hospital, 61 OO(2d) 147, 337 FSupp 671.

Scope and construction

1. This section is to be construed with GC § 10617 (see now RC §§ 2109.26, 2113.06, 2113.07): Schumacher v. McCallip, 69 OS 500, 69 NE 986.

2. By virtue of the jurisdiction conferred by RSUS § 2165, upon state courts of record having common law jurisdiction and a seal and a clerk, the probate courts of Ohio were authorized to grant naturalization to aliens, prior to the amendment of said statute in 1906: Bell v. State, 7 App 185, 27 OCA 353, 29 CD 48.

3. This section does not confer upon the probate court jurisdiction to supervise or control the administration of a testamentary trust: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453 [affirmed, without opinion, May 4, 1915].

4. The court of common pleas is not excluded from determining the ownership of stock standing in the name of an insane person: Durrett v. Bellevue Brew. Co., 21 NP(NS) 161.

5. Former GC §§ 10494, 10495 and 10497 (repealed, 114 v 320 [475]) are valid enactments, and not so inseparably united with the appeal provision of former GC § 10496 (repealed, 114 v 320 [475]), that they are unconstitutional and void: Geiger v. Geiger, 117 OS 451, 160 NE 28.

6. Under the provisions of Chap. V, Title IX, Div. VI, of the General Code (GC §§ 10062 to 10084 [RC §§ 1717.01 to 1717.14]), providing for the organization and powers of humane societies, a probate judge, when called upon to approve the appointment of an agent for such society, has discretion to determine not only whether the person named is a proper person for the discharge of such duties, but also whether there is such necessity for the appointment as would justify the payment of the expense out of the public treasury: State ex rel Coshocton Humane Society v. Ashman, 90 OS 200, 107 NE 337.

7. For the construction of former statutes conferring jurisdiction upon the probate court in cases of proceedings by a guardian to sell realty of the ward, see Foresman v. Haag, 36 OS 102.

Jurisdiction in general

12. The decree of a probate court in Ohio, involving the exercise of the general jurisdiction of a court of equity, must be considered as coram non judge and void. A decree by such court, on a petition addressed solely to its probate jurisdiction, for the cancellation of a creditor's mortgage, was an attempt to exercise chancery jurisdiction, and utterly void. In so far, therefore, as the decree below went beyond the jurisdiction of a probate court, it is to be treated as void, and in so far as it is within its jurisdiction, it is exclusively so, under § 5, Art. III of the constitution of 1802, and not subject to revision, under such constitution, by the supreme court: Gilliland v. Sellers, 2 OS 223.

13. The probate court is a court of record in the fullest sense. It is competent to decide its own jurisdiction and to render a final judgment without setting forth on the record the facts and the evidence on which such judgment is rendered. Its records import absolute verity, and its judgments cannot be attacked collaterally: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455; McAfee v. Phillips, 25 OS 374; Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Belle Centre, 48 OS 273, 27 NE 464; Hoffman v. Fleming, 66 OS 143, 64 NE 63; Fisher v. Lanning, 76 OS 189, 81 NE 182; Union Sav. Bank &c. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 79 OS 89, 86 NE 478, 128 AmSt 675 [vacating on rehearing 78 OS 398, which affirmed, without opinion, Western Union Tel. Co. v. Union Sav. Bank &c. Co., 20 CD 380, which reversed

Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 7 NP(NS) 609, 19 OD 537]; Crawford v. Zeigler, 84 OS 224, 95 NE 743; Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [affirming on rehearing 88 OS 609, which modified and affirmed Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 25 CD 43, 58 Bull 125 (Ed), which was on appeal from 13 NP(NS) 1]; Children's Home v. Fetter, 90 OS 110, 106 NE 761; Bell v. State, 7 App 185, 27 OCA 353, 29 CD 48; Wolfe v. Fidelity &c. Co., 11 App 58, 30 OCA 593 [affirmed, Fidelity &c. Co. v. Wolfe, 100 OS 332]; Woodward v. Curtis, 19 CC 15, 10 CD 400 [affirmed, without opinion, 63 OS 575]; Robinson v. Dunn, 17 CC(NS) 292, 32 CD 149 [affirmed, without opinion, 87 OS 472]; Reno v. Love, 25 CC(NS) 129, 28 CD 296, 60 Bull 497 (Ed) [affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 623]; Hunter v. Yocum, 18 NP(NS) 14, 27 OD 31.

14. Where the record shows that the court, after hearing the evidence, found that the defendants therein were duly notified according to law of the time, place and purpose of the application, a defendant on whom no service was had otherwise than by publication will not be permitted, in a collateral proceeding, to draw in question the jurisdiction of the court, by proving that at the commencement, and during the pendency of the proceeding, he was a resident of the state: Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Belle Centre, 48 OS 273, 27 NE 464.

15. The court of common pleas has jurisdiction of an action to set aside or vacate a deed of assignment for benefit of creditors, for fraud or other good cause, and the probate court has no jurisdiction of such action: Standard Home & Sav. Assn. v. Jones, 64 OS 147, 59 NE 885; Collins v. Williamson, 229 Fed 59, 143 CCA 653 [see also 243 Fed 835, 156 CCA 347].

16. The probate court is one of special and limited jurisdiction: Estate of Ferguson, 81 OS 58, 89 NE 1070. For opinion below, see In re Ferguson, 6 NP (NS) 417, 18 OD 376; First Nat. Bank v. Beebe, 62 OS 41, 56 NE 485; McLaughlin v. McLaughlin, 4 OS 508; Mansfield v. Cole, 16 NP(NS) 209, 25 OD 231.

16.1. Under Art. IV, § 8, Ohio Constitution, and GC § 10492 the claim for attorney's fees expended by an heir in contesting with partial success a claim against the estate by filing requisition for rejection in the probate court should be presented to the probate court for allowance and cannot be allowed by the common pleas court: Koelble v. Runyan, 25 App 426, 158 NE 279.

16.2. Where an assignee for the benefit of creditors obtained from the probate court an order of sale of personal property, and in pursuance of such order has offered the same at public sale, the court of common pleas is without jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by a purchaser at such sale for the purpose of restraining the assignee from again offering such property for sale when the original order has not been returned to, or the sale confirmed by, the probate court in conformance with GC § 11121: Kerr Hardware Co. v. Cherrington, 37 App 395, 174 NE 787.

17. A memorandum made by a probate judge in his court calendar does not constitute a public record, but is in the nature of a private memorandum and is not competent as evidence for the purpose of establishing a judicial finding in a hearing before the successor in office of the judge who made it: Stark v. Stark, 17 CC(NS) 398, 24 CD 135 [affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 586].

18. Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine a cause: Sprankle v. Odell, 22 CC(NS) 480, 33 CD 685 [affirmed, without opinion, Sprankle v. Sprankle, 78 OS 404].

19. As to the power of the probate court in a proceeding by an administrator to sell realty of his decedent to pay debts, and that such proceeding is a civil action, see Doan v. Biteley, 49 OS 588, 32 NE 600 [affirming Biteley v. Doan, 4 CC 7, 2 CD 388].

20. Whether or not a court whose jurisdiction has first attached may waive jurisdiction in favor of another court, such waiver cannot operate as a bar to the parties: Addams v. State ex rel Hubbell, 104 OS 475, 135 NE 667.

21. The fact that an administrator has brought suit in the court of common pleas to foreclose the decedent's equity of redemption in certain realty, does not oust the probate court of its jurisdiction of a proceeding by the administrator of such decedent to sell such realty to pay his debts, especially if such administrator was not made a party in such proceedings in foreclosure: Bateman v. Morris, 4 NP 397, 7 OD 287.

Special jurisdiction—wills

26. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to take the proof of wills, admit them to probate and record them, together with the testimony. A record thus made in pursuance of these provisions is the only one authorized or required by law, and without such probating and recording, wills are wholly inoperative in Ohio for any purpose whatever: Brown v. Burdick, 25 OS 260.

27. A copy of the probate and record of a will duly certified by the probate judge is conclusive of the validity of the will, on the trial of a collateral issue, between a stranger and the devisee respecting the property devised, and is admissible as evidence on the trial of such issue, notwithstanding proceedings to contest it may be pending at the time it is offered and admitted as evidence: Brown v. Burdick, 25 OS 260.

28. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to take the proof of wills: Mosier v. Harmon, 29 OS 222.

29. When the probate court assumes to act under the provisions of a will conferring upon it supervisory powers over the administration of a testamentary trust, its action is that of a mere arbitrator from which error will not lie: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453.

Administration

34. The appointment of an administrator de bonis non cannot be attacked collaterally on the ground that his bond was defective in having but one surety thereto: Slagle v. Entekin, 44 OS 637, 10 NE 675.

35. An order of the probate court removing an executor is not the subject of review on petition in error in the court of common pleas: Monger v. Jeffries, 62 OS 149, 56 NE 654. For opinion below, see Munger v. Jeffries, 7 NP 55, 10 OD(NP) 12; see, to the same effect, Estate of Still, 15 OS 484; Brigel v. Starbuck, 34 OS 380; Ebersole v. Schiller, 50 OS 701, 35 NE 793.

36. The court of common pleas has jurisdiction to review an order of the probate court denying the right to administer the estate of a deceased person which GC § 10617 (see now RC §§ 2109.21, 2113.06, 2113.07) confers upon the next of kin, if a suitable person: Schumacher v. McCallip, 69 OS 500, 69 NE 986. For opinion below, see In re Schumacher, 5 NP 387, 6 OD 125.

37. By the provisions of Art. IV, § 8 of the constitution and this section, plenary jurisdiction is conferred on the probate court to grant and revoke letters testamentary and of administration, to direct and control the conduct and settle the accounts of executors and administrators, and order the distribution of estates: Trumpler v. Royer, 95 OS 194, 115 NE 1018 [affirming Royer v. Trumpler, 7 App 312, 27 OCA

117, 28 CD 186; for a later report, overruling motion to certify record, see Trumpler v. Royer, 16 OLR 108, 63 Bull 223].

38. While exclusive jurisdiction cuts off concurrent jurisdiction, it is not inconsistent with appellate jurisdiction over the same subject matter by another court, and it follows, therefore, that the right, conferred by GC § 11206 (see now RC § 2101.42), of appeal to the common pleas from an order of the probate court removing an executor, is not in conflict with the provision of this section, giving to the probate court exclusive jurisdiction to grant and revoke letters testamentary: Estate of Sells, 7 NP(NS) 175, 19 OD 567.

39. When an order is made by the probate court removing an executor, it is directed against him and he is affected by it, and he has the right of appeal therefrom, notwithstanding he is not an heir, devisee or other interested person under the will: Estate of Sells, 7 NP(NS) 175, 19 OD 567.

40. There is no authority in the probate court to set aside the final account of an administrator and reopen the estate, where no exception was filed by a party in interest within eight months of the settlement of said account, which is conclusive unless attacked for fraud or corrected by the court upon the filing of a subsequent and correct account. But when a mistake has been made in the former and final account as to the existence of debts against the estate and credits due the administrator, said former and final account may be opened up by the probate court upon the filing of a subsequent account showing the existence of such debts and credits: Hunter v. Yocum, 18 NP(NS) 14, 27 OD 31.

41. Under this section no provision is made for prosecuting error to the action of the probate court in granting letters of administration. The only authority for such proceeding in error is to be found under GC § 12241 (see now RC § 2505.24): Gartner v. Meyer, 19 NP(NS) 353, 27 OD 198.

42. Since the executor of a deceased administrator has no right to continue the administration of the estate of which such deceased was administrator, no substantial right of such executor is affected by an order of the probate court appointing an administrator de bonis non; and accordingly such executor cannot bring error proceedings to reverse such order of the probate court: Gartner v. Meyer, 19 NP(NS) 353, 27 OD 198.

43. The appointment of an administratrix cannot be attacked collaterally for failure to give bond: Mitchell v. Albright, 10 DecRep 301, 20 Bull 101.

—Estates of decedents

48. Whether the adjudication of the probate court that decedent was domiciled within its jurisdiction was conclusive was avoided in Hoffman v. Fleming, 66 OS 143, 64 NE 63 [for holding below that such adjudication was void, see Fleming v. Hoffman, 8 NP 86, 10 OD 560], the court holding that the sureties on the executor's bond were estopped to deny jurisdiction.

49. It is final where the domicile of decedent is claimed to be without the state: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming, on rehearing, 88 OS 609, which modified, in memorandum opinion, Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43, 58 Bull 125 (Ed), on appeal from 13 NP(NS) 1]; Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

50. It is final where his domicile is claimed to be in another county in the same state: State ex rel Barbee v. Allen, 96 OS 10, 106 NE 665.

51. Such judgment is final in case of an application by the executor to the probate court for instructions as to his duties: Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

52. A court of another state is not bound by an adjudication of a court of Ohio as to the domicile of intestate: Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

53. It is said that a probate court has, by the provisions of Art. IV, § 8 of the constitution of Ohio, such jurisdiction in probate and testamentary matters that it is competent to decide upon its own jurisdiction: State ex rel Emery-Thompson Mach. &c. Co. v. Jones, 96 OS 506, 118 NE 115.

54. Power to sell lands, given by will to an executor, cannot be executed by administrator with the will annexed: Wills v. Cowper, 2 O 124.

55. Under the second section of the act of March 14, 1853 (51 v 167), the probate court had power, on final settlement with an administrator, to order distribution of moneys in his hands to the persons entitled thereto, and, for this purpose, to determine every disputed question necessary to ascertain the amount due, and enforce payment by execution, but that the court by such order exhausted its power, and it could not entertain a petition to enforce the collection as a debt against the estate: McLaughlin v. McLaughlin, 4 OS 508.

56. "It has been settled, in Swearingen v. Morris, 14 OS 432, and Cox v. John, 32 OS 532, that the only order of distribution here authorized to be made is a general order to the executor or administrator to distribute the funds remaining in his hands according to law. It thus appears that an order designating or naming the distributees is not authorized by law, and, therefore, would not debar anyone interested in the distribution from asserting his or her interest therein": Armstrong v. Grandin, 39 OS 368; Estate of Ullman, 12 CC(NS) 340, 21 CD 376; Skardon v. Robinson, 8 OLR 412, 55 Bull 373.

57. The proceeding of an executor or administrator to sell the real estate of the deceased, to pay the debts and cost of administering his estate, whether prosecuted in the court of common pleas or the probate court, is a civil action, to which any person may be made a defendant, who has or claims an interest in the land, or who is a necessary party to a complete determination of any question involved in the action. The probate court has jurisdiction to try any question of fact arising in such action therein prosecuted, or afford the parties a trial by jury when the nature of the issues entitle them to a jury trial, or render it appropriate: Doan v. Biteley, 49 OS 588, 32 NE 600.

58. If the brothers and a sister of a trustee whose shares had been set off in severalty, should permit the latter to manage the portion set off to them, make contracts from time to time for the sale of parcels thereof and collect the purchase money, and suffer this course of business to continue for more than twenty years without calling for an accounting in the probate court, his authority, in favor of the sureties on his executor's bond, should be regarded as derived, not from the will of the testator, but from his brothers and sister, and they can require him to account only in a court of general jurisdiction as their agent, and not in the probate court as executor or trustee under the will: Culver v. Culver, 58 OS 172, 50 NE 505.

59. While the probate court has power to control the conduct of fiduciaries in the administration of estates, the thing complained of must be the result of an act committed or omitted by the fiduciary, and not of an act done by the complaining party or in which she participated of her own free will: In re Schubert, 32 NP(NS) 169.

60. Where the administrator of an estate is required by the probate court to file an account of the expenses of his administration, preparatory to his stating a final account, and does so, which expense account includes an amount due his attorney for services rendered in the settlement of the estate, and for necessary expenses paid by him in discharge of his duties as such attorney, and said account, on hearing by that court, is approved and allowed, and the administrator is ordered by the court to pay to said attorney the sum so found due him out of the assets of the estate in his hands for distribution, a failure to comply with such order is a breach of the administration bond for which the surety thereon is liable: Smith v. Rhodes, 68 OS 500, 68 NE 7 [distinguishing Thomas v. Moore, 52 OS 200].

61. It is no defense to the action on the administration bond for the surety to plead and prove that exceptions to the account of the administrator, filed by a creditor of the estate, had been withdrawn by him in consideration of the part payment of his claim by the administrator: Smith v. Rhodes, 68 OS 500, 68 NE 7.

62. The common pleas court is without jurisdiction over an action brought by an executor against his coexecutor for an accounting. Such an issue must be presented to and finally determined by the probate court: Loney v. Walkey, 8 App 256, 27 OCA 543, 29 CD 418.

62.1. By the mere probating of a will and the appointment of an executor, jurisdiction of the probate court over the sale of the real estate of the decedent is not acquired. Such jurisdiction is not acquired until the executor has filed a petition in that court to sell real estate to pay debts, and the interested parties have entered their appearance therein, or process has been issued upon said petition which is later served according to law: Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Roth, 24 OLA 693.

62.2. Both the probate court and the court of common pleas have subject matter jurisdiction of an action for specific performance of a contract to sell land belonging to a decedent's estate: Fellers v. Belau, 87 OLA 54, 178 NE(2d) 530.

63. Whether an executor would be charged a second time with funds distributed without an order of the court, depends on whether or not the probate court at the time the distribution was made, on a proper application, would have ordered such distribution, or would have approved of such distribution in an account filed by the executor: In re Thompson, 23 NP(NS) 544.

64. The jurisdiction of the probate court over the administration of the estates of decedents is exclusive; and the federal courts cannot take jurisdiction of such proceedings: Puder v. Agler, 242 Fed 95, 15 OLR 433, 62 Bull 410.

65. Since Art. IV, § 8 of the constitution of Ohio confers exclusive jurisdiction upon the probate court over all questions of administering the estates of decedents, former decisions as to the power of a court of equity in the administration of estates of decedents are of no weight: Puder v. Agler, 242 Fed 95, 15 OLR 433, 62 Bull 410.

66. An action to sell realty has all the essentials of a civil action, and may be brought in either the court of common pleas or the probate court, and in either court in which the suit may be brought, or on appeal, the rights of the several parties in the subject matter may be determined. But the probate court having exclusive jurisdiction to settle the accounts of executors and administrators, it is incompetent, where such a suit is brought in the common pleas court, for that court to attempt to fix the costs and expenses of administration: Tidd v. Bloch, 4 CC(NS) 216, 16 CD 113.

67. The probate court has jurisdiction under this section to apportion the statutory commissions between two or more executors in accordance with the services performed by each, where the accounts between the estate, on the one hand, and the executors on the other, have not been settled and determined: Meyers v. Hopkins, 7 CC(NS) 240, 18 CD 208.

68. A probate court has jurisdiction of an action to compel an executor to pay legacies before the expiration of the time within which creditors may present their claims: Estate of Isherwood, 7 NP 332, 5 OD 143 [affirmed in Isherwood v. Isherwood, 16 CC 279, 8 CD 409, which was affirmed, without opinion, in 57 OS 660].

69. The probate court has jurisdiction to determine ownership of stock inventoried as assets of intestate's estate: Brown v. Southern Ohio Sav. Bank & Co., 22 App 324, 153 NE 864.

70. Where the evidence shows clearly that a deed executed by decedent was intended as security for a loan, the probate court has jurisdiction to determine the rights of parties, and have the conveyed property sold to pay debts of deceased: Helmhold v. Helmhold, 25 App 32, 158 NE 499.

—Lack of jurisdiction

75. The probate court has no authority to cancel an election, previously made and entered upon his journal, for an alleged mistake of the party so electing, as to the provisions and effect of the will. Such election, when made and recorded, can be vacated only on petition of the court of common pleas, or other court having general equity jurisdiction: Davis v. Davis, 11 OS 386.

76. The probate court has no jurisdiction, in making an order of distribution under this section, to determine the persons to whom distribution is to be made, and the amount going to each, but its power is exhausted in that particular when, upon final settlement of the account of the executor or administrator, it enters a general order of distribution: First Nat. Bank v. Beebe, 62 OS 41, 56 NE 485. See Brown v. Routzahn, 58 F(2d) 329.

77. General Code § 10832 (see now RC § 2113.37) is intended as a guide to the court and to administrators in dealing with that subject, and such court is without jurisdiction, in advance of the settlement of the estate, to entertain an application by the administrator to fix a sum as a maximum to be expended by such administrator for that purpose, and order the administrator, in the event that such monument is not procured by the widow or next of kin, to erect such monument and charge the expense to the estate: Estate of Ferguson, 81 OS 58, 89 NE 1070. For opinion below, see In re Ferguson, 6 NP(NS) 417, 18 OD 376.

78. After the expiration of the eight months allowed by GC § 10834 (see now RC § 2109.35) for filing exceptions when the account is settled in the absence of a person interested and without actual notice to him, the judgment of a probate court settling the final account of an executor or an administrator becomes absolute and conclusive and cannot be attacked except for fraud of the prevailing party: Crawford v. Zeigler, 84 OS 224, 95 NE 743.

78.1. The rule that the judgments of the probate court cannot be set aside, collaterally, except for fraud, applies to judgments approving accounts of executors: Truss v. Clouse, 23 OLA 610.

79. Jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon the probate court by will or any other private appointment, or by consent, empowering it to act as a court in supervising the administration of a testamentary trust: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453.

—Guardianships

84. The probate courts of this state have power to appoint guardians for deaf and dumb persons of full age, whom they find to be incapable of managing their affairs, without submitting the question of incapacity to a jury of any kind: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455.

85. A suit in equity, on a guardian's bond, to compel an account cannot be maintained without a showing that the powers and jurisdiction of the probate court are ineffectual to secure such accounting: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430, approved; Gorman v. Taylor, 43 OS 86, 1 NE 227.

86. The jurisdiction of the probate court over the settlement of the accounts of guardians is exclusive: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430; Gorman v. Taylor, 43 OS 86, 1 NE 227.

87. Exclusive original jurisdiction to remove a guardian being, by this section, vested in the probate court, the court of common pleas is without original jurisdiction to entertain an application to remove a guardian: Guardianship of Oliver, 77 OS 474, 83 NE 795.

88. Inasmuch as the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to settle accounts of guardians, the common pleas court can acquire no jurisdiction on appeal so long as any item of such an account remains undetermined: Gregg v. Klein, 12 CC(NS) 264, 22 CD 698.

89. A testamentary guardian of a minor, named by will, pursuant to the provisions of GC § 10930 (see now RC § 2111.12), is without authority to act as such guardian until he has been appointed guardian by the probate court having jurisdiction to make such appointment: Henicle v. Flack, 3 App 444, 23 CC (NS) 447.

90. The probate court has jurisdiction to entertain the application of a guardian to enter into a trust agreement with minor children and to exercise that jurisdiction to the full extent authorized or referable to the authority granted in this section, notwithstanding the irregularity in failing to appoint a guardian ad litem for the minors and to have an answer filed in their behalf: Pence v. Pence, 36 OLA 369, 43 NE(2d) 924 (App).

91. No cause of action accrues in favor of a ward on the bond of his guardian until final settlement and adjudication of the account of the guardian in the probate court: Wegner v. Wiltsie, 3 CC(NS) 410, 13 CD 308.

92. The death of the guardian without filing an account, and leaving no books of account or memorandum from which his indebtedness to the estate can be ascertained, does not give the common pleas court jurisdiction on the bond of the guardian to compel an accounting and payment to the ward of the amount found due him. An allegation that under such circumstances the jurisdiction of the probate court is ineffectual for the purpose of obtaining an accounting, states a conclusion of law and not of fact to be taken as admitted on demurrer: Wegner v. Wiltsie, 3 CC (NS) 410, 13 CD 308.

93. The probate court has no jurisdiction to find one an intertemperate and appoint a guardian for him, under GC § 11011 (see now RC §§ 2109.04, 2111.01, 2111.02, 2111.13, 2111.14), where the application for the appointment of a guardian alleges imbecility and is made under GC § 10989 (see now RC §§ 2111.01, 2111.02, 2111.04): Urban v. Urban, 21 CC(NS) 458, 33 CD 387.

94. An order of the probate court appointing a stranger guardian of a minor child is a final order affecting a substantial right of its father and is reviewable on error: Hare v. Sears, 4 NP(NS) 566, 17 OD 591.

95. The power of the probate court to appoint and to remove guardians is exclusive and is not subject to collateral attack: State ex rel Fisher v. Madden, 12 OD(NP) 83.

—Marriage licenses

101. A common law marriage is valid in Ohio: Umbehauer v. Labus, 85 OS 238, 97 NE 832.

—Appropriation of property

105. The statute regulating proceedings instituted in the probate court by municipal corporations to appropriate real property for an authorized public use, confers on that court power to decide when the service on the defendant is complete, and the parties are in court, and its decision on these questions cannot be collaterally inquired into: Cincinnati, S. & C. R. Co. v. Belle Centre, 48 OS 273, 27 NE 464.

—Insolvency

110. The superior court has no jurisdiction to hear the question of attorney fees for services rendered the assignee of an insolvent estate. The exclusive jurisdiction is in the probate court: Kittredge v. Miller, 12 CC 128, 5 CD 391 [affirmed, without opinion, Miller v. Kittredge, 56 OS 779; for earlier opinion in same case, see Kittredge v. Miller, 10 DecRep 166, 19 Bull 119].

111. An assignment will not transfer the jurisdiction to the court of insolvency where a suit to foreclose is pending in the court of common pleas: Omwake v. Jackson, 15 CC 615, 8 CD 235 [on appeal from 5 NP 119, 7 OD 238].

§ 2101.25 Optional jurisdiction of probate judge.

When any action for the appropriation of property or any appeal in a road case, in a sewer district case, or in any county water supply system case is filed in the probate court, the judge may certify such cause to the court of common pleas of the county, together with all the papers filed therein, whereupon the clerk of the court of common pleas shall file said papers and enter said cause on the docket. Thereupon the court of common pleas shall have jurisdiction to hear, determine, and make a record of said cause, as if commenced in such court. The court of common pleas, upon said case being docketed in that court, shall advance the same for trial at the earliest date permitted, on application by any party to said case.

Appeal in county road cases, RC § 5563.03 et seq.

Comment

Appropriation suits and road cases are not removed from the probate court prior to this section as originally enacted on Jan. 1, 1932, but the present concurrent jurisdiction is retained, coupled with the right of the probate judge to certify the case to the common pleas court.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Where the probate court in which decedent's estate is being administered first obtains jurisdiction of all the necessary parties and the subject of the action it may, having plenary power at law and in equity to dispose of any matter properly before it, dispose of an action for specific performance to convey real property based upon a contract between plaintiff and decedent; or, if in its opinion a proper case of doctrine forum non conveniens is made, return the cause of the court of common pleas of the county wherein the land in question is situated in a manner similar to that provided for certain causes in this section: *Fellers v. § 2101.30 Jury; drawing.

Whenever a jury is required in the probate court, the probate judge shall forthwith notify the commissioners of jurors, who shall cause to be drawn from the jury wheel, or to be drawn by use of the automation data processing equipment and procedures described in section 2313.07 of the Revised Code, the names of sixteen persons as jurors. Additional names may be drawn if required. The clerk of the court of common pleas or one of his deputies shall make a list of such names in the order drawn and certify it to the probate court, and such court shall issue a venire commanding the persons whose names were drawn to appear on the day and at the hour set for trial. The probate court shall deliver the venire to the sheriff, who shall serve it within five days thereafter and make prompt return of such service.

Even though a number of matters not of a probate character have been removed from the probate court, a jury will sometimes be required in the probate court. The above section sets up a uniform procedure for obtaining a jury and is based on former GC § 1201-1. See also RC § 2313.37 with reference to alternate juror, Ohio jury code, RC § 2313.01 et seq.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Where an action for declaratory judgment is properly instituted in the probate court, this section is applicable, and the questions of fact arising in the trial of the issues shall be determined by the probate judge unless upon his own initiative or upon request of either party the probate judge shall, in the exercise of his discretion, order such questions of fact to be tried by a jury or referred as otherwise authorized in the statutes: Renee v. Sanders, 160 OS 279, 52 OO 175, 116 NE(2d) 420.

§ 2101.32 Rules and procedure of court of common pleas to govern; power to award and tax costs. (GC § 10501-22)

The probate judge shall have the powers, perform the duties, and be governed by the rules and regulations provided for the courts of common pleas and the judges thereof in vacation. The sections of the Revised Code governing civil proceedings in the court of common pleas shall govern like proceedings in the probate court when there is no provision on the subject in Chapters 2101. to 2131., inclusive, of the Revised Code.

In all actions or proceedings had in the probate court, whether ex parte or adversary, the court may award, tax, and apportion costs between the parties, on the same or adverse sides.

1. Exceptions to the accounts of a testamentary trustee having been sustained, and money judgment having been rendered against him by the probate court, the judgment remaining unpaid and not collectible, the surety on his official bond may be made a party and judgment may be rendered against it by the probate court in the same action; GC § 11652 (RC § 2325.22) and this section authorize such procedure and judgment: In re Johnson, 66 App 433, 20 OO 392, 34 NE(2d) 1017.

2. For history of this section, see In re Harmon, 87 App 451, 43 OO 223, 96 NE(2d) 34.

3. This section provides for application of the code of civil procedure to proceedings in the probate court only when there is no provision in the probate code: Smith v. Smith, 8 OO 29 (App).

4. Former GC § 11212 (see now RC § 2101.32), providing that the law governing civil proceedings in the common pleas court, so far as applicable, shall govern in like proceedings in the probate court, does not furnish an additional remedy, since the probate code contains an adequate remedy and procedure: Reitz v. Smith, 56 App 72, 9 OO 233, 10 NE(2d) 150.

4.1 This section is a procedural provision and places the probate court by reference in the same position as the common pleas court for the purposes of appeal. In re Davis, 107 App 52, 55, 7 OO(2d) 377, 156 NE(2d) 321.

5. The perfecting of an appeal from the common pleas court to the court of appeals merely suspends the judgment of the common pleas court, and the same rules of law are applicable to the perfecting of appeals from the probate court to the common pleas court: Jones v. Whaley, 10 OO 87 (CP).

6. This section secures the right of trial by jury in the probate court: Lawrence R. Co. v. O'Harra, 48 OS 343, 28 NE 175 [see also Bogard v. Railway Co., 64 OS 564, 61 NE 1140]; Doan v. Biteley, 49 OS 588, 32 NE 600, affirming Biteley v. Doan, 4 CC 7, 2 CD 388 [see also Levy v. Ginn, 61 OS 644, 57 NE 1133]; Woodward v. Curtis, 19 CC 15, 10 CD 400 [affirmed, without opinion, 63 OS 575, 60 NE 1135]; Toledo, A., A. & C. R. Co. v. Toledo & C. R. Co., 6 CC 521, 3 CD 566; Rote v. Stratton, 2 NP 27, 3 OD 156; Israel v. Zanesville R. Co., 10 DecRep 225, 19 Bull 258.

7. The probate court has authority under this section and GC § 11486 (RC § 2315.36) to allow referees' fees and charge them as costs against the successful party only in an action against an executor on a claim against an estate, notwithstanding the provisions in GC § 10509-117 (RC § 2117.09), relating to taxing of costs in references the same as in arbitration under a rule of the common pleas court, are inoperative due to the repeal of all statutes giving the common pleas court authority to tax costs in such cases: Williard v. Kilbourne, 34 OLA 491.

8. The purpose of the amendment to this section was to confer upon the probate court the same general power to award and tax costs and apportion them between the parties as is conferred upon courts of common pleas by GC § 11628 (RC § 2323.44): Holmes v. Hrobon, 93 App 1, 50 OO 178, 61 OLA 113, 103 NE(2d) 845 [Mod. 158 OS 508; for apportionment in a later related proceeding see 116 App 366, 22 OO(2d) 200].

9. If the parties are entitled to a jury in a proceeding in the probate court, the court has full power to impanel a jury: Wiler v. Logan Natural Gas & C. Co., 6 CC(NS) 206, 17 CD 261.

10. This section makes the provisions of GC § 11455 (see now RC § 2315.09), to the effect that a verdict may be rendered by the concurrence of three-fourths of the jury, applicable to proceedings in the probate court: Smith v. Craig, 9 App 316, 29 OCA 236, 30 CD 544, 63 Bull 399 (Ed); Baird v. Dietrick, 20 NP (NS) 209, 28 OD 110 [affirmed, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

11. So far as applicable, the provisions of law governing civil proceedings in the court of common pleas govern proceedings in the probate court in the absence of any particular procedural provisions in the probate code: In re Smith, 67 OLA 409, 120 NE(2d) 632 (PC).

12. An action in the probate court under GC § 10509-105 (RC § 2117.01), for the allowance of a claim of an administrator and his wife against his decedent's estate for services rendered under a written contract, involves an ordinary contractual action for services rendered and as such, except for the fact that the claimant is an administrator, would normally be brought in the court of common pleas and thus is a "like proceeding" within the contemplation of this section: In re Smith, 67 OLA 409, 120 NE(2d) 632 (PC).

13. By virtue of RC §§ 2101.32 and 2323.25 the revised code provisions on rules of practice for the court of common pleas govern the probate court where there are no specific statutes in the code in the chapters directly applying to the probate court: In re Howell, 74 OLA 217, 140 NE(2d) 347 (JC).

§ 2101.33 Vacation and modification of judgments.

The probate court has the same power as the court of common pleas to vacate or modify its orders or judgments.

HISTORY: GC §§ 10501-17, 10501-18; 114 v 320; 125 v 903 (962) (EF 10-1-53); 136 v H 390. EF 8-6-76.

1. General Code § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33) deals merely with the vacation or modification of judgments. It does not purport to give the probate court any broad equity powers beyond that: Pengelly v. Thomas, 151 OS 51, 38 OO 519, 84 NE(2d) 265.

1.1 Under GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33) the probate court has the same power at law and in equity to vacate or modify its orders and judgments after term as the court of common pleas, and such power is not limited to the statutory grounds enumerated in GC § 11631 (RC § 2325.01), but includes equitable grounds as well: In re Gray, 162 OS 384, 55 OO 224, 123 NE(2d) 408.

1.2. Where, in the administration of an estate, a motion to vacate and set aside an order previously entered approving and confirming an inventory filed therein is timely filed by the surviving spouse, although not within one month after such order approving such inventory, and is subsequently found to be well taken, and an order is thereupon entered that such previously approved inventory be modified by the deletion therefrom of certain personal property and by increasing the amount of the widow's year's allowance, such order of modification does not constitute a vacation of the previous order of approval so as to reinstate in such surviving spouse the right of election to purchase the mansion house for the one-month period, provided in RC § 2113.38, from the date of such order of modification: In re Hrabnicky, 167 OS 507, 5 OO(2d) 181, 149 NE(2d) 909.

1.3. Error in the application of the law to the facts in the rendition of a judgment is judicial error and is a matter which must be raised by appeal and is not an irregularity in obtaining the judgment within the meaning of RC § 2325.01, relating to the vacation of judgments after term: Bartlett v. Bartlett, 176 OS 299, 27 OO(2d) 206, 199 NE(2d) 586.

2. A probate court can, by virtue of GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33), vacate or modify its orders and judgments the same as a common pleas court, and as its jurisdiction in that respect is not limited either by the constitution or legislative enactment to statutory grounds only, such jurisdiction includes equitable grounds as well: Abicht v. O'Donnell, 52 App 513, 6 OO 462, 3 NE(2d) 993.

3. The grant of a limited equity jurisdiction to the probate court, under the provisions of GC §§ 10501-53 and 10501-17, does not oust the common pleas court from its original equity jurisdiction to declare void the judgments and orders of the probate court for lack of jurisdiction: Young v. Guella, 67 App 11, 21 OO 66, 35 NE(2d) 997; Armstrong v. Brufach, 74 OLA 370, 136 NE(2d) 463.

4. The probate court has the same jurisdiction, at law and in equity, to vacate or modify its own orders and judgments as has the court of common pleas: Hooffstetter v. Adams, 67 App 21, 21 OO 70, 35 NE(2d) 896.

4.1. Power of probate court to vacate previously allowed claim against estate: In re Blue, 67 App 37, 32 NE(2d) 499 [reported subnom Amrine v. Gabriel, at 14 OO 447].

5. By GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33) the jurisdiction of the probate court to modify or vacate its orders or judgments is limited by the same rules that govern the common pleas courts, and by GC § 10501-18 (RC § 2101.33) the year is divided into three terms of four months each, for the purpose of modifying or vacating its orders or judgments: In re Shafer, 74 App 33, 29 OO 233, 56 NE(2d) 926.

5.1. The probate court, in determining the amount of inheritance tax, acts in a judicial as well as an administrative capacity, has the same power in respect thereto that it has in respect to other matters rightfully lodged with it, and may, in accordance with such power, set aside its determination based upon a mistaken appraisal and make a second determination based upon the true appraisal: In re Seidensticker, 75 App 73, 30 OO 381, 60 NE(2d) 74.

6. The probate court has the same powers as the common pleas court to vacate or modify its judgments during the same term of court in which the judgment is rendered: In re Kleinhenn, 76 App 122, 31 OO 429, 63 NE(2d) 315.

7. This section confers on the probate court jurisdiction to vacate a confirmation of a final account in a decedent's estate: Pengelly v. Thomas, 79 App 53, 34 OO 449, 65 NE(2d) 897.

8. This section is not violative of any provision of the constitution, and applies to a proceeding to vacate a confirmation of a final account in a decedent's estate, even though such confirmation was made prior to the effective date of such section: Pengelly v. Thomas, 79 App 53, 34 OO 449, 65 NE(2d) 897.

8.1. An executor does not lose his right to have a final order determining inheritance taxes modified for a mistake of fact in erroneously listing assets for taxation by a failure to file exceptions to the interlocutory order determining inheritance taxes: In re Beckman, 91 App 42, 48 OO 236, 107 NE(2d) 538.

8.2. Probate court's power to vacate decree of adoption: In re Sladky, 109 App 120, 10 OO(2d) 304, 161 NE(2d) 554.

8.3. The probate court is without jurisdiction to entertain an application to vacate the probate of a will, filed subsequent to the certification of such will to the court of common pleas for adjudication as to its validity: State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate court, 113 App 1, 12 OO(2d) 307. [affirmed 172 OS 1, 15 OO(2d) 43, 173 NE(2d) 100.]

8.4 The probate court has the power to modify a previously-rendered order, after term, on equitable grounds as well as those grounds enumerated by statute: In re Craig, 5 OApp(2d) 137, 34 OO(2d) 245, 214 NE(2d) 122.

9. An order of a probate court making an election for an incompetent surviving spouse under RC § 2107.45, is subject to the control of the court and may be vacated under RC § 2101.33 within term time: In re Strauch, 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95.

10. The common pleas court may, in the exercise of a sound discretion, vacate or modify its orders during term, and under GC § 10501-17 (RC § 2101.33), the probate court is given the same power as a common pleas court to vacate or modify its orders. The probate court has the power to vacate and modify its order during term in the exercise of a sound discretion: In re Wampler, 60 OLA 593, 103 NE(2d) 303 (App).

11. The court has no power to "correct the record" (by vacating, four years later, the appointment of a guardian) where the record shows on its face that it exemplifies exactly what the court intended by its judgment to do: In re Gerstenek, 76 OLA 280, 139 NE(2d) 64.

§ 2101.34 Judgments by confession. (GC § 10501-31)

If the judges of the court of common pleas are absent from the county or are under a disability, the probate judge of the county may enter judgments by confession in cases pending in the court of common pleas of his county.

HISTORY: GC § 10501-31; 114 v 320 (328). EFF 10-1-53.

Comment

The need for this section arises primarily in counties where the common pleas judge is assigned for weeks at a time to another county. In his absence litigants are compelled to go for cognovit judgments to an adjoining county where court is in session. In emergency cases a lien of real value may be lost and the client's rights jeopardized.

This section merely permits the probate judge to enter judgments by confession in the place of a common pleas judge who is absent or under disability. All clerical duties would remain in the common pleas court and the probate court would not be burdened with added detail.

A probate judge may transfer a case for hearing to the court of common pleas only if he is absent, unable to attend court, the volume of work necessitates such transfer or if he is interested in the estate, and where no reason appears in the record which would preclude the judge from sitting, the court of common pleas acquires no jurisdiction by an attempted transfer thereto: In re Byerly, 74 OLA 586, 141 NE(2d) 771 (App).

Letters testamentary, of administration, or of guardianship shall not be issued to a person after his election to the office of probate judge and before the expiration of his term. If a probate judge is interested, as heir, legatee, devisee, or other manner in an estate which would otherwise be settled in the probate court of the county where he resides, such estate, and all of the accounts of guardians in which the judge is interested, shall be settled by the court of common pleas of the county. In such matters and cases in which the judge is interested, the original papers shall be by him forthwith certified to the court of common pleas. In other matters and proceedings in a probate court in which the judge thereof is interested or in which he is required to be a witness to a will, such judge shall, upon the motion of a party interested in the proceedings, or upon his own motion, certify the matters and proceedings to the court of common pleas and forthwith file with the clerk of the court of common pleas all original papers connected therewith.

When a matter or proceeding is so certified, the court of common pleas, at chambers, by a judge thereof, or in open court shall hear and determine it as though such court had original jurisdiction of the subject matter. Upon final decision of the questions involved in such proceedings, the final settlement of the estate in which the judge is interested as executor, administrator, or guardian, or when his interest therein ceases, the clerk shall deliver to the probate court from which they came the original papers and make and file therein an authenticated transcript of the orders, judgments, and proceedings of the court of common pleas. Thereupon the probate judge shall record such orders, judgments, and proceedings in the proper records.

3. Under such circumstances the attempted appeal on questions of law and fact will be dismissed and the cause retained as an appeal on questions of law: In re Barnes, 92 App 293, 49 OO 364, 109 NE(2d) 876.

5. The federal court holds under this section that the court of common pleas has only a limited and special jurisdiction to act and to certify its action back to the probate court, and that when the papers are transmitted to the probate court such jurisdiction terminates, and the common pleas court has no authority to revoke an order admitting a will to record by subsequent proceedings therein: McClaskey v. Barr, 7 OFD 556, 54 Fed 781.

6. Under GC § 10501-10 (RC § 2101.38), providing that upon certification of a matter by the probate court to the court of common pleas the court of common pleas "shall hear and determine it as though it had original jurisdiction of the subject matter," the court of common pleas has such power to hear and determine the matter as the probate court would have had if the matter had not been certified: In re Barnes, 64 OLA 6 (CP).

When a probate judge has a prejudice, either for or against a party or his counsel in a matter or cause pending before him, or is otherwise interested in such cause or matter, or disqualified to sit therein, but the prejudice, interest, or disqualification is not such as to permit or require certification of the proceedings to the court of common pleas as provided by section 2101.38 of the Revised Code, any party to such cause or matter, or the counsel of any such party, may file an affidavit setting forth such prejudice, interest, or disqualification. The fact of the filing of such affidavit shall be entered upon the record of the court. The judge may upon his own motion make an entry setting forth such prejudice, interest, or disqualification.

Forthwith upon the filing of such affidavit or the making of such entry the judge shall notify the chief justice of the supreme court who, if satisfied that such prejudice, interest, or disqualification exists, shall assign some probate judge or some judge of the court of common pleas to hear the cause or matter in place of such probate judge. The judge assigned shall proceed and try such cause or matter. The affidavit referred to in this section shall be filed not less than three days prior to the time set for the hearing of such cause or matter.

See former GC §§ 1589, 1590, 1592, 1687.

Comment

General Code § 10501-11 was based upon former GC § 1687, which was applicable to the common pleas court. That section, however, did not expressly provide that the chief justice of the supreme court must be satisfied that bias, prejudice, interest, or disqualification exists before assigning some other common pleas judge to hear the cause. However, it was decided by the supreme court that GC § 2253-1 (RC § 141.08), passed by the legislature in 1917, was in pari materia with former GC § 1687, and must be read and construed therewith. General Code § 2253-1 provided: "The chief justice of the supreme court shall receive his actual and necessary expenses incurred while performing his duties under the law and the constitution in determining the disqualification or disability of any judge of the court of common pleas or of the court of appeals, to be paid from the state treasury upon the warrant of the auditor of state, issued to such chief justice." Therefore, an affidavit setting forth such bias, prejudice, interest, or disqualification is not conclusive and there must be a determination of that issue by the chief justice: State ex rel Chute v. Marshall, 105 OS 320, 137 NE 870. Consequently, the effect of the above Revised Code section is substantially the same as former GC § 1687 with reference to the common pleas court.

The General Assembly, in its enactment of this section, directing the chief justice of the supreme court to assign "some probate judge or some judge of the court of common pleas" to hear a cause or matter pending before another probate judge who has a prejudice or interest or is otherwise disqualified in such cause as set out in said section, exercised a legislative function well within the powers granted to the General Assembly by the constitution of Ohio: In re Ely, 176 OS 311, 27 OO(2d) 236, 199 NE(2d) 746.

2. This section confers no authority upon the chief justice except with regard to an affidavit filed by a party or his counsel in a matter or cause pending before the probate judge which must be tried or upon which a hearing is necessary: In re Hill, 29 OO(2d) 60, 196 NE(2d) 816 (PC).

No probate judge shall practice law, be associated with another as partner in the practice of law in a court or tribunal of this state, prepare a complaint or answer, make out an account required for the settlement of an estate committed to the care or management of another, or appear as attorney before a court or judicial tribunal. Whoever violates this section shall forfeit his office.

The deputy clerk of a probate court may engage in the practice of law if his practice is not related in any way to probate law or practice. The deputy may engage in the practice of law only with the continued consent and approval of all of the judges of the probate court.

The prosecuting attorney shall file his information against a judge or deputy clerk who practices law in violation of this section in the court of common pleas, and proceed as upon indictment.

This section does not prevent a probate judge or deputy clerk from finishing business commenced by him prior to his election or appointment, provided it is not connected with his official duty.

From any final order, judgment, or decree of the probate court, an appeal on a question of law may be prosecuted to the court of appeals in the manner and within the time provided for the prosecution of such appeals from the court of common pleas to the court of appeals. For the purpose of prosecuting appeals on questions of law from the probate court, the probate court shall exercise judicial functions inferior only to the court of appeals and the supreme court.

This section is also derived from GC § 11064.

This section was amended in 1941 to provide that appeals from the probate court "shall be taken within the time" provided by law for the taking of appeals from the common pleas court. The same result was reached by the supreme court in the case of In re Knechtges, 138 OS 24, 19 OO 481, 32 NE(2d) 410, which was decided after the amendment had been submitted to the general assembly.

Scope and construction

1. Statute permitting appeal from judgment of probate court in settling accounts of executor or trustee is remedial and must be liberally construed: United States Fidelity &c. Co. v. Wood, 35 App 224, 172 NE 383.
2. Appeal from the probate court to the common pleas court, like error, is purely a statutory remedy, and the procedure outlined by statute must be strictly followed to effectuate the appeal: In re Wilson, 14 OLA 417.
3. An action in mandamus is not appealable and the court of appeals may dismiss the appeal sua sponte: State ex rel Hall v. Fenner, 18 OLA 701.
4. This section to GC § 10501-61 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]) provide otherwise than in the appellate code for review by statutory appeal, but not on questions of law only: Linton v. Williams, 23 OLA 340.
6. This section, providing for appeals to the common pleas court by one against whom the probate court has made an order in proceedings to appoint guardians or trustees for idiots, lunatics, imbeciles or drunkards, should be liberally construed: Jacobs v. Porter, 36 OLA 282, 43 NE(2d) 879 (App).
7. The word "record" as used in this section includes all of the testimony and evidence which was before the probate court at the hearing of the matter contemplated by the statute: In re Campbell, 39 OLA 513 (App).
8. An appeal from an order of the probate court must be within the provisions of this section: In re Helfrich, 3 OO 162 (CP).
9. There is a right of appeal in an action brought in the probate court by a guardian against the sureties on the bond of a former guardian: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455.
11. Jurisdiction of probate court to determine priorities as between creditors of a partnership firm and of the individual members. Whatever jurisdiction exists, in such a case, in the probate court, exists in the common pleas on appeal: Clapp v. Huron County Banking Co., 50 OS 528, 35 NE 308.
12. The right of appeal is construed strictly: Ebersole v. Schiller, 50 OS 701, 35 NE 793; Browne v. Wallace, 66 OS 57, 63 NE 588 [affirming 21 CC 417; sub nomine, Brown v. Wallace, 12 CD 1]; Luburg v. Luburg, 13 App 220, 31 OCA 549 [motion to certify record overruled, Luberg v. Luberg, 18 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278].

13. The provision of GC § 10214 (RC § 1.11), to the effect that remedial provisions relating to procedure must not be construed strictly, applies to the provisions of GC § 11206 (see now RC § 2101.42), relating to cases which may be appealed from the probate court to the court of common pleas: Trumpler v. Royer, 95 OS 194, 115 NE 1018 [affirming Royer v. Trumpler, 7 App 312, 27 OCA 117, 28 CD 186].

14. An order of the probate court admitting an instrument to probate as a last will is not reviewable on appeal: Frey v. Bland, 139 OS 354, 22 OO 411, 40 NE(2d) 145.

15. The provisions of this section (119 v 396) are not violative of either Const., Art. II, § 26 or Art. IV, § 6: In re Bates, 142 OS 622, 27 OO 536, 53 NE(2d) 787.

16. Where the record of the probate court discloses that such court sustained plaintiff's demurrer to the defendant's answer and cross-petition, and, the defendant not desiring to plead further, such court thereupon rendered judgment for the plaintiff, there is no occasion for a bill of exceptions, and this section does not authorize any appeal by such defendant to the common pleas court: Steward v. Belt, 152 OS 399, 40 OO 401, 89 NE(2d) 572.

17. Appeal does not lie from order granting or revoking letters of administration: Stafford v. American Missionary Assn., 22 CC 399, 12 CD 442.

18. The probate court has jurisdiction to determine ownership of stock inventoried as assets of estate; the common pleas court has jurisdiction on appeal: Brown v. Southern Ohio Sav. Bank &c. Co., 22 App 324, 153 NE 864.

19. This section limits appeals to final orders or judgments, and the whole cause is appealed, since the section makes no provision for a partial appeal and a remand to the probate court upon a determination of a specific question or issue: Hawke v. Noyes, 62 App 186, 15 OO 458, 23 NE(2d) 508.

20. Under this section and GC § 12223-3 (RC § 2505.03), only final orders, judgments or decrees of the probate court, in proceedings to sell real estate to pay debts, are appealable to the common pleas court: Hawke v. Noyes, 62 App 186, 15 OO 458, 23 NE(2d) 508.

21. An order setting aside a former order permitting an answer to be withdrawn is not a final order: Hawke v. Noyes, 62 App 186, 15 OO 458, 23 NE(2d) 508.

22. Where a litigant, against whom a judgment is rendered in the probate court, perfects an appeal on questions of law and fact in the common pleas court, before bringing any proceedings in the court of appeals, and it appears that, under the circumstances existing, the appeal was properly taken on questions of law and fact to the court of common pleas, such litigant thereby accomplishes a suspension of the judgment of the probate court and selects his forum and his remedy. He cannot thereafter, while said proceedings in the common pleas court are pending, invoke the jurisdiction of the court of appeals to determine the correctness of the judgment of the probate court, which, by his act, has been suspended, and which, by judgment of the common pleas court, may be superseded: In re Habant, 62 App 522, 16 OO 193, 24 NE(2d) 833.

23. The finding of the probate court, in a proceeding under GC § 10509-95 (RC § 2123.01) et seq, to determine heirship is not appealable to the court of common pleas on questions of law and fact under the provisions of this section: In re Meier, 65 App 425, 19 OO 38, 30 NE(2d) 365.

24. This section, relating specifically to appeals from the probate court, is operative as to appeals from that court, and the general provisions relating to appeal in GC § 12223-3 (RC § 2505.03) affect only such cases within those general provisions as are not within the provisions of this section: In re Hamilton, 67 App 242, 21 OO 228, 36 NE(2d) 439.

25. An appeal on questions of law and fact from the probate court to the common pleas court under the provisions of this section cannot be taken from interlocutory orders or orders not involving the determination of a question of fact: In re Hamilton, 67 App 242, 21 OO 228, 36 NE(2d) 439.

26. The last part of the second paragraph of this section, authorizing appeal on questions of law and fact from judgments of the probate court to the common pleas court, where no record of the proceedings in the probate court was made, is unconstitutional: Kline v. Kline, 71 App 182, 25 OO 588, 48 NE(2d) 558.

27. A judgment of the probate court, based upon a finding by arbitrators appointed by such court, is not appealable to the common pleas court on questions of law and fact where no record of the arbitration proceedings was made, that portion of this section, authorizing appeal to the common pleas court from judgments of the probate court, in which no record was made, being unconstitutional: In re Magdzicki, 71 App 282, 26 OO 127, 49 NE(2d) 205.

28. When a record has been taken on a hearing in probate court, under this section, an appeal on questions of law and fact to the common pleas court does not give that court jurisdiction of the cause, and the appeal must be dismissed: In re Long, 76 App 321, 32 OO 34, 64 NE(2d) 261.

29. This section, providing for appeal on questions of law and fact from the probate court to the common pleas court, where no record has been taken in the probate court, is constitutional: In re Schneider, 81 App 233, 37 OO 69, 72 NE(2d) 904.

30. This section grants the right to a party aggrieved to invoke the jurisdiction of the common pleas court where a record may be taken, after which an appeal may be taken to the court of appeals by any party on the basis of such record and the judgment of the common pleas court: In re Schneider, 81 App 233, 37 OO 69, 72 NE(2d) 904.

31. An order of the probate court admitting a lost will to probate is not a final order and an appeal may not be taken therefrom: In re Brown, 97 App 499, 56 OO 454, 127 NE(2d) 226.

32. The determination by the probate court of the township or municipality wherein an inheritance tax originates is a final order from which an appeal may be taken pursuant to GC § 10501-56 (RC § 2101.42): In re Hutson, 100 App 473, 60 OO 377, 137 NE(2d) 407.

33. The word "record," as used in this section is not used in its technical sense or as defined in RC § 2323.24: In re Todd, 104 App 284, 4 OO(2d) 421, 148 NE(2d) 261.

34. Under the specific provisions of this section an appeal may be taken from any order, decision or judgment of the probate court by a person against whom it is made or whom it affects: In re Reynolds, 106 App 488, 491, 7 OO(2d) 222, 155 NE(2d) 686.

35. This section is permissive and does not outline the procedure to be followed in appeal: In re Davis, 107 App 52, 54, 7 OO(2d) 377, 156 NE(2d) 321.

36. The provision of this section pertaining to appeals from the probate court to the court of appeals on questions of law and fact, does not broaden the jurisdiction of the court of appeals beyond the ten classes of cases designated in RC § 2501.02, as being appealable on questions of law and fact: In re Verbeck, 114 App 155, 18 OO(2d) 465, 180 NE(2d) 615.

37. By virtue of the provisions of § 4, art. IV, § 4 of the Ohio constitution, a court of common pleas has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from a probate court: In re Derr, 24 OApp(2d) 91, 53 OO(2d) 229, 263 NE(2d) 911.

38. Ordinarily when the judgment construing a will affects only the rights of beneficiaries, an executor has no right to appeal: Fineman v. Central Nat. Bank, 18 OO(2d) 33, 175 NE(2d) 837 (App).

39. The juvenile court is a separate and distinct court, and provisions of statutes for appeal from probate court are not applicable to juvenile court: In re Morningstar, 24 OO 123 (CP).

40. The common pleas court does not have jurisdiction of an appeal on questions of law and fact from the probate court in an action for a declaratory judgment requiring the court to say whether the action of a beneficiary of a will, by withholding it from probate, made him amenable to the penalties provided by GC §§ 10504-14 and 10542 (RC § 2107.42), since the subject thereof does not fall within the provisions of this section: In re Varley, 27 OO 159, 46 NE(2d) 878 (App) [affirming 27 OO 162 (PC)].

41. That portion of this section, which provides for an appeal from the probate court to common pleas court when no record was taken at the hearing below is invalid as a result of the 1968 amendment of Const. art. IV, § 4: In re Derr, 49 OO(2d) 497, 20 OMisc 293, 254 NE(2d) 392 (CP).

42. An order of the probate court determining which of several claimants are entitled to receive rents accruing during the administration of an estate is in the nature of instructions to the executrix in her administrative capacity and is not an order adverse to her from which she may prosecute an appeal: In re Anderson, 71 OLA 127.

43. Revised Code § 2101.42 specifically governs appeals from the probate court to the court of common pleas and the general provisions relating to appeal in RC § 2505.03 affect only such cases within those general provisions as are not within the provisions of RC § 2101.42: Thompson v. Allen, 72 OLA 215, 133 NE(2d) 812 (CP).

44. This section does not nor was it intended to permit appeals on law and fact from the probate court to the court of common pleas where the judgment appealed from was rendered upon averments contained in the pleadings and no evidence of any nature was presented or attempted to be presented to the probate court: In re Bicknell, 73 OLA 359, 137 NE(2d) 619 (App).

45. Where the property which the probate court orders an executor to include in his inventory cannot be located, thus making it impossible for him to comply therewith, the executor is an aggrieved party who may appeal therefrom since under such order he would be charged with certain assets for which he would be unable to account: In re Byerly, 74 OLA 586, 141 NE(2d) 771 (App).

45.1. The probate court, under the constitution and by statute, has plenary jurisdiction in the settlement of estates, particularly in the settlement of the accounts of executors and administrators; any person affected by any order, decision, or judgment of that court in the settling of such accounts has, under RC § 2101.42, the right of appeal to the court of appeals and the court of common pleas has no jurisdiction of an action seeking to recover from defendants money paid to them out of the assets of an estate, under an order of the probate court, as attorney fees for services rendered to the administrator on the grounds that the administration has fraudulently intermingled funds of plaintiff with the assets of decedent's estate: Stone v. Woods, 75 OLA 577, 144 NE(2d) 913 (CP).

Appeal—admission of will to probate

See also case notes 14, 31 under this section.

46. An order of the probate court admitting an instrument to probate as a last will is not reviewable on appeal: In re Frey, 139 OS 354, 22 OO 411, 40 NE(2d) 145.

47. In a proceeding to probate a will, when the evidence received and that improperly excluded by the probate court presented a prima facie case on the facts necessary to the probate of the will, which was denied in the probate court, a reviewing court may order it probated: In re Fisher, 67 App 6, 21 OO 44, 35 NE(2d) 784.

—Accounts of executors, etc.

48. Since the probate court has jurisdiction to make an allowance for fees for services which are rendered by attorneys who are employed by an executor or administrator to settle an estate, any person who is affected by an order of the court with reference to the allowance or disallowance of such fees may appeal from such order of the probate court to the court of common pleas under GC § 11206 (see now RC § 2101.42): Trumpler v. Royer, 95 OS 194, 115 NE 1018 [affirming Royer v. Trumpler, 7 App 312, 27 OCA 117, 28 CD 186].

49. Appeals from the probate court to the common pleas court from any order or judgment sustaining exceptions to the account of an executor shall be taken in the manner now provided for in GC § 10501-56 to GC § 10501-61 (GC § 10501-56 now RC § 2101.42; GC §§ 10501-57 to 10501-61 repealed, 118 v 78 [80]): In re Logan, 133 OS 341, 10 OO 533, 13 NE (2d) 911.

50. Surety of trustee could appeal from finding of probate court that error had been made in previous account approved by court: United States Fidelity & Co. v. Wood, 35 App 224, 172 NE 383.

51. A person who is not included in any of the classes of persons to whom notice of the filing of an inventory, the hearing thereon, the filing of exceptions, or the hearing thereon, is required to be given under the provisions of RC § 2115.16, and who was never served with such notice but merely appeared as a witness at the hearing on exceptions to the inventory, claiming ownership of certain items of personal property claimed by the executor to belong to the estate cannot appeal from a judgment of the probate court ordering such property included in the inventory: In re Apger, 111 App 164, 14 OO(2d) 54, 161 NE(2d) 798.

52. An order of the probate court overruling a legatee's exceptions to the schedule of debts is final, the exceptor not having taken an appeal from the order as required under GC § 10509-120 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]), and he has no right thereafter to file exceptions to the final account: In re Beabout, 15 OO 2 (App) [appeal dismissed, 135 OS 571].

53. Upon such appeal the common pleas court is without jurisdiction to enter a personal judgment against the guardian, but must settle the accounts, determine the amount due the ward and certify its judgment to the probate court: In re Jaymes, 18 OLA 613.

54. A motion in the probate court to extend the time for making an executor's final settlement, or to strike an executor's account from the files, is not ap-

59. An order of the probate court obligating the guardian of an incompetent to pay for past services rendered the ward in a sum certain and fixed constitutes the settling of an account in so far as it covers the amount for the time prior to the order of which the brother of the incompetent, appellant, had notice, within the terms of this section, authorizing an appeal to the common pleas court: *Gariety v. 99. The right of appeal given by this section relates to judgments where the probate court has jurisdiction to hear and determine a complaint for concealing, embezzling or carrying away assets of estate of deceased person: *Meinzer v. 125. An appeal on questions of law and fact may be taken, under authority of this section (114 v 336), to the common pleas court from an order of the probate court appointing a guardian for a person who is adjudged incompetent by reason of advanced age, improvidence, mental and physical disability and infirmity: In re Jacobs, 73 App 286, 28 OO 449, 43 NE(2d) 879.

125.2 An executor could appeal from a probate court judgment which established a vested interest in the remainder of the estate in a designated beneficiary under a testamentary trust and which terminated the trust upon the expiration of a designated life interest, all of which was in conflict with provisions of the will to terminate the trust at a different time, under different conditions, and with gifts of remainders to other beneficiaries, if designated events occurred: Fineman v. Central Nat. Bank, 18 OO(2d) 33, 175 NE(2d) 837 (App).

127. An appeal from the appointment of a guardian for an imbecile confers jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for the person only: In re Greer, 24 NP (NS) 46.

129. The court of common pleas cannot accept an appeal on questions of law and fact from the probate court where the order appealed from was one denying an application to be appointed testamentary trustee solely on the grounds of non-residency of such applicant and no evidence of any nature was presented or attempted to be presented to the probate court: In re Bicknell, 73 OLA 359, 137 NE(2d) 619 (App).

130. It is well settled that an order appointing a guardian, made by a probate court, in the exercise of jurisdiction, can not be collaterally impeached: In re Titington, 82 OLA 563, 162 NE(2d) 628.

138.1. An ancillary administrator of an estate may appeal from an order of the probate court prescribing that he reject claims of a domiciliary executor set forth in the schedule of debts, which claims were presented to and allowed by the proper court of the state of the domiciliary executor, prescribing that the ancillary administrator require the domiciliary executor to perfect his claims under GC § 10509-112 et seq, and prescribing that, after the proper adjudication of the rejection or allowance of the domiciliary executor's claims, the ancillary administrator distribute the entire funds in his hands to beneficiaries named in the will of the decedent: In re Kelley, 68 App 51, 22 OO 158, 34 NE(2d) 34.

139. A claim presented to the probate court by an administratrix, in which she avers that she went through a marriage ceremony with decedent, believing his representation that he had been divorced and was free to marry, that she had rendered services, expended money and surrendered rights for decedent's benefit and that she was justly entitled to be reimbursed and compensated, does not invoke the chancery jurisdiction of the probate court, and is not appealable on questions of law and fact, but on questions of law only: In re Blaustein, 77 App 286, 33 OO 48, 66 NE(2d) 153.

139.1. An order of the probate court awarding an allowance to a testamentary trustee for services rendered to the trust is not a final order and an appeal will not lie therefrom: In re Thomas, 84 App 30, 39 OO 46, 84 NE(2d) 294.

Trial on appeal

147. Where the common pleas court erroneously entertained an appeal under this section on questions of law only, considered the judgment appealed from on a bill of exceptions allowed and signed by the probate judge, reversed such judgment as being against the weight of the evidence, and remanded the proceeding for a new trial, without challenge or objection, the judgment of reversal is not invalid, the common pleas court having had jurisdiction: Sheets v. Hodes, 142 OS 559, 27 OO 498, 53 NE(2d) 804 [affirming 39 OLA 492].

148. Where an action for a declaratory judgment, instituted in the probate court, is appealed on questions of law and fact to the common pleas court, and that court has before it the journal entry of the probate court, reciting only that the matter came on to be heard on the petition "and the evidence," and the notice of appeal asserting that "no record has been taken of the hearing of any matter before the probate court, so that a bill of exceptions or complete record may be prepared," the common pleas court is warranted in overruling a motion to dismiss the appeal and in hearing the case de novo: Kolthoff v. Kolthoff, 79 App 427, 35 OO 226, 74 NE(2d) 394.

149. Where a record of proceedings in the probate court shows conclusively that all procedural steps required by statute for appeal to the common pleas court were taken, the common pleas court acquires jurisdiction for all purposes and cannot be ousted of such jurisdiction unless there is affirmative evidence showing lack of jurisdiction: In re Schneider, 81 App 233, 37 OO 69, 72 NE(2d) 904.

150. It is the fact that a record was not taken in the probate court which gives the right to a party aggrieved to appeal to the common pleas court rather than that which could have been done, and this section does not require a party to prepare a narrative bill of exceptions to be entitled to a right of appeal to the common pleas court: In re Schneider, 81 App 233, 37 OO 69, 72 NE(2d) 904.

150.1 Where an appeal on questions of law and fact is taken from the probate court to the common pleas court, in accordance with this section, the common pleas court has complete jurisdiction to entertain the cause and conduct a full hearing de novo: In re Miller, 59 OO 425, 127 NE(2d) 409 (App).

151. Upon appeal from a judgment of the probate court in settling the account of a guardian, under GC § 11206 (repealed, 114 v 320; see now RC § 2101.42), the case is tried de novo in the common pleas court on the same issues: In re Jaymes, 18 OLA 613.

152. Where a case is appealed from the probate to common pleas court, issues made up and the case submitted on the evidence, the case should be determined on the issues thus made up, irrespective of and disregarding any question of technical jurisdiction of the probate court in the proceedings in that court: Ephriam v. Ephriam, 19 OLA 86.

153. Where an appeal has been perfected from the probate court to the common pleas court, appellant is entitled to a trial de novo in the common pleas court, although there is a motion pending in the lower court to vacate the judgment; the fact that there is no bill of exceptions and no motion for new trial was made, does not affect the right: In re Murphy, 27 OLA 221.

154. On appeal from an order of the probate court fixing attorneys' fees to be allowed to the executor, the court of common pleas will follow the decision of the probate court unless the facts indicate that such finding was made without due regard to the evidence presented and to the surrounding circumstances, especially as the probate judge in question has had a long experience in matters of that sort: In re Messang, 20 NP(NS) 60; sub nomine, In re Massang, 27 OD 481 [affirmed by court of appeals].

Successive appeals

165. After the amendment of GC § 11206 (95 v 406) (see now RC § 2101.42) and GC § 12241 (95 v 391) (see now RC § 2505.24), the circuit court (now the court of appeals) had jurisdiction to review, on error, an order of the court of common pleas, made on appeal from the probate court, removing or refusing to remove an executor, guardian, etc.: North v. Smith, 73 OS 247, 76 NE 619 [reversing 5 CC(NS) 495, 7 CD 367]; In re Estate of Breckenridge, 7 CC (NS) 86, 17 CD 688. Contra: Smith v. Bracey, 13 CC(NS) 529, 22 CD 383.

Bond on appeal

173. Under the provisions of GC § 10501-59 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]), an appellant, who is a party in a fiduciary capacity, from an order or judgment of the probate court sustaining exceptions to an account, is exempt from giving an appeal bond only if he has given bond in Ohio for the faithful discharge of his duties, and appeals in the interest of his trust: In re Logan, 133 OS 341, 10 OO 533, 13 NE(2d) 911.

174. Where an appeal on questions of law and fact is taken from a judgment of a probate court, directing the payment of money by a guardian, to the common pleas court, the appellant must, by virtue of GC §§ 10501-57 and 10501-58 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]), furnish bond in double the amount of the judgment, and upon failure to do so the common pleas court may dismiss the appeal: Caryl v. Scheiderer, 61 App 147, 15 OO 115, 22 NE(2d) 463.

175. Where an administrator appeals from the judgment on exceptions to his account wherein certain credits are disallowed and there is no other matter involved, the appeal is not in the interest of the trust and the administrator is not relieved from giving an appeal bond by GC § 10501-59 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]). The finding of probate court that the appeal is in the interest of the trust and order that the appeal be allowed without bond, do not give the right of appeal without bond unless as a matter of fact the appeal is in the interest of the trust: In re Wilson, 29 OLA 49.

Transcripts

180. An appeal on questions of law and fact from the probate court to the common pleas court is perfected when a "transcript of the docket or journal entries in the cause, and of the order, decision or decree, appealed from" is filed with the clerk of the common pleas court on or before the second day of its next term in accordance with the provisions of GC § 10501-60 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]): Paden v. Pearce, 61 App 42, 15 OO 64, 22 NE(2d) 301.

181. The right of appeal to the court of common pleas on questions of law and fact, as provided in this section, is dependent upon whether or not a record has, in fact, been taken upon which a bill of exceptions or a complete record could be made available to the reviewing court: In re Schneider, 81 App

233, 37 OO 69, 72 NE(2d) 904.

182. Revised Code § 2101.42 provides for an appeal from the probate court to the court of common pleas only in those instances where a record has not been taken in the probate court so that a bill of exceptions or a complete record may be prepared as provided by law in the court of common pleas: Thompson v. Allen, 72 OLA 215, 133 NE(2d) 812 (CP).

Notice of appeal

188. Under the amended provisions of this section and GC § 12223-7 (RC § 2505.07), a notice of appeal from a court of probate to a court of common pleas on questions of law and fact may be filed within a period of twenty days after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree in a case in which a record has not been taken: In re Knechtges, 138 OS 24, 19 OO 481, 32 NE(2d) 410.

§ 2101.43 Petition for submission of question of combining probate court and court of common pleas. (GC §§ 10501-47, 10501-48)

The clerk of the court of common pleas shall, thereupon, make and deliver a certified copy of such order to the sheriff, and the sheriff shall include notice of the submission of such question in his proclamation of election for the ensuing general election.

Each elector joining in a petition for the submission of said question shall sign such petition in his own handwriting, unless he cannot write and his signature is made by mark, and shall add thereto the township, precinct, or ward of which he is a resident. Such petition may consist of as many parts as are convenient. One of the signers to each separate paper shall swear before some officer qualified to administer the oath that the petition is bona fide to the best of his knowledge and belief. Such oath shall be a part of or attached to such paper. The judge upon receipt of such petition shall deposit it with the clerk of the court of common pleas.

No signature shall be taken from or added to such petition after it has been filed with the judge. When deposited such petition shall be preserved and open to public inspection, and if it is in conformity with this section, it shall be valid, unless objection thereto is made in writing by an elector of the county within five days after the filing thereof. Such objections, or any other questions arising in the course of the submission of the question of combining said courts, shall be considered and determined by the judge, and his decision shall be final.

	The probate court and the court of common pleas shall be combined.
	The probate court and the court of common pleas shall not be combined.

Returns of said election shall be made and canvassed at the same time and in the same manner as an election for county officers. The board shall certify the result of said election to the secretary of state, to the probate judge of said county, and to the judge of the court of common pleas, and such result shall be spread upon the journal of the probate court and of the court of common pleas.

If a majority of the votes cast at such an election are in favor of combining said courts, such courts shall stand combined upon determination of the fact that a majority of the persons voting upon the question of the combination of such courts voted in favor of such combination.

General Code § 10501-49 was amended in 1935 so as to make it conform to the constitution as construed by the supreme court in State ex rel Shirley v. Corbett, 113 OS 23, 148 NE 357, wherein the question arose as to the time when the combination of the probate court and common pleas court in Paulding county took effect.

Before this statute was amended in 1935 it was an exact re-enactment of former GC § 1604-3, which provided that the common pleas court and probate court should be combined and consolidated at the expiration of the term for which the probate judge had been elected in the county wherein such election had been held. However, Art. IV, § 7 of the constitution of Ohio provides that such courts shall be combined and shall be known as the court of common pleas in case the majority of the electors voting upon such question vote in favor of such combination. In State ex rel Shirley v. Corbett, supra, the court held that it was unconstitutional to attempt to postpone the combination of the courts, after such election had resulted favorably to such combination, to the expiration of the term of the incumbent in the office of probate judge in said county.

The comment of the probate court committee of the Ohio state bar association, with reference to the amendment to this section, is as follows:

"This section was formerly GC § 1604-3. Following its reenactment as GC § 10501-49 it was brought to our attention that the last paragraph had previously been held unconstitutional by the supreme court in the case of Shirley v. Corbett, 113 OS 23, 148 NE 357."

The resident judge of the court of common pleas shall appoint the necessary deputies, clerks, and assistants to have charge of and perform the work incident to the division. An appeal on questions of law may be prosecuted from said division to the court of appeals in all cases where such appeal lies to the court of common pleas in counties where such courts have not been combined. After three years from the date of an election held under sections 2101.43 to 2101.45, inclusive, of the Revised Code, another election may be petitioned for and shall be ordered by the judge of the court of common pleas as provided in such sections either to perfect a combination of said court or to dissolve said combination and re-establish the probate court.

Whenever in any county where such courts have been combined a decennial federal census shows that such county has a population of sixty thousand or more, and such fact is certified by the secretary of state to said court of common pleas and entered upon its journal, the probate court shall be re-established in such county. A probate judge shall be elected for the regular term at the next election ensuing in an even-numbered year, and the records of the probate division of the court of common pleas shall be delivered to such re-established probate court

A spouse who has not relinquished or been barred from it shall be endowed of an estate for life in one third of the real property of which the consort was seized as an estate of inheritance at any time during the marriage. Such dower interest shall terminate upon the death of the consort except:

(A) To the extent that any such real property was conveyed by the deceased consort during the marriage, the surviving spouse not having relinquished or been barred from dower therein;

(B) To the extent that any such real property during the marriage was encumbered by the deceased consort by mortgage, judgment, lien, except tax lien, or otherwise or aliened by involuntary sale, the surviving spouse not having relinquished or been barred from dower therein. If such real property was encumbered or aliened prior to decease, the dower interest of the surviving spouse therein shall be computed on the basis of the amount of the encumbrance at the time of the death of such consort or at the time of such alienation, but not upon an amount exceeding the sale price of such property.

In lieu of such dower interest which terminates pursuant to this section, a surviving spouse shall be entitled to the distributive share provided by section 2105.06 of the Revised Code.

Dower interest shall terminate upon the granting of an absolute divorce in favor of or against such spouse by a court of competent jurisdiction within or without this state.

Wherever dower is referred to in Chapters 2101. to 2131., inclusive, of the Revised Code, it means the dower to which a spouse is entitled by this section.

HISTORY: GC § 10502-1; 114 v 320 (337); 116 v 385 (387), § 1; 125 v 903 (962). Eff 10-1-53. See former GC § 8606.

Comment

In the sixth line after the word "terminate" the words "and be barred" have been eliminated. In the third line of the last paragraph after the word "is" the words "or may be" have been omitted.

General Code § 10502-1, as amended on January 1, 1932, superseded former GC § 8606 which made provision for dower to a widow or widower. The changes in the dower law of Ohio effected by the repeal of this former section and the enactment of GC § 10502-1 as it existed on January 1, 1932, to September 2, 1935, virtually abolished all vested dower, except in such real estate (a) conveyed during coverture, without the spouse joining in the deed, and (b) to the extent that such property during coverture was encumbered by mortgage without the spouse joining in the mortgage, or by judgment lien or otherwise without the surviving spouse having relinquished or been barred of dower.

General Code § 10502-1 was amended in 1935 so as to provide: (1) that if real estate was aliened during the marriage by judicial or other involuntary sale, nevertheless the surviving spouse would not be entitled to dower; (2) the amount upon which dower could be computed was limited to an amount not exceeding the sale price of such property in any event.

The most significant part of the statute is in the paragraph following exception (B) which provides that the surviving spouse, instead of vested dower, shall be entitled to a distributive share of real property as provided by the statute of descent and distribution. This will probably apply to the vast majority of cases.

The signature of a spouse on a deed or mortgage is still required if the spouse is to be barred of dower in property so conveyed or mortgaged.

1. An inchoate right of dower cannot be reached by a creditor's bill: Geiselman v. Wise, 137 OS 93, 17 OO 430, 28 NE(2d) 199.

2. This section provides for inchoate but not vested dower, thereby abolishing the latter: Geiselman v. Wise, 137 OS 93, 17 OO 430, 28 NE(2d) 199.

3. Dower is a creature of statute, is founded on reasons of public policy and is subject, while it remains inchoate, to such modifications and qualifications as legislative authority, for like reasons of public policy, may see proper to impose: Goodman v. Gerstle, 158 OS 353, 49 OO 235, 109 NE(2d) 489.

4. A conveyance of realty to children of a former marriage, without consideration other than love and affection, by a man engaged to be married, without disclosure of the conveyance to his intended wife whom he later marries, does not defraud her of her right of dower, provided for in RC § 2103.02: Perlberg v. Perlberg, 18 OS(2d) 55, 47 OO(2d) 167, 247 NE(2d) 306.

6. In computing the amount of dower to which a widow is entitled under this section, computation must be made separately on each tract of land owned by the deceased consort. Computation of dower interest in each tract must be limited to the proceeds of sale of such tract where the aggregate of the judgment liens on the tract exceeds the sale price: Dillman v. Warner, 54 App 170, 7 OO 492, 6 NE(2d) 757.

7. A surviving spouse, having only a consummate dower right, is not entitled to possession, rents, profits, or right of entry on the premises of the deceased spouse until dower has been ascertained and set off to him: Huffman v. Huffman, 57 App 33, 10 OO 24, 11 NE(2d) 271.

8. A vested dower right in real estate is a personal right which must be asserted during the life of the owner and no right thereto survives unless an action to have it assigned is commenced during that life: Dick v. Bauman, 73 App 107, 28 OO 176, 55 NE(2d) 137.

10. Inchoate right of dower is a contingent interest in the land of a consort, is of substantial value, and cannot be barred by any act of the consort: Grundstein v. Suburban Motor Freight, Inc., 92 App 181, 49 C 312, 107 NE(2d) 366.

11. Where a wife obtained a divorce prior to January 1, 1932, reason of the husband's aggression, and under former GC § 11991 (RC § 3105.18) became entitled to her right of dower in lands in which he was seized during coverture, not allowed to her as alimony and in which she had not relinquished her right of dower, the enactment of this section, effective January 1, 1932, barring such right, was a valid exercise of the legislative power, and upon the subsequent death of such former husband, such surviving former wife is not entitled to any dower interest in the decedent's estate: Morgan v. Morgan, 6 OO 6 (CP).

12. The legislature intended generally to terminate dower interests as such, and such interest was retained only under the exceptions in the dower statute: Disher v. Disher, 8 OO 203 (App).

13. Where the mortgage had been executed by a widow who subsequently married, and after foreclosure proceedings there was no surplus from the receipts of a sheriff's sale for distribution to the mortgagor, and there was no deficiency remaining due the mortgagee on its judgment, the mortgagor's husband was not entitled to dower in the real estate: Home Owners Loan Corp. v. Grant, 20 OO 116 (CP).

14. An inchoate right of dower is terminated upon the death of the consort by this section, and may not be advanced as a bar to specific performance of a contract by the consort to sell realty free of dower: Patterson v. McComas, 21 OO 276, 37 NE(2d) 655 (App).

15. Where property was mortgaged by the owner during his lifetime but subsequent to his marriage and without the wife joining in the mortgage, by virtue of this section, the widow is entitled to a dower interest for the full amount of the mortgage but not to an amount exceeding the sale price of the property: In re Freeman, 31 OO 232, 16 OSupp 6 (PC).

16. An estate in fee tail is an estate of inheritance and is, therefore, subject to dower during the life of the first donee in tail: Miller v. Miller, 41 OO 233 (CP).

17. If the first donee dies survived by a widow and heirs of his body, and has not so aliened or encumbered his estate as to bring the case within the exceptions to the barring of dower as set out in this section, then by the provision of the statute the right to dower terminates upon his death: Miller v. Miller, 41 OO 233 (CP).

18. Wife is entitled to share of proceeds of sale, equal in value to dower rights, ahead of judgment creditors of husband: Welbaum v. Baker, 19 OLA 23.

19. The provision of this section, that a spouse "shall be endowed of an estate for life in one-third of all the real property of which the consort was seized," definitely limits dower in any case to a third, and is a limitation on paragraph (B) of the same section which provides that dower "shall be computed on the basis of the amount of the encumbrance at the time of the death of such consort": Maher v. Greene, 21 OLA 246.

20. Where the first donee in fee tail leaves no heir of his body, that issue having predeceased him leaving a widow and two children, such widow is not entitled to her share in lieu of dower under this section as the surviving spouse of the deceased son: Mays v. Mays, 37 OLA 102, 42 NE(2d) 446 (App).

21. This section and GC § 10502-6 (RC § 2103.06) provide the only statutory limitations against a husband disposing of his real property during his lifetime without the consent of his wife. A wife's right to her distributive share and that portion of the estate exempt from administration and a year's allowance, do not come into existence until the death of the husband and therefore any transfer of the property of the husband during his lifetime will be free of such claims: Neville v. Sawicki, 44 OLA 408, 64 NE(2d) 685 (App) [affirmed 146 OS 539, 33 OO 19, 67 NE(2d) 323].

22. The enactment of this section virtually abolished all vested dower except: (a) in such real estate conveyed during coverture without the spouse joining in the deed, (b) to the extent that such real property during coverture was encumbered by mortgage without the spouse joining in the mortgage or by judgment lien without the surviving spouse having relinquished, or being barred of, dower, and (c) to such real property alienated during coverture by judicial or other involuntary sale, the surviving spouse not having relinquished or having been barred of dower: Liberty Folder Co. v. Anderson, 55 OLA 388, 90 NE(2d) 409 (App).

23. The spouse of a co-tenant is neither a necessary nor a proper party in an action in partition between co-tenants: Dunkle v. Dunkle, 2 OO(2d) 399, 137 NE(2d) 170 (CP).

24. By incorporating in the first sentence of GC § 10502-1, and again in RC § 2103.02, the same definition of dower which was included in the previous dower statute, GC § 8606, and earlier statutes, the legislature must have intended that inchoate dower should be limited in accordance with such definition: Central Trust Co. v. Gilardi, 21 OO(2d) 183, 186 NE(2d) 771 (CP).

25. The inchoate dower interest of a wife in real estate which was owned by her husband prior to a sheriff's sale in a foreclosure action must be computed on the surplus remaining after the satisfaction of the mortgage and payment of court costs and real estate taxes: Central Trust Co. v. Gilardi, 21 OO(2d) 183, 186 NE(2d) 771 (CP).

her dower therein: Brown v. Kerns, 6 NP 68, 9 OD 112.

—Reversion or remainder

17. Prior to the enactment in 1858 of the amendment of this section, which gave a right to dower in a remainder or reversion, a widow had no dower in which her husband had a vested remainder in case he died before the particular estate determined: Wood v. Phillips, 2 CC 136, 1 CD 406.

18. There is no right of dower in a contingent remainder if the remainderman dies before such contingency occurs: Miller v. Miller, 86 OS 345, 99 NE 1130; Parthe v. Parthe, 6 App 317, 26 CC(NS) 577, 28 CD 242 [motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 199, 62 Bull 291].

—Fee of which consort was seized during coverture

25. If realty is bought by a partnership, paid for by partnership funds, and the partnership is insolvent, the widow of a partner who is himself indebted to such partnership is not entitled to dower in such realty as against the surviving partners or the creditors: Greene v. Greene, 1 O 535.

26. Under a partnership agreement whereby the partners show their intention of holding land as partnership stock and buying it and selling it as such, dower cannot be claimed in such realty as against the partnership creditors: Sumner v. Hampson, 8 O 328 [for another opinion in this case, see Hampson v. Sumner, 18 O 444].

28. In order to entitle the widow of the former owner to dower he must have been seized of a legal estate of inheritance in the realty at some time during marriage, or he must have had an equitable estate in fee therein at his death: Miller v. Wilson, 15 O 108.

29. If land has been mortgaged by the husband, and the condition thereof is broken before marriage, it is said that as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee the mortgagor has only an equitable interest, the legal title being in the mortgagee; and accordingly if such mortgagor releases or otherwise transfers his equitable interest during his lifetime, his widow is not entitled to dower therein: Rands v. Kendall, 15 O 671.

30. A widow not being a purchaser for value, takes subject to all bona fide rights, interest and liens, which could have been asserted against the title of her husband at the time when he acquired the same: Firestone v. Firestone, 2 OS 415.

31. After the purchase money mortgage is paid, the right of the wife of the grantee to dower is prior to that of grantees or mortgagees from her husband, to whom she has not released her dower: Carter v. Goodin, 3 OS 76.

32. One who purchases realty and gives back a purchase money mortgage therefor, does not acquire seizin therein so as to give his wife a right of dower as against the mortgagee, even if she does not join in such mortgage: Welch v. Buckins, 9 OS 331; Ward v. Carey, 39 OS 361; Elliot v. Plattor, 43 OS 198, 1 NE 222.

33. As to the right of a mortgagee under a purchase money mortgage, see also Falson v. Rhodes, 22 OS 435; Culver v. Harper, 27 OS 464; Fox v. Pratt, 27 OS 512; Nichols v. French, 83 OS 162, 93 NE 897; In re Hays, 181 Fed 674, 16 OFD 436, 8 OLR 155; Hickey v. Conine, 6 CC(NS) 321, 17 CD 369 [affirmed, without report, 71 OS 548].

34. If a perpetual leasehold is defective in having but one witness, the interest of the lessee is equitable and not legal; and his surviving consort is not entitled to dower therein unless he owned it at the time of his death: Abbott v. Bosworth, 36 OS 605.

Widow or widower

1. A woman who has a husband living from whom she has not been divorced at the time of her second marriage is not entitled to dower in the realty of her second husband, since such marriage is absolutely void and not voidable; even though having a husband or wife already living is made a ground of divorce by GC § 11979 (RC § 3105.01): Smith v. Smith, 5 OS 32.

2. If a wife who has left her husband and remained absent in some unknown locality for a considerable space of time, declares on her return that she has obtained a divorce from her husband, and he, relying upon such statement, marries again, the first wife is estopped from claiming dower in his property in case her statement that she had obtained a divorce was false: Edgar v. Richardson, 33 OS 581.

3. The existence and validity of the marriage may be attacked in any proceeding in which it is sought to enforce dower; as in a suit which was originally brought for the purpose of marshaling liens, but which also became a partition suit by reason of the death of the owner of such realty, and the descent thereof to his heirs: Ashbaugh v. McGillin, 16 CC (NS) 381, 31 CD 555.

4. If a woman marries a man who has a wife living at the time of such second marriage, the second wife is not entitled to dower, although she does not know of such former marriage: Kennelly v. Cowle, 4 NP 105, 6 OD 170.

5. Misgiving on the part of a common law wife and some of her neighbors as to the legality of her marriage is without significance, where it appears that she and her reputed husband entered into a solemn contract, in the presence of a witness, to henceforth live together as man and wife, and this agreement was carried out, and a child was born to them, and they continued to live together, with short interruptions, and to hold themselves out as man and wife until the death of the husband, and in such a case the court will decree that the woman has a dower interest in the estate of the decedent: Walker v. Walker, 15 NP(NS) 189.

Estate or interest in which dower allowed

14. Contrary to the English rule, dower is allowed in Ohio in timber land or other land which is not used or cultivated and which produces no revenue: Allen v. McCoy, 8 O 418.

15. Stock in a private corporation is not real property, even though it is a corporation such as a railroad, the greater part of the property of which is realty or some interest therein; and the widow of an owner thereof is accordingly not entitled to dower therein: Johns v. Johns, 1 OS 350.

16. If a husband sells land and with the proceeds buys other land, his wife is entitled to dower in each tract of land, if she has in no way released or barred

35. As to the effect of a permanent leasehold, see also McAlpin v. Woodruff, 11 OS 120; St. Bernard v. Kemper, 60 OS 244, 54 NE 267, 45 LRA 662.

36. A wife is not entitled to dower in lands acquired by her husband subsequent to the termination of the marriage relation by divorce granted to husband: Spaulding v. Spaulding, 11 App 143, 20 OCA 475.

37. Where a husband's estate as lessee, under a 99-year lease, renewable forever, is subject to forfeiture by reason of his failure to comply with the terms of the lease, and he agrees to a forfeiture of his estate, and surrenders the same in consideration of being relieved of the burdens of the lease, and the transaction is free from fraud or collusion, his wife's inchoate right of dower in said estate is thereby terminated: National Holding Co. v. Oram, 29 App 138, 162 NE 704.

38. The husband is not seized of an estate of inheritance during coverture in mortgaged realty, the condition of which mortgage was broken before marriage, and at the time of his death he owns but an equity therein: Kern v. Kern, 15 CC(NS) 279, 24 CD 22 [affirmed, without opinion, 87 OS 481].

39. A widow is entitled to dower in land which was devised to her husband subject to a life estate, although the husband died before the life estate terminated: Hammond v. Hammond, 29 OCA 85, 35 CD 587 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 307, 63 Bull 351].

40. A permanent leasehold is said not to be an estate of inheritance within the meaning of this section: Oliver v. Jones, 3 NP 129, 6 OD 194.

42. If the deceased consort held a fee simple which was subject to be determined upon a condition subsequent (as where such property was devised over in the event of the first devisee's dying before his brother), the happening of such condition subsequent will defeat the dower interest of the surviving consort: Myers v. Moore, 12 OD(NP) 805.

43. The real estate of a deceased wife, upon her death without issue, who has title to such real estate from a former deceased husband, passes to and descends, under former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10), one-half to the brothers and sisters of such wife, and one-half to the brothers and sisters of the deceased husband, subject to the dower interest of the second surviving husband. Such surviving husband does not receive a life estate under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06): Fay v. Scott, 14 NP(NS) 241, 23 OD 464.

44. It is said that the surviving consort is not entitled to dower in a leasehold, unless the deceased consort owned the same at the time of his death: Kampman v. Schaaf, 8 DecRep 351, 7 Bull 159.

45. While dower is inferior to a vendor's lien, it attaches to the realty and must be paid out of the proceeds after the vendor's lien is paid: Unger v. Leiter, 32 OS 210.

46. If a deed has been delivered absolutely to the officer who takes the acknowledgment with unqualified instructions to deliver it to the grantee, and after such grantee has accepted such deed but has not taken possession of the realty the grantor marries, the wife of such grantor has no dower in such realty: Black v. Hoyt, 33 OS 203.

47. A conveyance by a man who has entered into a contract of marriage, which subsequently takes place, of a portion of his land to his sons by a former marriage, without consideration other than love and affection, and without the knowledge or consent of his contemplated wife, is a fraud on her marital rights, and she, at his death, is entitled to dower therein: Ward v. Ward, 63 OS 125, 57 NE 1095, 81 AmSt 621, 51 LRA 858; see also Fast v. Umbaugh, 22 CC 409, 12 CD 434 [reversed, without opinion,

Umbaugh v. Fast, 68 OS 672].

48. A testator gave to his wife all that part and interest in his estate, real, personal and mixed, which is secured to her, as his widow, by the laws of distribution of estates of the state of Ohio, in the cases where wives survive husbands who die intestate, and gave, absolutely, the remainder of his property, real, personal and mixed, to his brother. It was held that, under this will, the widow took her dower interest in the real estate of the testator, situated in Ohio, one-half of the first four hundred dollars and one-third of the remainder of the personal property subject to distribution, the use of the mansion house, under the provisions of former GC § 8607 (see now RC § 2109.57), and the year's allowance provided for in GC § 10656 (see now RC § 2109.53), and that the remainder of the estate, real, personal, and mixed, went to the brother: Foster v. Clifford, 87 OS 294, 101 NE 269, AnnCas 1915B, 65 [reversing Clifford v. Foster, 14 CC(NS) 391, 23 CD 429; which affirmed 10 NP (NS) 446].

—Realty held by article, bond or other evidence of claim

53. This provision of the statute seems to apply to all equitable estates as distinguished from legal estates: Miller v. Wilson, 15 O 108; Abbott v. Bosworth, 36 OS 605.

54. One who was in possession of land under a contract to buy the same, caused the deed therefor to be made to his children as grantees in order to defraud his creditors. Such conveyance being good as against the father, and the interest under the contract of sale being merely an equitable one, such transaction barred the widow of such vendee of her dower, even though such conveyance might have been set aside by the creditors: Miller v. Wilson, 15 O 108.

55. If land has been mortgaged and the condition thereof broken before the marriage of the mortgagor, such interest in his lands at the time of the mortgage is said to be a mere equity of redemption; and if he releases or disposes of the same during coverture, so that he does not own it at his decease, his widow is not entitled to dower: Rands v. Kendall, 15 O 671.

56. Where a husband, holding title to land in trust for his wife, at her request bargains and sells the same to a stranger, a specific execution of the contract of sale will be decreed against the husband, at the suit of the purchaser, although the wife joins the husband in resisting the same. As the right of the wife in such case is a mere equity, and she can have no claim of dower in the property, it is unnecessary for her to join the husband in the deed of conveyance, in order to vest in the purchaser a title freed from her claim; and it is not error in the court to order the husband to convey such a title: Rostetter v. Grant, 18 OS 126.

57. A permanent leasehold, renewable forever, and attested by but one witness, transfers an equitable interest; and if the owner thereof disposes of the same during his lifetime, his surviving widow is not entitled to dower therein: Abbott v. Bosworth, 36 OS 605.

58. Where the owner of real estate leases the same to another and to his heirs and assigns for a term of ninety-nine years, renewable forever, the estate created becomes a freehold estate in real property, and becomes subject to the laws of descent as an estate in fee. Such an estate is subject to dower under former GC § 8606 (see now RC § 2103.02): Ralston Steel Car Co. v. Ralston, 112 OS 306, 147 NE 513, 39 ALR 334.

59. If the owner of an equitable interest in property (as where such person, being the former legal owner, had conveyed the same under a contract whereby the grantee was to support him, which contract was subsequently rescinded by mutual consent) conveys such property during coverture voluntarily and without consideration, without the knowledge or consent of his wife, such transfer operates as a fraud upon her rights, and she is entitled to dower in such property as against all except a subsequent bona fide grantee for value, and without notice of her rights: Fast v. Umbaugh, 22 CC 409, 12 CD 434 [reversed, without opinion, Umbaugh v. Fast, 68 OS 672].

60. That a permanent leasehold is an equitable estate in which the widow is not entitled to dower unless her husband owned it at his decease, see Kampman v. Schaaf, 8 DecRep 351, 7 Bull 159.

Release or bar of dower

65. Under a former statute dower was barred if a wife joined her husband in a power of attorney to convey: Glenn v. Bank of United States, 8 O 72.

66. If the spouse of the owner joins in the granting clause of a deed, this is sufficient to bar dower without any special release of dower or without joining in the covenants of warranty: Smith v. Handy, 16 O 191.

67. If a person entitled to dower joins in a warranty deed and in the covenants of warranty therein, she is thereby estopped from subsequently claiming dower in such premises, although there is no special release of dower therein: Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 OS 155.

—Deed or mortgage—as against others

72. A release of dower cannot be taken advantage of except by one who claims through or under the person to whom such release was given: Taylor v. Fowler, 18 O 567; Woodworth v. Paige, 5 OS 70; Ridgway v. Masting, 23 OS 294; Black v. Kuhlman, 30 OS 196; Kling v. Ballentine, 40 OS 391; Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519 [see also Finley v. First Nat. Bank, 52 OS 624]; see, as apparently contra in some respects, State Bank v. Hinton, 21 OS 509.

73. A sale upon execution or to satisfy the lien of a judgment against the owner of realty does not bar the dower of his wife, although she has released her dower to a mortgagee: Taylor v. Fowler, 18 O 567; Jewett v. Feldheiser, 68 OS 523, 67 NE 1072.

74. If a conveyance is made to defraud creditors in which the wife joins to release her dower, and such conveyance is subsequently set aside, such release is inoperative and does not release dower to the creditors of the husband: Woodworth v. Paige, 5 OS 70; Ridgway v. Masting, 23 OS 294.

75. If land has been sold on execution against the husband, and subsequently the husband and wife convey such property to another, the wife releasing her dower to the grantee, such conveyance does not inure to the benefit of the purchaser at the execution sale after he has ousted the grantee under such deed under his paramount title: Kitzmiller v. Van Rensselaer, 10 OS 63.

76. If there are several mortgages upon the property executed by the owner thereof during coverture, a release of dower in one mortgage does not inure to the other mortgagees: Black v. Kuhlman, 30 OS 196.

77. For the expression of an apparently different view, see State Bank v. Hinton, 21 OS 509, which, however, was criticized and not followed in Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519, although it was not there expressly overruled.

78. If, however, a conveyance is in legal effect a general assignment for the benefit of the creditors of the owner of realty, and the creditors agree, in consideration of such conveyance and of the wife's release of dower, to reduce the amount of their claims and to give an extension of time, a release of dower in such conveyance inures to the benefit of the creditors whose claims are covered by such deed, although as to other creditors who are intended to be omitted from the operation of such deed, dower is not barred: Case v. Hewitt, 21 CC 730, 11 CD 823 [affirming 7 NP 609, 10 OD 365, and affirmed, without opinion, Hewitt v. Case, 67 OS 553].

79. The release of dower to a mortgagee does not operate as a release for the benefit of judgment creditors of the owner of the realty: Kling v. Ballentine, 40 OS 391; Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519 [see also Finley v. First Nat Bank, 52 OS 624].

—As against those claiming under conveyance

84. If the consort of the owner of realty joins in a deed or mortgage which contains a clause providing specially for the release of dower, and such conveyance is properly executed, dower is thereby released: St. Clair v. Morris, 9 O 15; Carter v. Walker, 2 OS 339; Baker v. Fettes, 16 OS 596; Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519 [see also Finley v. First Nat. Bank, 52 OS 624].

85. A conveyance by the husband at the request of his wife of realty which he holds in trust for her operates as a release of her dower: Rostetter v. Grant, 18 OS 126.

86. If, however, a married woman signs a deed in blank, understanding that a certain small tract is to be conveyed thereby, and subsequently the husband, without her knowledge or consent, inserts the description of a much larger and more valuable tract, the wife is not thereby barred of her dower in the tract thus inserted: Conover v. Porter, 14 OS 450.

87. The fact that the mortgage is defective as to the owner of the property and because his acknowledgment is omitted from the certificate of the officer taking the acknowledgment, does not prevent the dower of the consort from being barred after such conveyance is reformed: Straman v. Rechtime, 58 OS 443, 51 NE 44.

88. If the spouse of the owner is named in the deed only in the clause wherein the parties are named, and executes such deed, but without joining in the granting clause or in the covenants of warranty, the deed having no special release of dower therein, such execution does not release dower: McFarland v. Febiger, 7 O (pt1) 194; Carter v. Goodin, 3 OS 76.

89. Dower is barred by an appropriation proceeding to which the owner of inchoate dower is not a party: Weaver v. Gregg, 6 OS 547; Long v. Long, 99 OS 330, 124 NE 161, 5 ALR 1343.

90. If realty is conveyed for a public purpose for which such realty could have been appropriated in eminent domain, the dower of the consort of the owner is barred, although such consort does not join in such conveyance: Gwynne v. Cincinnati, 3 O 24; Steel v. Board of Education, 1 OD(NP) 276.

91. This principle applies to conveyance of land for a market house: Gwynne v. Cincinnati, 3 O 24, or to conveyance of land for school purposes: Steel v. Board of Education, 1 OD(NP) 276, 31 Bull 84.

—Who may take advantage of release

96. Any person who claims through or under a person to whom dower has been released may take advantage thereof: Carter v. Walker, 2 OS 339.

97. If a husband has given a mortgage upon realty in which his wife does not join, and subsequently the husband and wife unite in a mortgage in which she releases dower; and subsequently such land is sold in foreclosure proceedings upon the second mortgage, and the purchaser at such sale assumes the first mortgage, such sale passes the rights in the second mortgage and frees the property from dower; and if there is a subsequent sale of such property in foreclosure proceedings upon the first mortgage, the purchaser at such sale takes the realty free from dower: Carter v. Walker, 2 OS 339.

98. A wife who signed a mortgage with her husband is a necessary party to a suit by judgment creditor who attempts to marshal liens of the debtor husband. If the mortgagee files a cross-petition, he must, therefore, make the debtor's wife a party, and cause her to be served with summons: Kaufman v. Heckman, 13 CC(NS) 309, 22 CD 277 [affirmed, without opinion, Heckman v. Kaufman, 82 OS 453].

99. One who holds a dower interest in realty cannot maintain a suit in equity to compel a mortgagee to bring proceedings in foreclosure upon his mortgage, against the objection of the mortgagee and the heirs of the deceased spouse to whom the legal title has descended: Winship v. West, 4 NP 84, 6 OD 93.

—Defective or invalid deed

104. If the deed does not operate to pass the interest of the owner, the contingent dower of the spouse of the owner will not pass as a separate estate: Douglass v. McCoy, 5 O 523.

105. If such deed is invalid, the fact that the married woman who joins therein believes it to be inoperative as to herself does not estop her from taking advantage of such defect: McFarland v. Febinger, 7 O (ptl) 194.

106. The execution of a deed by a married woman while under the age of eighteen years does not operate as a bar to her dower; and it is not necessary that she disaffirm such conveyance before she brings suit to have her dower assigned: Hughes v. Watson, 10 O 127.

107. As to the effect of a defective release of dower, see Ward v. McIntosh, 12 OS 231.

108. Under our present statute, which does not require a married woman to join in a deed with her husband in order to render her conveyance valid, the release of dower by a married woman may be good in equity at least, although a conveyance by her husband is invalid in law, because the certificate of the notary did not show an acknowledgment on his part; reformation of such conveyance as to such husband being subsequently granted: Straman v. Rechline, 58 OS 443, 51 NE 44.

—Decree and judicial sale

116. If a married woman is properly made a party in foreclosure proceedings based on a mortgage whereby she has released her dower, the sale under such foreclosure operates as a bar of her dower, and she cannot assert it as against the purchaser at such sale or those claiming under him: Carter v. Walker, 2 OS 339.

117. If an administrator brings suit to sell the land of the deceased to pay his debts, and the mortgagee of the deceased is made a party to such suit, the petition containing an allegation that the widow of the deceased is entitled to dower, the order of the court finding that the widow is entitled to dower and assigning her dower in the whole of the realty covered by such mortgage and ordering a sale of such realty subject to such dower, is conclusive upon the mortgagee, and he cannot ignore such decree and maintain an action thereafter to enforce such mortgage. Even if, by reason of the release of such married woman, the mortgage was a lien paramount to her dower, such adjudication bars the mortgagee from asserting such priority: Affleck v. Snodgrass, 8 OS 234.

118. A sale for delinquent and unpaid taxes operates as a bar of dower (in this case of inchoate dower): Jones v. Devore, 8 OS 430.

119. If a judgment is rendered against the owner of realty and becomes a lien after coverture, a sale either on execution or under proceedings in equity to enforce such judgment cannot operate as a bar of the dower of the wife of such owner: Kitzmiller v. Van Rensselaer, 10 OS 63; Dingman v. Dingman, 39 OS 172; Arnold v. Donaldson, 46 OS 73, 18 NE 540; Jewett v. Feldheiser, 68 OS 523, 7 NE 1072; Kaufman v. Heckman, 22 CD 282 [affirmed, without report, Heckman v. Kaufman, 82 OS 453].

120. If a married woman has joined in a mortgage to release her dower, but is not made a party to the foreclosure thereon, she is not thereby barred of her right to redeem: McArthur v. Franklin, 15 OS 485.

121. If a married woman is made a party to a foreclosure suit based upon a mortgage in which she did not join, a decree in such suit cannot bar her dower, even if a subsequent mortgagee claiming under a mortgage in which she joined files an answer but does not make the wife a party to such answer and asks no relief as against her, the decree not purporting to affect the interest of the wife: Parmenter v. Binkley, 28 OS 32.

122. While a sale under foreclosure proceedings does not bar dower if the party claiming dower is not made a party to such proceedings, and such party is free to claim dower in such realty, such party may elect to come in and take dower from the proceeds of such sale, and the election to take dower in either way bars such persons from claiming it in the other way: Ketchum v. Shaw, 28 OS 503.

123. If land is sold under an assignment by the owner thereof for the benefit of his creditors, and his wife is not made a party thereto, she is entitled, after payment of a mortgage wherein she had released her dower, to dower in the entire proceeds of the sale: Ketchum v. Shaw, 28 OS 503.

124. In an action to enforce the lien of a judgment rendered against the owner of the realty, the fact that the wife of such owner has released her dower to a mortgagee, and that such mortgagee is made a defendant in such suit, does not authorize the court to render a decree barring dower by virtue of a sale upon such judgment: Jewett v. Feldheiser, 68 OS 523, 67 NE 1072; see also Taylor v. Fowler, 18 O 567; Cole v. Mathews, 38 Bull 223.

126. A spouse who has an inchoate right of dower is not a proper party to a proceeding in eminent domain; nor is such spouse entitled to compensation for such dower: Long v. Long, 99 OS 330, 124 NE 161, 5 ALR 1343.

127. In action to foreclose mechanic's lien, in which mortgagees intervened, and their claims were found superior to dower estate, and sale pursuant thereto was required to be made free of dower estate, so that wife was divested of her dower by sale, it was duty of court to ascertain value thereof and pay same out of proceeds of sale: Canan v. Heffey, 27 App 430, 161 NE 235.

—Estoppel to claim dower

132. A widow who is present at a judicial sale at which it is announced that the property is sold free from dower, and that she is to receive dower in the proceeds of the sale, is estopped from claiming dower subsequently in such property as against such purchaser: Smiley v. Wright, 2 O 506.

133. If land is sold to satisfy a judgment, a grantee who claims under a deed inferior to the title created by such sale cannot set up the dower which has been released to him in such deed as a designated and separate estate, as against the purchaser at such sale to whom such dower interest was not released: Dougllass v. McCoy, 5 O 523.

135. A married woman who, by her conduct, induces third persons to believe that she has been divorced from her husband; who has in fact married another man; and who has without objection seen her former husband marry again and has seen him convey land to grantees by deeds in which his second wife joined, releasing her dower, is estopped from claiming her dower in such property, even though no divorce had in fact been granted to her from her first husband, and she had in good faith believed that he had obtained such divorce from her: Brown v. Kerns, 6 NP 68, 9 OD 112.

136. The fact that a married woman has practically denied the fact that she was married during the lifetime of her husband, does not estop her from claiming dower as against his heirs, since they have not acted in reliance upon such statement: Brown v. Kerns, 6 NP 68, 9 OD 112.

137. In order that acts or a course of conduct of the surviving consort of a deceased testator should operate to estop such consort equitably from claiming dower and a distributive share of the personal property under the law and to amount to an election to take under the will, such acts must be of such an unequivocal character as will clearly and distinctly demonstrate a purpose to accept the provisions of the will: Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288, 107 NE 770, AnnCas 1916C, 1198 [affirming Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433; for opinion below, see Creed v. Bates, 14 NP(NS) 81].

138. Wife was not estopped to assert dower rights in foreclosure of mechanic's lien for improving property under contract with husband because she stood still while improvement was made, since there was no duty to speak: Canan v. Heffey, 27 App 430, 161 NE 235.

—Divorce

146. After divorce is granted, relation of husband and wife ceases, and former wife, not being wife at time of death of former husband, is not his widow thereafter, and is not entitled to dower: Walker v. Walker, 3 OLA 493.

—Election

152. As to the time of making election, see Stilley v. Folger, 14 O 610.

153. If the widow elects to take her dower and distributive share, she thereby waives her right to gifts in lieu of dower: Jones v. Lloyd, 33 OS 572.

154. Husband electing to take under will waives right to dower in wife's realty: Barrett v. W.P. Southworth Co., 35 App 452, 172 NE 563.

155. The election of a widow to take under the will operates as a release of her dower as far as concerns the interest of the devisees: Corry v. Lamb, 45 OS 203, 12 NE 660.

156. As to the right of a surviving spouse who elects not to take under the will, see Wilson v. Hall, 6 CC 570, 3 CD 589 [affirmed, without report, Hall v. Wilson, 53 OS 679]; Moyses v. Neilson, 7 NP 607, 9 OD 623.

157. For the effect of a defective election, see Hessenmueller v. Mulrooney, 4 NP 50, 6 OD 123.

158. The interest of the wife in the estate of her deceased husband is a property right, which cannot be taken away from her by the last will and testament of the husband, or by any other act on his part, unless she elects to take the provisions made for her by such last will, and to waive the rights conferred upon her by law: State ex rel Zollinger v. Sloane, 24 OD (NP) 119.

—Partition

163. A sale under the act "to provide for the partition of real estate" of an estate held in common, divests the wife of a cotenant in fee of the estate of her inchoate right of dower therein, and passes the entire estate to the purchaser: Weaver v. Gregg, 6 OS 547.

164. Where, at the time of the partition of an estate between co-devisees, one of them had an inchoate right of dower in premises set off by the partition to another, and, subsequently to the partition, the inchoate right of dower became perfect by the death of her husband, she will not, in equity, be held estopped to claim her dower against her co-partitioners. In such a case equity will, while sustaining the claim to dower, decree and enforce a contribution, by all the parties to the partition, to make good to the co-devisees, in whose share the dower is assigned, their equal share in the common estate remaining after the assignment of dower: Walker v. Hall, 15 OS 355.

165. The husbands and wives of cotenants have an inchoate contingent right of dower in the respective shares so held in common, and in an action to partition the lands it is necessary, in order to foreclose their rights, that such husbands and wives be made parties. Accordingly an attorney who makes the spouses of the tenants in common parties to the proceeding performed services for the benefit of all the parties and is entitled to a part of the attorney fee: Richards v. Richards, 15 CC(NS) 287, 23 CD 640 [reversing 13 NP(NS) 153, 23 OD 312, and reversed by consent, 11 OLR 2, 58 Bull 116, on authority of Weaver v. Gregg, 6 OS 547].

166. In a case of amicable partition by mutual conveyances of unequal purparts, a mortgage given by one tenant in common (his wife not joining) to another to equalize the allotments, is subordinate to the wife's inchoate right of dower in the undivided interest acquired by descent of such mortgagor in the purpart so allotted to him, but is superior to dower in the share acquired by purchase from the mortgagee: Fleming v. Morningstar, 4 NP(NS) 405, 17 OD 430 [affirmed by circuit court, without report, which was affirmed by the supreme court, without report, 72 OS 647].

167. A proceeding in partition bars the contingent dower of the wife of one of the cotenants, although she was not made a party to such proceeding, and although the land was sold in such proceeding: Richards v. Richards, 13 NP(NS) 153, 23 OD 312 [reversed, 15 CC(NS) 287, 23 CD 640; which was reversed by consent, 11 OLR 2, 58 Bull 116, on authority of Weaver v. Gregg, 6 OS 547].

168. See to the same effect: Kibler v. Hand, 88 OS 533, 106 NE 1064 [reversing Hand v. Kibler, 15 CC (NS) 360, 24 CD 95, on authority of Weaver v. Gregg, 6 OS 547].

Priorities and distribution—dower not barred

173. If the land is one of which the deceased consort was seized during coverture, and the surviving consort has not released dower or been barred thereof, the surviving spouse is entitled to dower in the specific realty, and cannot be compelled to accept such dower out of the proceeds of such realty: Dougllass v. McCoy, 5 O 523; McFarland v. Febiger, 7 O (pt1) 194; Hughes v. Watson,

10 O 127; Conover v. Porter, 14 OS 450; Woodworth v. Paige, 5 OS 7; Ridgway v. Masting, 23 OS 294.

174. If, under such circumstances, she elects to and does receive her dower in money out of the proceeds of the realty, she is thereby precluded from claiming dower in the realty: Sweesey v. Shady, 22 OS 333.

175. Where a mechanic or materialman furnishes labor and material under a contract with the husband alone, in improvement of his separate realty, and the wife is not a party to the contract, and has given no release, her inchoate dower right is paramount to the right of the mechanic's lien: Glassmeyer v. Michelson, 23 NP(NS) 537.

176. That dower is exempt from debts of the decedent which have not become specific liens upon the realty prior to the attaching of the inchoate right of dower, see Smith v. McIntire, 83 Fed 456, 12 OFD 688.

—Dower released or barred

181. If the dower of a widow is released or barred by deed, she has, in the absence of special contract, no rights of any sort either to dower in the land itself or to compensation out of the surplus: St. Clair v. Morris, 9 O 16; Rostetter v. Grant, 18 OS 126.

182. If she has released her dower by mortgage, or if there is a lien upon the realty prior to her dower, she cannot assert her right to dower in such realty as against such mortgagee or lienholder, but after such mortgage or lien is discharged she has a right to compensation in money out of the proceeds of such sale: Baker v. Fetter, 16 OS 596; Straman v. Rechline, 58 OS 443, 51 NE 44.

183. A widow who, during the lifetime of her husband, entered into a separation agreement with him, by the terms of which she agreed to be barred of dower in his real estate and to release the same upon his demand, will not be permitted to have dower as against one who loaned money to him and took a mortgage upon his real estate to secure the same in reliance upon the terms of said agreement: Kneiley v. Kneiley, 38 App 467, 176 NE 476.

—Purchase money mortgage

See also case notes 25 et seq, this section.

187. If a purchase money mortgage has been discharged, as where the husband conveys land to a third person by a deed in which the wife does not join, and said third person agrees to pay such mortgage debt and does pay it, the right of such wife to dower in such land exists: Carter v. Goodin, 3 OS 76.

188. A married woman has no right of dower as against a purchase money mortgage given by her husband for land purchased by him during coverture, even though she does not join in the mortgage to release her dower: Welch v. Buckins, 9 OS 331; Ward v. Carey, 39 OS 361; see also Elliot v. Plattor, 43 OS 198, 1 NE 222.

189. Where the purchaser of land executes a mortgage to the vendor for unpaid purchase money, and the land is afterward, and during the lifetime of the purchaser, sold under judicial proceedings for foreclosure of the mortgage, the widow of the purchaser, although she did not sign the mortgage, and was not made a party to the proceeding of foreclosure, is not entitled to dower in the premises, or to redeem the same: Folsom v. Rhodes, 22 OS 435.

190. A widow is dowerable of the surplus remaining after the payment of a purchase money mortgage. Having had her full dower in the residue of the estate, a portion of which was sold, and the proceeds applied to remove a purchase money mortgage, larger in amount than the property mortgage, she cannot thereafter be endowed of such property as though no mortgage existed. The heirs and others having, with the sanction of the court, sold property of which the widow had already been endowed, and with moneys arising therefrom having paid off the purchase money mortgage, the widow is not thereby invested with right of dower in the whole property so mortgaged: Fox v. Pratt, 27 OS 512.

191. The widow of a purchase money mortgagor, mortgage given before marriage and property sold by executors to pay the mortgage debt, is not dowerable of the whole proceeds, but only of the surplus remaining after satisfying the mortgage: Nichols v. French, 83 OS 162, 93 NE 897 [approving and following Culver v. Harper, 27 OS 464, and distinguishing Kling v. Ballentine, 40 OS 391, and Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407]; see, to the same effect, Fox v. Pratt, 27 OS 512; In re Hays, 181 Fed 674, 16 OFD 436, 8 OLR 155.

192. In Hickey v. Conine, 6 CC(NS) 321, 17 CD 369 [affirmed, without report, 71 OS 548], however, it was said that if land is encumbered by a purchase money mortgage given by the deceased spouse, and by another purchase money mortgage given by the grantor of such spouse and assumed by such spouse as a part of the purchase price, on sale of such realty by an administrator to pay his debts, and upon payment of the mortgages out of the proceeds thereof, there being a surplus remaining, the widow is entitled to have her dower interest in such realty computed upon the entire proceeds of the sale and payable out of such surplus.

193. Where a husband and wife executed a new mortgage to secure party advancing money to pay purchase money mortgage, without lapse of time during which mortgage indebtedness did not operate, the wife was held dowerable only out of the proceeds of the sale of husband's interest in property after payment of mortgage, since new mortgagee became substituted to original security (former GC § 8606 [see now RC § 2103.02]): George v. George, 51 App 169, 4 OO 260, 200 NE 142.

198. Where the vendor of a tract of land, having a lien for the purchase money, obtains a judgment against the administrator of the vendee, upon which the land is sold for a sum sufficient to pay the whole amount, the lien does not pass to the purchaser of the land, so as to enable him to set it up against the dower estate of the widow of the original vendee, but such lien is extinguished by the sale on execution: McArthur v. Porter, 1 O 99.

199. The vendor's lien is superior to the inchoate right of dower of the wife of the vendee: Elliot v. Plattor, 43 OS 198, 1 NE 222.

200. Where, in a suit brought to enforce a vendor's lien for purchase money, to which the vendee and his wife, and also the holder of a subsequent mortgage executed by the vendee alone, are made defendants, and the proceeds of sale of the land covered by the liens are more than sufficient to discharge the vendor's claim, the wife is entitled, as against such mortgagee, to assert her contingent right of dower in the surplus fund. But such right of the wife must be protected in a mode which will not interfere with the right of the mortgagee to subject the whole estate of the husband in the premises, to the present satisfaction of the mortgage debt, in its order of priority: Unger v. Leiter, 32 OS 210.

—Bankruptcy

205. Bankruptcy court could determine husband's dower rights under state statutes in realty of bankrupt wife: In re Rosing, 56 F(2d) 1049.

206. A wife's inchoate dower in her husband's real estate does not pass to her trustee when she is adjudged bankrupt, and when the husband's property is sold by his trustee in bankruptcy the value of her dower, as fixed under Ohio statutes, should be paid to her: In re Kiehl, 36 OLR 633 (Fed).

—Federal estate taxes

211. Dower should be paid to the surviving spouse without deduction of federal estate taxes; there is no difference between dower and the proceeds thereof in money: Allen v. Miller, 27 NP(NS) 49.

—Mortgage given before coverture

216. When property owner mortgages same, and thereafter marries before condition of mortgage is broken, and property is subsequently sold on foreclosure, wife is entitled, out of surplus, to value of her inchoate dower calculated on entire proceeds of sale, unless mortgage was for purchase money, in which case wife is dowerable only in surplus arising after purchase money has been paid: Canan v. Hefey, 27 App 430, 161 NE 235.

217. Where land was mortgaged by the husband and the condition was broken before marriage and after marriage the husband dies, upon sale of the land by his administrator for payment of his debts, and the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged land were large enough to pay the mortgage debt and leave a surplus sufficient to allow the widow dower in the entire proceeds, it was held that the widow was only dowerable of the surplus proceeds after paying the mortgage debt and not out of the entire purchase money: Kern v. Kern, 15 CC(NS) 279, 24 CD 22 [affirmed, without opinion, 87 OS 481].

218. A widow is dowerable only in the surplus arising from the sale of lands held by her husband in which he had only an equity of redemption at the time of his marriage to her, having mortgaged the land before the marriage: King v. Alt, 11 NP(NS) 433.

—Mortgage given during coverture

225. A widow who, in the lifetime of her husband, united with him in a mortgage upon lands of which he was seized in fee during coverture, has, in equity, a right to redeem, and a foreclosure in the lifetime of her husband, to which she was not a party, does not divest her of such right: McArthur v. Franklin, 16 OS 193 [approving and following 15 OS 485].

226. In State Bank v. Hinton, 21 OS 509, it was said that where realty was sold upon a mortgage executed by husband and wife, and the proceeds were more than sufficient to pay off the mortgage debt and costs, the widow is dowerable as to the surplus, and not of the entire proceeds. This, however, was in part obiter since in this case the widow permitted an order to be made distributing the surplus among the owners of the equity of redemption; and after such order was made and such distribution had, it was held that she was precluded from recovering from the persons to whom such surplus had been paid.

227. In a proceeding at the suit of sundry mortgagees to foreclose their respective mortgages, it appeared that the wife of the mortgagor had united with her husband in the execution of only one of the mortgages, in which she had released her contingent right of dower. At the instance of the mortgagee holding such release the wife was made a party, and the premises were sold, pursuant to an order, free from her contingent claim to dower. It was held that the mortgagee holding such release is entitled, on distribution, to receive the proportionate value of such inchoate right of dower, though the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to satisfy the prior mortgages: Black v. Kuhlman, 30 OS 196.

228. The owner of realty died intestate, leaving land encumbered by a mortgage, for his debt, made by himself and wife, who survived him. She duly elected to take under the law, and not under the will. The land was sold upon a proper petition of the administrator with the will annexed. The proceeds of the land, added to the personalty, made a sum large enough to pay all debts (including the mortgage), the statutory allowance for one year, the costs of administering the estate, dower in the entire proceeds of the land and leave a surplus for the devisees. It was held that the widow, as against the devisees, is entitled to dower in the entire proceeds of the land: Kling v. Ballentine, 40 OS 391.

229. Where the wife has joined in a mortgage of the husband's lands to secure his debt, upon a judicial sale of the premises, she may have the value of her contingent right of dower in the entire proceeds ascertained, and the husband's entire interest therein shall be exhausted to pay the debt before resorting to the interest of the wife therein: Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519; see also Finley v. First Nat. Bank, 52 OS 624, 44 NE 1135.

—Judgment against owner of fee

234. The fact that a part of the proceeds of a sale are applied to the payment of the mortgage in which the wife has joined to release her dower, does not cause such sale to operate as a bar of her dower: Taylor v. Fowler, 18 O 567.

235. A married woman joined her husband in executing a mortgage. The assignee of such mortgage became assignee in insolvency of the husband and sold the mortgaged property to defendant under the general authority of the probate court, no special proceedings having been instituted, to which the wife was made party. The proceeds of sale being more than double the amount of the mortgage, went into the hands of the assignee, who paid himself his debt out of the general funds of the husband's estate and during his lifetime. It was held that upon the death of the husband, the mortgage having been discharged, his widow was entitled to dower in the whole property: Ketchum v. Shaw, 28 OS 503.

236. That the dower of the consort of the owner of the realty cannot be divested by a sale to enforce the lien of a judgment rendered against the owner of the fee during coverture, even if such consort had executed a mortgage wherein she released her dower to the mortgagee, see Dingman v. Dingman, 39 OS 172; Kaufman v. Heckman, 13 CC(NS) 309, 22 CD 277 [affirmed, without report, Heckman v. Kaufman, 82 OS 453].

237. The fact that the realty in question was devised to the husband, charged with the payment of legacies, and that upon sale payment of legacies was ordered out of the proceeds of the sale, does not bar the dower of the wife, the judgment on which it was sold having become a lien on the realty during coverture: Dingman v. Dingman, 39 OS 172.

238. As to the right of the surviving consort of the owner of realty to dower as against a judgment creditor, the dower right of the party claiming dower having been released to the mortgagee whose mortgage is paid out of the proceeds of the sale, see Kling v. Ballentine, 40 OS 391; Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519 [see also Finley v. First Nat. Bank, 52 OS 624].

239. An executor, under an order issued by the probate court in a suit to sell lands to pay the debts of the decedent, sold the same without making the former wife of the decedent, who had obtained a divorce from him on account of his aggressions, a party to the suit. The purchaser, being advised by counsel that the title to the lands was clear and unencumbered, and that the wife had no dower estate therein, bought the lands at their full value in money, paid over the money to the executor, and entered into possession of the premises. The court of common pleas afterwards adjudged that the divorced wife was dowerable of the lands, and dower therein was accordingly assigned and set off to her. It was held that the purchaser cannot maintain an action to recover back sufficient of the purchase money to compensate him for the loss he has sustained, by reason of the assignment of dower, and that the rule, caveat emptor, is applicable: Arnold v. Donaldson, 46 OS 73, 18 NE 540.

240. A sale of land at the suit of a judgment creditor of the husband, brought to marshal liens, does not have the effect to bar or foreclose the inchoate dower of the wife. The rule is not different, although the wife is made a party to the creditor's suit and is in default of answer when the judgment ordering a sale is entered and the sale is made, and although a mortgagee, in whose mortgage the wife has joined, releasing dower, is also made defendant, but is in default at the time the judgment is rendered and the rule is made: Jewett v. Feldheiser, 68 OS 523, 67 NE 1072.

Judgment rendered before coverture

245. If a judgment has been rendered against the owner of realty before his marriage and has become a lien upon such realty, such judgment is prior to the dower right of his wife; and if such realty is sold in proceedings to satisfy the lien of such judgment, brought after marriage and before the death of the owner, it is said that such sale will prevent the wife of the owner from asserting her dower in such realty, even if she is not made a party to such proceedings: Phillips v. Keels, 4 CC 316, 2 CD 568.

—Judgment rendered during or after coverture

250. After the death of the owner of the fee, and before the assignment of dower, the right of the surviving consort to dower is an interest which may be seized by proceedings in equity to satisfy a judgment rendered against such surviving consort or a debt created after the death of the owner of the fee: Boltz v. Stolz, 41 OS 540; Gildehaus v. Fidelity Bldg. & Co., 3 CC(NS) 598, 14 CD 110; see also Maclaren v. Stone, 18 CC 854, 9 CD 794, and Moore v. Moore, 7 NP 320, 6 CD 154 [affirmed in Simmons v. Moore, 3 CC(NS) 178, 13 CD 11].

251. Such interest is not subject to levy or sale upon execution, and no lien is obtained thereby: Simmons v. Moore, 3 CC(NS) 178, 13 CD 11 [affirming Moore v. Moore, 7 NP 320, 6 CD 154]; see also Maclaren v. Stone, 18 CC 854, 9 CD 794.

Nature of dower—vested dower

256. A dower right is an insurable interest: Ohio Farmers Ins. Co. v. Britton, 31 OS 488.

257. Vested dower is an interest which may be conveyed by the party entitled thereto, even before assignment: Weyer v. Sager, 21 CC 710, 12 CD 193; Bausch v. McCunnell, 7 NP 387, 5 OD 162; Fletcher v. Huntington, 8 NP 333, 11 OD 338; Todd v. Beatty, W 460.

258. The surviving spouse has no right to the possession or management of the realty of the deceased spouse. The remedy is to proceed under GC § 12005

(RC § 5305.02) to have dower assigned: Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433, 26 CD 338 [affirming Creed v. Bates, 14 NP(NS) 81, and affirmed, Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288].

259. Under GC § 8606 (see now RC § 2103.02) the words “an estate for life in” specifically indicate the time of the continuance or duration of the dower right rather than establish it as an “estate” in the property to which it attaches; and a dower interest unassigned is not a life estate, nor such an estate in lands as will prevent a partition by heirs: Lape v. Lape, 22 NP(NS) 392, 31 OD 188, 312.

—Inchoate or contingent dower

265. If inchoate dower is released to the purchaser of the fee, it is not a separate estate, the existence of which may be set up by someone who is not the owner of the fee, and does not claim under him: Douglass v. McCoy, 5 O 523.

266. The right of the party entitled to dower ceases to be an inchoate right and becomes a contingent right at the moment of the death of the consort in whom the fee was vested: Conger v. Barker, 11 OS 1; Hickle v. Hickle, 6 CC 490, 3 CD 552.

267. Inchoate right of dower is said to be not an estate, but a right or interest in land, which the law creates for the benefit of the wife. It is said to be a legal right which is not uncertain or contingent, except that being a life interest only, the party entitled to dower can have such dower assigned and can take possession of the property so set off only in the event that such party outlives the spouse in whom the fee vests: McArthur v. Franklin, 16 OS 193.

268. Inchoate right of dower is a present vested right which may be reduced to a money value and which may be barred by estoppel. While contingent for its enjoyment in possession upon the death of the owner of the fee, before the death of the party claiming dower, it is not the mere possibility, which is all that an heir possessed in his ancestor's estate during his life: Rosenthal v. Mayhugh, 33 OS 155.

269. Inchoate right of dower may be reduced to a money value by the use of tables of mortality: Mandel v. McClave, 46 OS 407, 22 NE 290, 15 AmSt 627, 5 LRA 519; see also Finley v. First Nat. Bank, 52 OS 624, 44 NE 1135.

270. Inchoate dower, while an encumbrance upon realty, is not a breach of a covenant of warranty as distinguished from a covenant against encumbrances: Peoples Sav. Bank Co. v. Parisette, 68 OS 450, 67 NE 896, 96 AmSt 672.

271. The inchoate dower of the wife is not a lien upon the land of the husband, but is an interest in it: Jewett v. Feldheiser, 68 OS 523, 67 NE 1072.

272. One having an inchoate right of dower is neither a proper or necessary party to an action in condemnation of real estate or any interest therein in the exercise of the power of eminent domain: Long v. Long, 99 OS 330, 124 NE 161, 5 ALR 1343.

275. In an action to enforce the specific performance of a written contract for the sale of real estate, made by the owner of the fee, which contains no stipulation to convey with release of dower by his wife, if the wife refuses to release in any way her inchoate right of dower in the land and her refusal is not procured directly or indirectly by her husband, it is error to decree specific performance against the husband with an abatement from the contract price of the prospective value of the dower of the wife (Lucas v. Scott, 41 OS 636, and Peoples Sav. Bank Co. v. Parisette, 68 OS 450, 67 NE 896, 96 AmSt 672, approved and followed): Barnes v. Christy, 102 OS 160, 131 NE 352 [for subsequent report in the supreme court, see 107 OS 360].

276. If the vendor of realty does not agree to secure the release of the dower of his spouse, the purchaser must take, subject thereto, without abatement: Peoples Sav. Bank Co. v. Parisette, 68 OS 450, 67 NE 896, 96 AmSt 672; Barnes v. Christy, 102 OS 160, 131 NE 352 [for subsequent report in the supreme court, see 107 OS 360]; Edmund v. Boring, 30 OCA 238, 35 CD 659 [wife as vendor].

277. Contingent right of wife to dower during husband's life, in his real estate, is property having substantial value: Smith v. McKelvey, 28 App 361, 162 NE 722.

278. An inchoate dower right will not constitute an ownership within the meaning of the lien act, and is not subject to mechanics' liens: Glassmeyer v. Michelson, 23 NP(NS) 537.

279. Inchoate dower cannot be conveyed as a separate interest to one to whom the owner of the fee has not conveyed such fee: Thoms v. Thoms, 1 Hosea 185 [affirmed, without report, 73 OS 333].

280. The nature of dower in Ohio is fixed by statute rather than by the rules of the common law: In re Russell, 13 AmBankruptcyRep 24, 14 OFD 364.

281. The inchoate dower of a bankrupt cannot be sold during the life of the spouse in whom the fee is vested: In re Russell, 13 AmBankruptcyRep 24, 14 OFD 364.

Estate by coverture

286. Nonjoinder of the husband in proceedings for the partition of the wife's land leaves his life estate untouched, but partition against the wife without the husband will bind her unless reversed: Pillsbury v. Dugan, 9 O 118.

287. Before the act of February 28, 1846, the husband on marriage acquired a legal estate in the fee simple of his wife. This was a freehold during the joint lives of himself and wife, with remainder to himself for life as tenant by the curtesy and remainder to the wife and her heirs in fee. It was the land of the husband and liable for his debts: Canby v. Porter, 12 O 79.

289. Upon marriage, the husband acquired an interest in the land of his wife, at common law; and accordingly until his death no right of action accrued in her favor to recover possession thereof from one who had, during such coverture, taken possession thereof unlawfully: Westlake v. Youngstown, 62 OS 249, 56 NE 873.

290. That a deed executed by husband and wife passes the husband's estate by coverture, even though it may be executed defectively as to the wife, see Lessee v. Smith, W 208.

Estoppel to deny dower

296. In case of a petition for dower, the grantee of a deceased husband, and those holding under him, are not estopped to deny that their grantor had title: Coakley v. Perry, 3 OS 344.

297. If a husband conveys to a stranger by deed, and the certificate of acknowledgment is defective as to the wife's release of dower so that she is not barred by such deed, the grantee under such deed who has taken possession thereunder is estopped to deny the title of the grantor; or at least he cannot defeat the claim for dower by setting up a title in a third person with which he does not connect himself: Ward v. McIntosh, 12 OS 231.

298. If in a proceeding in which the widow of the deceased and his mortgagee are parties, the whole dower of the widow is assigned to her in terms which are covered by the mortgage, and it is ordered in a proceeding by the administrator to sell the realty of the deceased to pay his debts, if the realty in which dower is thus assigned be sold to pay such debts subject to such dower, the mortgagee is estopped as against the widow from claiming in a subsequent foreclosure proceeding that she has released her dower to him: Affleck v. Snodgrass, 8 OS 234.

[§ 2103.02.1] § 2103.021 When affidavit required to preserve dower.

Whenever "trustee," "as trustee," or "agent" follows the name of the grantee in any deed of conveyance of land recorded in this state and no other instrument containing a description of such land has been recorded in the office of the recorder of the county in which such land is situated which puts upon inquiry any person dealing with such land that a spouse of such grantee would have a dower interest in such land, a conveyance of such land by such grantee to a bona fide purchaser conveys a title free from the claims of any spouse of such grantee in such land, for dower, inchoate, or otherwise, unless such spouse, prior to the recording of such conveyance by such grantee to said purchaser, has recorded in the office of the recorder of the county in which the land is situated an affidavit describing such land and setting forth the nature of such spouse's interest in such land.

If accepted by the grantee, the conveyance of an estate or interest in real property in lieu of dower, to take effect on the death of the grantor, will bar such grantee's right of dower in the real property of the grantor. If the conveyance was made when the grantee was a minor or during the marriage, the grantee may waive title to such real property and demand dower.

When a conveyance which is intended to be in lieu of dower fails through any defect to be a bar thereto, and the widow or widower availing of such defect demands dower, the estate or interest conveyed to such widow or widower shall cease.

Though the right may be inchoate, it should be protected against the mala fide acts of the husband.' A conveyance without valuable consideration, with the intent to defeat the wife of her dower, is void, and will be set aside; and so a deed to a stranger, although he paid full consideration, if he knew that the intention was to defeat the wife's dower." § 2105.01 No distinction between ancestral and nonancestral or real and personal property. (GC § 10503-1)

In intestate succession, there shall be no difference between ancestral and nonancestral property or between real and personal property.

HISTORY: GC § 10503-1; 114 v 320 (339). Eff 10-1-53. See former GC § 8577.

Comment

The effect of this section is to cause all property to pass according to one common rule whatever its character and from whatever source derived.

The reasons for the distinction between ancestral and nonancestral property and between real and personal property, in intestate succession, have long since disappeared, these differences being at the present time purely arbitrary and productive of an artificial inequality.

1. A distinction, in Ohio, between ancestral and nonancestral real and personal property was drawn by GC §§ 8573 and 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), in effect prior to 1932, but by virtue of this section, effective January 1, 1932, such a distinction no longer exists: Asher v. Asher, 87 App 227, 42 OO 454, 94 NE(2d) 582.

2. Under the provisions of this section, in intestate succession there shall be no difference between ancestral and nonancestral property: In re Sherick, 167 OS 151, 4 OO(2d) 141, 146 NE(2d) 727.

When, in sections 2105.01 to 2105.21, inclusive, of the Revised Code, a person is described as living, it means that he was living at the time of the death of the intestate from whom the estate came, and when a person is described as having died, it means that he died before such intestate.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. In Weisflock v. Sigling, 116 OS 435, 156 NE 905, referring to the case of Clayton v. Drake, the court said:

"The case of Clayton v. Drake, 17 OS 367, does not apply, for the reason that the relationship there was not the same as in the instant case, and the statute at that time did not contain the words here under consideration, to wit, 'and their legal representatives.' In that case, involving the descent of ancestral property under what is now GC § 8573 (see now RC § 2105.06), the question for determination was between great-uncles and great-aunts on one side and the descendants of great-uncles and great-aunts on the other, and it was held that, there being no words of representation in the statute (51 v 500), at the time of the intestate's death, 'the next of kin to the intestate of the blood of the ancestor from whom the estate came' were the great-uncles and -aunts; and the descendants of deceased great-uncles and -aunts were excluded. While that case holds that 'The rule of the civil law is the common law of this country in the computation of degrees of kindred,' yet the statutes of descent and distribution control the descent of property in this state, and it is held in Schroth v. Noble, 91 OS 438, 110 NE 1067, that:

"The 'next of kin' as used in that statute (GC § 8574, par. 6 [see now RC § 2105.06, par. (F)] refers to those persons who take intestate property under the statutes of descent and distribution (Steel v. Kurtz, 28 OS 191, approved and followed); that each paragraph of GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06) must be read in connection with all the other paragraphs for the purpose of determining who are next of kin of the blood of the intestate.

"Applying this principle, par. 6 of GC § 8574 [see now RC § 2105.06, par. (F)] is construed to mean that the estate passes to the living next of kin and the legal representatives of deceased next of kin of the same class as the living next of kin.

"Finding that Michael Sigling is of the class next of kin to and of the blood of the intestate living at the time of the death of said J. L. Seitz, and that there are no legal representatives of deceased members of that class who would be entitled to share with him in such inheritance under par. 6 of GC § 8574 [see now RC § 2105.06, par. (F)], it follows that the courts below were right in sustaining the demurrer of said Michael Sigling to the amended petition, and their judgment in so doing is affirmed."

2. It has been held that aunts and uncles of the deceased and their representatives are the next of kin of the decedent instead of his grandparents: Ampey v. Hirsch, 20 NP(NS) 1.

3. The phrase "nearest of kin" when employed in a last will and testament, in the absence of language in the will manifesting a different intention, is to be so construed as to embrace within its meaning such as would inherit under the statutes of descent and distribution, and in the order and proportion therein provided: Godfrey v. Eppe, 100 OS 447, 126 NE 886.

5. This section and GC §§ 10503-4 and 10503-5 (RC §§ 2105.06 and 2105.10) are in pari materia and should be considered together in construing the term "brothers and sisters" as used in GC § 10503-5 (RC § 2105.10): Oldiges v. Osborne, 11 OO 506 (PC).

6. The provisions of this section, relating to intestate succession, and defining, for such purpose, the term "next of kin," have no application in the determination of the right to appointment as administrator of a decedent's estate: In re Fields, 44 OLA 284 (App); In re Applegate, 61 OLA 277, 100 NE(2d) 322.

§ 2105.04 Permanent leases to descend same as estates in fee. (GC § 10503-11)

Scope and construction

1. An earlier form of this statute provided for advancements of realty, but not for advancements of personalty: Putnam v. Putnam, 18 O 347; Myers v. Warner, 18 O 519; see Miller v. Wilson, 15 O 108.

2. If a testator has devised and bequeathed a part of his property by will, the statute on the subject of advancements applies, nevertheless, to that part of his property as to which he died intestate: Dittoe v. Cluney, 22 OS 436.

3. The statutory provision as to advancements in the descent and distribution of estates can have no just application in a case where it is apparent that the testator, who, by his will, had distributed property in different amounts among his children, with the manifest intention of disposing of all his estate, unexpectedly, by the omission of a residuary clause in his will, died intestate as to the residuum of his estate: Needles v. Needles, 7 OS 432.

4. As between collateral heirs, neither the common law nor the statutes of Ohio recognize advancements: Stewart v. Yeazell, 4 App 82, 21 CC(NS) 357, 25 CD 318.

5. For deduction of advancements, see also Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209.

6. It is said that this section makes provision for deduction from the shares of the heirs and distributees in case of intestacy, and that a debt is not provided for therein: Woodruff v. Snowden, 7 NP 520, 10 OD 123.

7. See, however, case notes to GC §§ 10503-4 and 10503-21 (RC §§ 2105.06 and 2105.05) for deduction of debts due from heirs, distributees, devisees and legatees to the estate of the ancestor or the testator.

8. Where a father conveyed real estate to his son at the price of one thousand two hundred dollars, and took from the son his note for two hundred dollars, payable to the father with interest, and for the remaining one thousand dollars took from the son a receipt in the following form, viz.: "October the 19th, 1859. Received of B. O. (the father) one thousand dollars for the use without interest received by me, D. O." (the son). It was held that the amount mentioned in the receipt will not be considered an advancement from father to son: Overholser v. Wright, 17 OS 157.

9. If trustees are authorized to deliver part of the trust property to the beneficiaries, such transaction does not create a debt; and the amount thus advanced does not bear interest even though in the will creating a trust it is called a loan: Hosmer v. Sturges, 31 OS 657.

10. The advancements should be charged against the interest of each of the children and not recovered into the estate and redistributed: Albrecht v. Fischer, 14 App 195.

11. In the administration of an estate, the administrator is entitled to set off against the distributive share of an incompetent child the amount paid from the estate of the father for such child's support in a state institution: Herring v. Herring, 108 App 28, 9 OO(2d) 99, 160 NE(2d) 558.

12. An agreement between the heirs and devisees after the death of the ancestor, whereby they agree to regard certain notes given to him for value by his children or his daughters' husbands as advancements, will be given full effect between the parties to such agreement; and the widow of the ancestor will not be entitled to receive a distributive share out of such notes: Young v. Roberts, 7 CC 105, 3 CD 685 [affirmed, without report, 54 OS 622].

13. Debts due from a child to a parent are said by the operation of law and the implied consent of the heirs to be converted into advancements upon the death of the ancestor leaving a personal estate: Tobias v. Richardson, 5 CC(NS) 74, 16 CD 81 [affirmed, without report, 72 OS 626].

—When inheritance greater or less than advancement

18. A testator devised certain realty to his son and the rest of his estate to his wife, "allowing her to make such distribution of my estate as she in her discretion may deem best and most advisable among my children," naming them, then followed a provision showing the testator intended a substantially equal distribution of the property among his named children. The widow survived the testator and during her lifetime conveyed to some of the children who were named in the will parcels of the realty as well for their respective shares thereof; but she died without having distributed the remaining parcels. It was held that equity would require that the entire estate be apportioned equally among all the children named; the partial distribution made, together with the devise made to the son heretofore referred to, to stand as advancements and to be accounted for as such, but not beyond the amount of the equal portion of the party so advanced: Stableton v. Ellison, 21 OS 527.

19. Advancements are to be considered as a part of the estate of the parent who made such advancements so far as regards the division and distribution thereof; and an advancement received is to be taken by each child towards his or her share. If the amount equals or exceeds the amount of the share, such child shall be excluded from any further portion, but shall not be required to refund; and if less, such child shall be entitled to as much more as shall be a full share: Moore v. Freeman, 50 OS 592, 35 NE 502.

20. In the partition of the lands of an intestate among his children and the children of a deceased son, the portion which the latter inherit should be charged with an advancement made to their father by such intestate: Parsons v. Parsons, 52 OS 470, 40 NE 165.

21. The child to whom an advancement is made is not personally liable to the estate of his parent for such advancement; and the only method of adjusting such advancement is to distribute to such child his proportionate share of his parent's estate less the amount of such advancement: Dow v. Dow, 3 NP (NS) 125, 15 OD 576.

—When estate is entirely real or personal

27. The indebtedness of the heir to the ancestor is to be deducted from his interest in the estate: Skinner v. Lehman, 6 O 430; Keever v. Hunter, 62 OS 616, 57 NE 454 [see also Dorman Grocery v. Young, 64 OS 580]; Lambright v. Lambright, 74 OS 198, 78 NE 265; Tobias v. Richardson, 5 CC(NS) 74, 15 CD 81 [affirmed, without opinion, 72 OS 626]; Lockwood v. Whiteley, 23 CC(NS) 241, 34 CD 219; In re Ellis, 5 NP 207, 5 OD 330. See also Martin v. Martin, 56 OS 333, 46 NE 981.

28. It is said that judgment and execution is necessary as to realty: Woodruff v. Snowden, 7 NP 520, 10 OD 123 [reversed in part, Woodruff v. Woodruff, 4 CC(NS) 616, 13 CD 408].

29. If the devisee dies before testator, but the devise is prevented from lapsing by the provisions of GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52), and such property by virtue of this section passes to the children of such devisee, they take subject to his indebtedness to the estate of the testator: Baker v. Carpenter, 69 OS 15, 68 NE 577.

30. Debts due from a child to a parent are said by the operation of law and the implied consent of the heirs to be converted into advancements upon the death of the ancestor leaving a personal estate: Tobias v. Richardson, 5 CC(NS) 74, 16 CD 81 [affirmed, without report, 72 OS 626].

31. The consideration named in a deed may be explained by showing the actual transaction and the value agreed upon; and for this purpose the written receipt given by the son to the father of a certain amount of money to apply on the son's interest in the father's estate was competent: Shehy v. Cunningham, 81 OS 289, 90 NE 805, 25 LRA(NS) 1194 [affirming 10 CC(NS) 311, 20 CD 212, which overruled Cowden v. Cowden, 7 CC(NS) 277, 18 CD 71].

32. The child to whom an advancement is made is not personally liable to the estate of his parent for such advancement; and the only method of adjusting such advancement is to distribute to such child his proportionate share of his parent's estate less the amount of such advancement: Dow v. Dow, 3 NP (NS) 125, 15 OD 576.

Definition of advancements

37. Gifts made by a husband during his lifetime to his wife are not advancements as defined by GC § 10503-19 (RC § 2105.05): In re Morton, 6 OO 343 (PC).

38. An advancement is a gift made by an ancestor to an heir to take effect at once, whereby a part or all of the estate which would pass to such heir under the statutes of descent and distribution is transferred to such heir during the lifetime of such ancestor: Woodruff v. Snowden, 7 NP 520, 10 OD 123 [reversed in part, Woodruff v. Woodruff, 4 CC(NS) 616, 13 CD 408].

39. An advancement is gratuitous, irrevocable and imposes no personal obligation upon the heir: Woodruff v. Snowden, 7 NP 520, 10 OD 123 [reversed in part, Woodruff v. Woodruff, 4 CC(NS) 616, 13 CD 408]; Dow v. Dow, 3 NP(NS) 125, 15 OD 576.

40. An advancement is an irrevocable gift by a parent to a child in anticipation of the child's future share of the parent's estate, and is to be taken into account upon distribution. Its nature and effect are controlled by the statutes of descent, distribution and advancements: Moore v. Freeman, 50 OS 592, 35 NE 502.

41. The sums received by children as advancements are irrevocable gifts and cannot be charged with interest, even though the testator took interest-bearing notes from some of the children for the sums given: Albrecht v. Fischer, 14 App 195.

Intent

47. If the parties regard money as an advancement effect may be given thereto: Tobias v. Richardson, 5 CC(NS) 74, 16 CD 81 [affirmed, without report, 72 OS 626].

48. The intention of the party controls in determining whether a transfer of property or money from a parent to a child is an advancement or a gift absolute in character and not intended as an advancement: Burbeck v. Spollen, 6 DecRep 1118, 10 AML Rec 491.

49. The intention of the party controls in determining whether a payment of money or a transfer of personal property by a parent to a child is an unconditional gift, or whether it creates a debt from the child to the parent, or whether it is an advancement: Fels v. Fels, 1 CC 420, 1 CD 235.

50. When a testator clearly expresses the intention that his property shall pass to his children equally, subject to charges against them in his book of advancements, parol evidence is not competent to show that an advancement charged by him in such book was not made: Younce v. Flory, 77 OS 71, 83 NE 305.

Presumption

55. If a parent purchases land or property from a stranger, pays the purchase price therefor himself, and has the conveyance therefor made to his child as grantee, it will be presumed that such conveyance is an advancement: Tremper v. Barton, 18 O 418; Dittoe v. Cluney, 22 OS 436; VanZant v. Davis, 6 OS 52. This presumption, however, is a prima facie presumption only and may be rebutted: Tremper v. Barton, 18 O 418.

56. If the consideration expressed in a deed is love and affection, or if the son admits that the conveyance was gratuitous, although a valuable consideration is expressed in the deed, and the presumption is that such conveyance was an advancement, the burden is upon the grantee to rebut such presumption: Shehy v. Cunningham, 81 OS 289, 90 NE 805, 25 LRA(NS) 1194 [affirming 10 CC(NS) 311, 20 CD 212, which overruled Cowden v. Cowden, 7 CC(NS) 277, 18 CD 71].

56.1 In father's action against son on notes which father had paid as surety, son's proof by clear and convincing evidence that amount so paid constituted advancement would relieve son from liability, notwithstanding fact that father still retained possession of the notes: Klass v. Klass, 27 App 459, 161 NE 406.

57. Where a son executed a note in favor of his mother and paid interest thereon, there is a presumption that it was a loan: Hicks v. Hicks, 9 CC(NS) 413, 19 CD 628 [affirming 4 NP(NS) 25, 16 OD 509; and affirmed, without opinion, 76 OS 575].

58. A sum of money has to be treated as an advancement and not as a gift, if a receipt is taken showing that such payment is on account of the future interests of the party to whom it is made in the estate of the party who makes such payment: Ferris v. Goodin, 19 CC(NS) 477, 26 CD 110.

59. A receipt which purports to be on account of the future interest of the person to whom the money is paid in the estate of the person who paid it cannot be varied by parol evidence, although it may be set aside for fraud or mistake: Ferris v. Goodin, 19 CC(NS) 477, 26 CD 110.

60. Where a will states certain advances to have been made, the will is conclusive as to the fact of such advances and the amount thereof: Farmer v. Cope, 55 OS 695, 48 NE 1112.

61. Presumably transfers of money from father to son are irrevocable gifts, either never to be accounted for or intended as advancements: Storey v. Storey, 214 Fed 973, 131 CCA 269, 12 OLR 195, 59 Bull 363 [for later opinion in same case, see 13 OLR 581].

Special contract

66. By agreement between a parent and his daughter, property transferred by such parent to the daughter's husband may be regarded as an advancement to her: Ditoe v. Cluney, 22 OS 436.

67. The fact that the daughter has consented to such an arrangement may be shown by an express agreement on her part or by the surrounding circumstances of the whole case: Ditoe v. Cluney, 22 OS 436.

68. A father conveyed certain realty to his daughter's husband for a consideration of seventeen thousand dollars, five thousand dollars of which was released to the grantee by way of advancement to his wife; and with the consent of the wife the deed was made to her husband. Subsequently her husband reconveyed such property to her father for eighteen thousand dollars, taking the father's notes for a part of such purchase price. On the death of the husband his wife brought suit against his administrator to recover such advancement. It was held that she had no right to maintain such action: Stump v. Stump, 26 OS 169.

69. Where D, the husband of S, receives from W, the father of S, money and property as advancements for S upon her share of the estate of W, D holds the same for S; and, upon the death of W, when the amount of her distributive share is ascertained and ready for payment, S has a right to compel D to account for and pay to her such money and property, or she may demand and collect her share in full of the administrator: Stayner v. Bower, 42 OS 314.

70. In such case, when S elects to sue the administrator, and compels him to pay her the distributive share in full, including the amount of such advancements, the administrator, by operation of law, is subrogated to the rights and remedies of S against D as to such advancement: Stayner v. Bower, 42 OS 314.

71. Heirs of the grantee in a deed of conveyance between brothers, purporting upon the face thereof to be in the nature of an advancement, who upon the death of the grantor are in possession of the property conveyed and continue thereafter to hold possession under the deed, are estopped to deny the validity of the stipulation of said deed in respect to advancements: Stewart v. Yeazell, 4 App 82, 21 CC(NS) 357, 25 CD 318.

Power to make advancements

76. A parent has power to make an advancement to his child as long as such advancement is not in fraud of the creditors of the parent; and if the parent retains property sufficient to pay all of his indebtedness, the transaction is prima facie free from fraud: Miller v. Wilson, 15 O 108.

77. A person indebted conveys his property, by way of gift or advancement, among his children. His two sons, in part consideration of the portion conveyed to them, agreed to pay his debts. In a suit by a judgment creditor, whose debts accrued before the division, to subject the lands so conveyed to the payment of his judgment, the land conveyed to the sons ought to be first subjected: Swihart v. Shaum, 24 OS 432.

78. The judgment, in the absence of fraud or collusion in obtaining it, is conclusive evidence both as to the fact and the amount of indebtedness, not only as between the parties to the judgment, but as between and against the parties to whom the judgment debtor had conveyed the property sought to be subjected to its payment; and this conclusive effect of the judgment is not affected by the fact that it was recovered after the conveyance of the property: Swihart v. Shaum, 24 OS 432.

79. A conveyance by a man who has entered into a contract of marriage, which subsequently takes place, of a portion of his land to his sons by a former marriage, without consideration other than love and affection, and without the knowledge or consent of his contemplated wife, is a fraud on her marital rights, and she, at his death, is entitled to dower therein: Ward v. Ward, 63 OS 125, 57 NE 1095, 81 AmSt 621, 51 LRA 858.

When a person dies, property that he gave during his lifetime to an heir shall be treated as an advancement against the heir's share of the estate only if declared in a contemporaneous writing by the decedent, or acknowledged in writing by the heir to be an advancement. For this purpose, property advanced is valued as of the time the heir came into possession or enjoyment of the property, or as of the time of death of the decedent, whichever occurs first. If the heir does not survive the decedent, the property shall not be taken into account in computing the intestate share to be received by the heir's issue, unless the declaration or acknowledgment provides otherwise.

This single section on descent and distribution includes all property, real and personal, ancestral and nonancestral.

To take the place of vested dower which under the act of 1931 was abolished, the surviving spouse under the above section receives an outright one-third of the estate when there is more than one child and one-half when there is only one child.

Other features of the section are as follows:

(a) The term "lineal descendants" has been used throughout instead of "legal representatives."

(b) The spouse is given one-half if there is but one child and one-third if there are two or more children.

(c) Where there are no children or their lineal descendants surviving, a share goes to the surviving parent or parents.

(d) The statute makes no distinction between brothers and sisters of the whole or half blood of the intestate.

(e) Inheritance by next of kin is prior to stepchildren and stepchildren are prior to escheat.

Subsection 7 of GC § 10503-4 [subsection (G) of this section] as amended, effective January 1, 1932, formerly provided as follows: "If there be no such brothers or sisters or their lineal descendants, the property in the estate shall pass to the grandparents of the intestate equally, or to the survivor or survivors of such grandparents." By virtue of the terms of subsection 7 as now amended, one-half of the estate goes to the paternal grandparents of the intestate equally, or to the survivor of them, and one-half of the estate to the maternal grandparents of the intestate equally, or to the survivor of them.

Subsection 8 of GC § 10503-4 [subsection (H) of this section] as amended, effective January 1, 1932, formerly provided as follows: "If there be no grandparent or grandparents, then to the lineal descendants, if any, of such grandparent or grandparents, per stirpes; if none, then to the next of kin of the intestate, per stirpes. There shall be no representation among next of kin."

General Code § 10503-4, as last amended in 1935, provided that if there are no paternal grandparents, or no maternal grandparents, then one-half of estate goes to the lineal descendants of the paternal grandparents, and one-half of estate goes to the lineal descendants of the maternal grandparents, per stirpes.

In other words, these subsections as amended last, are "half and half" statutes, giving half to the paternal grandparents, and half to the maternal grandparents, or to their lineal descendants, respectively. These amendments to subsections 7 and 8 [subsections (G) and (H)] abrogate the rule laid down in Oakley v. Davey, 49 App 113, 1 OO 144, 195 NE 406, wherein the court of appeals of Cuyahoga county held that under these subsections, as effective January 1, 1932, there is nothing in either subsection 7 or 8 of GC § 10503-4 [subsection (G) or (H) of this section] indicating an intention that an estate shall be divided equally between the paternal and maternal branches, and that the phrase "per stirpes" as used in subsection 8 of GC § 10503-4 [subsection (H) of this section] modifies the word "descendants." In this case, a motion to certify the record was overruled in the supreme court. It is doubtful whether any good purpose was accomplished by the above amendments to subsections 7 and 8 [subsections (G) and (H)].

Senate Bill 156 (128 v 155), which amended this section (RC § 2105.06) in 1959, substituted the words "provided by law" for "provided in chapter 2105 of the Revised Code" in the first paragraph.

1. In its technical sense, the term "heirs" embraces those persons who take the estate of an intestate under the statute of descent and distribution, and in the event such statute designates the widow, she takes as an heir: Holt v. Miller, 133 OS 418, 11 OO 85, 14 NE(2d) 409 [affirming 11 OO 357].

2. Under par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)], the lineal descendants are designated as the roots, and the phrase "of such grandparents" is descriptive only: Snodgrass v. Bedell, 134 OS 311, 12 OO 103, 16 NE (2d) 463.

4. If an estate of such deceased husband consists wholly or in part of real estate, and his widow, as relict, elects not to take under his will but under the statute of descent and distribution, she takes her quantitative share in such real estate as an estate of inheritance, subject to sale, if necessary, to pay the debts of the estate of her deceased husband: Barlow v. Winters Nat. Bank & Co., 145 OS 270, 30 OO 484, 61 NE(2d) 603 [reversing 27 OO 187 (PC)].

5. In case the relict of a deceased husband takes title to any such real estate by reason of such election, she is entitled to the rentals from her share of such real estate from the date of the death of her husband: Barlow v. Winters Nat. Bank & Co., 145 OS 270, 30 OO 484, 61 NE(2d) 603 [reversing 27 OO 187 (PC)].

5.1 Intestate succession to personal property is governed by the law of the deceased owner's domicile: Howard v. Reynolds, 30 OS(2d) 214, 59 OO(2d) 228, 283 NE(2d) 629.

6. Where the terms of a will provide for a bequest or devise to a named person, per stirpes, without expressly designating the class of persons who are to take in the event that the named person does not survive the testatrix, and it is clear from the will taken as a whole, read in light of the circumstances surrounding the execution of the will, that a secondary gift was intended, then it will be assumed that a secondary gift is intended to go to the heirs at law of the named person as determined by the statutes of descent and distribution: Richland Trust Co. v. Becvar, 44 OS(2d) 219, 73 OO(2d) 512, 339 NE(2d) 830 (1975).

7. The word "descendant" should be construed to include all those to whom an estate descends, whether in a direct or collateral line from the intestate: Oakley v. Davey, 49 App 113, 1 OO 144, 195 NE 406 [reversing Davey v. Climo, 30 NP(NS) 457].

8. The phrase "per stirpes" as used in par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)] modifies the word "descendants" and not the words "grandparent or grandparents": Oakley v. Davey, 49 App 113, 1 OO 144, 195 NE 406 [reversing Davey v. Climo, 30 NP(NS) 457].

9. There is nothing in either par. 7 or 8 [now par. (G) or (H)] of this section indicating an intention that an estate should be divided equally between the paternal and maternal branches: Oakley v. Davey, 49 App 113, 1 OO 144, 195 NE 406 [reversing Davey v. Climo, 30 NP(NS) 457].

10. In construing bequests to the descendants of named persons who are dead, the roots are not the named persons, but the descendants, then in being, nearest in consanguinity to the named persons; thus par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)] designates the descendants as the roots, the term "of such grandparent or grandparents" being descriptive only, and passes the estate not to the grandparents, but to their lineal descendants, as a class, with the right of representation: Oakley v. Davey, 49 App 113, 1 OO 144, 195 NE 406 [reversing Davey v. Climo, 30 NP(NS) 457].

11. Where the mother of decedent's father had married three times and left lineal descendants from each marriage, all of such lineal descendants, by virtue of the provisions of par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)], were entitled to share in the estate of the decedent whether their ancestor was the first, second, or third husband of the decedent's grandmother: Shepard v. Wilson, 61 App 191, 14 OO 282, 22 NE (2d) 568.

12. In determining who shall inherit property inherited from a deceased spouse, in the absence of brothers and sisters of either or both spouses, due regard must be had for the provisions of this section: Ritter v. Ritter, 62 App 488, 14 OO 375, 24 NE(2d) 603.

13. Real estate which has been purchased and paid for solely by a wife, and title thereto taken jointly with her husband, but he having thereafter immediately conveyed his interest to her, passes, upon the wife's death intestate after her husband's decease, to her next of kin, under this section: Speidel v. Schaller, 73 App 141, 28 OO 252, 55 NE(2d) 346.

13.1 The word "children," as it appears in the substitute beneficiary clause of a group life insurance policy, is to be construed to mean all offspring, regardless of whether they are born in or out of wedlock: Butcher v. Pollard, 32 OApp(2d) 1, 61 OO(2d) 1, 288 NE(2d) 204 (1972).

13.2 The words "child" or "children" appearing in RC § 2105.06, the statute of descent and distribution means all children, both legitimate and illegitimate: Green v. Woodard, 40 OApp(2d) 101, 69 OO(2d) 130, 318 NE(2d) 397 (1974).

13.3 An heir designated by virtue of RC § 2105.15 is an heir under the statute of descent and distribution: Witten v. Landrum, 41 OApp(2d) 65, 70 OO(2d) 61, 322 NE(2d) 146 (1974).

14. In the law applicable to the descent and distribution of property, the term "brothers and sisters" in the absence of statutory provisions limiting the use and application of the term, includes half-brothers and half-sisters: Oldiges v. Osborne, 11 OO 506 (PC).

15. The words "such one-half" in par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)], refer to each one-half of the estate which is set apart by the previous subsection to each set of grandparents; and such one-half, so set apart, is carried down through the lineal descendants of each set of grandparents: Ryan v. Dixon, 12 OO 185, 24 NE(2d) 603 (PC).

16. Where the heirs of the decedent consist of one uncle on the maternal side, and three uncles, one aunt and nine children of a deceased uncle on the paternal side, one-half of the estate will go to the one uncle on the maternal side, he being the only lineal descendant of the maternal grandparents, and the other one-half will be divided in five equal parts, one part to go to each of the three uncles and the one aunt, and the fifth part to the children of the deceased uncle, they being the only lineal descendants of the paternal grandparents: Ryan v. Dixon, 12 OO 185, 24 NE(2d) 603 (PC).

17. Paragraph 9 of this section [now par. (I)] by its very language excludes stepchildren as next of kin: In re Gorman, 15 OO 253 (PC).

18. Under this section, it was not the purpose of the legislature to create a new and heretofore unrecognized class of heirs or next of kin in the persons of stepchildren and their lineal descendants, and it did not place the state of Ohio within the category of an heir or next of kin: State ex rel Rich v. Page, 20 OO 155, 6 OSupp 104 (CP).

19. Before relatives can be considered heirs, all the persons mentioned under par. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of this section [now par. (A), (B), (C), (D) and (E)] must be eliminated: Rea v. Fornan, 26 OO 485, 46 NE(2d) 649 (App) [appeal dismissed, 140 OS 546].

20. When a man predeceases a cousin, and leaves no descendants but does leave an adopted daughter, that daughter takes, under the statutes of descent, this section and GC § 10512-19 (RC § 3107.10), the share in realty which the adoptive father would have inherited from the cousin had the adoptive father survived the cousin: Frame v. Shaffer, 27 OO 346, 13 OSupp 72 (CP).

21. Only those who are actual next of kin, and not representatives of former living persons who may have been next of kin, are the persons who benefit by par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)], and the concluding sentence thereof: In re Morris, 29 OO 173, 12 OSupp 170, 39 OLA 187 (PC).

22. This section as amended provides for an equal division between the lineal descendants of each set of paternal and maternal grandparents, and no distinction is made between those of the half blood and those of the whole blood: Sheeler v. Burkhart, 45 OO 415, 101 NE(2d) 401 (PC).

23. The provisions of this section are controlling only "except as otherwise provided by law": Stocker v. Tranter, 31 NP(NS) 467.

33. This statute is in pari materia with the adoption statute, so where the words "brothers and sisters" are used, it is clear that such phrase is intended to include brothers and sisters by adoption: National Bank v. Hancock, 85 App 1, 40 OO 30, 88 NE(2d) 67.

34. Under this section and GC § 10512-19 (RC § 3107.10) an adopted child is entitled to inherit not only from an adopting parent, but also through such adopting parent from a deceased sister of the adopting parent: White v. Meyer, 66 App 549, 20 OO 38, 37 NE(2d) 546, discussed in 20 OO 250.

35. The proper manner by which to compute the one-third interest of a widow under par. 3 of this section [now par. (C)] is to be arrived at by adding the appraised value of the specifically devised real estate to the amount of cash remaining after having converted the remainder of the estate into money and after having deducted therefrom the debts, funeral expenses, costs of administration, allowance to widow for year's support and the twenty per cent allowance under GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13): In re Thoroman, 76 App 309, 32 OO 16, 62 NE(2d) 530.

36. A surviving spouse of nonresident decedent who had property in Massachusetts, and who was survived by wife and father, could not maintain petition for determination of value for the purpose of enabling her to hold such property as the owner thereof, where the spouse was not entitled to all the personalty in the commonwealth under the laws of Ohio, which was the state of the decedent's residence: Hite v. Hite, 17 NE(2d) 176 (Mass).

46. Where a person dies intestate without issue, and without parents or a parent surviving, leaving a surviving spouse, possessed of property which was devised by a former spouse who died without issue, such surviving spouse takes in such property that estate which is given to her in subdiv. 4 [now par. (D)] of this section, which consists of the entire net estate: Hammel v. Hammel, 2 OO 73 (PC).

47. Where the heirs of the intestate consist of lineal descendants of both the paternal and the maternal grandparents, even though such heirs are on an equal degree of consanguinity to the intestate, the estate will be divided in halves, in accordance with this section: Reimer v. Finnegan, 32 OO 391 (PC); In re Stephenson, 48 OLA 624 (PC).

48. By the repeal of former GC § 8576, and the enactment of par. 9 of this section [now par. (I)] in its place, the legislature intended that stepchildren should inherit irrespective of the dissolution of the marriage by divorce: In re McGraff, 38 OO 187 (PC).

49. Where the intestate's maternal grandmother had been married twice and had left lineal descendants from each marriage, and there were no kin more closely related to the decedent within the terms of par. 8 of this section [now par. (H)], the lineal descendants of both marriages are entitled to share in the estate of such decedent: In re Stephenson, 48 OLA 624 (PC).

50. Where a testator gives the residue of his estate to his heirs in accordance with the laws and statutes of descent and distribution of Ohio in effect at the time of his decease, he clearly intends that said residue should be distributed to those individuals who would be entitled to the same in the event he should die intestate: Shook v. McConnell, 43 OO 403, 97 NE(2d) 111 (PC).

55. Property exempt from administration of husband's estate and the year's allowance to the widow constitute a debt against the deceased's estate, and on the widow's dying intestate such assets pass according to this section, and are not affected by GC § 10503-5 (RC § 2105.10): Russell v. Roberts, 54 App 441, 8 OO 196, 7 NE(2d) 811.

56. Property passing from a deceased husband to his widow by virtue of the widow's election not to take under the will does not pass to the widow by descent and, upon the widow's decease intestate and without issue, the property descends as her own under the provisions of this section, and not under the provisions of the half and half statute, GC § 10503-5 (RC § 2105.10): Ellsworth v. Hale, 66 App 108, 19 OO 361, 32 NE(2d) 32, discussed in 20 OO 107.

62. The distributive share of a surviving spouse must be based on this section, as construed by GC § 10504-55 (RC § 2107.39): In re Balliett, 18 OLA 41.

63. Under former GC § 8573 (see now RC § 2105-06) the son of a deceased nephew of the testator was held to take as "next of kin" under a will devising property "to the next of my kin, to them as they would take under statute of descent and distribution," where the testator died leaving no issue or surviving spouse: Jobe v. Shaffer, 25 OLA 649.

64. In determining heirs under a residuary clause in a will leaving the residue to the next of kin and heirs under the laws of descent, where there are no persons or classes of persons within the first seven paragraphs of this section, and the deceased left surviving him no paternal or maternal grandparents or their lineal descendants, the estate goes to the "next of kin," that is, the nearest of kindred to the deceased who are most nearly related by blood; where there is only one relative bearing a relationship of five degrees or less, such relative is his only next of kin: In re Morris, 29 OO 173, 12 OSupp 170 (PC); 39 OLA 187 (PC).

70. According to the general rules of interpreting statutes of descent and distribution, descendants of the nearest degree of consanguinity, however remote, take in their own right such shares as would come to them if all of the descendants of the same degree with the testator were living, and those of a more remote degree take per stirpes, or by representation, the shares of their deceased ancestors of the degree of consanguinity represented by living members: Oak- ley v. Davey, 49 App 113, 1 OO 144, 195 NE 406 [reversing Davey v. Climo, 30 NP(NS) 457].

71. GC § 10503-7 (RC § 2105.12), and the case law thereunder, are controlled by the new and special provisions contained in this section; hence, where there are no grandparents, the lineal descendants of such grandparents take per stirpes and not per capita, the grandparents being the stock or root: Shearer v. Gastman, 31 NP(NS) 219.

72. Under the provisions of this section and GC §§ 10503-7, 10503-8 and 10503-9 (RC §§ 2105.12 and 2105.13), which must be read in pari materia, nephews and nieces of a decedent who left no other nearer of kin surviving, take per capita, and the descendants of deceased nephews and nieces take per stirpes: Stocker v. Tranter, 31 NP(NS) 467; Wetherill v. Cummins, 24 OO 489, 9 OSupp 217 (PC).

73. In the enactment of subdivision 8 of GC § 10503-4 [RC § 2105.06, paragraph (H)], the general assembly clearly intended to divide an estate between the two sides of a family only so long as there were surviving maternal or paternal grandparents or their lineal descendants; that, where there were no grandparents or their lineal descendants on one side, the one half should go to the surviving grandparents or their lineal descendants on the other side; and that the next of kin should inherit only where there were no surviving grandparents or their lineal descendants on either side: In re Kelly, 165 OS 259, 59 OO 354, 135 NE(2d) 378.

74. Where a testator leaves all or a part of his estate "per stirpes among my heirs at law, according to the laws of descent and distribution now in force in the state of Ohio, which heirs at law shall be determined and distribution made as though my death had occurred at the time of the final termination of the trust hereby created," and where the law in effect at the testator's death is the same as the law in effect at the time the will was executed, the testator has expressed an intent that his "heirs at law" shall be determined as of the time of the termination of the trust but by the law in effect at the time the will was executed: Kraemer v. Hook, 168 OS 221, 6 OO(2d) 11, 152 NE(2d) 430.

77. An illegitimate child, whose mother subsequently marries a man, not the child's father, is a stepchild of such man for the purpose of determining the descent and distribution of property under subdivision (I) of this section: Kest v. Lewis, 169 OS 317, 8 OO(2d) 317, 159 NE(2d) 449.

78. Where will devised life estate to wife with provision that "all of my full blood and all of the half blood relatives shall share alike in the remainder, if any," and on death of testator only wife and cousins survived, the latter, upon the death of the wife, succeed to the title of devised real property per stirpes and not by equal distribution between the lineal descendants of the maternal and paternal branches: Parrett v. Paul, 115 App 488, 21 OO 134, 185 NE(2d) 798.

82. The laws of descent are mere arbitrary rules for the transmission of property, enacted by the legislature, and cannot be modified by courts by reason of equitable consideration: Campbell v. Musart Society, 72 OLA 46, 131 NE(2d) 279 (PC).

83. Even though an adoptive mother has perpetrated a fraud by adopting a child and using the child's estate for its support, thus neglecting the principal duty of a parent to support such child, such action alone is not enough to invalidate an otherwise legal adoption or to change the plan provided under the laws of descent and distribution: Vodrey v. Quigley, 74 OLA 29, 139 NE(2d) 108 (PC).

84. Where an adopted child's adoptive mother and adoptive grandparents predecease her leaving no lineal descendants surviving, the adoptive next of kin are the heirs of such child: Vodrey v. Quigley, 74 OLA 29, 139 NE(2d) 108 (PC).

85. Under RC § 2105.06(H) (former subdivision 8 of GC § 10503-4), a subsection of the statute of descent and distribution, before it is required that an estate be divided into equal halves and descend to the heirs of both branches of the family, at least one grandparent must survive, or not surviving must leave lineal descendants and where both do not survive and both do not leave lineal descendants there is no division of the estate and the entire estate goes to the next of kin without representation: Vodrey v. Quigley, 74 OLA 29, 139 NE(2d) 108 (PC).

86. There can be no doubt, by virtue of the provisions of this section and those of section 2103.02, that the surviving spouse is an heir for the purposes of inheritance, being subject to and having all the rights of an heir, and this status is neither enlarged nor diminished by the special relationship of husband and wife: In re Morgan, 89 OLA 225, 185 NE(2d) 822 (PC).

87. Ohio follows the common law rule that a child conceived during the existence of a lawful marital relation is presumed to be the legitimate issue of the marriage: Gray v. Richardson, 474 F(2d) 1370 (1973).

FORMER LAWS

The text of former GC § 8573 (repealed, 114 v 320, § 1), together with annotations thereto, is reprinted below:

Sec. 8573. Order of descent of real estate, title of which came from an ancestor. When a person dies intestate, having title or right to any real estate or inheritance in this state, which title came to such intestate by descent, devise or deed of gift from an ancestor, such estate shall descend and pass in parcenary to his or her kindred in the following course:

1. To the children of such intestate, or their legal representatives.

2. If there are no children or their legal representatives living, the estate shall pass to and vest in the husband or wife, relict of such intestate, during his or her natural life.

3. If such intestate leave no husband or wife, relict of himself or herself, or at the death of such relict, the estate shall pass to and vest in the parents of such intestate and the survivor of such parents during the life of such parents and such survivor of them. If there are no such parents or upon the death of both of such parents, the estate shall pass to and vest in the brothers and sisters of the intestate who are of the blood of the ancestor from whom the estate came, or their legal representatives, whether such brothers and sisters be of the whole or half blood of the intestate.

4. If there are no brothers or sisters of the intestate of the blood of the ancestor from whom the estate came, or their legal representatives, and the estate came by deed of gift from an ancestor who is living, the estate shall ascend to such ancestor.

5. If the ancestor from whom the estate came is deceased, the estate shall pass to and vest in the children of the ancestor from whom the estate came, or their legal representatives; if there are no children of the ancestor from whom the estate came, or their legal representatives, the estate shall pass to and vest in the husband or wife, relict of such ancestor, if a parent of the decedent. If there is no such husband or wife, the estate shall pass to, and vest in the brothers and sisters of such ancestors, or their legal representatives; and for want of such brothers and sisters, or their legal representatives, to the brothers and sisters of the half blood of the intestate, or their legal representatives, though such brothers and sisters are not of the blood of the ancestor from whom the estate came.

6. If there are no such half brothers and sisters of the intestate, or their legal representatives, the estate shall pass to the next of kin to the intestate of the blood of the ancestors from whom the estate came, or their legal representatives. (RC § 4158; S&S 304; S&C 501; 62 v 32, § 1; 110 v 13.)

Constitutionality

1. Since the heirs of a living ancestor have no vested right in their ancestor's property, the legislature may change the statutes of descent and distribution during the lifetime of such ancestor, either to the benefit or the detriment of certain classes of heirs: Gilpin v. Williams, 25 OS 283; Pollock v. Speidel, 27 OS 86; Caruthers v. Tarvin, 8 DecRep 344, 7 Bull 127; Tarvin v. Broughton, 8 DecRep 451, 8 Bull 21; see also Mathews v. Krisher, 59 OS 562, 53 NE 52.

Scope

6. For a general discussion and construction of the statutes of descent and distribution, see Jenks v. Langdon, 21 OS 362.

Dying intestate

21. Where a person dies testate he is presumed to have intended to dispose of his whole estate unless the contrary clearly appears from the will: Punch v. Clayton, 10 App 145.

23. If the owner of a fee in realty devises a life estate and makes no other provision with reference to such realty, his heirs take a vested interest, subject to such life estate: Groppengeiser v. Walter, 19 CC 579, 10 CD 672; Goff v. Moore, 3 App 170, 20 CC(NS) 224, 26 CD 587 [on appeal from 11 NP(NS) 543, 24 OD 552; affirmed, Gregg v. Keener, 91 OS 406].

24. If a testator leaves a life estate to his wife with power of sale, and such power of sale is not exercised, and no provision is made for the remainder after such life interest, he dies intestate as to such remainder: Armstrong v. Armstrong, 11 CC(NS) 474, 20 CD 261.

25. The fact that a devisee under a will is limited to a life estate does not exclude him, as heir, from any further interest which might come by reason of intestacy: Chaffin v. Dixon, 13 App 1, 31 OCA 97, 417 [motion to certify record overruled, Dixon v. Chaffin, 18 OLR 44, 65 Bull 217].

Having title or right

33. Realty of which a railway takes wrongful possession descends to the heir of the owner, although the right of action for damages accruing during the life of the owner passes to his executor: Lawrence R. Co. v. O'Harra, 50 OS 667, 36 NE 14.

34. If possession is taken with consent of the owner, and under a special contract, on the death of the owner, his personal representative and not his heir is entitled to recover: State ex rel McCullough v. Moffitt, 13 CC(NS) 152, 23 CD 238 [affirmed, without opinion, 82 OS 433].

42. If a mortgagee dies after condition is broken, the naked legal title in the mortgaged realty, together with the right of possession, passes to the heirs of the mortgagee in trust for the owner of the notes: Stockwell v. Gambell, 16 CC(NS) 427, 31 CD 600 [affirmed, without opinion, Wilson v. Stockwell, 78 OS 394].

45. Land devised to three brothers subject to the life estate of their mother vests the estate in the brothers immediately upon the death of the testator, so that if one of the brothers dies before the life estate is terminated the estate of the deceased passes to his widow, there being no issue, under GC § 8573, subdivision 5 (see now RC § 2105.06): Hammond v. Hammond, 29 OCA 85, 35 CD 587 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 307, 63 Bull 351].

Real estate or inheritance

53. The interest of a deceased partner in real estate purchased with partnership assets, and managed and used by the partnership as partnership property, the title to which is taken in the individual names of the several partners, in the absence of a partnership agreement to the contrary, passes to his heirs or devisees, unless needed to pay partnership obligations: Weitz v. Weitz, 15 App 134.

—Illegitimate children

For the capacity of illegitimate children to inherit, see RC §§ 2105.17 and 2105.18.

165. An agreement of marriage in praesenti when made by parties competent to contract, accompanied and followed by cohabitation as husband and wife, they being so treated and reputed in the community and circle in which they move, establishes a valid marriage at common law, and a child of such marriage is legitimate and may inherit from the father: Umbenhower v. Labus, 85 OS 238, 97 NE 832 [affirming Umbenhour v. Umbenhour, 12 CC(NS) 289, 21 CD 317].

166. A bastard at common law was filius nullius, and therefore kin to nobody, and had no ancestor from whom any inheritable blood could be derived. The only inheritable right a bastard has to take property is made so by statute: Owens v. Humbart, 5 App 312, 25 CC(NS) 522, 27 CD 307, 61 Bull 259 (Ed).

167. A child is rendered legitimate by the fact that his parents intermarried before the birth of such child, although the mother was pregnant when such marriage took place, if the husband knows of the fact of such pregnancy; and a subsequent decree of divorce, rendered before the birth of such child, does not render such child illegitimate. Such child may maintain an action to contest the will of his father: Wilson v. Wilson, 8 App 258, 28 OCA 309, 29 CD 393, 63 Bull 49 (Ed).

—Meaning of “heirs” in will

179. The word “heirs,” when used as a word of limitation in a will, has, prima facie, its technical legal meaning of those who would inherit in case of intestacy: King v. Beck, 12 O 390 [reversed, 15 O 559]; Townsend v. Townsend, 25 OS 477; Weston v. Weston, 38 OS 473; Chaffin v. Dixon, 13 App 1, 31 OCA 97, 417 [motion to certify record overruled, Dixon v. Chaffin, 18 OLR 44, 65 Bull 217]; Todd v. Todd, 6 CC(NS) 105, 17 CD 224; Barlow v. Otsott, 25 CC(NS) 347, 35 CD 267; Wilson v. Allaman, 27 OCA 282, 29 CD 147 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 129]; Gillis v. Long, 8 NP(NS) 1; Reif v. Ulmer, 9 NP(NS) 234. See also Stearns v. Brandeberry, 9 App 300.

180. The context may, however, show that such term has a different meaning: Collier v. Collier, 3 OS 369; Richey v. Johnson, 30 OS 288; Jones v. Lloyd, 33 OS 572; Durfee v. McNeil, 58 OS 238, 50 NE 721; Cultice v. Mills, 97 OS 112, 119 NE 200 [affirming Mills v. Mills, 20 NP(NS) 501, 28 OD 382]; Stewart v. Powers, 9 CC 143, 6 CD 101; Todd v.

Todd, 6 CC(NS) 105, 17 CD 224; Clifford v. Foster, 10 NP(NS) 446.

181. A devise making grandchildren “equal heirs” with testator’s children gives to such grandchildren the same share as to the children: Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349, 101 NE 344, 45 LRA(NS) 48, AnnCas 1914A, 104 [affirming Moon v. Harness, 15 CC(NS) 139, 23 CD 337].

182. In a will which devised one-half of an estate to the lawful heirs of the testator and one-half to the lawful heirs of his wife, after the death of his only son without issue, and which contained specific provisions as to the disposition of the shares of his sister (if she should survive the testator) and of the sister and brother of his wife, the persons included in the designation “lawful heirs” to whom “my estate shall go,” are to be ascertained as of the date of the death of the testator or his wife respectively, per stirpes, the representatives of deceased brothers and sisters to take the share that would have gone to their ancestor if living, except where the will itself otherwise provides: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43; which was on appeal from 13 NP(NS) 1].

183. The context may show that “heirs” means “children”: Bunnell v. Evans, 26 OS 409; Cultice v. Mills, 97 OS 112, 119 NE 200 [affirming Mills v. Mills, 20 NP(NS) 501, 28 OD 382].

184. Under a will devising to son the use of land which should become his in fee after twenty years after testator’s death, remainder during said twenty years to pass to son’s heirs, the land was devised to son in fee, subject to be divested; and upon the son’s death within the twenty years, his widow took a life estate only (GC § 8573 [see now RC § 2105.06]): Billman v. Billman, 25 App 242.

185. Where a testator has used the words “issue,” “children” and “heirs” technically, accurately and understandingly, a bequest to a trustee in trust for the period of ten years for the use and benefit of the children of testator, naming them, with a direction “that my trustees shall pay the same one-eighth part thereof to my son F. A., and his heirs” and a similar provision as to each of the other children, will be construed as a gift to F. A. and the other children of testator absolutely, subject only to the provisions of the trust, and the words “and his heirs” will be construed as words descriptive of the estate and not as designating another class of beneficiaries: Union Sav. Bank & Co. v. Alter, 103 OS 188, 132 NE 834.

186. A devise to the “heirs” of testator’s mother, who had died before the will was made, means to those who were her heirs at testator’s death: Ohio Sav. Bank & Co. v. Clark, 7 App 6, 28 OCA 1, 63 Bull 9 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, Wolcott v. Ohio Sav. Bank & Co., 61 Bull 191].

187. Under a bequest of the residue to be equally divided between the living heirs of testator and those of his wife, share and share alike, the phrase “share and share alike” qualifies the provision for each set of heirs, and the distribution among each set of heirs of the half so devised is to be as of the date of the death of the widow, and to be per capita and not per stirpes: Stearns v. Brandeberry, 9 App 300, 29 OCA 349.

188. The word “heirs” where used by a testator having living children will be regarded as synonymous with children: Kuester v. Yeoman, 14 CC(NS) 264, sub nomine, Kuster v. Yeoman, 22 CD 476, 56 Bull 337 (Ed) [affirmed, without opinion, Yeoman v. Kuester, 88 OS 592].

189. The fact that the word “heirs” is used with reference to one who has left children, is not of itself sufficient to show that the word "heirs" is used to mean children: Barlow v. Otsstott, 25 CC(NS) 347, 35 CD 287.

190. The word "heir" is popularly used of one to whom property goes either by descent or by will: Hessenmueller v. Sirilo, 23 CC(NS) 313, 34 CD 256.

191. A gift of the proceeds of the sale of realty to the "heirs" of a deceased brother of the testator passes in part to the widow of such deceased brother: Wilson v. Allaman, 27 OCA 282, 29 CD 147 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 129; the court of appeals based its decision upon the opinion of the court of common pleas].

—Contract to make will, etc.

For descent to an alien under our present statute, see RC § 2105.16.

197. Husband and wife cannot make a binding contract concerning an expectancy which is neither a vested nor a contingent interest; such as reciprocal releases of inheritance by each in the other's estate: McGee v. Sigmund, 109 OS 375, 142 NE 676.

198. While a written contract by which one agrees that a certain person shall inherit from him as if such person was his legitimate child, does not bind the promisor to leave any property at his death, and while it possibly does not prevent him from conveying his property gratuitously during his lifetime, or devising it to another by his last will, such contract is broken by the death of the promisor intestate and without making any provision, by deed or will, to perform such contract; and one to whom such property descends may be held in equity as trustee for the promisee: Snyder v. Shuttleworth, 5 App 137, 25 CC(NS) 545, 27 CD 234.

199. For the effect of an oral contract to devise realty, etc., see Shahan v. Swan, 48 OS 25, 26 NE 222, 29 AmSt 517 [reversing Swan v. Shahan, 1 CC 216, 1 CD 119].

Course of descent—tenancy in common

207. Husband and wife to whom property is transferred take as tenants in common, and the fact that they are husband and wife does not in any way affect the nature of their interest: Wilson v. Fleming, 13 O 68.

208. The law of Ohio now recognizes estates in common. Co-parcenary as a separate estate does not exist: Tabler v. Wiseman, 2 OS 207.

—Representation

213. In the absence of specific statutory provision therefor, such as the use of the words "or their legal representatives," or words of similar import, the doctrine of representation does not apply under our Ohio statutes; and the children of members of a class who have died prior to the death of the ancestor do not take in the absence of such specific statutory provisions: Clayton v. Drake, 17 OS 367.

214. The common law rule as to descent per capita and per stirpes is not affected by the statute of descent and distribution: Ewers v. Follin, 9 OS 327.

216. Those who take by right of representation take subject to the indebtedness of their deceased parent to the estate of the ancestor from whom they claimed descent: Martin v. Martin, 56 OS 333, 46 NE 981; Tharp v. United States Fidelity & Co., 2 App 28, 21 CC(NS) 321, 25 CD 416. [See now, however, RC § 2105.05.2]

217. If a grandchild is adopted by its grandfather, and takes by descent as an adopted child, it does not also take by right of representation of its deceased parent: Smith v. Carver (supreme court, without report), 36 Bull 189, 1 OSU 489.

—To whom property descends under statute

222. In Ohio the title to real property cannot be in abeyance: Gilpin v. Williams, 25 OS 283; Knisely v. Young, 15 CC(NS) 49, 23 CD 439.

223. The expectancy of an heir during the life of his ancestor cannot be conveyed to a stranger or re-leased to the ancestor: Needles v. Needles, 7 OS 432; Hart v. Gregg, 32 OS 502; Ferenbaugh v. Ferenbaugh, 104 OS 556, 136 NE 213; Thiessen v. Moore, 105 OS 401, 137 NE 906, 20 OLR 166 [affirming in part and reversing in part, 14 App 460].

225. Upon the death of the holder of realty, intestate, the legal title thereto passes to his heirs, subject to the right of the administrator to have such lands sold for the payment of the debts of the decedent, under GC § 10774 (see now RC § 2127.02) et seq: Overturf v. Dugan, 29 OS 230; Piatt v. St. Clair, 6 O 227; Douglass v. Massie, 16 O 271.

226. A devise in a will to a daughter "to be her full share and interest in all my estate" does not bar such devisee from her share of property not disposed of by the will: Leopold v. Weaver, 9 App 379, 29 OCA 567 [motion to certify record overruled, Weaver v. Leopold, 16 OLR 465, 64 Bull 40].

227. A widow is not an "heir per stirpes" of her deceased husband: Robbins v. Pigg, 29 OCA 153, 35 CD 682 [motion to certify record overruled, Pigg v. Robbins, 16 OLR 80, 63 Bull 196].

228. The principle of representation requires property to descend in the same way that it would have passed if the deceased ancestor of the representatives to whom such title is to descend had lived long enough to arrest such title: Ampey v. Hirsch, 20 NP (NS) 1, 27 OD 410.

—Next of kin

256. A lapsed legacy passes as intestate property if there is no residuary clause, even though a bequest had been given to the next of kin as his full share of testator's estate: Leopold v. Weaver, 9 App 379, 29 OCA 567 [motion to certify record overruled, Weaver v. Leopold, 16 OLR 465, 64 Bull 40].

257. The widow is not the next of kin of an adopted child: In re Raspold, 6 NP(NS) 172, 18 OD 396.

260. For the meaning of "nearest of kin" in a will, see Godfrey v. Epple, 100 OS 447, 126 NE 886, 11 ALR 317.

—Legal representatives

266. If a testator devises property to his sister and she dies before testator, leaving her husband surviving, her interest under the will lapses and does not pass to her husband: Hess v. American Bible Soc., 26 CC(NS) 439, 28 CD 172 [citing Norwood v. Mills, 3 OD(NP) 356].

Law controlling

272. Descent is governed by the law of the place where the land is situated: Jones v. Robinson, 27 OS 171; Jennings v. Jennings, 21 OS 56.

Vesting of estate and interest of heir

286. A testator devised certain lands to his daughter for life, with remainder after his death to her children, then unborn, forever, without otherwise disposing of the inheritance. It was held that the reversion in fee descended to and vested in the heirs of the testator at his death, subject, however, to divest in the event that the devisee for life should die, leaving children surviving her: Gilpin v. Williams, 25 OS 283.

288. The interest of beneficiaries to whom executory interests are given, which interests are to pass to the issue of such beneficiaries if such beneficiaries die before testator's widow, is said to be even more remote than the interest of heirs by descent during the lifetime of their ancestor: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370.

—Lien of debts of ancestor

See also case notes under RC §§ 2127.02, 2127.07.

296. The owners of the fee in land subject to sale by the executor to pay the debts of the estate have an interest in the subject of an action to recover damages for wrongful destruction of the market value of the premises, and in obtaining the relief demanded; and they may be joined with the executor as parties plaintiff under the provisions of GC § 11254 (RC § 2307.18). The amount recovered will be apportioned by the court among the different plaintiffs: Clark v. McClain Fire Brick Co., 100 OS 110, 125 NE 877.

298. Taxes upon real estate accruing after the death of the owner are a personal debt of the heirs, and where they have been paid by an administrator, he is entitled to retain the amount from funds in his hands belonging to the heirs, since the taxes are a lien upon the realty, and the administrator who has obtained an order for the sale of such realty to pay the debts of the decedent has a lien thereon: Warner v. York, 16 CC(NS) 369, 31 CD 535 [affirmed, without opinion, York v. Warner, 75 OS 595].

—Lien of debts of heir to ancestor

See now RC § 2105.05.2.

303. The indebtedness of the heir to the ancestor is to be deducted from his interest in the estate: Skinner v. Lehman, 6 O 430; Keever v. Hunter, 62 OS 616, 57 NE 454; Lambright v. Lambright, 74 OS 198, 78 NE 265; Tobias v. Richardson, 5 CC(NS) 74, 15 CD 81 [affirmed, without opinion, 72 OS 626]; Lockwood v. Whitlesey, 23 CC(NS) 241, 34 CD 219; In re Ellis, 5 NP 207, 5 OD 330. See also Martin v. Martin, 56 OS 333, 46 NE 981.

304. Debts owing by a devisee to testator are to be deducted even if such devisee dies before testator, and lapse is prevented only by GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52): Baker v. Carpenter, 69 OS 15, 68 NE 577.

305. If testator devises to his sons A and B in fee, subject to C's life estate, with a gift over to the children of either who may die before C, a debt due from A to testator cannot be deducted from the share of A's children, if A dies before C: Rings v. Borton, 108 OS 280, 140 NE 515.

306. A debt due from heir to ancestor has priority over a mortgage given by such heir to another creditor: Woodruff v. Woodruff, 3 CC(NS) 616, 13 CD 408 [reversing in part, Woodruff v. Snowden, 7 NP 520, 10 OD 123].

307. When the distributive share of a debtor heir is less than the amount which he owes to the estate, an action to quiet title may be maintained by the other heirs to the real estate, to remove any cloud upon the title through the claim of the debtor heir or anyone claiming under him: Lockwood v. Whitlesey 23 CC(NS) 241, 34 CD 219.

—Debt of ancestor to heir

For advancements, see RC § 2105.05.1.

313. Under a provision in a will requiring the executor to reject all claims presented by testator's children and providing that if one of such children should recover upon a claim against the estate, such claim should be deducted from his share, and the amount recovered by an assignee of one of such children must be deducted from the share of the assignor: Scheets v. Hunter, 56 OS 761, 46 NE 1116; sub nomine, Sheets v. Hunter, 37 Bull 283.

Pleading and evidence

318. Where a person mysteriously disappears and is not heard from, a legal presumption of his death does not arise until seven years from the date of his disappearance, and in the absence of any proof showing his death the property of an ancestor dying within the seven-year period will be presumed to have descended to such absent heir: Young v. Young, 10 App 351, 29 OCA 524 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 61, 63 Bull 184].

The text of former GC § 8574 (repealed, 114 v 320, § 1), together with annotations thereto, is reprinted below:

Sec. 8574. Order of descent when estate came by purchase. If the estate came not by descent, devise, or deed of gift, it shall descend and pass as follows:

1. To the children of the intestate and their legal representatives.

2. If there are no children, or their legal representatives, the estate shall pass to and be vested in the husband or wife, relict of such intestate.

3. If such intestate leaves no husband or wife, relict of himself or herself, the estate shall pass to the parents of such intestate and the survivor of such parents during the life of such parents and such survivor of them. If there are no such parents, or on the death of both of such parents, the estate shall pass to the brothers and sisters of the intestate of the whole blood, and their legal representatives.

4. If there are no brothers or sisters of the intestate of the whole blood, or their legal representatives, the estate shall pass to the brothers and sisters of the half blood, and their legal representatives.

5. If there are no children, husband or wife, relict of such intestate and no brothers or sisters of the intestate, or their legal representatives, at the time of the death of such intestate, the estate shall ascend to the father and mother equally; if one of them be dead, then to the other.

6. If the father and mother are dead, the estate shall pass to the next of kin, and their legal representative, to and of the blood of the intestate. (RS § 4159; S&S 305; S&C 502; 62 v 32, § 2; 108 v PtI 69; 110 v 13, 14.)

Scope and effect, 1 et seq

Scope and effect

1. This section is construed with GC §§ 8573, 8577, 8578 and 8579 (see now RC §§ 2105.06, 2105.01, 2105.10, 2105.07): Stembel v. Martin, 50 OS 495, 35 NE 208.

3. This section must be construed together with GC §§ 8581, 8582 and 8583 (see now RC §§ 2105.12, 2105.13): Treat v. Bessey, 1 App 125, 21 CC(NS) 241, 25 CD 366.

5. The statute of descents operates upon all intestate property, and the course which it indicates can be changed only by a testamentary disposition: Mathews v. Krisher, 59 OS 562, 53 NE 52 [followed, Oglesbee v. Miller, 111 OS 426].

6. This section provides for the descent of all realty which did not come to the intestate by descent, devise or deed of gift from an ancestor, for which provision is made by GC § 8573 (see now RC § 2105.06): Hostetler v. Peters, 94 OS 17, 113 NE 656 [following Brower v. Hunt, 18 OS 311].

7. At common law an heir was one who would inherit realty by right of blood; but modern statutes have enlarged the meaning of the word and it may, under provisions such as those of this section, include persons who are not of the blood of the intestate: Cultice v. Mills, 97 OS 112, 119 NE 200 [affirming judgment of court of appeals, which, on appeal, reached same conclusion as Mills v. Mills, 20 NP (NS) 501, 28 OD 382].

8. Will devising property to testator's wife for life and "at her death principal to revert to my children or their next nearest heirs" held to manifest an intention that title to property should not vest in children at his death; and hence neither the daughter who died before the widow nor her husband who survived the widow ever acquired any interest in the property; "next nearest heirs" referred solely to testator's children: Wells v. Gatch, 21 App 140, 152 NE 772.

9. A inherited real estate from his wife under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), and mortgaged the same and died intestate, seized of same, leaving personal estate sufficient to pay all his debts, including said mortgage; held, that said mortgage should be paid from the personal estate: Medina County Nat. Bank v. Foreman, 27 App 400, 161 NE 366.

Husband or wife relict—descent under statute

14. A widow having elected to take under the law, the gross amount which she will receive will be determined upon final distribution of the estate on the basis of her allowance and the net estate after payment of debts: In re Balliett, 18 OLA 41.

—Devise in lieu of distributive share, etc.

16. Where a testator, after making specific bequests, devises the residuum of his estate to his wife and by codicil devises to her a life estate in after-acquired property, without disposing of the remainder upon the termination of the life estate, the remainder passes to the wife under the residuary clause of the original will: Spriggs v. Fenner, 10 App 89.

17. It is said that at common law the widow is not endowed of any part of the personal estate of her husband; and that her right to a portion of the personal estate of her husband arises entirely by statute, has no existence apart from statute, and is not subject to any equitable interpretation: Seney v. Schroth, 25 CC (NS) 185, 35 CD 239.

—Contract as to descent

20. A husband and wife living together cannot alter their legal relations by a postnuptial agreement, contracting away the dower rights and distributive share provided for each of them under GC § 7995 (RC § 3103.01) et seq: DuBois v. Coen, 100 OS 17, 125 NE 121.

Brothers and sisters of whole blood and legal representatives

22. In partition suit, in which defendants claimed plaintiff was illegitimate and not of whole blood of deceased sister, and that defendants, as representatives of whole blood, were entitled under former GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06) to take property sought to be partitioned, burden was on defendants to prove illegitimacy of plaintiff, where it was admitted plaintiff was born during lawful wedlock: Harris v. Seabury, 30 App 42, 164 NE 121.

23. A testator who provides, "all the remainder of my estate I desire shall descend and pass according to the laws of inheritance of the state of Ohio," intends that the residue of his estate shall be distributed the same as the personal property of an intestate would be distributed, and where such testator left surviving him two nephews and one niece and children of two other nieces, the residue of his estate will be divided into five parts of which the two nephews and the niece will each get one-fifth, and each set of children of the deceased nieces one-fifth to be equally divided among them: Elliott v. Shaw, 15 NP (NS) 81, 23 OD 662, sub nomine, Lee v. Elliott, 58 Bull 321 (Ed.).

25. The phrase "next of kin" as used in this section refers to those persons who take intestate property under the statutes of descent and distribution: Schroth v. Noble, 91 OS 438, 110 NE 1067 [approving and following Steel v. Kurtz, 28 OS 191].

26. Each paragraph of this section must be read in connection with all other paragraphs for the purpose of determining who are next of kin of the blood of the intestate: Schroth v. Noble, 91 OS 438, 110 NE 1067.

27. The phrase "nearest of kin" when employed in a last will and testament, in the absence of language in the will manifesting a different intention, is to be so construed as to embrace within its meaning such as would inherit under the statutes of descent and distribution, and in the order and proportion therein provided: Godfrey v. Eppe, 100 OS 447, 126 NE 886, 11 ALR 317.

29. Under 1925 war risk insurance act, all unpaid insurance becomes assets of estate of insured on his death, and, in absence of will, passes to his heirs like other personalty: Ferneau v. Unckrich, 45 App 531, 187 NE 580, 39 OLR 220.

30. Upon the death of the beneficiary of a policy of war risk insurance, the fund representing the unpaid installments of such insurance must be paid to the estate of the insured soldier and, in case of his intestacy, distributed according to the law of descent and distribution in force at the date of his death: Sharp v. Edgar, 39 OLR 165 (App) [affirming Edgar v. Gray, 31 NP(NS) 164].

The text of former GC § 8575 (repealed, 114 v 320, § 1), together with annotations thereto, is reprinted below:

Sec. 8575. When real estate to pass to husband or wife; when to next of kin. When a person dies intestate, having title or right to any real estate or inheritance, as provided in section eighty-five hundred and seventy-three, and leaves husband or wife, relict of himself or herself and there is no person who, under the provisions of that section, would be entitled to inherit it, or an estate therein, save and except such husband or wife, relict of such intestate, then the estate shall pass to and vest in the husband or wife of the intestate as an estate of inheritance. If there is no such person, and no husband or wife relict of the intestate, then the estate shall pass to and vest in the next of kin of the intestate, though not of the blood of the ancestor from whom the estate came. (RS § 4160; S&S 306; 59 v 50, § 3.)

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 8575

1. As to the power of the legislature to add additional classes prior to escheat, and to make such legislation retroactive as against the state, see Lewis v. Eutsler, 4 OS 355.

2. This section provides only for cases in which there is a failure of persons who could take under GC §§ 8573 and 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), and it with its amendments provides additional classes of persons who may take before property will escheat: Lathrop v. Young, 25 OS 451.

3. This section is to be construed with GC §§ 8573, 8574 and 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.06, 2105.01, 2105.10): Ellis v. Ellis, 3 CC 186, 2 CD 105.

The text of former GC § 8576 (repealed, 114 v 320, § 1), together with annotations thereto, is reprinted below:

Sec. 8576. When real estate to pass to children of former husband or wife; when to escheat. When a person dies intestate, having title or right to any real estate or inheritance, whether by descent, devise, or deed of gift from an ancestor, or acquired, and there is no person entitled to inherit it under the next three preceding sections, then the estate shall pass to and vest in the children of any deceased husband or husbands, wife or wives, of the intestate, whose marriage with the intestate was not annulled prior to his, her, or their death, or their legal representatives. If there are no children, or their legal representatives, living, then the estate shall pass to the brothers and sisters of any such husband or wife, or their legal representatives; if there are no brothers and sisters, nor their legal representatives, the estate shall pass to the next of kin of such intestate; and if there are none such, then the estate shall escheat and be vested in the state of Ohio. (RS § 4161; S&S 306; S&C 502: 59 v 50, § 3.)

1. Former GC § 8576 (repealed, 114 v 320) does not relate to personal property: Center v. Kramer, 112 OS 269, 147 NE 602.

The text of former GC § 8578 (repealed, 114 v 320, § 1), together with annotations thereto, is reprinted below:

Sec. 8578. Distribution of personal estates. When a person dies intestate and leaves personal property, it shall be distributed in the order and manner following; saving, however, such rights as a widow or widower may have to any part of such personal property:

1. To the children of the intestate or their legal representatives.

2. If there are no children or their legal representatives, to the husband or wife relict of such intestate.

3. If such intestate leaves no husband or wife relict of himself or herself, one-half of such personal property shall be distributed to the father and mother of such intestate equally, or if one of them be dead then the entire one-half to the other; and one-half of such personal property shall be distributed to the brothers and sisters of the intestate of the whole blood or their legal representatives, or if there be no brothers or sisters of the whole blood or their legal representatives, then to the brothers and sisters of the half blood or their legal representatives. If such intestate leaves no parent surviving him, all of such personal property shall be distributed to such brothers and sisters of the whole blood or their legal representatives, or if there be no brothers or sisters of the whole blood or their legal representatives, then to the brothers and sisters of the half blood or their legal representatives.

4. If there are no children, husband or wife relict of such intestate, and no brothers or sisters of the intestate, whether of the whole or half blood or their legal representatives, such personal property shall be distributed to the father and mother equally, or if one of them be dead, then to the other.

5. If the father and mother are dead, such personal property shall be distributed to the next of kin or their legal representatives of the blood of the intestate.

The term "legal representative" as used herein shall be given the same meaning as under section 8574 of the General Code. (RS § 4163; S&S 307; S&C 502; 59 v 50, § 4; 84 v 132, 134; 86 v 86; 87 v 66; 111 v 32.)

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 8578

Proceeds of sale of realty

1. Realty which by these terms of testator's will is to be converted into money and distributed in that form, is personal property, and not realty: Ferguson v. Stuart, 14 O 140.

2. Such conversion does not make realty into personalty for the benefit of a surviving spouse who elects not to take under the will: Geiger v. Bitzer, 80 OS 65, 88 NE 134, 22 LRA(NS) 285 [overruling Hutchings v. Davis, 68 OS 160, which reversed In re Davis, 21 CC 720, 12 CD 29].

Refusal to take under will

10. The husband has absolute dominion over his personal property during his lifetime; and he may deprive his wife of her distributive interest in the same by a bona fide gift inter vivos. The fact that this gift was made in order to prevent his wife from receiving a distributive share of such personal property does not amount to a fraud upon her rights: Brodt v. Rannels, 7 NP 79, 9 OD 503.

Interest of surviving spouse

20. A gift of personal property by husband or wife, which is made to defraud the surviving spouse of the share of such personal estate which is given by law, and which is so made as to secure the use and control of such property to the donor during life, is fraudulent as against the claims of the surviving spouse and will be set aside: Ambler v. Boone, 3 App 87, 19 CC(NS) 281, 24 CD 512, 59 Bull 159 (Ed.).

Course of descent

30. The personal estate of an adopted child who dies intestate and leaves its natural mother, its adopting parents and children of the adopting parents surviving, was held in Upson v. Noble, 35 OS 655, to pass to the natural mother.

31. If the widow of an employee dies before an award has been made from the state insurance fund, her right is not destroyed thereby, but it passes to her legal representative in the absence of other dependents: Industrial Comm. v. Dell, 104 OS 389, 135 NE 669, 34 ALR 422; Whitmore v. Industrial Comm., 105 OS 295, 136 NE 910.

32. A bequest to A in case he should die leaving a child or children, such child or children to take A's share, refers to A's death before that of testator. If A dies after testator, and before such bequest has been paid, it should be paid to his executor: Phillips v. Cole, 11 App 431, 30 OCA 49.

[§ 2105.06.1] § 2105.061 Renunciation of interest in succession.

Any competent adult entitled to receive any right, title, or interest in any property through intestate succession as provided by section 2105.06 of the Revised Code, may renounce such interest by filing a written statement of renunciation with the probate court within sixty days after notice of the hearing on inventory of the intestate's property has been given as required by section 2115.16 of the Revised Code. Any property renounced pursuant to this section shall be distributed as provided by law as if such competent adult had predeceased such decedent.

CASE NOTES AND OAC

1. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction of an action to rescind a renunciation which has been properly filed with it: Wolfrum v. Wolfrum, 2 OS (2d) 237, 31 OO(2d) 501, 208 NE(2d) 537.

2. Cancellation by the probate court of a written renunciation of an interest in property through intestate succession, which was filed in that court under the provisions of this section, is governed by general equitable procedures and principles, as in an equitable action for rescission or cancellation of a written instrument by reason of the mistake of the person executing the instrument: In re Wolfrum, 120 App 379, 29 OO(2d) 244, 202 NE(2d) 631.

3. A devisee may disclaim the gift, and his creditors cannot charge it. Any unequivocal act of disclaimer, as by answer in a suit, will estop him: Wallace v. McMicken, 3 DecRep 174, 4 Gaz 165, 13 DecRep 345, 2 D 564.

4. The Ohio legislature has not enacted any statute recognizing the renunciation of nonprobate property such as joint tenancy with the right of survivorship: Krakoff v. United States, 439 F(2d) 1023, 58 OO(2d) 381, 31 OMisc 255 [see also 431 F(2d) 847, 57 OO(2d) 324].

[§ 2105.06.2] § 2105.062 [Election to receive mansion house.]

(A) The surviving spouse may elect to receive, as part of his share of the intestate estate under section 2105.06 of the Revised Code, the entire interest of the decedent spouse in the mansion house. The interest of the decedent spouse in the mansion house is valued at the appraised value with the deduction of that portion of all liens on the mansion house, existing at the time of death and attributable to the decedent's interest in the mansion house.

(B) The election pursuant to division (A) of this section shall be made at or before the time a final account is rendered.

(C) If the spouse makes an election pursuant to division (A) of this section, the administrator or executor shall file an application for a certificate of transfer as provided for in section 2113.61 of the Revised Code. The application shall also contain an inventory of the property that the spouse is entitled to receive under section 2105.06 of the Revised Code. If the value of the property the spouse is entitled to receive is equal to or greater than the value of the mansion house, the court shall issue the certificate of transfer.

(D) As used in this section, the mansion house includes the parcel of land on which the house is situated and, at the option of the surviving spouse, the household goods contained within the house and the lots or farm land adjacent to the house and used in conjunction with it as the home of the decedent.

Subject to the right of the surviving spouse to elect to receive the mansion house pursuant to section 2105.062 [2105.06.2] of the Revised Code, the specific monetary share payable to a surviving spouse under division (B) or (C) of section 2105.06 of the Revised Code shall be paid out of the tangible and intangible personal property in the estate to the extent that the personal property is available for distribution. The personal property distributed to the surviving spouse, other than cash, shall be valued at the appraised value.

Before tangible and intangible personal property is transferred to the surviving spouse in payment or part payment of the specific monetary share, the administrator or executor shall file an application that includes an inventory of the personal property intended to be distributed in kind to the surviving spouse, together with a statement of the appraised value of each item of personal property included. The court shall examine the application and make a finding of the amount of personal property to be distributed to the surviving spouse, and shall order that the personal property be distributed to the surviving spouse. The court concurrently shall make a finding of the amount of money that remains due and payable to the surviving spouse in satisfaction of the specific monetary share to which the surviving spouse is entitled under division (B) or (C) of section 2105.06 of the Revised Code. Any amount that remains due and payable shall be a charge on the title to any real property in the estate but the charge does not bear interest. This charge may be conveyed or released in the same manner as any other interest in real estate and may be enforced by foreclosure or any other appropriate remedy.

Except any real property the surviving spouse elects to receive under section 2105.062 [2105.06.2] of the Revised Code, the title to real property in the estate shall descend and pass in parcenary to those persons entitled to it under division (B) or (C) of section 2105.06 of the Revised Code, subject to the monetary charge of the surviving spouse. The administrator or executor shall file an application for a certificate of transfer as provided in section 2113.61 of the Revised Code. The application shall include a statement of the amount in money that remains due and payable to the surviving spouse as found by the court. The certificate of transfer ordered by the court shall recite that the title to the real property described in the certificate is subject to the charge in favor of the surviving spouse, and shall recite the value in dollars of the charge on the title to the real property included in the certificate of transfer.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. A person died intestate leaving personal property only, and leaving no spouse relict, no heirs at law or next of kin. It was held that such personal estate is vested in the state under former GC § 8579 (see now RC § 2105.07). (Children of the deceased wife by a former marriage claimed the property): Center v. Kramer, 112 OS 269, 147 NE 602.

2. It is clear from this section that it is only when property is held in the hands of an administrator of the estate of a person who dies leaving no heirs or next of kin and leaving no stepchildren or their lineal descendants, that the prosecuting attorney is authorized to collect such person's property, on behalf of the state: State ex rel Rich v. Page, 20 OO 155, 6 OSupp 104 (CP).

3. Distribution of escheated personal property to schools of a county, collected under former GC § 8579 (analogous to this section), is to be made as provided for the state common school fund under GC § 7600 (see now RC § 3315.32), as said section stands, when the money is paid into the county treasury: 1915 OAG vol.1, p.76.

4. Money received from escheated personal property should be credited to the contingent fund of the school district, when received under GC § 7603 (repealed, 120 v 475): 1915 OAG vol.1, p.76.

5. There is no provision of law authorizing the payment of interest by the county treasurer on funds paid to him as escheated but subsequently claimed by an heir: 1934 OAG No.2257.

6. Where the residue of the funds have been paid into the general fund of the county and it be made to appear to the satisfaction of the probate court that there is a living heir of the decedent, the court may, pursuant to GC § 11634 (RC § 2325.04) et seq, vacate the former order and order the funds paid to the heir: 1934 OAG No.2257.

7. Former GC § 8579 (see now RC § 2105.07) did not cause the title to a decedent's personal property to escheat to the state, when there was a living heir at the time of the demise, even though he may be unknown to the administrator at the time of the closing of the administration proceedings: 1934 OAG No. 2257.

§ 2105.08 Application of provisions relating to escheating estates. (GC § 10503-25)

Sections 2105.01 to 2105.21, inclusive, of the Revised Code apply to any escheating estate of which possession has not been taken, or which has not been collected by the proper officers of the state or those acting under their authority. Right or claim of the state thereto is hereby relinquished to the person who would have been entitled thereto had such sections been in force when the intestate died.

§ 2105.09 Disposition of escheated lands.

(A) The county auditor, unless he acts pursuant to division (C) of this section, shall take possession of real property escheated to the state that is located in his county and outside the incorporated area of a city. The auditor shall take possession in the name of the state and sell the property at public auction, at the county seat of the county, to the highest bidder, after having given thirty days' notice of the intended sale in some newspaper printed within the county.

On the application of the auditor, the court of common pleas shall appoint three disinterested freeholders of the county to appraise the real property. The freeholders shall be governed by the same rule as appraisers in sheriffs' or administrators' sales. The auditors shall sell the property at not less than two thirds of its appraised value and may sell it for cash, or for one third cash and the balance in equal annual payments, the deferred payments to be amply secured. Upon payment of the whole consideration, the auditor shall execute a deed to the purchaser, in the name and on behalf of the state. The proceeds of the sale shall be paid by the auditor to the county treasurer.

The treasurer shall pay the proceeds, not exceeding six hundred dollars in any case, to the regularly organized agricultural society within the county. The excess of the proceeds, or the whole thereof if there is no regularly organized agricultural society within the county, shall be paid to the treasurer of state for the use of the state agricultural fund.

(B) The legislative authority of a city within which are lands escheated to the state, unless it acts pursuant to division (C) of this section, shall take possession of the lands for the city, and the title to the lands shall vest in the city. The city shall use the premises primarily for health, welfare, or recreational purposes, or may lease them at such prices and for such purposes as it deems proper. With the approval of the commissioner of tax equalization, the city may sell the lands or any undivided interest in the lands, in the same manner as is provided in the sale of land not needed for any municipal purposes; provided that the net proceeds from the rent or sale of the premises shall be devoted to health, welfare, or recreational purposes.

(C) As an alternative to the procedure prescribed in divisions (A) and (B) of this section, the county auditor, or if the real property is located within the incorporated area of a city, the legislative authority of that city by an affirmative vote of at least a majority of its members, may request the probate court to direct the administrator or executor of the estate that contains the escheated property to commence an action in the probate court for authority to sell the real property in the manner provided in Chapter 2127. of the Revised Code. The proceeds from the sale of real property that is located outside the incorporated area of a city shall be distributed by the court in the same manner as the proceeds are distributed under division (A) of this section. The proceeds from the sale of real property that is located within the incorporated area of a city shall be distributed by the court in the same manner as the proceeds are distributed under division (B) of this section.

1. Where a husband and wife have each deposited money in a common fund in a financial institution with a stipulation that it is payable to either or the survivor, such funds, upon the death of the husband, pass to the surviving wife by virtue of the contract and not "by deed of gift" and, upon the death of the latter intestate, the distribution thereof is not governed and controlled by this section, commonly known as the half and half statute: Berberick v. Courtade, 137 OS 297, 18 OO 50, 28 NE(2d) 636.

2. The distributive share from the estate of a deceased spouse, taken in lieu of dower (GC § 10502-1 [RC § 2103.02]) and by presumed election to take under the statute of descent and distribution, does not pass to the estate of the relict by "descent" so as to be distributed, in case the relict dies intestate and without issue, under the "half and half" statute, this section: Miller v. Miller, 49 App 220, 3 OO 170, 197 NE 134 [affirmed, 129 OS 230].

3. Where the relict of a deceased spouse dies intestate without issue, possessed of property which came to such relict from her deceased spouse by descent, such property will descend partially to the heirs of the deceased spouse from and not through the relict of the deceased spouse pursuant to this section: Caldwell v. Tax Comm., 52 App 124, 6 OO 246, 3 NE(2d) 543.

4. The phrase "except for the intestate share of the surviving spouse, if any, of such relict" in this section, refers to the share a surviving spouse would take under the conditions set forth in the various paragraphs of GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06): Russell v. Roberts, 54 App 441, 8 OO 196, 7 NE(2d) 811.

5. In determining the intestate succession, "next of kin" as used in this section is computed by the rules of civil law, and in this respect the term "ancestor" is not limited to the ancestor from whom the estate came, but is used in a broader sense to include progenitor or progenitors, such as father and mother. The distinction between ancestral and nonancestral property was abolished with the adoption of the new probate code: Russell v. Roberts, 54 App 411, 8 OO 196, 7 NE(2d) 811.

6. To permit the next of kin of a deceased spouse to inherit property under this section, the so-called "half and half" statute, from the estate of such decedent's surviving spouse, who inherited property from the deceased spouse and who died without any lineal descendants or a surviving spouse, it must be the identical property that was inherited from such former deceased spouse: Knauss v. Knauss, 58 App 183, 12 OO 72, 16 NE(2d) 483.

7. Cousins are entitled to represent their deceased parents and inherit the share they would have inherited had they survived, notwithstanding surviving uncles and aunts of the intestate; and this rule applies although the property inherited came to the intestate from a deceased spouse: Ritter v. Ritter, 62 App 488, 14 OO 375, 24 NE(2d) 603.

8. By the use of the phrase "next of kin" in this section, the legislature did not intend to create an entirely different order of descent for property inherited from a deceased spouse, but only intended to provide for its equal division between the families of the deceased and surviving spouses: Ritter v. Ritter, 62 App 488, 14 OO 375, 24 NE(2d) 603.

9. Where, during her lifetime, a widow transferred the title to bonds, received from her deceased husband, to the treasurer of the political subdivision issuing them, agreeing to accept refunding bonds therefor, such refunding bonds, having been delivered after her death to the administrator of her estate, pass to her next of kin, under provisions of GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06), the contract right to the refunding bonds not being the "identical" property coming from the deceased husband within the meaning of this section: Speidel v. Schaller, 73 App 141, 28 OO 252, 55 NE(2d) 346.

10. A promissory note given by a surviving partner to the relict of his deceased partner in payment for the latter's interest in the partnership, is not identical property of such deceased coming to the relict and, at the death of the relict, does not pass, under this section (116 v 389), one-half to the heirs of the relict and one-half to the heirs of the deceased partner: Snyder v. Rowe, 73 App 518, 29 OO 166, 57 NE(2d) 153.

11. Money, received by a husband from the estate of his deceased wife and placed in a bank savings account in the husband's name, is, upon the husband's death, distributable to his heirs only, the money in the account not being the "identical" property so received by the husband, within the meaning of that word as used in this section: Kolthoff v. Kolthoff, 79 App 427, 35 OO 226, 74 NE(2d) 394.

12. A husband executed and delivered a deed to his wife conveying to her a life estate in a tract of real estate owned by him. Thereafter he died intestate, leaving his widow and one daughter, his only child and heir at law. The widow and the daughter entered into a written contract wherein, among other things, and for an adequate consideration, it was agreed that the daughter should "execute and deliver a full release and acquittance to the said Laura E. DeLay of her entire interest in said estate." Laura E. DeLay was the widow. She did not remarry and died intestate without issue. Upon the death of the original owner, one-half of the property so deeded vested in fee simple in the widow, and in it the daughter then had no interest and had nothing which she could convey. That one-half interest passed directly upon the death of the widow to the daughter from the widow under this section, and the title to that undivided one-half was then, and is, vested in the daughter: Roberts v. Jones, 86 App 328, 41 OO 372, 91 NE(2d) 817.

12.1 The term "identical property," as used in GC § 10503-5 (RC § 2105.10), and as applied to "real estate," means the corpus of the property and not the value or interest therein, and the corpus is determined by the legal title thereto: McMillan v. Krantz, 94 App 9, 51 OO 253, 114 NE(2d) 289.

12.2 Where a testator devises real estate in fee simple to a wife or husband relict, and the relict makes improvements thereon or leases the same but does not alter the chain of title, the corpus is not changed, and the property remains the "identical property" and passes as such under GC § 10503-5 (RC § 2105.10): McMillan v. Krantz, 94 App 9, 51 OO 253, 114 NE(2d) 289.

13. The legislature in the enactment of the "half and half" statute (this section) did not intend to give to the surviving spouse any lesser estate than is ordinarily given under the general statute of descent and distribution: Hammel v. Hammel, 2 OO 73 (PC).

14. Where a surviving spouse, who received real estate and bank deposits and other moneys from her deceased husband, sold the real estate and invested the proceeds, as well as the bank deposits and other moneys, in bonds which she possessed at the time of her death, and she died intestate and without issue, such bonds are not "property coming to her from her deceased husband," within the meaning of this section, regardless of the time when same were acquired by the widow: Cowan v. Campbell, 7 OO 445 (PC).

16. The term "brothers and sisters," as used in this section, includes brothers and sisters of the half blood as well as the whole blood: Oldiges v. Osborne, 11 OO 506 (PC).

17. The word "descent," as used in the half and half statute (this section), signifies the succession of intestate property: Fee v. Linthicum, 11 OO 568 (CP).

18. The property passing under this section is divided into two equal parts, half going to the relatives of the relict spouse and half to the relatives of the spouse from whom the property came: Schwaigert v. Vitzhum, 12 OO 114 (PC).

19. Each one-half is to be treated separately and distinct from the other, and the way in which the one-half is to be distributed to the brothers and sisters, or the next of kin of deceased brothers and sisters of the spouse from whom the estate came, is not affected by the degree of relationship to the intestate relict of those entitled to the other half; the converse is also true: Schwaigert v. Vitzhum, 12 OO 114 (PC).

20. Where an executor paid a sum of money to a testator's widow by a check drawn on his personal account, in which account he had deposited estate's funds, and the widow deposited sum in savings account together with other funds of her own, savings account did not come within operation of this section upon death of widow intestate: In re Hartzell, 26 OO 466 (PC).

21. The net income from the estate of a deceased husband after the death of the wife relict is not subject to the provisions of this section, but descends to her next of kin: Linton v. Williams, 25 OLA 659.

22. Where property passing to the widow from the estate of her deceased husband was in the form of checks drawn against one bank which were then deposited to her account in another, this section is inapplicable, upon her death, since the account in the second bank is not the "identical" property which passed from the husband's estate: Smith v. Unterburger, 86 App 237, 41 OO 135, 85 NE(2d) 304.

22.1 The expectation of an heir presumptive is not a vested right, and the laws of descent may be changed at the pleasure of the legislature as to all the estate not already vested; hence, where the property of a spouse relict is included in and governed by the provisions of this section, enacted as an amendment to GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10), prior to her death, the authority of the later section is not avoided by reason of the fact that, because of her taking under the law rather than under her husband's will, the provisions of GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) would have no application: In re Allen, 31 NP(NS) 151.

22.2 Property purchased by the relict with the property, or proceeds of property, received from a deceased consort is not identical property within meaning of this section: National Bank of Lima v. Allen, 65 OLA 27, 104 NE(2d) 469 (PC).

23. Ordinarily, shares of stock received as a stock dividend are, within the meaning of this section, part of the "identical . . . personal property" which had theretofore been the shares of stock upon which such stock dividend had been declared: Millar v. Mountcastle, 161 OS 409, 53 OO 333, 119 NE(2d) 626.

24. Although property purchased or acquired from the proceeds of other property is not the "identical . . . property" as such other property within the meaning of this section, a strict literal meaning will not be ascribed to the words "identical . . . property" as used in that statute: Millar v. Mountcastle, 161 OS 409, 53 OO 333, 119 NE(2d) 626.

25. A mere change in the evidence of ownership of property does not require the conclusion that such property is not the identical property which it was before such change: Millar v. Mountcastle, 161 OS 409, 53 OO 333, 119 NE(2d) 626.

26. Under this section where a relict spouse dies intestate without having remarried, leaving no surviving spouse or surviving issue and possessed of identical property which came to her under the will of her predeceased spouse, the son and only lineal descendant of the predeceased spouse takes from the relict spouse, his stepmother, and not through her and from the predeceased spouse, his father: In re Sherick, 167 OS 151, 4 OO(2d) 141, 146 NE(2d) 727.

27. One who takes under the half-and-half statute takes as an heir of the relict or surviving spouse and as such, under the provisions of RC § 2714.02, is a necessary party in an action to contest the will of such relict: Kluever v. Cleveland Trust Co., 173 OS 177, 18 OO(2d) 461, 180 NE(2d) 579.

28. One who would inherit, via the half and half statute, under an unprobated will has standing to contest a probated will: Wical v. Bernard, 26 OS(2d) 55, 55 OO(2d) 66, 269 NE(2d) 45.

29. Where testator died, bequeathing government bonds to his wife, which bonds matured during the widow's lifetime and were surrendered by her for a new issue of bonds, the bonds thus received in exchange by the widow and the bonds bequeathed to her by her husband are not such "identical" property as to come within the meaning of this section: Knauss v. Knauss, 58 App 183, 12 OO 72, 16 NE(2d) 483.

30. The provisions of this section are inapplicable where testatrix devised real estate to her husband for life and after his death to her grandson, and the husband having elected not to take under the will, subsequently died intestate: Fee v. Linthicum, 11 OO 568 (CP).

31. The fact that the will of the wife relict directs the executor to convert to cash the property of her deceased spouse does not constitute a change in the property by her, and this section is consequently applicable to property of the husband's estate undistributed until after the wife's death: Linton v. Williams, 25 OLA 659.

32. Where a person dies leaving no children or lineal descendants, and no parent, and his attempted will is set aside, his surviving spouse becomes immediately and absolutely the owner of shares of stock, free of any interest or right whatsoever of collateral heirs of decedent who had assigned their interest in the estate to the surviving spouse: Gabriel v. Southard, 29 OLA 369.

33. Where United States war savings bonds purchased by a husband out of his separate funds are issued to the purchaser and his wife as co-owners, and, upon the death of the husband, pass to the wife as surviving co-owner under the provisions of the bonds and the regulations of the United States treasury department, the descent of such bonds, upon the death of the wife possessed thereof, is not governed by this section, the so-called half-and-half statute: Lambert v. Lambert, 95 App 187, 53 OO 128, 118 NE(2d) 545.

34. Under such circumstances such bonds descend in accordance with GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06), and where the wife dies intestate leaving no heirs or next of kin, such bonds escheat to the state of Ohio: Lambert v. Lambert, 95 App 187, 53 OO 128, 118 NE(2d) 545.

35. Under the provisions of this section when the relict of a deceased husband or wife (1) dies intestate as to his or her whole estate, or any part thereof; (2) dies without issue; (3) is possessed of identical property which came to such relict from his or her deceased spouse by deed or gift, devise, bequest or descent, or by virtue of an election to take under the statute of descent and distribution; such property passes one-half to the line of descent of the spouse who first died: Muckerheide v. Zink, 1 OApp(2d) 76, 30 OO(2d) 103, 202 NE(2d) 725.

36. The word "children" appearing in RC § 2105.10, the half and half statute, means all children, both legitimate and illegitimate: Green v. Woodard, 40 OApp(2d) 101, 69 OO(2d) 130, 318 NE(2d) 397 (1974).

37. The acts of a guardian of an insane widow, the sole heir at law of her intestate husband, in converting assets from his estate into money and reinvesting same, not being required by law and not being approved by the court, are not for the benefit of the ward's estate, and therefore, under this section, the deceased husband's next of kin are, upon the widow's death intestate, entitled to share equally with the widow's next of kin in such reinvested portion of her estate which came to her by descent from her husband: In re Brown, 72 App 289, 27 OO 133, 51 NE (2d) 657.

39. Where a husband had a contract of deposit with a savings society or a bank which contract after his death was cancelled and the funds transferred into a new account with such savings society or bank in the name of his wife a new contract was created, the "identical" property left by the husband ceased to exist and a new property came into being, and when such wife died intestate the contract which she owned was not the "identical" property which she had received from her husband and thus did not pass under the half and half statute: Surso v. Lucak, 68 OLA 252, 113 NE(2d) 388 (App).

43. Where mortgaged real estate is devised by a decedent to his surviving spouse, who pays the mortgage debt out of her personal funds and later dies intestate and without issue, such payment was a voluntary one, neither the surviving spouse nor her estate can be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee, and under this section such real estate passes to the children of the devisor, or to the next of kin of deceased children, free of such claim. In such case the children or next of kin of deceased children inherit from the last surviving spouse and not from the decedent from whom the property was devised: Ratchford v. Fravel, 4 OO 197 (PC).

49. Where stocks and bonds are part of an intestate widow's estate, and there is no evidence that such personalty had been given by the deceased husband to the widow by deed or gift or otherwise, their next of kin share such property equally, under provisions of this section, any effective transfer of title satisfying the requirement of "deed of gift" of such statute, and there being, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, a presumption of "gift": Speidel v. Schaller, 73 App 141, 28 OO 252, 55 NE(2d) 346.

54. When the relict of a deceased husband dies intestate and without issue, the proceeds of the husband's insurance policy of which she was beneficiary, the proceeds from the partition sale representing her interest in the property, and the widow's exemption and the year's allowance granted by GC §§ 10509-54 and 10509-74 (RC §§ 2115.13, 2117.20), do not pass to the estate of the relict by "descent" so as to be distributed under the "half and half" statute, this section: Miller v. Miller, 49 App 220, 3 OO 170, 197 NE 134 [affirmed, 129 OS 230].

55. In construing this section, and the meaning of the words "except for the intestate share of the surviving spouse," this section and GC §§ 10503-4 and 10504-61 (RC §§ 2105.06, 2107.42) must be construed together in order to give full effect and a reasonable interpretation to all such provisions: Hammel v. Hammel, 2 OO 73 (PC).

56. Since the "half-and-half" statute and the statute relating to the disposition of property of a person dying intestate are part of the chapter of descent and distribution neither section has priority over the other and both sections must be considered (RC §§ 2105.06, 2105.10): Bussell v. Cline, 10 OO(2d) 481, 161 NE(2d) 655 (CP).

57. Where the surviving spouse died intestate within two weeks of the date of death of her deceased spouse, without having remarried and without issue, seized of the identical property which was conveyed to her by her deceased spouse nearly four years prior to his death, the half and half statute, rather than the simultaneous death statute (RC § 2105.21), is applicable: Battista v. Feihl, 23 OO (2d) 252, 191 NE(2d) 597 (PC).

58. Where the real estate which the relict spouse possessed at her death did not come to her from her deceased spouse, but came to her from a third person, and the devise made by the wife to her husband lapsed because he predeceased her, the property will not be distributed under the provisions of this section: Muckerheide v. Zink, 30 OO(2d) 512, 206 NE (2d) 436 (PC).

59. The term "identical property," as used in this section, and as applied to "real estate," means the corpus of the property and not the value of interest therein: Slisz v. Slisz, 32 OO(2d) 329, 3 OMisc 93, 207 NE(2d) 807 (PC).

60. Where the decedent had received by devise from a deceased spouse an undivided one-half interest in real property in which the decedent had been a purchaser of the other undivided one-half interest, and later conveyed an undivided one-half interest therein to the spouse who survived him, one-half of the undivided one-half interest which the decedent owned at his death passes under this section: Slisz v. Slisz, 32 OO(2d) 329, 3 OMisc 93, 207 NE(2d) 807 (PC).

61. Where a widow preferred to take property devised to her rather than to sell part of it and, as executrix, pay to herself as an individual her claims against her husband's estate, she thereby waived such claims, and upon her death such claims are not a lien against property passing pursuant to the "half-and-half" statute to a child of her deceased husband: Chupp v. Tomas, 36 OO(2d) 317, 7 OMisc 204, 216 NE(2d) 658 (PC).

62. When a relict of a deceased husband or wife dies intestate and without surviving issue or spouse, possessed of identical real estate which came to such relict from the deceased spouse by devise, such real estate shall pass to and vest in the children of the deceased spouse from whom such real estate came: Chupp v. Tomas, 36 OO(2d) 317, 7 OMisc 204, 216 NE(2d) 658 (PC).

63. It is the corpus or title which determines whether property is the identical property which comes to a relict from a deceased spouse within the meaning of this section, and the fact that such relict tore down existing structures and erected new ones on real property does not change the identity of property within the meaning of this section relating to the descent of identical property: In re Duswald, 87 OLA 412, 180 NE(2d) 307 (PC).

64. Where a deceased spouse has bequeathed 1,350 five-dollar par value shares of corporate stock in his relict, and thereafter the corporation amends its articles of incorporation so as to increase the authorized number of its five-dollar par value shares from 250,000 to 750,000 and pursuant to appropriate corporate action distributes to each shareholder certificates for two additional shares of five-dollar par value stock for each share theretofore held so that the relict receives a stock dividend of 2,700 five-dollar par value shares on the 1,350 shares which she had theretofore held, the total of 4,050 of such shares thereafter held by the relict is, within the meaning of this section, the identical personal property received from her deceased spouse: Millar v. Mountcastle, 161 OS 409, 53 OO 333, 119 NE(2d) 626.

Relict

1. The words "relict of a deceased husband or wife," as used in this section, are used to designate the relationship to a former married pair of the survivor of a marriage union; and such relationship is not destroyed or changed by the subsequent marriage of such survivor: Spitler v. Heeter, 42 OS 100.

Property and title of relict thereto—descent

6. The relict of a deceased husband or wife, who leaves a will bequeathing a life estate only, permitting the fee to go where the statute sends it, dies intestate as to the real estate inherited from such deceased husband or wife, and in consequence the title to such real estate passes under the provisions of this section and not under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06): Goff v. Moore, 3 App 170, 20 CC(NS) 224, 26 CD 587 [on appeal from 11 NP(NS) 543, 24 OD 552; and affirmed, Gregg v. Keener, 91 OS 406].

7. Devisee, under devise requiring payment of legacies made lien on devised property, took property by devise and not by purchase though paying legacies: Will v. Will, 36 App 15, 172 NE 669.

9. For a case where property should be partitioned among the parties under former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) as property which came to a wife from her husband, see Hilty v. Gilbert, 115 OS 134, 152 NE 299.

10. Where the property in a lapsed devise came to testator from a former deceased wife, within GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10), and the testator dies without issue, and there are no children of such deceased husband or wife, such property descends under GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Foreman v. Medina County Nat. Bank, 119 OS 17, 162 NE 42.

11. A made a will giving all of his property to his wife; ten years later the wife died, and two years thereafter A died without revoking said will; held, that A died "intestate" within GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Medina County Nat. Bank v. Foreman, 27 App 400, 161 NE 366.

12. A wife who by the death of her husband without issue became the owner in fee of an entire parcel, previously jointly owned by purchase, subsequently deeded one-half of parcel to her second husband, without designating which half, and later died without issue; it must be inferred that she died the owner of the half acquired from first husband, the descent of which will be controlled by GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Babjak v. Ivanik, 27 NP (NS) 477.

13. When corporate stock, which is bequeathed to a relict by her deceased spouse, is surrendered by the relict to the corporation issuing it, for which, upon merger with another corporation, new stock is issued, such stock is not distributable, upon the death of the relict intestate and without issue, in accordance with the provisions of former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Murphy v. Niehus, 50 App 299, 4 OO 42, 198 NE 197.

—Deed of gift

18. The recital of pecuniary consideration in deed from ancestor to heir cannot be varied or explained for the purpose of changing line of descent of property conveyed: Lee v. Fike, 28 App 283, 162 NE 682.

19. The expression in a deed from husband to wife "of valuable consideration" is conclusive as to the character of the property for the purpose of this section; and the line of descent cannot be changed by showing by oral evidence that the deed was in fact a gift: Ossman v. Schmitz, 4 CC(NS) 502, 14 CD 709; see also Nave v. Marshall, 6 NP 488, 9 OD 415.

20. Where a husband conveys real estate to a trustee to hold for the benefit of the wife of the grantor and the trustee upon the same date and for a nominal consideration conveys the property to the wife without describing himself as trustee, the property so conveyed to the wife is acquired by her by purchase and not by deed of gift: Lower v. Gardner, 22 CC(NS) 385, 33 CD 623.

22. Land which is conveyed by a husband to his wife through a trustee descends as land coming by purchase: Sullivan v. Corrigan, 6 NP(NS) 606, 18 OD 832.

23. If a husband conveys realty to his wife by deed of gift, and she dies without children or their representatives, and such realty descends to him under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), such realty is either not subject to the provisions of this section, or if subject thereto, is nevertheless encumbered by the lien of the husband's debts: Gosling v. Rupp, 7 NP 185, 6 OD 345.

—Legal and equitable interests

28. The rule which prevails as to real property, that descent follows the legal title, does not apply to personal property; and, where the owner of personal property, intending and desiring that it shall descend, upon the death of such owner, according to the provisions of this section, mingles the same in a common fund with property which is specifically within the terms of this section, and makes a partial distribution in accordance with such intention and desire, such fund is impressed with a trust that it shall so descend, and upon the death of the owner, such fund will descend according to the provisions of this section: Bruer v. Johnson, 64 OS 7, 59 NE 741.

29. In construing this section, the rights of the parties involved are to be determined by the legal title and their legal status, and not by principles of equity. The surviving spouse takes an absolute interest and not an interest as trustee; and, accordingly, may change the character of the property so as to prevent its descent from being controlled by this section: Digby v. Digby, 5 CC(NS) 130, 16 CD 417.

30. Money received by a widow for the sale of oil from land derived by her from her deceased husband, is not identical with the land, and upon distribution after her death is not to be controlled by the provisions of this section: Digby v. Digby, 5 CC(NS) 130, 16 CD 417. Contra: That the proceeds of personal property follow the same course of descent under this section that the original personal property would have followed: In re McDermott, 13 OD(NP) 390.

—Insurance

36. If insurance is taken out by the husband for the use and benefit of his wife and children by her, upon the death of the wife, after the death of the husband, but before payment of the insurance, there being no surviving living issue of the marriage, the insurance belongs to the next of kin of the wife, to the exclusion of children of the husband by a former marriage: Lounsberry v. Richardson, 1 OSU 470, 36 Bull 59.

37. Life insurance effected by a husband for the benefit of his wife does not pass by deed of gift to her; and the descent of the proceeds thereof is accordingly not controlled by this section: Richardson v. Michener, 11 DecRep 830, 30 Bull 120.

Course of descent from relict

42. Property which passes from one spouse to another under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06) is not ancestral property in the hands of the survivor: Brower v. Hunt, 18 OS 311; Gazlay v. Gosling, 25 CC(NS) 185, 35 CD 239.

43. If a husband or wife dies intestate, and without issue, seized of nonancestral real estate or of personal property, such property descends to the relict of such husband or wife under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06); and if, on the death of such relict without issue and intestate, seized of such property, it descends under this section half to the brothers and sisters of the whole blood of the former deceased husband or wife, or their representatives, if there be such, and the other half to the brothers and sisters of the deceased relict, or their representatives, in the like order. Such has been the course of descent in such cases since the supplementary act of April 11, 1877 (74 v 81): Stembel v. Martin, 50 OS 495, 35 NE 208 [reversing Stone v. Doster, 7 CC 8, 3 CD 637, and affirming Martin v. Falconer, 5 CC 584, 3 CD 286].

44. If, on the death of the relict, there are no brothers or sisters of her deceased husband or their legal representatives, property which she received from her deceased husband by deed of gift, devise, bequest or descent, descends to her surviving brothers and sisters to the exclusion of the more remote relation of the husband: Ellis v. Ellis, 3 CC 186, 2 CD 105.

45. A wife without children died leaving a will whereby she devised the income of her real estate for five years to her husband and provided that at the end of the five years said real estate should become his in absolute ownership. The husband died within the five years. It was held that said real estate descended to the heirs of the husband: Holmden v. Craig, 16 CC(NS) 157, 31 CD 461 [affirmed, without opinion, 83 OS 483].

46. If a widow dies leaving property which came to her from her deceased husband, one-half thereof is to be paid to the brother of such deceased husband in accordance with the provisions of this section, and the rest is to be paid to the next of kin of the wife, in accordance with the provisions of GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), as thus defined; since GC § 8576 (repealed, 114 v 320) by its terms applies only where there is no person entitled to inherit it under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06): Champlin v. Walsh, 26 CC(NS) 460, sub nomine, Champlain v. Walsh, 27 CD 534.

47. Property which passes to a surviving spouse by reason of refusal to take under the will is not subject to this section: Seney v. Schroth, 25 CC(NS) 185, 35 CD 239.

48. Personal property which did not come to a widow by deed of gift, devise or bequest or under the provisions of GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), does not pass on distribution of her estate, under GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Paul v. Brown, 29 OCA 396, 35 CD 610 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 344, 63 Bull 438].

49. In the statutes of descent, the words "legal representatives" generally mean "lineal descendants"; but under GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10), in order to effectuate the intent of the legislature, the words have the meaning of "heirs at law" or "next of kin" of such brothers and sisters: Larkins v. Routson, 115 OS 639, 155 NE 227.

50. Where husband and wife die intestate, the property going to their brothers and sisters, under former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10), should not be held to be confused and commingled by application of former GC § 8581 (see now RC § 2105.12) providing for descent at the death of such brothers and sisters: MacMahon v. MacMahon, 3 OLA 668.

51. The term "legal representatives" is said to be an indefinite term, and to include lineal descendants of the brothers and sisters referred to, but not the collateral representatives, such as uncles, aunts or cousins: Thomas v. Lett, 4 NP 393, 6 OD 429.

52. The real estate of a deceased wife upon her death without issue, who has title to such real estate from a former deceased husband, passes to and descends, under this section, one-half to the brothers and sisters of such wife and one-half to the brothers and sisters of the deceased husband, subject to the dower interest of the second surviving husband. Such surviving husband does not receive a life estate under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06): Fay v. Scott, 14 NP(NS) 241, 23 OD 464.

54. Under this section the heirs of the husband have no equities superior to those of the heirs of the wife: Marshall v. Bash, 17 NP(NS) 428, 26 OD 446.

55. If a deceased spouse owns an undivided interest in ancestral realty, and has purchased another undivided interest therein, a quitclaim to the surviving spouse by the heirs of the deceased spouse, which does not describe the share for which such quitclaim is given, does not estop the grantors from claiming by descent in such ancestral interest on the death, intestate, of such surviving spouse: Newton v. Harris, 21 NP(NS) 329, 29 OD 251.

56. Money deposited by an employee in a savings department conducted by his employer, out of his earnings, which he makes payable to his wife on his death, passes to her by gift; and on her death intestate, such fund is to be divided between her brother and sisters and his: Burke v. Walthebillig, 24 NP(NS) 277.

57. Where a person acquired title to realty under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), died intestate and seized of said realty, an heir designated under GC § 8598 (see now RC § 2105.15) inherits; and the deceased cannot be said to have died "without issue": Cochrel v. Robinson, 113 OS 526, 149 NE 871.

58. General Code § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) governs and controls the disposition of only such property as had come to intestate from a former deceased husband or wife; property thereafter acquired by purchase, though with proceeds of property which had come from former deceased husband or wife, is not within that section or distributable in accordance therewith: Guear v. Stechschulte, 119 OS 1, 162 NE 46.

59. General Code § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) applies only to the identical property which comes to an intestate from a former deceased husband or wife, and does not apply to property purchased with proceeds, or increase or accumulations thereof: Wilson v. Eccles, 119 OS 184, 162 NE 797.

60. The real estate in a lapsed devise, which came to testatrix by devise from her deceased husband, descends under GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) (the testatrix having left no issue) half to brothers and sisters of testatrix, and half to brothers and sisters of deceased husband: Bishop v. Jones, 29 OLR 48.

61. Personal property received by wife upon death of husband descended, at her death, one-half to her next of kin and one-half to husband's (GC § 8577 [see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10]); GC § 8578 (see now RC § 2105.06) is inapplicable, even when the property had been turned into money by administrator of husband: Halterman v. Wilt, 34 App 150, 170 NE 176.

63. Sister of deceased husband who had title by purchase has interest in property only in event widow died intestate, without children or their legal representatives, and in possession of identical property which came to widow from husband (GC § 8577 [see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10]): Berndt v. Lusher, 40 App 172, 178 NE 14.

64. A child, legally adopted, is within the meaning of the word "issue" in GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Miller v. Shepard, 29 App 22, 162 NE 788.

65. Realty devised to husband by second wife, on husband's death intestate without issue, held to descend to surviving child of deceased second wife by former husband (GC § 8577 [see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10]): McColm v. Orebaugh, 40 App 238, 178 NE 280.

66. Term "issue" in statute providing for distribution of property when relict of deceased husband or wife dies intestate and without issue, possessed of property received from deceased spouse, includes issue of other marriages: Garver v. Garver, 45 App 22, 184 NE 761.

When a person dies intestate leaving children and none of the children of such intestate have died leaving children or their lineal descendants, such estate shall descend to the children of such intestate, living at the time of his death, in equal proportions.

HISTORY: GC § 10503-6; 114 v 320 (340). Eff 10-1-53. For an analogous section, see former GC § 8580.

remote from the intestate such equal and common degree of consanguinity may be.

1. This section, and the case law thereunder, are controlled by the new and special provisions contained in GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06); hence, where there are no grandparents, the lineal descendants of such grandparents take per stirpes and not per capita, the grandparents being the stock or root: Shearer v. Gasstman, 31 NP(NS) 219.

2. Under the provisions of this section and GC §§ 10503-4, 10503-8 and 10503-9 (RC §§ 2105.06 and 2105.13), which must be read in pari materia, nephews and nieces of a decedent who left no other nearer of kin surviving, take per capita, and the descendants of deceased nephews and nieces take per stirpes: Stocker v. Tranter, 31 NP(NS) 467; Schwaigert v. Vitzhum, 26 OLA 442.

3. The rule with reference to distribution per capita and per stirpes which obtained in Ohio at common law and equity prior to this statute was not changed thereby: Ewers v. Follin, 9 OS 326; Dutoit v. Doyle, 16 OS 400; Parsons v. Parsons, 52 OS 470, 40 NE 165.

5. This section applies to collateral heirs as well as to lineal descendants: Ewers v. Follin, 9 OS 327; Goff v. Disbennet, 14 CC(NS) 557, 23 CD 234.

6. This section provides that when all the descendants of an intestate are of an equal degree of consanguinity they take equally: Snodgrass v. Bedell, 134 OS 311, 12 OO 103, 16 NE(2d) 463.

7. Since the amendment of GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06) is so irreconcilably in conflict with this section that the two sections cannot be harmonized in order to effect the purpose of the amendment, the amendment operates as an implied repeal of this section to the extent of the irreconcilable inconsistency: Ryan v. Dixon, 12 OO 185 (PC).

8. Property which passed by devise to be distributed among all heirs of testator or some other person is to be distributed per stirpes in the absence of words showing a contrary intention: Eichenlaub v. Heschang, 5 NP(NS) 367, 18 OD 47.

9. A will giving property to life tenant, with remainder at her death to issue of her body then living, required distribution per stirpes among living children and children of deceased child (former GC § 8581 [see now RC § 2105.12] et seq): Watson v. Watson, 34 App 311, 171 NE 257.

10. The language of the will may show a contrary intention, as where testator directs that certain property be divided equally among the heirs, in which case a distribution per capita is to be required: Huston v. Crook, 38 OS 328; McKelvey v. McKelvey, 43 OS 213, 1 NE 594; Mooney v. Purpus, 70 OS 57, 70 NE 894.

11. Under a provision in a will, "I give and devise to the children of A, and the children of B, and C, all said children being my grandchildren, the following real estate, to-wit: [Description of property], to have and to hold the same for the said grandchildren, their heirs and assigns forever," a distribution per capita, rather than a distribution per stirpes, will be presumed to have been intended by the testator, since the law favors equality rather than inequality; and if A has two children and B and C have twelve children, each of such grandchildren will take one-fourteenth of the estate: Broermann v. Kessling, 6 App 7, 28 OCA 321, 30 CD 103.

12. Where husband and wife die intestate, the property going to their brothers and sisters, under former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10), should not be held to be confused and commingled by application of former GC § 8581 (see now RC § 2105.12) providing for descent at the death of such brothers and sisters: MacMahon v. MacMahon, 3 OLA 668.

13. Where the heirs of the intestate consist of lineal descendants of both the paternal and maternal grandparents, even though such heirs are on an equal degree of consanguinity to the intestate, the estate will be divided in halves, in accordance with RC § 2105.06: Reimer v. Finnegan, 32 OO 391, (PC); In re Stephenson, 48 OLA 624 (PC).

15. Where an intestate leaves property acquired by purchase, with no heirs except nephews and nieces, children of different brothers and sisters, title is cast upon such nephews and nieces as a class, and they therefore take per capita and not per stirpes: Goff v. Disbennet, 14 CC(NS) 557, 23 CD 234.

18. Under former GC § 8581 (see now RC § 2105.12) all descendants must be in a direct line of descent and of an equal degree of consanguinity. Hence this section is not applicable to nephews and nieces; and they take per stirpes, if children of different brothers and sisters: Newton v. Harris, 21 NP(NS) 329, 29 OD 251 [heirs of wife, inheriting on death of husband, under former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10)].

19. Under former GC § 8581 (see now RC § 2105.12), where devise reverted, title vested in deceased's then heirs, and not as representatives of heirs living at time of her death, and being of equal consanguinity, they take per capita: Harvard College v. Jewett, 11 F(2d) 119.

§ 2105.13 Descent when children and heirs of deceased children are living. (GC §§ 10503-8, 10503-9)

If some of the children of an intestate are living and others are dead, the estate shall descend to the children who are living and to the lineal descendants of such children as are dead, so that each child who is living will inherit the share to which he would have been entitled if all the children of the intestate were living, and the lineal descendants of the deceased child will inherit equal parts of that portion of the estate to which such deceased child would be entitled if he were living.

This section shall apply in all cases in which the descendants of the intestate, not more remote than lineal descendants of grandparents, entitled to share in the estate, are of unequal degree of consanguinity to the intestate, so that those who are of the nearest degree of consanguinity will take the share to which they would have been entitled, had all the descendants in the same degree of consanguinity with them who died leaving issue, been living.

1. This 'section, together with former GC §§ 8581, 8583 (see now RC §§ 2105.12, 2105.13) and former GC § 8584 (re-enacted as GC § 10503-10, repealed in 123 v 202 [206]), do not change the rules with reference to distribution or representation in force in Ohio: Ewers v. Follin, 9 OS 326; Dutoit v. Doyle, 16 OS 400; Parsons v. Parsons, 52 OS 470, 40 NE 165.

2. Under this section if the testator dies, leaving some children surviving, while other children have died before him leaving children, the surviving grandchildren, children of the predecedents, take per stirpes. Accordingly, if an owner of property dies intestate, leaving six living children, two other children having previously died, one leaving a family of three children and the other five, these eight grandchildren are not entitled to participate equally in the partition of lands descending from the intestate, but the three of one family are entitled each to one twenty-fourth part of the premises, and the five of the other family are entitled each to the one-fortieth part only: Dutoit v. Doyle, 16 OS 400; see also Stone v. Doster, 7 CC 8, 3 CD 637 [affirmed in 50 OS 495].

3. In the partition of the lands of an intestate among his children and the children of a deceased son, the portion which the latter inherit should be charged with an advancement made to their father by such intestate: Parsons v. Parsons, 52 OS 470, 40 NE 165 [see now RC § 2105.05 et seq].

4. In a will which devised one-half of an estate to the lawful heirs of the testator and one-half to the lawful heirs of his wife, after the death of his only son without issue, and which contained specific provisions as to the disposition of the shares of his sister (if she should survive the testator) and of the sister and brother of his wife, the persons included in the designation "lawful heirs" to whom "my estate shall go," are to be ascertained as of the date of the death of the testator or his wife respectively per stirpes, the representatives of deceased brothers and sisters to take the share that would have gone to their ancestor if living, except where the will itself otherwise provides: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [affirming on rehearing Miller v. Miller, 15 CC (NS) 481, 24 CD 43; which was modified in memorandum opinion, Wilberding v. Miller, 88 OS 609, and was on appeal from Miller v. Miller, 13 NP (NS) 1].

5. Under GC § 10503-8 (RC § 2105.13), if some of the descendants of an intestate are living and others are dead, leaving children, those living take the same per capita share to which they would be entitled if all were living, and the lineal descendants of those deceased take per stirpes: Snodgrass v. Bedell, 134 OS 311, 12 OO 103, 16 NE(2d) 463.

6. Where those entitled to share in an estate are nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews of the intestate, the nieces and nephews take equally, per capita, according to the total number of nieces and nephews whether surviving or not, and the grandnieces and grandnephews take per stirpes or by representation the shares of their deceased parents: Kincaid v. Cronin, 61 App 300, 15 OO 198, 22 NE(2d) 576.

7. The only purpose of the legislature in amending GC § 10503-9 (RC § 2105.13) was to make it conform to the correction made in the amendment to subsec. 8 of GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06): Ryan v. Dixon, 12 OO 185 (PC).

8. If realty which has descended from one spouse to another, passes on the death of the latter intestate, half to his heirs and half to hers, such relatives are not heirs of the surviving spouse, and therefore stand in unequal relationship to him, and they take per stirpes and not per capita: Newton v. Harris, 21 NP (NS) 329, 29 OD 251.

9. Nieces and nephews of an intestate decedent are subject to having a debt of their father, who predeceased the decedent, set off against their distributable share, when decedent has a brother and sister still living, in view of the provisions of this section, that "the lineal descendants of the deceased child will inherit equal parts of that portion of the estate to which such deceased child would be entitled if he were living": Gruhler v. Hossapaus, 93 OLA 71, 195 NE(2d) 387 (PC).

10. A testator who provides, "all the remainder of my estate I desire shall descend and pass according to the laws of inheritance of the state of Ohio," intends that the residue of his estate shall be distributed the same as the personal property of an intestate would be distributed; and where such testator left surviving him two nephews and one niece and children of two other nieces, the residue of his estate will be divided in five parts of which the two nephews and the niece will each get one-fifth, and each set of children of the deceased nieces one-fifth to be equally divided among them: Elliott v. Shaw, 15 NP(NS) 81, 23 OD 662, sub nomine, Lee v. Elliott, 58 Bull 321 (Ed).

§ 2105.14 Posthumous child to inherit. (GC § 10503-16)

Descendants of an intestate begotten before his death, but born thereafter, in all cases will inherit as if born in the lifetime of the intestate and surviving him; but in no other case can a person inherit unless living at the time of the death of the intestate.

§ 2105.15 Designation of heir at law. (GC § 10503-12)

A person of sound mind and memory may appear before the probate judge of his county and in the presence of such judge and two disinterested persons of such person's acquaintance, file a written declaration declaring that, as his free and voluntary act, he did designate and appoint another, stating the name and place of residence of such person specifically, to stand toward him in the relation of an heir at law in the event of his death. Such declaration must be attested by the two disinterested persons and subscribed by the declarant. If satisfied that such declarant is of sound mind and memory and free from restraint, the judge thereupon shall enter that fact upon his journal and make a complete record of such proceedings. Thenceforward the person designated will stand in the same relation, for all purposes, to such declarant as he could if a child born in lawful wedlock. The rules of inheritance will be the same between him and the relations by blood of the declarant, as if so born. A certified copy of such record will be prima-facie evidence of the fact stated therein, and conclusive evidence, unless impeached for actual fraud or undue influence. After a lapse of one year from the date of such designation, such declarant may have such designation vacated or changed by filing in said probate court an application to vacate or change such designation of heir; provided, that there is compliance with the procedure, conditions, and prerequisites required in the making of the original declaration.

HISTORY: GC § 10503.12; 114 v 320 (341); 118 v 406, § 1. Eff 10-1-53. For an analogous section, see former GC § 8598.

This section was amended, effective Aug. 28, 1939, (118 v 406) by adding the last sentence.

Since, formerly, an adult could not be adopted in Ohio, a provision was made for accomplishing the same end by designating a person as heir. When this is done properly in the probate court, the person thus designated "will stand in the same relation, for all purposes, to such declarant as he or she could, if a child born in lawful wedlock." "The rules of inheritance will be the same, between him and the relations by blood of the declarant, as if so born." The phrase "heir at law" is also used in the statute. Cases which concern an heir so designated have arisen mainly over the interpretation of the phrases, "heir at law," "as a child born in lawful wedlock," "issue," etc.

1. This section is constitutional, and it cannot be said that it deprives the prospective heirs of any right if they had no vested right in the property at the time of the designation: Davis v. Laws, 27 NP(NS) 185 [affirmed, 34 App 157, 170 NE 601].

3. In giving effect to this section, it is not essential that the declaration be made in open court, nor that it be made in any particular place. Such declaration may be made before a judge of the probate court within his county at a place other than the office of said court: Bird v. Young, 56 OS 210, 46 NE 819.

4. The entry which the statute requires the judge to make upon his journal and the record of the proceedings do not constitute a judgment, and it is not essential to the validity of the proceedings that the order for such entry be made by the court. It is sufficient if it be made by the judge: Bird v. Young, 56 OS 210, 46 NE 819.

5. One, not of the blood of the testator, who has been designated an heir under favor of this section, is not issue of the body of such testator within the meaning of former GC § 10504 (repealed, 114 v 320). Hence bequests in the will to benevolent, religious, educational or charitable purposes, are not rendered invalid, as respects such heir, by reason of the fact that the will was executed within one year of the decease of the testator: Theobald v. Fugman, 64 OS 473, 60 NE 606 [reversing Fugman v. Theobald, 3 NP 65, 4 OD 65].

6. This section does not render invalid and inoperative a provision in a will which provides "I hereby make my two granddaughters, A and B, each equal heirs with my own children": Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349, 101 NE 314, 45 LRA(NS) 48, Ann Cas 1914A, 104 [affirming Moon v. Harness, 15 CC(NS) 139, 23 CD 337].

8. Designation of an heir under former GC § 8598 (see now RC § 2105.15) gives to him rights of inheritance under the statute of descent and distribution, and the same right of property as if he were born in lawful wedlock: Cochrel v. Robinson, 113 OS 526, 149 NE 526; In re Powell, 82 OLA 549, 168 NE(2d) 27 (PC).

9. An illegitimate son, designated as heir at law by his natural father, pursuant to the provision of this section, is not authorized under GC § 12079 (RC § 2741.01) to bring an action to contest the will of the brother of the natural father, which brother died subsequent to the decease of the natural father: Blackwell v. Bowman, 150 OS 34, 37 OO 323, 80 NE(2d) 493, discussed in 9 OSLJ 531.

10. Under the statutes of descent and distribution, a person who has been designated and appointed by another as an heir at law, pursuant to this section, inherits from but not through his designator: Blackwell v. Bowman, 150 OS 34, 37 OO 323, 80 NE(2d) 493, discussed in 9 OSLJ 531; Uhl v. Armstrong, 78 OLA 592, 140 NE(2d) 60.

11. A designated heir dying prior to the death of his designator does not acquire the status of a child, and where the death of such designated heir occurs prior to the execution of a last will and testament of the designator, the children of the designated heir surviving the designator do not have as heirs at law or next of kin a right of inheritance in the estate of such designator and may not maintain an action to contest his will: Kirsheman v. Paulin, 155 OS 137, 44 OO 134, 98 NE(2d) 26, discussed in 47 OO 303.

12. A valid designation of an heir under this section amounts to the recognition by the designator of the designee as an adopted child: In re Gompf, 175 OS 400, 25 OO(2d) 388, 195 NE(2d) 806.

13. The designated heir of a brother of an intestate is not an heir of such intestate, and the intestate's niece, being the nearest of kin under the statutes of descent and distribution, inherits the estate: Southern Ohio Sav. Bank & Co. v. Boyer, 66 App 136, 19 OO 398, 31 NE(2d) 161, discussed in 15 OBar 214.

14. An heir designated by virtue of RC § 2105.15 is an heir under the statute of descent and distribution: Witten v. Landrum, 41 OApp(2d) 65, 70 OO(2d) 61, 322 NE(2d) 146 (1974).

15. The only benefit conferred by RC § 2105.15 are rights of inheritance. The statute does not create any additional legal relationships: In re Howell, 57 OO(2d) 364, 278 NE(2d) 926 (CP).

16. A person designated as an heir of the decedent pursuant to RC § 2105.15 is not entitled to claim an exemption from Ohio estate tax under the provisions of RC § 5731.15(A)(3), as a child of the decedent: In re Howell, 57 OO(2d) 364, 278 NE(2d) 926 (CP).

17. A proceeding to designate an heir at law, as prescribed by this section, is ex parte, and the court's action in determining whether declarant is of sound mind and not under restraint is quasi-judicial; an expectant heir at law of such a declarant is without right to invoke the probate court's jurisdiction to set aside such designation on the ground it was not the free act of declarant, but the court, sua sponte, upon information furnished by such expectant heir, may modify or set aside its former action: Horne v. Horne, 16 OLA 155.

18. Neither this section, providing for designation of heirs, nor GC § 10512-9 (RC § 3107.01), relative to adoption, contemplates giving an interest either to designated heir or adopted child, in the estate of any person other than that of the declarant, or of the adopting parent. Property may flow through the adopted child or the declared heir to others in the chain of title: Rogers v. Cromer, 24 OLA 508.

18.1 "Heirs at law" designated in probate court under GC § 10503-12 (RC § 2105.15) are not, during the lifetime of the person who designated them, "next of kin" entitled to written notice of the time and place of hearing of an application for appointment of a guardian for such person: Jones v. Jones, 30 OLA 499.

19. The formal adoption provided for in this section is not necessary to constitute an heir. This may be done by will: Moon v. Harness, 15 CC(NS) 139, 23 CD 337 [affirmed, Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349].

20. Naming persons in a will as the daughters of the testator does not of itself make them heirs. Persons who do not come within the provisions of the statute of descent and distribution must either be designated as heirs under this section, or must be adopted under former GC § 8024 (see now RC § 3107.01) et seq. In the absence of compliance with these provisions, a devise as such must be made to such persons or they cannot take: In re Williamson, 5 NP 1, 6 OD 505.

21. This section authorizes the designation of an heir, but does not of itself otherwise change the course of descent: Richardson v. Cincinnati Union

Stockyard Co., 8 NP 213, 11 OD 367.

22. If the word "heirs" is used in a clause of the will in the sense of children, it will be presumed that it is used in the same sense in another clause; and will thus exclude an adopted child of the person to whose heirs such gift is made: Denley v. Wheeler, 24 NP(NS) 357.

23. A bequest to the wife of an adopted son and a legal heir of the testatrix is subject to the collateral inheritance tax: In re Hunnewell, 3 OLR 52.

25. To qualify under RC § 5731.09(B) for a tax exemption when the property passes to or for the use of a "person recognized by the decedent as an adopted child and designated by such decedent as an heir . . .," the successor must establish that during his minority his relationship to the decedent was similar to that of a parent and child and that he was designated as an heir by the decedent according to law, although such designation need not necessarily have occurred during the minority of such successor: In re George, 82 OLA 452 (PC).

§ 2105.16 Heirs of aliens may inherit; aliens may hold lands. (GC § 10503-13)

No person who is capable of inheriting shall be deprived of the inheritance by reason of any of his ancestors having been aliens. 1. For a general statement with reference to inheritance by or from illegitimate children, see Lewis v. Eutsler, 4 OS 355.

2. An earlier form of this statute permitted illegitimate children to be "capable of inheriting or transmitting inheritance on the part of their mother in like manner as if they had been born of lawful wedlock." This statute permitted an illegitimate child to inherit from or through its mother: Stevenson v. Sullivant, 18 US (5 Wheat) 207, 5 LED 70.

3. If such illegitimate child survived his mother, her brother and sisters could not, under such statute, inherit from him: Little v. Lake, 8 O 290.

4. Subsequently the foregoing statute was amended by the addition of the words "if the mother being dead the estate of such illegitimate child shall descend to the relatives on the part of the mother as if the intestate had been legitimate." Under this statute it was held that while an inheritance might pass from an illegitimate child to her mother's relatives, such inheritance could not pass from the relatives of the mother to the illegitimate child; and that such child could not take under a will giving property to the issue of her mother nor could she inherit from her mother's brother or niece; but she could take under that part of the estate which descended to her mother as intestate property: Gibson v. McNeely, 11 OS 131.

5. An illegitimate child was adopted by one not its natural mother; and died intestate leaving its natural mother, its adopting parents and children of the adopting parents surviving. Under such circumstances the personal estate of such child passes to its natural mother to the exclusion of the adopting parents and their children: Upson v. Noble, 35 OS 655.

6. Enactment of RC § 2105.17 providing that illegitimate children can inherit from and through their mother as if born in lawful wedlock expanded and modified the word "child" or "children" appearing in RC § 2105.06, the statute of descent and distribution, to include those children. After the enactment of RC § 2105.17, the operation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States required that the words "child" or "children" include all children, both legitimate and illegitimate, whether inheriting from and through their mother or father: Green v. Woodard, 40 OApp(2d) 101, 69 OO(2d) 130, 318 NE(2d) 397 (1974).

7. Revised Code § 2105.17, which permits illegitimates to inherit from their mother only, is unconstitutional, and shall be construed to permit inheritance from both father and mother: Jack v. Byers, 73 OO(2d) 500 (CP 1975).

8. This section removes the disabilities of illegitimates in inheriting from their mother and from any others from whom the mother could inherit and should be given a liberal construction: Porsberg v. Klein, 39 OLA 470 (App).

9. A devise to the "issue of the body" is prima facie a devise to legitimate children or their descendants: Flora v. Anderson, 75 Fed 217, 8 OFD 660.

10. An illegitimate child can inherit both from and through his mother, either directly or collaterally: Kest v. State, 77 OLA 193, 4 OO(2d) 250, 146 NE(2d) 755 (PC) [affirmed 169 OS 319].

§ 2105.18 [Illegitimate child; acknowledgment by natural father.]

When a man has a child by a woman before or after the birth intermarries with her, the child is legitimate. The issue of parents whose marriage is null in law are nevertheless legitimate.

The natural father of a child may file an application in the probate court of the county in which he resides, in the county in which the child resides, or the county in which the child was born, acknowledging that the child is his, and upon consent of the mother, or if she is deceased or incompetent, or has surrendered custody, upon the consent of the person or agency having custody of the child, or of a court having jurisdiction over the child's custody, the probate court, if satisfied that the applicant is the natural father, and that establishment of the relationship is for the best interest of the child, shall enter the finding of fact upon its journal, and thereafter the child is the child of the applicant, as though born to him in lawful wedlock.

HISTORY: GC § 10503-15; 114 v 320 (342); 125 v 347 (EF 10-14-53); 136 v S 145. EF 1-1-76.

For an analogous section, see former GC § 8591.

The effective date of S 145 is set by section 3 of the act.

See provisions, § 3 of SB 145 (136 v —) following RC § 2101.01.

For text of this section applicable to estates of decedents dying prior to January 1, 1976, see Appendix A, herein.

Comment

General Code § 10503-15 (RC § 2105.18) provided that "when by a woman a man has one or more children, and afterward intermarries with her, such issue, if acknowledged by him as his child or children, will be legitimate. The issue of parents whose marriage is null in law, shall nevertheless be legitimate."

Revised Code § 2105.18, which became effective on October 14, 1953, provides the manner in which a natural father of a child by an unmarried woman might legitimate such child when he does not intermarry with her. Revised Code § 3705.15 (GC § 1261-52a, which became effective on September 16, 1943), provides that when an illegitimate child has become a legitimate child, according to RC § 2105.18, by the intermarriage of the mother with the natural father of the child and his acknowledgment of the child as his, it is possible to secure from the department of health a new birth certificate. The legislature did not state specifically if a new birth certificate should be issued by the department of health to an illegitimate child whose birth has been legitimized under the provisions of RC § 2105.18, when the father did not intermarry with the mother of said child.

When, and if issued, under the provisions of RC § 3705.14, such certificate of birth must contain such items and information as may be required by the United States bureau of the census and such additional items and information as the public health council, by regulation, may prescribe.

1. For a discussion of the effect of legitimation of an illegitimate child in a foreign jurisdiction as affecting its right to inherit realty in Ohio, see obiter in Simpson v. Simpson, 9 CC(NS) 137, 19 CD 503.

2. Under this section, children born of a bigamous marriage, their mother not knowing that their father was married before such second marriage, are deemed legitimate so that they may inherit from their father: Wright v. Love, 12 OS 619.

3. The natural father of a child cannot be held for its support, under the statutes of this state, if the mother, after the child was begotten, and during pregnancy, contracts a marriage with another man, who marries her with full knowledge of her condition. By such marriage, the man so marrying consents to stand in loco parentis to such child, and is presumed in law to be the father of the child, and this presumption is conclusive. This rule has application to proceedings under the bastardy statute, and has no relation to actions where questions of heirship and inheritance are involved: Miller v. Anderson, 43 OS 473, 3 NE 605, 54 AmRep 823.

4. M, an unmarried man, had a child by R, a married woman; R afterwards became divorced from her husband, and thereafter M intermarried with her and acknowledged the child as his child. It was held that the child was thereby legitimated, and upon the death of M, the child had all the rights of an heir of his body: Ives v. McNicoll, 59 OS 402, 53 NE 60, 69 AmSt 780, 43 LRA 772 [affirming 12 CC 297, 5 CD 555; and McNicoll v. Ives, 3 NP 6, 4 OD 75]; see also Kniffin v. Schaffer, 12 CC 753, 4 CD 62, 1 Legal News 225.

5. An agreement of marriage in praesenti when made by parties competent to contract, accompanied and followed by cohabitation as husband and wife, they being so treated and reputed in the community and circle in which they move, establishes a valid marriage at common law, and a child of such marriage is legitimate and may inherit from the father: Umbenhower v. Labus, 85 OS 238, 97 NE 832 [affirming Umbenhower v. Umbenhower, 12 CC(NS) 289, 21 CD 317].

6. Daughter of married man and paramour intermarrying and acknowledging daughter, held legitimate, regardless of date of daughter's birth, notwithstanding nullity of marriage, and daughter was aunt's "niece" and "child" of aunt's brother within aunt's will: Clinton County Nat. Bank v. Todhunter, 43 App 289, 183 NE 88, 37 OLR 279.

7. The term "minor" found in former GC § 1655 (see now RC §§ 2151.42, 2151.99) should receive its ordinary legal signification, and so construed embraces only minor children who are legitimate. The juvenile court acting under that section has no authority to proceed and punish the father of an illegitimate child, unless its paternity has been acknowledged after intermarriage in conformity to this section: Creisar v. State, 97 OS 16, 119 NE 128.

8. In order to establish legitimation of an illegitimate child, it is necessary to prove that the man who subsequently marries the mother and acknowledges the child as his, is, in fact, the father of such child: Eichorn v. Zedaker, 109 OS 609, 144 NE 258.

9. A declaration of a man that he is the father of an illegitimate child, born to the wife of such man before their marriage, is admissible to prove that such man is, in fact, the father of such child. His declarations that he is not the father of such child are not admissible: Eichorn v. Zedaker, 109 OS 609, 144 NE 258.

10. While this section requires both proof of parentage and of acknowledgment of the children by the parent after his marriage, yet if the evidence of acknowledgment before marriage is abundant, and the proof of parentage clear, slight evidence of acknowledgment on the part of the parent after marriage will be sufficient to establish the legitimacy of the child: Stradling v. Printz, 10 OLA 134, 11 OLA 140.

11. Where the evidence shows the marriage of the mother of a child by the defendant after the birth of the child, and the living with her and the child as husband and father and providing for their maintenance and support for a year, and the trial court found that the child was the child of the parties, there was proof of acknowledgment by the defendant: Craner v. State, 21 OLA 260.

12. The word "child," used in this section, is to be construed in its usual and ordinary sense, and applies to legitimate children and to children legally adopted prior to the employee's injury: Staker v. Industrial Comm., 127 OS 13, 186 NE 616.

13. Under this section, "When by a woman a man has one or more children, and afterward intermarries with her, such issue, if acknowledged by him as his child or children, will be legitimate. The issue of parents whose marriage is null in law, shall nevertheless be legitimate." This statute removes the stamp of illegitimacy from a child whose father acknowledges it and intermarries with its mother either before or after the birth of the child. Such issue is the legitimate child of the father within the purview of the workmen's compensation act, though the accidental death of the father occurred two weeks prior to the birth of the child: Garner v. B. F. Goodrich Co., 136 OS 397, 16 OO 568, 26 NE(2d) 203.

14. A child born illegitimately is not legitimated solely because a man subsequently intermarries with the mother of the child and acknowledges the child to be his own. The man who does these things must in fact be the father of the child before it is legitimated: Comer v. Comer, 175 OS 313, 316, 25 OO(2d) 182, 194 NE(2d) 572.

15. A man who marries a woman while she is pregnant is presumed in law to be the father of the child, and no formal acknowledgment under RC § 2105.18 by the father is required in order for such child to inherit: Romweber v. Martin, 30 OS(2d) 25, 59 OO(2d) 58, 282 NE(2d) 36.

16. Where a man marries a pregnant woman who has preferred a bastardy charge against him, and later a child is born in lawful wedlock, and the putative father visits the mother and child soon after birth, and afterwards makes a bequest to said child in his last will and testament, such recognition is a sufficient acknowledgment under favor of former GC § 8591 (see now RC § 2105.18) to render such son legitimate: LaRoche v. LaRoche, 10 App 242, 29 OCA 113, 30 CD 519, 63 Bull 285 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 302, 63 Bull 398].

17. In a proceeding for determination of heirship, the presumption that petitioner is the child of the first husband must be overcome by clear and convincing evidence and not by a mere preponderance: Snyder v. McClelland, 83 App 377, 38 OO 434, 81 NE(2d) 383.

18. An illegitimate posthumous child does not have a right of action for the wrongful death of his reputed father: Bonewit v. Weber, 95 App 428, 54 OO 20, 120 NE(2d) 738.

19. There is no invidious discrimination constituting an unconstitutional denial of the equal protection of the law in the application of Ohio law denying to one who is illegitimate any right to inherit from the natural father unless the father has provided for such inheritance: Moore v. Dague, 46 OApp(2d) 75, 75 OO(2d) 68, 345 NE(2d) 449 (1975).

20. An illegitimate child is not entitled to a portion of the year's allowance set off to the widow, where the paternity of the child has never been legally established and the father had never entered into a marriage relation with the mother, even though the father recognized the child as his son: In re Humbert, 12 OO 241 (PC).

21. Where a child was born at such a period of gestation that it is uncertain whether she may be the offspring of her mother's divorced husband or another man, and the mother later marries a man who lived in immoral relation with her and who acknowledges that he is the child's father, the parties clearly come within the provisions of this section, by virtue of which he is her father and she is legitimate: State v. Hayes, 30 OLA 568.

22. A child born to parents prior to their marriage becomes a legitimate child of the union upon their marriage: DeGarmo v. DeGarmo, 56 OLA 357, 92 NE(2d) 414 (App).

23. An illegitimate who has not been legitimized per statute is not included within the term "employee's children who survive the employee" in an insurance policy: Aetna Life Insurance Co. v. McMillan, 89 OLA 208.

24. Where the designation by a soldier of a wife as beneficiary of his war risk insurance was void because both parties were then married to others, the recognition by the soldier of a child as his own is not sufficient to show that his designation of the child's mother as the beneficiary was intended to be in trust for the child, who could have been designated as beneficiary under war risk insurance act, § 402, and this section: Elliot v. United States, 271 Fed 1001.

26. The children of a man and woman who had agreed to live together as common-law husband and wife, having been acknowledged by their father to be his children, come within this section and are entitled to social security benefits: Folsom v. Furber, 6 OO(2d) 509, 256 F(2d) 120.

28. Children of a bigamous marriage are legitimate: Abelt v. Zeman, 16 OO(2d) 87, 173 NE(2d) 907 (CP).

31. The word "marriage" in the phrase "whose marriage is null in law," in this section, must be interpreted to mean a de facto marriage, a marital status, an informal marriage, or a purported marriage: Santill v. Rossetti, 18 OO(2d) 109, 178 NE(2d) 633 (CP).

34. Under this section providing that the issue of parents whose marriage is null in law shall nevertheless be legitimate, where a relationship exists which, but for some defect, would be a valid marriage, and a child is born as issue of the marriage, such child born of such de facto marriage is "legitimate" for the purpose of qualification for social security benefits, even though both parties knew of the woman's prior existing marriage: Wolf v. Gardner, 43 OO(2d) 179, 386 F(2d) 295.

35. An illegitimate child whose paternity has been established during the lifetime of the natural father is entitled to a year's allowance for support from the father's estate: In re Estate of Holley, 73 OO(2d) 265, 44 OMisc 78, 337 NE(2d) 675 (CP 1975).

† § 2105.19 Murderer not to benefit.

(A) No person who is convicted of or pleads guilty to a violation of or complicity in the violation of section 2903.01, 2903.02, or 2903.03 of the Revised Code shall in any way benefit by the death. All property of the decedent, and all money, insurance proceeds, or other property or benefits payable or distributable in respect of the decedent's death, shall pass or be paid or distributed as if the guilty person had predeceased the decedent.

(B) A person prohibited by division (A) of this section from benefiting by the death of another is a constructive trustee for the benefit of those entitled to any property or benefit that the person has obtained, or over which he has exerted control, because of the decedent's death. A person who purchases any such property or benefit from the constructive trustee, for value, in good faith, and without notice of the constructive trustee's disability under division (A) of this section, acquires good title, but the constructive trustee is accountable to the beneficiaries for the proceeds or value of the property or benefit.

1. By reason of the provisions of this section, a husband, who has been finally adjudged guilty of murdering his wife, cannot take or receive anything which is provided for him as surviving spouse of such wife by the provisions of GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13): Bauman v. Hogue, 160 OS 296, 52 OO 183, 116 NE(2d) 439.

1.1 Where one co-owner of joint bank account murdered the other and then committed suicide while in jail awaiting trial, the provisions of this section have no application since there was no criminal prosecution: Shuman v. Schick, 95 App 413, 53 OO 441, 120 NE(2d) 330.

1.2 Where plaintiff's evidence to support a petition by plaintiff as guardian of a minor ward to sell real property of such ward shows that the parents of the ward each owned an undivided one-half interest in real property, that the wife was convicted of murdering her husband but that no attempt was made under this section, to deprive her of a share in the estate of her husband who died intestate, and that, thereafter, the wife executed a quitclaim deed in which the grantee, her minor son, was designated as "Estate of . . . Ward"; such deed effectively divests the wife of all her right, title and interest in the real property and plaintiff has made a prima facie case. And it is not error for the court to overrule defendants' motion for a directed verdict at the close of plaintiff's evidence: Alston v. Alston, 4 OApp(2d) 270, 33 OO(2d) 311, 212 NE(2d) 65.

2. This section is inapplicable when the murderer commits suicide prior to conviction of the crime: Harrison v. Hillegas, 13 OO 523 (PC).

2.1 A person who as beneficiary is denied the right to recover the proceeds of an insurance policy by reason of having feloniously killed the insured, is not precluded, as widow and heir of the estate of the insured, from participating as such in the insurance proceeds after such proceeds become a part of the general assets of the estate, where she is not the sole distributee: Winters Nat. Bank &c. Co. v. Shields, 14 OO 438 (PC).

5. Where a conviction has not been shown, the widow is entitled to her statutory allowances and her intestate share in the net estate of her deceased husband, notwithstanding the fact that she has feloniously taken his life: Winters Nat. Bank &c. Co. v. Shields, 14 OO 438 (PC).

6. A son who murders his father is precluded by virtue of this section from inheriting from his father, but is entitled to the benefits of the exemption statute, GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13): Egelhoff v. Presler, 32 OO 252 (PC).

7. A husband who has been adjudged guilty of first degree manslaughter in the death of his wife is entitled to the statutory share of a surviving spouse in his wife's estate: Wadsworth v. Siek, 50 OO(2d) 507, 254 NE(2d) 738 (PC).

7.1 Where a beneficiary under an insurance policy pleads guilty to manslaughter in the killing of the insured, the insurer must prove the killing was wilful and intentional in order to defeat the right of such beneficiary to the proceeds: Travelers Ins. Co. v. Gray, 66 OO(2d) 64, 37 OMisc 27, 306 NE(2d) 189 (1973).

8. This section, which disinherits persons finally adjudged guilty of murder in the first or second degree as to the property of the person killed, has no effect upon one never brought to trial or convicted: Demos v. Freemas, 26 OLA 601.

9. This section, providing that no person finally adjudged guilty of murder should be entitled to inherit any of the estate of the person killed, is not applicable in suit by administrator of the murdered person to recover from her surviving husband who killed her, the proceeds of a life insurance policy in which the husband was named beneficiary, such money never being a part of the estate of decedent: Hennigh v. Neff, 27 OLA 364.

10. The execution by a depositor of an authorization converting an individual account with a building and loan company into a joint and survivorship account, in accordance with GC § 9648 (RC § 1151.19), and with the acquiescence of the company, vests in the donee a present interest which is not affected by the fact that he is later convicted of procuring the murder of the donor: Hodapp v. Oleff, 40 OLR 209 (App).

11. This section is not intended to abrogate or delimit common law rule, but to establish by fact of conviction for murder legal status of a person so convicted with respect to receiving any benefit from death of person unlawfully killed: Cook v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., 30 NP(NS) 247.

12. Exempt property set off to surviving spouse does not pass by intestate succession consequently, this section would not bar a convicted murderer from having such exempted property set off to him from the estate of his murdered wife: Tyack v. Tipton, 65 OLA 397, 115 NE(2d) 29 [contra, Bauman v. Hogue, supra].

3. 4. A life tenant of conventional life estate who assigns all his interest in and surrenders possession to his assignee is not liable for subsequent waste: Howell v. Howell, 122 OS 543, 172 NE 528.

5. Action to forfeit life estate on ground of waste is legal in character, and not appealable: Oglesbee v. Miller, 125 OS 223, 181 NE 26.

6. One acquiring a life estate in land before commencement of mining operations cannot operate for oil, or make oil lease thereon, without committing enjoined waste: Fourth S. Central Trust Co. v. Woolley, 31 App 259, 165 NE 742.

7. Common law waste as to life estates is not recognized in Ohio and is not substantive ground for equitable relief: Gard v. Beard, 36 App 105, 172 NE 673.

10. An action, predicated upon this section, may be maintained only by the person or persons having the immediate estate in reversion or remainder in the real property: Cook v. Hardin County Bank, 76 App 203, 31 OO 498, 63 NE(2d) 686.

11. The right of action for waste accrues under this section at the time the waste is committed or suffered with respect to the right to damages for that particular item of waste: Reams v. Henney, 88 App 409, 44 OO 196, 58 OLA 507, 97 NE(2d) 37.

12. An earlier form of this statute applied to wastes committed by a widow; and subsequently by amendment such statute was made to apply to all cases of tenancy for life: Brenneman v. Brenneman, 1 NP 332, 3 OD 392.

13. This section does not apply to cases where a life tenant is interposed between the estate of the tenant who commits waste and the estate in reversion or remainder: Hatch v. Hatch, 1 OD(NP) 271, 31 Bull 57.

14. When the grantor executed a deed conveying real property to a third person in fee simple subject to a life estate of both himself and his estranged wife, he created a reversion in himself; and if the life estate of the wife is terminated, the grantor-husband is the person having the immediate estate in reversion and he falls within the provision of this section, and the trial court did not commit error in overruling wife's demurrer to grantor's amended petition seeking a forfeiture of her life estate for waste: Folden v. Folden, 90 OLA 218, 188 NE(2d) 193 (App).

15. Since an action seeking a forfeiture of a life estate for waste under authority of this section is a special statutory proceeding and forfeitures, generally, are not favored by the law, the evidence must be strictly construed: Folden v. Folden, 90 OLA 218, 188 NE(2d) 193 (App).

§ 2105.21 Presumption of order of death.

When there is no evidence of the order in which the death of two or more persons occurred, no one of such persons shall be presumed to have died first and the estate of each shall pass and descend as though he had survived the others. When the surviving spouse or other heir at law, legatee or devisee dies within thirty days after the death of the decedent, the estate of such first decedent shall pass and descend as though he had survived such surviving spouse, or other heir at law, legatee or devisee. A beneficiary of a testamentary trust shall not be deemed to be a legatee or devisee within the meaning of this section. This section shall prevail over the right of election of a surviving spouse.

This section shall not apply in the case of wills wherein provision has been made for distribution of property different from the provisions of this section. In such case such provision of the will shall not prevail over the right of election of a surviving spouse.

1. This section does not establish a presumption of the order of death, but merely defines the right of inheritance to property of those who die within the time and under the circumstances therein described: Ostrander v. Preece, 129 OS 625, 3 OO 24, 196 NE 670 [appeal dismissed, 296 US 543, 56 S Ct 151].

2. When a wife expires within three days after the death of her husband, or within thirty days from his demise if their extinction is attributable to a common accident, he is deemed to have died last and his estate passes and descends accordingly, under this section. In such circumstance there is no widow within the meaning and intent of the statute, and no year's allowance under GC § 10509-74 (RC § 2117.20), and no property not treated as assets under GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13) may be claimed by her personal representative: In re Metzger, 140 OS 50, 23 OO 257, 42 NE(2d) 443, discussed in 26 OO 559 [contra, In re Priest, 79 OLA 444, 156 NE(2d) 206].

3. Revised Code § 2105.21, as enacted by the General Assembly in Amended Senate Bill No. 40 (30-day clause; 125 v. 411), is controlling and repeals RC § 2105.21 as enacted in House Bill No. 1 and Senate Bill No. 361 (3-day clause; 125 v. 903). Henry v. Central Nat. Bank, 16 OS(2d) 16, 45 OO(2d) 262, 242 NE(2d) 342.

4. Other evidence in case does not justify the inference that wife died first, in question of descent of property, merely because her body was colder: Evans v. Halterman, 31 App 175, 165 NE 869.

5. Where husband and wife are the owners of a joint and survivorship bank account and both die as the result of injuries suffered in a common accident within a period of thirty days after the date of such accident, the interest of the first decedent in the fund passes to the second decedent by virtue of the contract between them, and the provisions of this section have no application to the disposition of such fund: In re Kessler, 85 App 240, 40 OO 167, 85 NE(2d) 609.

5.1 A clause in a will that "in the event that my beloved wife . . . should predecease me, or we should both die as a result of a common accident, then all of my property . . . I give, devise and bequeath to my brother" does not provide for distribution different from this section which defines the right of inheritance to property where the surviving spouse dies within thirty days after the death of the decedent; and, where the surviving spouse dies two days after the death of the testator, and such deaths did not result from a common accident, this section is applicable to such estate: Weir v. Weir, 102 App 231, 2 OO(2d) 245, 139 NE(2d) 361.

5.2 Where one spouse dies testate, giving certain property, by her last will and testament, to the other spouse, and such surviving spouse then dies within the time limit set out in this section, the heirs at law of such deceased surviving spouse cannot inherit the property left by the spouse who dies first unless the will indicates a desire that the presumption of order of death statute (RC § 2105.21) shall not be effective with respect to such property: Barrick v. Fligle, 103 App 507, 4 OO(2d) 15, 146 NE(2d) 330.

5.3 The word "wills" as used in the last paragraph of this section, refers to the will of the testator only and not to both such will and the will of the surviving spouse: Alten v. Barnecut, 109 App 497, 12 OO(2d) 68, 168 NE(2d) 9.

5.4 Where a husband named as a devisee in the will of his spouse dies prior to the time of the death of said spouse, or the time of his death comes within the "presumption of order of death" as stated in RC § 2105.21, the devisee, not being a relative of the testatrix within the meaning of RC § 2107.52, and the will not containing a residuary clause, nor any other provision showing any other intention of the testatrix, the devise to the deceased spouse lapses and the testatrix dies intestate as to such property designated in such devise: Muckerheide v. Zink, 1 OApp(2d) 76, 30 OO(2d) 103, 202 NE(2d) 725.

6. This section, the presumption-of-order-of-death statute, applies only to property which passes to the surviving spouse or other heir at law under the statutes of descent and distribution or under a will, but does not apply to property in which the interest vests by contract: Barnecut v. Barnecut, 3 OApp(2d) 132, 32 OO(2d) 220, 209 NE(2d) 609.

7. Where a will contains a general residuary provision for disposition of all of the testator's property and a bequest of part of the residue lapses because of the death of the legatee one day after the death of the testator that part of the residue passes to the surviving residuary legatee instead of passing as intestate property: Schuck v. Schuck, 7 OO(2d) 198,

156 NE(2d) 351 (PC).

8. Where a wife dies within two days after the death of her husband, his estate passes under his will as though he had survived his wife; and since this section applies only to his estate, her estate passes under her will as the survivor of her husband: Harrison v. Hillegas, 13 OO 523 (PC).

9. Where a surviving spouse dies within three days after the death of a husband, an adopted child of both decedents, aged ten years, is entitled to a year's support under GC § 10509-74 (RC § 2117.20), and to an allowance of property not deemed assets under GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13), from the estate of both decedents: Harrison v. Hillegas, 13 OO 523 (PC).

10. Under GC § 10503-18 (RC § 2105.21) if a husband dies as a result of an accident and his wife dies twenty-one days later as a result of the same accident, the general assets of the estate of the husband pass to his heirs, and no part of his estate passes to the estate of his wife: In re Gilger, 49 OO 50 (PC).

11. Under such circumstances, the general assets of the estate of the wife pass to her heirs, since this section deals only with the estate of the first decedent and does not set up a presumption as to the order of death: In re Gilger, 49 OO 50 (PC).

12. When a bequest once vests, the death of the legatee after that of the testator, but prior to payment or distribution of the bequest, does not cause a lapse, and in the absence of the other provisions in the will, the bequest must be distributed to the executor or administrator of the deceased legatee: McSteen v. Barclays Bank, 40 OO(2d) 489, 12 OMisc 29, 227 NE(2d) 280.

13. Where it is impossible to medically determine the order of death of the insured and the beneficiary, there is a presumption that their deaths were simultaneous and that neither survived the other. In such case the proceeds will be paid to the estate of the insured: Dolence v. Central Nat. Bank, 44 OO(2d) 361, 15 OMisc 300, 238 NE(2d) 849.

14. When a relative devisee or legatee dies within thirty days after death of decedent, leaving a widow and one child, the child takes the share of decedent's estate that her father would have received by virtue of RC §§ 2105.21 and 2107.52; Ruble v. Waites, 72 OO(2) 389 (PC 1975).

15. Funds in joint bank account with right of survivorship will be divided equally among estates of husband and wife killed in common accident: In re Markiewiz, 71 OLA 143, 129 NE(2d) 328.

16. The property exempt from administration provided by RC § 2115.13, and the years support provided by RC § 2117.20, are not intestate successions but are debts and preferred claims arising as incidents to the marriage and therefore not affected by the simultaneous death statute: In re Priest, 79 OLA 444 (PC).

17. The use of the words "absolutely and in fee simple" in the will of a deceased spouse do not in themselves adequately manifest a clear indication and are not sufficiently definite language of intention or desire to provide for a distribution of property different from the distribution provided for in this section, providing that where a surviving spouse dies within thirty days after the death of his or her spouse, the estate of the first decedent shall pass as though he had survived the surviving spouse, unless such deceased spouse by will makes provision for the distribution of his property different from the provision of such section: Alten v. Barnecut, 78 OLA 589, 153 NE(2d) 792 (CP).

18. Effect of half and half statute: Battista v. Feihl, 91 OLA 391, 191 NE(2d) 597.

19. By the terms of this statute, a distinction is made between deaths occurring within three days, which may have resulted from any cause, and those occurring within thirty days, where the deaths resulted from a common accident: In re Thatcher, 30 NP(NS) 515.

 Dispositive instrument, 2, 9
 Elements essential, 5
 Last will, 11, 13

 Trust declaration, 7
 Written promise, 1

1. A written promise to pay a certain sum of money after death of the promisor, placed in the hands of the second person, with injunctions to deliver it, after his decease, is not good as a testamentary disposition: Hamor v. Moore, 8 OS 239. See also In re Estate of Schierberg, 4 OLR 53.

2. A executed, in compliance with the statutes as to execution of wills, an instrument (which, by its terms, she declared to be her will) in which she appointed an executor, "after my death to settle up all property, both personal and real," the second item being, "I hereby make my two granddaughters B and C, each equal heirs with my own children." It was held that the instrument is dispositive and devised to the two granddaughters named, each an equal share with the children of testatrix, in her estate: Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349, 101 NE 344, 45 LRA(NS) 48, AnnCas 1914A, 104 [affirming Moon v. Harness, 15 CC(NS) 139, 23 CD 337].

3. For the meaning of "devise," see Wheatcraft v. Hall, 106 OS 21, 138 NE 368.

4. A will and codicil must be construed together: Negley v. Gard, 20 O 310; Collier v. Collier's Exrs., 3 OS 369; Phipps v. Hope, 16 OS 586; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473]; Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion for order to certify record overruled, 61 Bull 152].

5. A will is an instrument in writing signed by the party making the same, or by some other person in his or her presence, and by his or her express direction, attested and subscribed to by two or more credible witnesses, and by which the party executing the same makes a disposition of his or her property, to take effect after his or her death: Bailey v. Bailey, 8 O 239; Holmden v. Craig, 16 CC(NS) 157, 31 CD 461 [affirmed, without opinion, 83 OS 483].

6. A codicil is a postscript to a will: Clark v. Carpenter, 14 App 278, 32 OCA 87.

7. A provision in a declaration of trust that the fund shall pass to the beneficiary if the donor dies before the beneficiary, leaving issue, is not testamentary; and the instrument need not be executed as a will: Lamkin v. Robinson, 16 App 440, 32 OCA 401, 35 CD 767 [affirming Robinson v. Lamkin, 23 NP(NS) 425, and motion to certify record overruled, Lamkin v. Robinson, 20 OLR 367; for an earlier opinion, see 15 CC(NS) 126, 24 CD 91, which was on appeal from 10 NP(NS) 1, 21 OD 13, and affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 603, and Stevens v. Robinson, 88 OS 603].

8. In action to set aside will and codicil, court's failure to use word "codicil" in connection with word "will" in general charge held not prejudicial error, where only general exception was taken: Adams v. Foley, 36 App 295, 173 NE 197.

9. It is said that a written instrument in the form of a will which makes no disposition of property is not a will: Holmden v. Craig, 16 CC(NS) 157, 31 CD 461 [affirmed, without opinion, 83 OS 483]; In re Williamson, 5 NP 1, 6 OD 505.

10. An instrument, in order to be a will, must show a disposition of property: In re Williamson, 6 NP 79, 8 OD 47 [reversing 5 NP 1, 6 OD 505].

11. A will is a solemn disposition of one's property, to take effect after death, in which testator contemplates not only the purposes to which such property shall be devoted, but also the person or persons by whom those purposes shall be executed and carried into effect. The term "last will" has been peculiarly used to indicate this solemn disposition: Hall v. Hall, 15 OD(NP) 161 [reversed by circuit court, without opinion].

12. A codicil which is not executed in accordance with the requirements concerning a will is itself invalid: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

13. At the time of testator's death one or more wills may be in existence; but only one of them can be his last will: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

14. A deposit in a savings account payable to a third person is not testamentary: Burke v. Waldbillig, 24 NP(NS) 277.

[EXECUTION]

§ 2107.02 Who may make will.

A person of the age of eighteen years, or over, [of] sound mind and memory, and not under restraint [,] may make a will.

WILLS

Scope and effect

1. The right to make a will is purely statutory: Lozier v. Lozier, 99 OS 254, 124 NE 167 [affirming 28 OCA 177, 30 CD 300].

2. See also Mader v. Apple, 6 NP(NS) 592, 18 OD 801 [reversed by the circuit court without opinion, which judgment was affirmed, 80 OS 691; for later decision, without opinion, see 87 OS 464]; and Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

3. Whether the right to dispose of property by will is regarded as a natural right, inhering in the ownership of property, or as resting wholly on these ancient statutes, it is entirely clear that the right thus created is of high order, not to be denied or materially qualified except upon the clearest declaration of law to that effect: Theobald v. Fugman, 64 OS 473, 60 NE 606 [reversing Fugmann v. Theobald, 12 CD 720, which was on appeal from 3 NP 65; sub nomine, Fugmann v. Theobald, 4 OD(NP) 65].

4. Directions by an owner, in respect to the disposition of his property after his death, are of no validity unless made through the medium of a last will and testament: Phipps v. Hope, 16 OS 586.

5. This section is limited by GC § 8622 (see now RC § 2131.08), which limits the granting of estates to a life in being and one unborn generation: Phillips v. Herron, 55 OS 478, 45 NE 720.

6. As to early provisions in regard to the making of wills in Ohio, see Jones v. Robinson, 17 OS 171, and Theobald v. Fugman, 64 OS 473, 60 NE 606.

7. The right of disposing of property by will is given by statute: German Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lushey, 66 OS 233, 64 NE 120; Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104, 82 NE 1067, 17 LRA(NS) 353.

9. This section, permitting a testator to bequeath his property to any person he desires, is not repealed by GC § 10564 (see now RC § 2107.34), but is limited thereby: German Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lushey, 20 CC 198, 11 CD 52 [affirmed, German Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lushey, 66 OS 233].

10. An oral contract by which a legatee agrees with the testator to hold a legacy in trust for a third person is not affected by the statute of wills: Winder v. Scholey, 83 OS 204, 93 NE 1098, 33 LRA(NS) 995 [affirming circuit court, which affirmed Scholey v. Winder, 10 NP(NS) 642, 21 OD 59].

Discretionary power of testator

15. The estate of a tenant in common cannot be affected or his right to compel partition defeated, deferred or limited by the provisions of the will of his cotenant whereby he attempts to entail his estate including the lands owned as a cotenant: Lauer v. Green, 99 OS 20, 121 NE 821.

16. A jury cannot set aside a will on the ground that they do not regard it as a fair and reasonable will: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

17. A testator has the right to dispose of his property by will as he pleases, without reference to moral obligations, or to the needs or merits of the different natural objects of testator's bounty: Sadler v. Sadler, 23 CC(NS) 353, 27 CD 445 [motion to certify record overruled by the supreme court, 13 OLR 420, 60 Bull 432].

Nature of

23. Under the provisions of this section, an instrument which fulfills all other statutory requirements relative to the execution of wills may be probated as a valid will even though it does not dispose of property: In re Crowe, 17 OO 8 (PC).

27. The expressed wish of a testatrix that all of her property "shall go as the law directs with the following modifications," is a testamentary disposition of her property, and her heirs take nothing by descent: Huber v. Carew, 7 CC(NS) 609, 16 CD 389 [affirming 2 NP(NS) 81, 14 OD 656, and affirmed, without opinion, 74 OS 469].

30. A gift without consideration, to take effect at death, passes no title unless there is a delivery: Flanders v. Blandy, 45 OS 108, 12 NE 321.

31. A will is ambulatory in its nature, and takes effect only from the death of the testator: Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

32. For appointment by will of a beneficiary of a life insurance certificate, see Dhonau v. Striebing, 24 CC(NS) 598, 35 CD 31.

33. A deposit by A in a bank which is made payable either to A or B or to the survivor of them and which is deposited under an agreement that the bank will pay B whatever may remain at A's death, does not pass title to B. It is not a perfected gift; and while it is testamentary in its nature, it does not comply with the wills act. Accordingly, at the death of A, the title to such fund passes to A's administrator and not to B: In re Morgan, 28 OCA 222, 30 CD 101. certify record overruled, Lamkin v. Robinson, 20 OLR 367; for an earlier opinion, see 15 CC(NS) 126, 24 CD 91, which was on appeal from 10 NP(NS) 1, 21 OD 13, and affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 603, and Stevens v. Robinson, 88 OS 603].

Who may make will

42. Under the act of February 10, 1810 (8 v 146), a married woman could make a will devising real estate held in her own right: Allen v. Little, 5 O 66.

43. A married woman may make a will: Levi v. Earl, 30 OS 147.

—Mental capacity

48. Mental capacity to make a will requires ability to understand the nature of the act testator is performing, the general extent of property of which he is disposing, the relation which he holds to those who have claims upon him, and to appreciate his relation to the members of his family: Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61]; Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61; Rewell v. Warden, 4 CC(NS) 545, 14 CD 344; Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449 [petition in error dismissed by consent, Ross v. Caldwell, 50 Bull 108]; Welsh Hills Baptist Church v. Wilson, 9 CC(NS) 611, 19 CD 391 [affirmed, without opinion, 75 OS 636]; Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110; Wilson v. Wilson, 14 CC(NS) 241, 22 CD 498, 56 Bull 377 (Ed) [reversing 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188]; Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534; Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88, 28 CD 442 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545]; Kammann v. Kammann, 6 App 455, 26 CC(NS) 60, 29 CD 349 [dismissed, 96 OS 600; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 238, 62 Bull 309]; Barlion v. Connor, 9 App 72, 31 OCA 463; Quay v. Quay, 4 NP(NS) 529, 16 OD 435.

49. For definition of testamentary capacity, see Ross v. Stewart, 15 App 339, 32 OCA 217.

50. For elements of testamentary capacity, see Brown v. Lane, 15 App 321, 32 OCA 305 [motion to certify record overruled, Brown v. Lane, 19 OLR 392].

50.1 The appointment of a guardian on the ground of physical incompetency does not imply a lack of testamentary capacity: Roderick v. Fisher, 97 App 95, 54 OO 264, 122 NE(2d) 475.

51. It does not require the highest degree of mental capacity to make a will: Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61; Wilson v. Wilson, 14 CC(NS) 241, 22 CD 498, 56 Bull 377 (Ed) [reversing 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188].

52. A testator need not be possessed of his maximum strength of mind: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545]; Barlion v. Connor, 9 App 72, 31 OCA 463; West v. Knoppenberger, 4 CC(NS) 305, 16 CD 168; Rewell v. Warden, 4 CC(NS) 545, 14 CD 344; Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449 [petition in error dismissed by consent, Ross v. Caldwell, 50 Bull 108]; Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 22 CD 534.

53. Requirement that testator shall be of sound mind and memory at time of executing will does not mean that one weakened by sickness is incapable of making a will, but only that he have sufficient memory and mental capacity to understand fully what he is doing: Fulkerson v. Fulkerson, 35 OLR 478 (App).

54. A person may possess testamentary capacity even though enfeebled in body and mind by age and disease; though his memory may be impaired in a degree, and his mind disturbed by hallucinations or delusions (not necessarily influencing the mind in making testamentary disposition of property); though his mind may suffer discomposure and derangement in consequence of melancholy, grief, misfortune, sickness or disease (not of a nature to deprive him of the rational faculties common to men); and although he lacks contractual capacity or capacity to transact the ordinary business of life: West v. Knoppenberger, 4 CC(NS) 305, 16 CD 168; Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449 [petition in error dismissed by consent, Ross v. Caldwell, 50 Bull 108].

55. One has sufficient mental capacity to make a valid will when he is able to enumerate his property, and remembers who are the natural objects of his bounty, and successfully conducts considerable business interests, although he may be eighty-four years old and somewhat forgetful as to minor matters: Rewell v. Warden, 4 CC(NS) 545, 14 CD 344.

56. If testator was able to understand the nature of business, nature and extent of his property, the names of claimants on his bounty, his relationships and his ability to choose as to disposition of his property, it is sufficient: Phillips v. Board of Education, 21 App 194, 153 NE 115.

57. Where testator, for twenty years after making his will, associated socially with men in general, bought lands and built and repaired houses, rented houses and collected the rents, bought bonds and sold them, and conducted a merchant tailoring business, made no bad bargains nor showed mental incapacity to cope with the men with whom he dealt, it was held that the evidence showed testamentary capacity, although testator was eccentric and excitable, occasionally became intoxicated, and during the latter years of his life allowed his business to become more or less run down: Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

58. A testator's eccentricities, peculiarities or delusions must not affect either the natural or selected objects of his bounty or interfere with his testamentary capacity to make a will: Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110.

59. A delusion on the part of a testator does not constitute mental incapacity, unless it is an insane delusion: Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449 [petition in error dismissed by consent, Ross v. Caldwell, 50 Bull 108].

60. Lack of testamentary capacity is not shown by evidence of a religious conviction on the part of the testator upon the subject of foreign missions, where his delusion with reference thereto, if any existed, did not control the making of his will, but on the contrary, he disposed of his property without reference to foreign missions except and in the event of his son and only heir dying without issue: Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 2 App 182, 17 CC(NS) 275 [sub nomine, Presbyterian Church v. Bevan, 24 CD 318; affirmed, without opinion, Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 91 OS 395].

61. The requirement that a testator shall be of sound mind and memory at the time of the execution of the will, does not mean that one who has been weakened by sickness is incapable of making a will, but only that he shall then have sufficient memory and the mental capacity to understand fully what he is doing: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88, 28 CD 442 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545].

62. A testator who is so lacking in mental capacity, and who is so controlled by delusion, that he cannot make a rational choice in determining the proper objects of his bounty, does not possess testamentary capacity: Kammann v. Kammann, 6 App 455, 26 CC(NS) 60, 29 CD 349 [dismissed, Kammann v. Kammann, 96 OS 600; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 238, 62 Bull 309].

63. One is not incapacitated to make and execute a will merely because of advanced years or illiteracy: Barlion v. Connor, 9 App 72, 31 OCA 463.

64. Want of mental capacity on the part of a testator is not shown by a recital of circumstances and incidents which go no further than to indicate some physical weakness, or failure of memory, or mistake of an unimportant character, in connection with his business affairs; nor can an attack on a will be successfully maintained where the witnesses for the contestants seem to have reached the belief that the testator was incompetent to make a will because he did not make the kind of a will which they would have made or which they thought he ought to have made: Wilson v. Wilson, 14 CC(NS) 241, 22 CD 498, 56 Bull 377 (Ed) [reversing 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188].

65. The fact that testator was intoxicated when he returned home at night does not show that he was intoxicated when he executed his will some hours before: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

66. The fact that the testator was afflicted with progressive locomotor ataxia and was for a number of years before his death physically unable to perform any task or to help himself in any way, is not sufficient ground for setting the will aside, where it appears that during all that time he directed in detail the operations on farms aggregating over three hundred acres, and with reference to the management of his said lands did all that could have been done by a person of a sound and active mind; and the only testimony tending to show mental incapacity was slight forgetfulness on certain occasions and failure to include in his will certain legacies which he had declared he intended to make: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

67. An hypothetical question should not be permitted which calls for the opinion of a medical expert as to the capacity of testator to plan and express in technical language a long and complicated will. It is not necessary that testator should be able to express in apt language his wishes with reference to the creation, maintenance and operation of certain trusts. It is sufficient if he has sufficient mind and memory to dispose of his property by will: Walsh v. Walsh, 18 CC(NS) 91, 32 CD 617.

68. Guardianship on the ground of intemperance does not raise the same presumption of testamentary capacity as would be the case if the guardianship rested upon the ground of insanity or imbecility: Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

69. If the evidence in a proceeding to contest a will shows that the testator was of sound mind and memory, of sufficient legal capacity and very methodical, and that the will was properly signed by testator and by the subscribing witnesses, it will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary that testator knew the contents of such will before execution: Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion to certify record overruled, Morris v. Osborne, 61 Bull 152].

70. Declarations of a testator made either before, after, or at the time of the execution of the will are competent as evidence where the mental capacity of the testator is in issue: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

71. There is a legal presumption in favor of a will, and in favor of the mental soundness and capacity of the testator: Beresford v. Stanley, 6 NP 38, 9 OD 134.

72. The expressions of a man standing upon the verge of eternity, with the grave yawning before him, with every indication of dissolution, cannot be said to be those of a man of sound mind and memory, and a will made under such conditions will not be admitted to probate: In re Burrows, 8 NP 358, 11 OD 229.

73. It is assumed that an adjudication of insanity deprives such person of capacity to make a will: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

Undue influence

78. To invalidate a will for fraud or undue influence, it must appear that the fraud or influence complained of had some effect upon the testator in producing the very act of making his will: Monroe v. Barclay, 17 OS 302; Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

79. The fact that testator makes an unequal and unfair distribution of his property does not raise the presumption of undue influence: Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

79.1 The essential elements of undue influence are a susceptible testator, another's opportunity to exert it, the fact of improper influence exerted or attempted, and the result showing the effect of such influence: West v. Henry, 173 OS 498, 20 OO(2d) 119, 184 NE(2d) 200.

80. The presence of a beneficiary at the place at which a will was executed, and the fact that he gave advice to the testator with reference to such will, is not sufficient to justify a verdict setting aside the will on the ground of undue influence: Wilson v. Wilson, 14 CC(NS) 241, 22 CD 498, 56 Bull 377 (Ed) [reversing 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188].

81. Where a woman of fine character and delicate sensibilities executes a will, after long deliberation and the full knowledge of her children, in which contrary to her own strong desire to give the property received by her from her deceased husband to her children, she disposes of the property in accordance with a written request received from her husband, the influence so operated upon her will not be treated as undue or improper: Wilder v. Taylor, 14 CC(NS) 255, 23 CD 643 [affirming 10 NP(NS) 209, 24 OD 621, and reversed, without opinion, 87 OS 520].

82. The making of a change in a will, which there is reason to believe was done for reasons satisfactory to the testator, is not, where standing alone, a sufficient reason for setting the instrument aside on the ground of undue influence: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC (NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

83. The relation of a ward, under guardianship for intemperance, to a person with whom she boards under an arrangement made by the guardian for her, though such person has received certain instructions from the guardian as to the care of the ward, is not the same as the relation of the ward to the guardian, and does not, of itself, raise a presumption of undue influence in an action to set aside a will under which such person is a beneficiary: Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC (NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

84. The fact that a wife guides or even dominates her husband in the ordinary affairs of life, or has acquired an ascendancy over him, does not render his will made in her favor invalid: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

85. The fact that the will in question differs in some respects from prior wills is not sufficient to show an undue influence: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

86. The fact that a will is written on pieces of paper of different sizes and kinds is not sufficient to show undue influence or forgery: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

86.1 "Undue influence," which will invalidate a deed, must be such as to control mental operations of grantor, overcome his power of resistance, and oblige him to adopt the will of another, thus producing disposition of property which he would not have made freely: Finney v. Morehouse, 27 App 499, 161 NE 293.

86.2 Exercise of undue influence in execution of will need not be shown by direct proof, but it may be inferred from circumstances: Raymond v. Hearon, 30 App 184, 164 NE 644.

86.3 A daughter may legally seek her mother's preference to the exclusion of her sisters, so long as she does not go to the extent of making her mother do something she does not want to do. Such conduct, of course, is reprehensible, but it is not illegal. It does not amount to undue influence: Meyer v. Geiger, 34 OLA 1, 34 NE(2d) 581.

87. Undue influence over a testator on the part of his second wife is not shown by the fact that the children of the second wife fared better than the contestant, a child of the first wife, where the second wife was not herself given an undue proportion of the estate: O'Rourke v. Kenny, 11 NP(NS) 602, 22 OD 56.

87.1 The sole beneficiary under a purported will who procured the scrivener to draw the instrument and her own friends to witness it and who was the testator's landlady and a non-relative will be presumed to have unduly influenced the maker, if the maker is an old man who signed the instrument six days before he died in the home of the sole beneficiary away from his next of kin, while in a feeble condition: In re Maurer, 31 NP(NS) 247.

Knowledge of contents

93. If testator gives instructions for drawing his will and his will is drawn in accordance with such instructions, and the evidence shows that after it was written the testator looked at it "just a second or two" before he signed it, it is said that the evidence shows that testator had no knowledge of what the will contained and that a verdict sustaining such will is to be set aside: Koch v. Meyers, 7 App 306, 29 OCA 142, 30 CD 439.

Joint wills

98. A joint will is unknown to the testamentary law of this state, and is inconsistent with the policy of its legislation on this subject. Such a will cannot be admitted to probate as the separate will of either of the makers, although some of its provisions may be several in form and effect: Walker v. Walker, 14 OS 157.

99. Tenants in common of real estate, who are also owners, severally, of personal property, may dispose of same by will by uniting in a single instrument, where the bequests are severable and the instrument is not in the nature of a compact, but is, in effect, the will of each, revocable by him, and subject to probate as such several will: Betts v. Harper, 39 OS 639.

100. Tenants in common may dispose of the property which they own in common by a single will which is not in the nature of a contract, and in the same will they may dispose of other personal property as long as no provision is made for a legacy which can be paid only from the personal property of both testators: Ballard v. Ballard, 5 App 469, 26 CC(NS) 490, 27 CD 562, 62 Bull 9 (Ed).

101. Joint wills, if they are not changed or revoked during the life of either testator, will be sustained, although executed and attested jointly in one paper: Coghlin v. Coghlin, 4 CC(NS) 161, 16 CD 18.

102. A joint will is not created by the execution of separate and distinct wills at different times, and the making of separate and distinct codicils to such wills at the same time, by husband and wife, wherein disposition is made of the separate property and estate of each (it not appearing that the wills were in the nature of a compact), although the will of each refers to the will and to the property and estate of the other, and the disposition in both is practically identical: Coghlin v. Coghlin, 4 CC(NS) 161, 16 CD 18.

103. Joint or mutual wills made and executed concurrently, in compliance with a contract between parties competent and free to act, supported by a sufficient consideration, and with mutuality pervading and running through every part of both wills, are upheld: Minor v. Minor, 2 NP(NS) 439, 15 OD 264.

104. Where the will of a survivor to a compact to make mutual wills cannot be found after her death, its provisions will be carried out, if there is no question as to its exact contents, or as to the execution of mutual wills, or the adequacy of the consideration to the survivor: Minor v. Minor, 2 NP(NS) 439, 15 OD 264.

105. Twin wills made by two persons (husband and wife here) are not irrevocable unless each is the consideration for the other, and this contract appears by the most clear and satisfactory evidence. A reciprocity must pervade both wills. If a power is reserved to one party to alter or revoke, the other cannot be held: Albery v. Sessions, 2 NP 237, 3 OD 330.

106. A will by husband and wife where he owns all the property, and she signs merely in acceptance of its provisions, is not a joint will but a valid will of the husband: Kunnen v. Zurline, 13 DecRep 998, 2 CSCR 440.

Conditional wills

111. A will may be subject to a condition subsequent, such as the acceptance of a devise and of certain obligations therefor: Scott v. Kramer, 31 OS 295.

112. A testamentary clause in a will disposing of the testatrix's property after death, in case she does not recover, is a contingent will, and valid if recovery does not occur: Underwood v. Rutan, 101 OS 306, 128 NE 78.

113. Ambiguous language in a will should be construed as to referring to the reason for making a will, rather than as a condition precedent to its taking effect: McMerriman v. Schiel, 108 OS 334, 140 NE 600.

Who can take by will

For restriction on bequest to charities, see case notes under RC § 2107.06.

For the rule against perpetuities, see case notes under RC § 2131.08.

118. The board of county commissioners of any county in Ohio may take and hold any property devised or bequeathed to it, or to its members, for any lawful purpose recognized by statute, in which the taxpayers of the whole county are interested: Carder v. Commissioners, 16 OS 353; Christy v. Commissioners, 41 OS 711.

119. Where the devise is to the county by name, without limiting the uses of the property, it vests in the board of commissioners, for the use of the county, and may be appropriated by them to any and all authorized county purposes. Such devise may have a condition annexed, requiring an annuity to be paid to the widow of the testator: Carder v. Commissioners, 16 OS 353.

120. A township can take by devise: Board of Education v. Ladd, 26 OS 210.

121. A board of education is authorized to accept a bequest to be used in the erection and maintenance of a building to be used jointly for a public library and Young Men's Christian Association: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

122. A de facto board of education may accept a bequest made to it by will for school purposes under authority of GC § 4755 (see now RC § 3313.36): Rockwell v. Blaney, 9 NP(NS) 495, 22 OD 107.

124. An unincorporated society is capable of receiving a bequest of personalty not amounting to a trust: American Tract Soc. v. Atwater, 30 OS 77.

126. Whether a gift during the world war to the chancellor of the German empire in trust for needy German soldiers is valid or not, it does not render the rest of the will invalid: In re Schrader, 20 NP (NS) 433, 63 Bull 95.

Interest in property

For after-acquired realty, see case notes under RC § 2107.50.

138. A will, made in May, 1811, operated as a devise of a lot, which the deviser was in possession of, at the time of making the will, on a verbal contract of purchase, and for which he subsequently took a deed in his lifetime: Smith v. Jones, 4 O 115.

139. A husband cannot deprive his widow of her distributive share in his estate by leaving all his property to others: Doyle v. Doyle, 50 OS 330, 34 NE 166.

140. Equitable estates vest and descend as legal estates: Bolton v. Ohio Nat. Bank, 50 OS 290, 33 NE 1115.

141. The estate of a tenant in common cannot be affected or his right to compel partition defeated, deferred or limited by the provisions of the will of his cotenant, whereby he attempts to entail his estate including the lands owned as a cotenant: Lauer v. Green, 99 OS 20, 121 NE 821.

142. No disposition of property can be made by will except the party has an interest therein. Where a husband provided, in his will, that his wife might dispose of the residue of his estate as she saw fit, and she made a will disposing of same, but the wife died before the husband, the husband died intestate as to such residue: Thomas v. Hobson, 10 CC(NS) 351, 20 CD 214.

143. A bequest by a wife of all her property, both real and personal, to her husband, includes a policy of insurance on the life of her husband (who was still living), made payable to her, her executors, administrators and assigns: Schlachter v. Teeppen, 24 CC(NS) 30, 29 CD 650 [affirming Teeppen v. Schlachter, 18 NP(NS) 33].

144. The testator may die testate as to part of his property and intestate as to the rest: Hess v. American Bible Soc., 26 CC(NS) 439, 28 CD 172 [following Goff v. Moore, 20 CC(NS) 224].

145. One to whom an executory interest is bequeathed, with a provision that if he dies before testator's widow it shall pass to his issue if he has any, and, if not, to the survivors, cannot bequeath such interest by will if he dies before the death of the testator's widow and before the time of distribution fixed by the will: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370.

Evidence—who may testify

166. Testator's attorney is competent to testify, if a subscribing witness: Knepper v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476; Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

167. If the grounds have been laid properly for a hypothetical question, a physician who has qualified properly as an expert may give his opinion in answer to such question: Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

168. A nonexpert witness, even though not a subscribing witness, may give an opinion as to testator's sanity if he has first testified to the facts on which he bases his opinion: Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

169. The opinions of nonexpert witnesses as to the sanity of a testator are incompetent, where such witnesses do not qualify by giving the facts coming under their observation upon which their opinions are based: Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 2 App 182, 17 CC(NS) 275, sub nomine, Presbyterian Church v. Bevan, 24 CD 318 [affirmed, without opinion, Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 91 OS 395]; Ross v. Stewart, 15 App 339, 32 OCA 217; Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

170. In a proceeding to contest a will, a rule that communications by a client to an attorney are privileged, is not altered by the fact that the law partner of such attorney was a subscribing witness to the will: Haley v. Dempsey, 14 App 326 [motion to certify record overruled, Dempsey v. Haley, 19 OLR 155; judgment on retrial sustaining will affirmed by court of appeals; motion to certify record overruled, 21 OLR 300].

171. Nonexpert witnesses, other than subscribing witnesses to wills, are allowed to state their opinions as to the soundness of mind of a specific person only in connection with the facts upon which such opinion is based: Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 17 CC (NS) 275 [sub nomine, Presbyterian Church v. Bevan, 24 CD 318; affirmed, without opinion, Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 91 OS 395].

—Admissibility

176. A witness cannot state his opinion as to testator's capacity to make a will: Runyan v. Price, 15 OS 1; Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766; Burns v. Crowe, 31 OCA 566, 35 CD 468 [motion to certify record overruled, 17 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278]; see discussion in Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503

[reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

177. Evidence of a contradictory declaration made by a subscribing witness to a will cannot be offered at contest if such witness died before the trial of such case: Runyan v. Price, 15 OS 1; Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

178. The opinion of a witness as to testator's capacity to make a will is not admissible: Runyan v. Price, 15 OS 1.

179. When the opinion of a witness as to testator's sanity is admissible, it is his opinion when examined and not the opinion that he entertained at the execution of the will that must be offered: Runyan v. Price, 15 OS 1.

180. In a proceeding to contest a will, the question, "I will ask you to state now upon that occasion whether, in your judgment, he (the testator) had sufficient mind and memory to form an intention and purpose to dispose of his property by will," calls for the present recollection or opinion of the witness as to the mental condition of the testator at the time that he signed the instrument. Accordingly, it is not error to permit such question to be asked. If the answer to such question is "at the time I signed the will I thought he was, as far as I was capable of judging," such answer is not responsive to the question; but if no objection is made to it, and no motion is made to strike it out, it is not error for the court to permit it to go to the jury: Dunlap v. Dunlap, 89 OS 28, 104 NE 1006.

181. It is competent for the physician of a testator to express an opinion as to the actual condition of his patient's mind, founded on his study and observation of the testator while in professional attendance on him at the time and prior to the date of the will, and whether he was capable of comprehending large and complicated business propositions or the distribution of a large estate: Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

182. The testimony of an attorney is not competent to vary the terms of a written instrument prepared by him as such, and in a proceeding to construe a will the attorney who wrote the will, and with whom the testator consulted concerning it, is not competent to testify concerning a communication made to him by his client touching his estate, the objects of his bounty or the meaning and effect of provisions contained in the will: Knepper v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476.

183. Evidence of inferior capacity, not amounting to incapacity, is admissible on the issue of undue influence: Board of Education v. Phillips, 103 OS 622, 134 NE 646.

184. Evidence that testator was of advanced age and weak mentality, and that the beneficiary lived with testator on intimate terms and was also on intimate terms with the attorney who drew the will, is sufficient evidence of undue influence to require submission of the issue to the jury: Board of Education v. Phillips, 103 OS 622, 134 NE 646.

185. While it is not necessary that hypothetical questions submitted to expert witnesses should be based on conceded facts or be stated in the language of the witness, replies to such questions are incompetent where the questions are not based on facts which the testimony tends to prove: Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 2 App 182, 17 CC(NS) 275 [sub nomine, Presbyterian Church v. Bevan, 24 CD 318; affirmed, without opinion, Board of Foreign Missions v. Bevan, 91 OS 395].

186. Declarations of a subscribing witness, made after leaving the room in which the will was executed, cannot be admitted on the theory that they are part of the res gestae: Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

187. In determining whether a testator was suffering from an insane delusion at the time he made his will, the testimony of experts does not outweigh absolutely that of laymen who had known the testator for years, and had business transactions with him, and frequently met and conversed with him: Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449 [petition in error dismissed by consent, Ross v. Caldwell, 50 Bull 108].

188. An expert may not be called upon to say whether one was competent to make a particular will, but only whether, in his opinion, his mental capacity was such as the law requires for the making of a valid will: Walsh v. Walsh, 18 CC(NS) 91, 32 CD 617.

189. Hypothetical questions as to testator's mental condition cannot be asked a witness who is not an expert, even upon cross-examination: Hathaway v. Farley, 22 CC(NS) 462, 33 CD 668 [affirmed, without opinion, 76 OS 562].

190. While it is incorrect to hold that a photograph of testator is always inadmissible in evidence if the question of his capacity is raised, it is not reversible error for the trial court to exclude a photograph which was taken when testator was eighty-two years of age, if he did not execute his will until he was ninety-one years of age: Rogers v. Monroe, 26 CC(NS) 193, 29 CD 558.

191. Declarations of a testator made either before, after, or at the time of the execution of the will are competent as evidence as tending to prove mental capacity of testator, but are not competent to prove undue influence nor, in most cases, to prove forgery: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

192. Declarations of a legatee are admissible to show a general intent or disposition to exercise undue influence over the testator: Otte v. Bullock, 22 NP (NS) 305, 31 OD 177.

193. When contestants of a will have produced evidence from which legitimate inferences could be drawn that a daughter had acquired a dominating influence over the testator five years preceding the will, declarations of the testator just preceding this period are not too remote to be admissible as material evidence of the last free exercise of his faculties and as showing his testamentary intentions: Otte v. Bullock, 22 NP(NS) 305, 31 OD 177.

194. An answer that witness "never did think" that testator was of sound mind, shows the opinion of the witness at the time of giving his answer and not at the time at which he had observed testator: Otte v. Bullock, 22 NP(NS) 305, 31 OD 177.

195. The opinion of a nonexpert witness that a testator was mentally unsound is admissible only after he has testified to some fact or circumstance indicating mental weakness or unsoundness in some degree, and must be confined to the opinion of the witness as to the mental condition of the testator at the time of observation: Kohl v. Kohl, 22 NP(NS) 171, 31 OD 27.

—Presumptions

200. It will be presumed that a will was drawn in accordance with the wishes of testator: Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion to certify record overruled, 61 Bull 152]; Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

201. The so-called presumption of undue influence arising from confidential relations between testator and beneficiary is a mere inference of fact and not a presumption of law regarding which the court should charge the jury: Haley v. Dempsey, 14 App 326 [motion to certify record overruled, Dempsey v. Haley, 19 OLR 155; judgment on retrial sustained will affirmed by court of appeals; motion to certify record overruled, Haley v. Dempsey, 21 OLR 300].

Jury charges

207. In an action contesting a will, it is error to charge that the law scrutinizes with greater care the acts of a son or daughter who is remembered in a will to a larger extent than any others bearing the same kinship, if such son or daughter is in close relationship of trust or confidence, or upon whom a testatrix would implicitly rely, than it would on others bearing no such relationship: Hall v. Hall, 78 OS 415, 85 NE 1125.

208. For a charge of a trial court where the attending physician of testator was a witness to a codicil, and such witness signed an affidavit to the effect that the testator was of sound mind, while at the trial he gives as his opinion that testator was not of sound mind, see Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

209. For a charge as to capacity, see Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC (NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

210. An instruction that there is no valid will unless the jury believe from the evidence that testator, of his own free will, not only intended to make such disposition of his property as made in the alleged will, but was also capable of knowing what he was doing, understanding to whom he was giving his property and in what proportions, and whom he was depriving of it as his heir who would otherwise have inherited it, and was also capable of understanding the reasons for giving or withholding his bounty to them, is improper. The charge should have been to the effect that the will was valid unless the jury find from the evidence that testator did not make such disposition purposely and of his own free will: West v. Knoppenberger, 4 CC(NS) 305, 16 CD 168.

211. It is not error to charge that, in order to make a valid will, "it is necessary a person shall have sufficient mental capacity for the transaction of the ordinary affairs of life," when this was followed in a later paragraph by the express statement that "he need not have sufficient capacity to make a contract, but must understand substantially what he is doing and the nature of the act in which he or she is engaged": Welsh Baptist Church v. Wilson, 9 CC(NS) 611, 19 CD 391 [affirmed, without opinion, 75 OS 636].

212. A charge that "capacity enough to attend to ordinary business, and to know and understand the business he was engaged in," lacks essential requisites of testamentary capacity to make a will, and is misleading and prejudicial: Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110.

213. The charge that "it is not essential to the validity of a will that all or any of the subscribing witnesses should testify that the testatrix was of sound mind and memory, provided you find from all the evidence before you that she was of sound mind and memory," is proper: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88, 28 CD 442 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545].

214. It is error to refuse to charge in a will case, that a person who attaches his name as a witness to a testamentary instrument impliedly certifies that the testator is of sound mind, and competent to make a will, and while the law will permit him to subsequently testify to the contrary, because the truth, if such it be, should be learned, yet the jury in weighing his testimony may consider the fact of such implied contradiction: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC (NS) 88, 28 CD 442 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP (NS) 545].

215. It is erroneous to charge a jury that undue influence "is coercion produced by importunity, or by a silent, resistless power, which the strong will often exercises over the weak and infirm, so that the motive was tantamount to force or fear": Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

216. It is not error to charge that the law gives to testatrix "The right to dispose of her property by last will and testament lawfully executed in any way she saw fit. . . . You are not at liberty to make a will for her. That was her right. You are simply to decide whether the one she had made was sanctioned by and fulfilled the requirements of the law": Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

REVOCABLE LIVING TRUSTS

Effect of agreement

222. Catherine Hawkins during her lifetime entered into an agreement with a trust company whereby she delivered certain personal property to it in trust and reserved to herself the power to alter, amend, or revoke the trust. The agreement further provided that the trust company should invest, manage, and control the property but that all such investments should be made only with the written consent and approval of the creator of the trust. The net income was to be paid to the creator during her lifetime and at her death, by virtue of a supplemental agreement, the trust company was to distribute the trust fund to certain named beneficiaries. The instrument was not executed in accordance with the requirements of the statute of wills. Catherine Hawkins died intestate and left no creditors. The court held that:

"1. Where the owner of property executes to another an instrument under or in connection with which he does not divest himself of the title to any of his estate but provides for the disposition of such property at or after his death and it becomes operative to transfer the property only at the time and by reason of his death, such instrument is testamentary in character.

"2. At common law a trust instrument intended to operate as a conveyance of property at and after the death of the settlor must be consummated by such a distinct and absolute delivery of property by the settlor to the trustee for the benefit of the named beneficiaries as to be a relinquishment of dominion over it by the settlor.

"3. The amendment of § 8617, General Code (RC § 1335.01), effective August 14, 1921, authorizes a trust agreement, including the power to alter, amend or revoke the trust, and by virtue of that amendment a trust agreement making a transfer or conveyance of property including such power and to take effect at the death of the creator of the trust, will effect such transfer and conveyance, although the instrument be not executed in conformity with the law of wills": Union Trust Co. v. Hawkins, 121 OS 159, 167 NE 389 [reversing court of appeals of Cuyahoga county which had held that the supplementary agreement was ineffectual to pass the trust fund upon the death of Catherine Hawkins, to the beneficiaries therein named].

Except oral wills, every last will and testament shall be in writing, but may be handwritten or typewritten. Such will shall be signed at the end by the party making it, or by some other person in such party's presence and at his express direction, and be attested and subscribed in the presence of such party, by two or more competent witnesses, who saw the testator subscribe, or heard him acknowledge his signature.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-3; 114 v 320 (346). Eff 10-1-53. See former GC § 10505.

Comment

General Code § 10504-3 superseded former GC § 10505. The words "his signature" were substituted for the word "it" at the end of the section, and the necessity for an acknowledgment that the writing is a will was done away with. Under the former statute it was not necessary that the testator should acknowledge that the writing was his will when the testator affixed his signature in the presence of the witnesses, but when he affixed his signature in the absence of the witnesses, then it was necessary that he should declare in their presence that the instrument was his will. See Underwood v. Rutan, 101 OS 306, 128 NE 78 [distinguishing Keyl v. Feuchter, 56 OS 424, 47 NE 140].

Scope and effect

1. General Code § 10504-3 (RC § 2107.03) requires that, in order to be valid and effective, a will must comply with certain definite formalities. The reason for such formalities is to prevent the diversion of a decedent's estate from those who would take it under the statutes of descent and distribution except in instances where the decedent has clearly and deliberately expressed an intention to so divert it. Sherman v. Johnson, 159 OS 209, 50 OO 257, 112 NE(2d) 326.

1.1 In Ohio the making, probating and contesting of wills is controlled by the statutes: Kelley v. Hazard, 96 OS 19, 117 NE 182; In re Murray, 20 NP (NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

2. The statutory requirements providing for the execution of wills must be complied with regardless of the apparent intention of the testator: In re Borgman, 61 OLA 429, 105 NE(2d) 69 (App).

2.1 Where testatrix made her mark in the presence of two persons whom she had asked to sign as witnesses, there was no statutory duty upon testatrix to acknowledge her mark or signature: Kemp v. Matthews, 89 OLA 524, 183 NE(2d) 259 (App.).

3. The object of requiring the execution of wills to conform to a statutory formula, in order to render them valid, is to prevent fraud upon heirs at law in the distribution of the estate of their ancestors, and courts in the construction of these provisions should have this object in mind, and should not place such a liberal construction, in order to sustain the execution, that the object of the statute would be destroyed: Slemmons v. Toland, 25 CC(NS) 485, 28 CD 455.

4. A will is valid only if executed in accordance with the provisions of this section: Tims v. Tims, 14 CC(NS) 273, 22 CD 506.

5. A statute which changes the requirements of a valid will does not apply to wills already executed: Giddings v. Schmuck, 20 CC(NS) 142, 31 CD 238 [affirmed, without opinion, 90 OS 465].

6. This section does not apply to a contract by a devisee to hold in trust for certain beneficiaries: Winder v. Scholey, 83 OS 204, 93 NE 1098, 33 LRA (NS) 995 [affirming circuit court, which affirmed Scholey v. Winder, 10 NP(NS) 642, 21 OD 59].

7. A power to dispose of lands by will must be executed with the same formalities as are necessary in a deed directly conveying the land: Boltz v. Riley, 18 CC(NS) 71, 24 CD 178 [reversed, without opinion, Riley v. Boltz, 90 OS 447].

8. If a will of personalty is made in a foreign jurisdiction, and thereafter the testator becomes domiciled in Ohio, the will cannot be probated here unless it is executed in accordance with the laws of this state: In re Strasburger, 23 OLR 216.

9. Where, in an action to contest a will, it is evident from the testimony that the will was not read either to or by the testator, that it was not acknowledged by him, and that he had no knowledge of what it contained, it can not be said that such will was executed by the testator in such a manner as to comply with the requirements of GC § 10505; and the verdict of a jury sustaining such a will is not sustained by the evidence and will be set aside: Koch v. Meyers, 7 App 306, 29 OCA 142.

In writing

14. A will may be partly written and partly printed: Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104, 82 NE 1067, 17 LRA(NS) 353; Roush v. Wensel, 15 CC 133, 8 CD 141.

15. It is not necessary that the will be written on the same grade of paper or the same size sheets of paper: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

16. Executed and attested carbon copies of a will cannot be admitted to probate in lieu of the original last will and testament: In re Steel, 37 OO(2d) 70, 219 NE(2d) 237 (PC).

Signed at end

22. A will not signed at the end is invalid: Glancy v. Glancy, 17 OS 134; Irwin v. Jacques, 71 OS 395, 73 NE 683, 69 LRA 422; Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104, 82 NE 1067, 17 LRA(NS) 353; Honious v. Honious, 102 OS 693, 135 NE 975; Herbster v. Pincombe, 10 App 322, 31 OCA 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Pincombe v. Herbster, 16 OLR 79, 63 Bull 195]; Schubert v. Christman, 16 App 432.

23. Where decedent, in his lifetime, drew a will and signed it, but without having it witnessed, and later added a clause making an additional devise of the property mentioned in the will, and then had it witnessed, but without again signing the same himself "at the end thereof," the whole instrument was invalid as a last will and testament: Glancy v. Glancy, 17 OS 134.

24. The act of 1840 (1 Curwen's Stat., § 685) changed the law as to execution of wills. Under this act, wills were to be signed "at the end thereof," which was not required in the acts of 1824 and 1831, and foreign wills executed and proved according to the foreign law, could be admitted to record in this state: Jones v. Robinson, 17 OS 171.

25. The words "the executrix is not required to give bond," added below the place of signing, do not avoid the rest of the will as not being signed at the end thereof: Baker v. Baker, 51 OS 217, 37 NE 125.

26. Where there was written, on the left margin of a will, a dispositive clause extending lengthwise from the bottom to the top of the page, and not connected with the body of the instrument by any words or marks to show where it is to be read in relation to the other provisions, and the testimony shows that the marginal matter was written after all the other provisions, at the request of the testator and before he attached his signature, then such will is not signed at the end thereof and is invalid: Irwin v. Jacques, 71 OS 395, 73 NE 683, 69 LRA 422.

27. Where the testator omitted to sign at the end of the testimonium clause, but did write his name in the attestation clause immediately following, it was held that the will was not signed at the end thereof: Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104, 82 NE 1067, 17 LRA(NS) 353 [see also Mauk v. Shellabarger, 84 OS 461; for the opposite view in the probate court, see In re Nicholson, 2 NP(NS) 189, 49 Bull 379]; Honious v. Honious, 102 OS 693, 135 NE 975, 19 OLR 91.

28. A will is not invalidated by a space between dispositive and testimonium clauses, where it is signed directly after the testimonium clause and under this is the attesting clause and the signatures of the witnesses: Mader v. Apple, 80 OS 691, 89 NE 37, 131 AmSt 719, 23 LRA(NS) 515 [reversing 6 NP(NS) 592, 18 OD 801]; Crafts v. Wilber, 9 NP(NS) 161, 19 OD 421.

29. If testator does not sign the will nor authorize another to sign his name in his presence, the will is not properly signed: West v. Lucas, 106 OS 255, 139 NE 859.

30. If the only signature of testator appears in the testimonium clause, the will is not signed at the end: Schubert v. Christman, 16 App 432.

31. A will is signed at the end thereof, as required by the statute, when the signature of the testator appears after the will, just below a line intended in a blank form for the signature and in a blank space in the attestation clause intended for the name of the testator as part thereof, said name also appearing in the attestation clause, in the handwriting of the scrivener of the will, just below the testator's signature in such position as to read as a part of said attestation clause: Giddings v. Schmuck, 20 CC(NS) 142, 31 CD 238 [affirmed, without opinion, 90 OS 465; distinguishing Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104 (see also Mauk v. Shellabarger, 84 OS 461)].

32. The end of the will is the blank line intended for his signature immediately after the testimonium clause, even if by mistake in transposing the different sheets on which the will is written, the sheet on which the testimonium clause and the signature of testator are found, is placed in front of a sheet of paper on which dispositive provisions are found: Chandler v. Dockman, 8 App 113, 28 OCA 297, 29

33. A will is not signed at the end thereof, as required by the statute, where the testator's name and the words "his mark" appear, in the handwriting of the scrivener, on the line where the signature of the testator is customarily inserted at the end of the testimonium clause and the space between the words "his" and "mark" is blank, but an X appears between the given name and surname of the testator on the first line of the attestation clause: Herbster v. Pincombe, 10 App 322, 31 OCA 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Pincombe v. Herbster, 16 OLR 79, 63 Bull 195].

34. Where a will and the codicil thereto are both legally executed, the fact that the codicil was written in the blank space between the last dispositive item and the testimonium clause does not invalidate the instrument: Clark v. Carpenter, 14 App 278, 32 OCA 87.

35. A will which is written on a double sheet of legal cap paper, to which a small sheet of paper is pinned, containing a dispositive clause added before execution, is said not to be signed at the end: Smith v. Ellis, 15 App 38 [motion to certify record overruled, Ellis v. Smith, 19 OLR 512].

36. In determining validity of will containing decedent's mark instead of signature, it was duty of court to pass on question whether will was lawfully attested and executed from face of instrument itself and evidence, and submission of question to jury was prejudicial error: Hayes v. Halle, 23 App 522, 155 NE 493.

37. A probate court has no jurisdiction to admit to probate, as a will, an instrument which is not signed at the end thereof by the purported maker, and an order of a probate court admitting such an instrument is a nullity and may be collaterally attacked: In re Eakins, 63 App 265, 16 OO 583, 26 NE(2d) 219, discussed in 7 OSLJ 105.

38. Where a will is written on two sheets of paper which are continuous in sense even though in fastening them together the sheet containing testimonium clause and signature is placed on top, the will is signed at the end thereof as required by former GC § 10505 (now GC § 10504-3 [RC § 2107.03]): Lyon v. Lyon, 16 OO 2 (App).

39. Under the provisions of this section a holographic instrument is signed at the end by the party making it where the following appears at the end of all dispositive items: "I Clara M. Smith, have subscribed my name this the 28th day of August, 1940. Signed and acknowledged by Clara M. Smith as and for her last Will and Testament in her presence and in the presence of each other have subscribed our names as witnesses. John S. Leggett, Mrs. Olga M. Leggett," and the same is entitled to probate as a last will and testament: In re Smith, 27 OO 520, 13 OSupp 66 (PC).

Signature by another

44. For signature for testator by another, see Haynes v. Haynes, 33 OS 598; Trembley v. Trembley, 5 OD(NP) 750, 4 OLR 545, 11 Bull 59.

46. Where signature to will is by mark, it is presumed, in contest of will, in absence of contrary showing, that signature was made by express direction, and mark inserted by testator: Aston v. Hauck, 22 App 430, 153 NE 277.

48. A will may be admitted to probate where there is a mark consisting of a cross which the witnesses testified was put there by the testatrix with the assistance of one of the witnesses, although the name of the testatrix does not appear anywhere in the body of the will or at the end thereof: In re Ryan, 23 OO 356, 9 OSupp 29 (PC).

49. A will is not properly signed by testator if, while he is unconscious, a pen is put in his hand and a mark is made therewith: West v. Lucas, 106 OS 255, 139 NE 859.

Acknowledgment of signature by testator

54. The witnesses need not see the testator sign. It is enough if he acknowledges his signature to them: Reynolds v. Shirley, 7 O (pt2) 39.

55. If one necessary witness signed when testator had not signed the will, and there was no evidence that testator, at any subsequent time, signed the will in the presence of such witness or acknowledged his signature to him, the will was held to be invalid since there was no acknowledgment by the maker, either of the paper as his will, or of his signature thereto, in the presence of such subscribing witness: Keyl v. Feuchter, 56 OS 424, 47 NE 140.

56. If the subscribing witnesses signed when the will was so folded that they could not see whether testator had signed or not, the will was held to be invalid: Missionary Soc. v. Ely, 61 OS 636, 57 NE 1133 [without opinion; for argument, etc., see 42 Bull 273; contra, In re Nicholson, 2 NP(NS) 189, 49 Bull 378, which was held erroneous on other grounds in Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104 (see also Mauk v. Shellabarger, 84 OS 461)].

57. If the subscribing witnesses signed when testator had not signed, and four days later he signed in their presence, the court held that the will was valid since it was deemed to have been attested by the subscribing witnesses at the time of the testator's signature: Bloechle v. Davis, 132 OS 415, 8 OO 249, 8 NE(2d) 247, discussed in 9 OO 46. (In this case no reference is made to the earlier cases.)

58. Acknowledgment need not be in express words, but may be inferred from signs, motions, conduct, or attendant circumstances: Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 OS 307; In re Kail, 16 OO(2d) 93, 176 NE(2d) 850 (App).

59. Where a will has been signed for the testator by another person, in his presence and by his express direction, in the absence of the attesting witnesses, the acknowledgment of the fact by the testator in the hearing of the witnesses, which is requisite, is not required to be made in any particular form of words, or in any specified manner; but, if by signs, motions, conduct or attending circumstances, the attesting witnesses are given to understand, by the testator, that he acknowledges the signature thereto as his, and the instrument itself as a will, it is sufficient: Haynes v. Haynes, 33 OS 598.

61. When a woman asked two friends to be witnesses to her will, and said to them "This is my will," and the witnesses, at the time, saw upon the instrument some writing and the only other writing on it was the signature of the testatrix, prima facie proof is made that she acknowledged her signature as required by this section: In re Fisher, 67 App 6, 21 OO 44, 35 NE(2d) 784.

62. Where the witnesses to a will signed at the request of the testatrix who produced the instrument for the purpose of acknowledgment, all of the requirements of this section were complied with providing the testatrix had previously signed the will: In re Borgman, 61 OLA 429, 105 NE(2d) 69 (App).

63. Signature by A for testator in testator's presence is equivalent to testator's acknowledgment of such signature to A: Trembley v. Trembley, 5 OD (NP) 750, 4 OLR 545, 11 Bull 59.

64. It is not necessary that an acknowledgment be made in the presence of both witnesses at the same time or by any particular form of words: Eggleston v. Gardner, 16 CC(NS) 455, 31 CD 627.

65. Request in will contest to charge that every will must be in writing and signature of testator and that of witnesses subscribed as one continuous transaction held properly refused as not correctly stating law: Scholl v. Sterkel, 46 App 389, 189 NE 15, 40 OLR 9.

67. Attestation and subscription of witnesses to a will are two separate and distinct acts, and both are necessary in proper execution of a will: In re Pittis, 29 NP(NS) 41.

68. A will is properly subscribed by witnesses when they sign their names thereto in presence of testator, but it is not properly attested unless witnesses see testator sign his name, or hear him acknowledge either the paper as his will or his signature thereto: In re Pittis, 29 NP(NS) 41.

69. A will is properly executed if it is signed at the end by the maker in the presence of two subscribing witnesses even though the witnesses have no knowledge that the instrument signed is a will: In re Maurer, 31 NP(NS) 247; In re Williamson, 6 NP 79, 8 OD 47 [reversing In re Williamson, 5 NP 1, 6 OD 505].

71. Where a will was signed by the testator in one room and then taken into another room where at the request of testator it was signed by two witnesses, but no express acknowledgment by the testator of his signature which was visible to the witness or of the nature of the instrument was made, the requirements of this section, relative to the execution of wills, have been complied with, since the production of the instrument and the request that the witnesses sign, imported that the signature to be witnessed was that of the testator and that he acknowledged it to be his: Blagg v. Blagg, 55 App 518, 9 OO 180, 9 NE(2d) 991.

72. Where the signature of the maker of a purported will appears at the end of a typewritten attestation clause, it is "signed at the end by the party making it," as required by this section, if the word "witnesses" appears in ink after the signatures of the witnesses, and if the instrument is so written as to guard against fraudulent additions: In re Mazurie, 9 OO 163 (PC).

Publication

77. It was formerly said that the witnesses must know that the instrument was a will: Keyl v. Feuchter, 56 OS 424, 47 NE 140. See also Missionary Soc. v. Ely, 61 OS 636, 57 NE 1133 [without opinion; for argument, etc., see 42 Bull 273].

78. This obiter was followed in Tims v. Tims, 14 CC(NS) 273, 22 CD 506, and in Koch v. Meyers, 7 App 306, 29 OCA 142, 30 CD 439.

79. It is now held that where two subscribing witnesses have seen a testatrix subscribe her name to a will by directing another to sign her name thereto in her presence, the testatrix attaching her mark thereto, and the signature so made is then attested and subscribed by said witnesses in the testatrix's presence, the will is properly executed. In such case it is not necessary that the testatrix declare that the instrument is her will or that she has signed it. (Keyl v. Feuchter, 56 OS 424, 47 NE 140, distinguished): Underwood v. Rutan, 101 OS 306, 128 NE 78.

80. This decision [case note 79] was anticipated in In re Leffel's Will, 8 NP(NS) 591, 54 Bull 336.

81. See also, to the same effect, In re Williamson's Will, 6 NP 79, 8 OD 47; In re Reckard, 15 NP(NS) 465, 24 OD 609.

82. For a discussion of the distinction between "acknowledgment" and "publication," see In re Reckard, 15 NP(NS) 465, 24 OD 609.

Subscribing witnesses

88. Proof that will was signed by testatrix and her signature was attested by two subscribing witnesses, is sufficient proof of due execution under former GC § 10505 (see now RC § 2107.03). That section only required that subscribing witnesses see testatrix subscribe and did not require that testatrix make declaration of fact that it was her will: Glanz v. Bauer, 7 OLA 165.

90. The provision of this section which requires that a will must be signed by two or more competent witnesses, refers to the execution of the will, and not to the amount of testimony which must be offered at probate. The probate court may admit a will to probate although one subscribing witness testifies to facts which amount to a due execution of the will, even though the other subscribing witness testifies that the signature of the testator was not upon the will when he signed it as a witness and that he did not sign it in the presence of the testator. The questions as to the credibility of such witnesses are for the probate court: In re Watts, 19 NP(NS) 225, 27 OD 87.

91. In the absence of direct testimony that the provisions of RC § 2107.03, relating to the method for the execution of wills, has been complied with as to signature and acknowledgment, there must be some evidence upon which an inference of implied acknowledgment can be based, and probate will be refused where the witnesses to the will testified not only that they neither saw testatrix sign the instrument nor heard her acknowledge it, but also that they at no time prior to probate saw testatrix's signature on the instrument, even though both witnesses were able to testify that the signature on the will was that of testatrix: In re LaMar, 77 OLA 140, 146 NE(2d) 472 (PC).

—Competency

For competency, etc., of witnesses to a nuncupative will, see case notes under RC § 2107.60.

95. Unless modified by statute, the rule of the common law controls the competency of witnesses and the question of interest: Vrooman v. Powers, 47 OS 191, 24 NE 267, 8 LRA 39.

96. While an attorney cannot testify as to confidential communications made to him by testator, he may, if he is a subscribing witness, testify as any other subscribing witness may: Collins v. Collins, 110 OS 105, 143 NE 561, 38 ALR 230.

96.1 Where a written will is signed by a testator and attested and subscribed in the presence of such testator by two witnesses who are attorneys practicing law as partners, one of whom prepared such will, and who are nominated in such will as executor and alternate executor, respectively, such witnesses are competent within the meaning of this section, requiring such will to be attested and subscribed to "by two or more competent witnesses," and such will, if otherwise valid, is not thereby invalidated: Blankner v. Lathrop, 169 OS 229, 8 OO(2d) 221, 159 NE(2d) 229.

97. Parties who are financially interested in the construction of a will, and whose rights will be affected by the decision of the court, are not competent to appear as witnesses: Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43 [on appeal from 13 NP(NS) 1, where the same conclusion was reached].

97.1 A witness is not incompetent as a subscribing witness to a will because he is also named as an executor or trustee: Fazekas v. Gobozy, 78 OLA 258, 150 NE(2d) 319.

97.2 An executor who is not also a legatee or devisee is competent to be one of the necessary witnesses: Blankner v. Lathrop, 79 OLA 6, 154 NE(2d) 95.

98. One who signs testator's name to a will may also be a subscribing witness: Trembley v. Trembley,

5 OD(NP) 750, 4 OLR 545, 11 Bull 59.

99. General Code § 11494 (RC § 2317.02) disqualifies an attorney from testifying "concerning a communication made to him by his client in that relation, or his advice to his client," except by the express consent of the client, and when a testator procures his attorney as a subscribing witness to his will he by that act expressly consents that the attorney may testify as fully as any other subscribing witness touching the capacity of the testator or any other fact affecting the validity of the will. The object of requesting a person to witness a will is to assure the legal execution of the will and preserve the evidence thereto: Knepper v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476.

100. A client who requests his attorney to prepare his will and to act as a subscribing witness consents that such attorney may testify as fully as any other subscribing witness; and the client thereby waives the exemption of GC § 11494 (RC § 2317.02): Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

—Attestation

106. "Attest" means to bear witness to, to certify, to affirm to be true or genuine: In re Reckard, 15 NP(NS) 465, 24 OD 609.

107. Where the testator, before requesting witnesses to sign, had so folded the paper that they could not see that it contained any writing at all and one of them could see only the word "witness" and not testator's signature, execution is defective: Missionary Soc. v. Ely, 61 OS 636, 57 NE 1133 [without opinion; for argument, etc., see 42 Bull 473; contra, In re Nicholson, 2 NP(NS) 189, 49 Bull 378, which was held erroneous on other grounds in Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104 (see also Mauk v. Shellabarger, 84 OS 461)].

109. If the subscribing witnesses signed before testator signed, and testator then signed in their presence at the same transaction, the will was held to be valid: Slemmons v. Toland, 5 App 201, 25 CC(NS) 485, 28 CD 455.

110. The fact that one subscribing witness forgets the facts of execution, does not render a will invalid: Egbert v. Egbert, 10 App 432, 29 OCA 584 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 507, 64 Bull 61].

—Signature

115. Indorsements upon a will signed by the testator but not witnessed as provided by law are not codicils: Porterfield v. Porterfield, 4 NP(NS) 654, 17 OD 448.

116. Where a witness to a will took part in the physical act of writing his name as a witness by holding pencil while name was written by another at his direction, at testator's request and in his presence, he was an effectual subscribing witness: In re Catchel, 29 NP(NS) 206.

—Mutual presence

121. Witnesses need not sign at the same time or in the presence of each other: Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 OS 307.

122. A will executed and probated in a sister state, whereof an authenticated copy has been duly admitted to record in this state, read as follows: "Signed, sealed, and published in presence," the will being signed at the end thereof by the testator and three witnesses. Held: In the absence of proof to the contrary, it will be presumed that the testator and witnesses signed in the presence of each other: Carpenter v. Denoon, 29 OS 379.

123. By virtue of this section, it is not necessary to the validity of a last will and testament that the attesting and subscribing witnesses thereto sign the same in the presence of each other: McFadden v. Thomas, 154 OS 405, 43 OO 340, 96 NE(2d) 254.

Republication

128. In Ohio a will and a codicil are to be regarded as different parts of the same instrument; and a codicil may operate as a republication of a defectively executed will: Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion to certify record overruled, 61 Bull 152, and citing Mack v. Bonner, 3 OS 366; Black v. Webb, 20 O 304].

129. Even if testator executes a will without knowing its contents, such will is rendered valid by the subsequent execution by testator of a valid codicil to such will after such will and codicil have been read over to him: Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion to certify record overruled, 61 Bull 152].

130. The republication of a will which has been once revoked must be attended by the same formalities as were required to render valid its original execution: Crane v. Tunkey, 11 OLR 454, 58 Bull 316.

Evidence

139. Even though all who have apparently signed an instrument as attesting witnesses affirmatively testify that the instrument was not executed according to law, such execution and attestation may be established by other competent evidence: In re Lyons, 166 OS 207, 2 OO(2d) 26, 141 NE(2d) 151.

140. An affidavit of the testator, made contemporaneously with the will but not executed conformably to the wills act nor referred to in the will, cannot be employed to vary or add to the clear dispositive terms of the will: Leopold v. Weaver, 9 App 379, 29 OCA 567 [motion to certify record overruled, Weaver v. Leopold, 16 OLR 465, 64 Bull 40].

141. A declaration made by a testator to the effect that he has made a will, or that he has revoked a will, is not independent evidence of such fact, and it is not admissible without some foundation of direct evidence or presumption as to the existence of such fact: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

142. Where the proof of record shows testatrix was of full age, sound mind and memory, and not under any restraint, and the proffered will is typewritten, testamentary in character, with a testimonium clause and attestation clause reciting all essentials of due execution, and signed at the end by testatrix and attested by two subscribing witnesses, one of whom is deceased and the signature of the deceased witness, together with that of the testatrix and the surviving attesting witness are shown by substantial evidence to be genuine, a prima facie case in favor of the validity of the will is established, so that where the surviving attesting witness testifies in substance that testatrix requested her to witness what she stated to be her will, which was lying on the table, folded in such a manner that the witness could not see whether there was any other signature thereon other than that of the first subscribing attesting witness who was not present, and the surviving witness did not see the testatrix sign the will, nor did testatrix acknowledge her signature by spoken word, the probate court is required to disregard such testimony against the validity of the will and must admit the will to probate on the prima facie case of record, which includes an appraisal of all the surrounding facts and circumstances attending the execution of the will, and it is prejudicial error for the probate court to determine the ultimate issue of due execution of the will as on contest against the validity of the will, in the face of substantial evidence making a prima facie case in favor of the validity of the will: Roosa v. Wickward, 90 App 213, 47 OO 207, 105 NE(2d) 454.

143. The presumption that a will was duly executed can be overcome by other evidence, but not by the mere absence of evidence: In re McGraw, 14 OApp(2d) 87, 43 OO(2d) 207, 236 NE(2d) 684.

144. There is a strong presumption that a will drawn by an attorney who directed its execution and was present when it was executed was regularly executed: In re McGraw, 14 OApp(2d) 87, 43 OO(2d) 207, 236 NE(2d) 684.

Charge

146. For charge as to execution, see Slemmons v. Toland, 5 App 201, 25 CC(NS) 485, 28 CD 455; Eggleston v. Gardner, 16 CC(NS) 455, 31 CD 627.

147. For a charge as to the effect of the evidence of the subscribing witness, see Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP (NS) 545].

§ 2107.04 Agreement to make a will. (GC § 10504-3a)

No agreement to make a will or to make a devise or bequest by will shall be enforceable unless it is in writing. Such agreement must be signed by the maker or by some other person at such maker's express direction. If signed by a person other than such maker, the instrument must be subscribed by two or more competent witnesses who heard such maker acknowledge that it was signed at his direction.

1. An oral agreement to make a will is not enforceable by virtue of the provisions of this section: McGlone v. Gompert, 52 OO 77, 112 FSupp 840.

1.1 The mere fact that wills are executed concurrently, with full knowledge of their contents on the part of the testators, will not be sufficient to imply a contract to make mutual wills: McGlone v. Gompert, 52 OO 77, 112 FSupp 840.

1.2 In an action for specific performance of an alleged contract to make mutual and irrevocable wills leaving all property to the plaintiff, testimony concerning conversations had by the witnesses with plaintiff's stepmother shortly after the death of plaintiff's father is inadmissible under the provisions of this section: McGlone v. Gompert, 52 OO 77, 112 FSupp 840.

1.3 A promise to make a will in favor of a party, supported by sufficient consideration and in due form of law, is a valid contract and may be specifically enforced against the heirs of the promisor: Emery v. Darling, 50 OS 160, 33 NE 715.

1.4 A suit upon a contract to devise and bequeath all of an estate in consideration for personal services, which asks that the executor be ordered to pay over the residue of the personal property, and the heirs be ordered to convey the realty, is a suit for specific performance: Foltz v. Boone, 107 OS 562, 140 NE 761.

1.5 When an interest in a business is sold to two persons, by agreement in writing, and one of purchasers enters into a contemporaneous oral agreement to leave real estate to vendors by will, completed transfer of the business with payment of specified amount constitutes such part performance of contract as whole as takes the case out of both general statute of frauds, GC § 8621, and specific statute of frauds, this section: Ayres v. Cook, 140 OS 281, 23 OO 491, 43 NE(2d) 287.

2. An oral contract to make a will is unenforceable by virtue of this section, and payment of consideration by one in whose favor the contract is made, whether that payment consists of money or pecuniarily compensable services, will not remove such a contract from the operation of the section: Snyder v. Warde, 151 OS 426, 39 OO 253, 86 NE(2d) 489.

4. Where a writing does not contain words which can be reasonably construed as words of promise or agreement or as an indication of any contract or agreement, such writing cannot be a memorandum or note of any agreement within the meaning of GC § 8621 (RC § 1335.05) or an agreement in writing within the meaning of GC § 10504-3a (RC § 2107.04): Sherman v. Johnson, 159 OS 209, 50 OO 257, 112 NE(2d) 326.

6. By virtue of GC § 10504-3a (RC § 2107.04), an agreement to make a will or to make a devise or bequest by will is not enforceable under any circumstances unless it is in writing: Sherman v. Johnson, 159 OS 209, 50 OO 257, 112 NE(2d) 326.

6.1 In an action against the executor or administrator of a decedent's estate to subject the estate to the payment of a claim, where the petition alleges that there is an oral contract between the plaintiff and the decedent, and where the contract as alleged indicates that it created a monetary obligation of the decedent existing in his lifetime, although such obligation was not, by the terms of the contract, to be discharged until at or after the death of the decedent, such petition does not allege a contract to make a will, within the meaning of GC § 10504-3a (RC § 2107.04), and states facts sufficient to show a cause of action: Moore v. Curtzweiler, 165 OS 194, 59 OO 263, 134 NE(2d) 835.

6.2 While a contract by which one agrees that a certain person shall inherit from him as if such person was his legitimate child, does not bind the promisor to leave any property at his death, and while it possibly does not prevent him from conveying his property gratuitously during his lifetime, or devising it to another by his last will, such contract is broken by the death of the promisor intestate and without making any provision, by deed or will, to perform such contract; and one to whom such property descends may be held in equity as trustee for the promisee: Snyder v. Shuttleworth, 5 App 137, 25 CC(NS) 545, 27 CD 234.

6.3 The measure of damages for breach of a contract to make provision by will, without specifying the kind of property or amount of the money, is the value of services rendered under such contract: Schulte v. Hagemeyer, 16 App 1 [motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 147].

7. An action was instituted upon an oral contract made prior to the effective date of this section to make a bequest in consideration of the performance of services as a physician, during the remainder of the promisor's life. Performance of all conditions precedent was alleged. At the trial the plaintiff failed to prove that he was ready, willing and able to perform the services. For that reason he was not entitled to judgment: Heyn v. Kahn, 69 App 274, 24 OO 64, 39 NE(2d) 866 [affirming 19 OO 29 (CP); appeal dismissed, 140 OS 337].

9. The doctrine of partial performance may be applied in an action in equity to enforce the provisions of an oral contract to devise real estate by will, notwithstanding GC § 8621 (RC § 1335.05) and this section: Emley v. Selepchak, 76 App 257, 31 OO 558, 63 NE(2d) 919.

10. The right to sue on a verbal contract, valid at its inception, whereby one person agreed to leave property by will to another, and made more than five years prior to the effective date of this section, was not destroyed by the enactment of this statute: Cowle

v. Central Trust Co., 14 OO 185 (CP).

11.1 Where a will by which a decedent leaves his property to another person is executed the same day as a contract between the decedent and such other person, which contract contains no promise or agreement to make a will and which provides that "it is impossible to arrive at a definite figure . . . to be paid for the services to be rendered by" such other person and that such other person "will accept whatever" decedent "determines to be a just consideration for the services performed and to be performed," and the will makes no reference to the contract; neither the will nor the contract constitutes an enforceable contract entitling such other person to specific performance thereof, and such will is subject to revocation by a subsequently executed will: Stork v. Troeger, 103 App 144, 3 OO(2d) 207, 144 NE(2d) 675.

11.2 This section, providing that "no agreement to make a will or to make a devise or bequest by will shall be enforceable unless it is in writing," has no application to an oral agreement to not make a will but to die intestate: Frantz v. Maher, 106 App 465, 7 OO(2d) 209, 155 NE(2d) 471.

12.2 A writing consisting of a revoked will which does not contain words which can reasonably be construed as words of promise or agreement, or as an indication of any contract or agreement, cannot be a memorandum or note of any agreement within the meaning of RC § 1335.05, or an agreement in writing within the meaning of RC § 2107.04, providing that a contract to make a will must be in writing, and a petition which bases its cause of action upon such a writing, praying in the alternative for specific performance or a decree impressing a constructive trust, does not state facts constituting a cause of action and is subject to demurrer: Wilson v. Dunkle, 71 OLA 483, 132 NE(2d) 483 (CP).

13. An agreement to make a will takes priority over any other later disposition of property made during the lifetime of any of the parties to the agreement: Fitch v. Oesch, 59 OO(2d) 16, 30 OMisc 15, 281 NE(2d) 206.

14. It is not the duty of the administrator of the estate to recover nonprobate assets which were disposed of in violation of an agreement to make a will, but the right of action is left with those parties who might be injured by not receiving their full amount under the agreement and the will: Fitch v. Oesch, 59 OO(2d) 16, 30 OMisc 15, 281 NE(2d) 206.

§ 2107.05 Incorporation by reference. (CC § 10504-4)

An existing document, book, record, or memorandum may be incorporated in a will by reference, if referred to as being in existence at the time the will is executed. Such document, book, record, or memorandum shall be deposited in the probate court when the will is probated or within thirty days thereafter, unless the court grants an extension of time for good cause shown. A copy may be substituted for the original document, book, record, or memorandum if such copy is certified to be correct by a person authorized to take acknowledgments on deeds.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-4; 114 v 320 (346). EFF 10-1-53.

Comment

The common law rule as to incorporation by reference is well stated in Page on Wills, Lifetime Ed. § 250.

"In order to incorporate a document into a will by reference the following requisites must exist, even in states which recognize the general doctrine. The will itself must refer to such paper to be incorporated as being in existence at the time of the execution of the will, in such a way as reasonably to identify such paper in the will, and in such a way as to show testator's intention to incorporate such instrument in his will and to make it a part thereof. Such document must in fact be in existence at the time of the execution of the will. Such document must correspond to the description thereof in the will and must be shown to be the instrument therein referred to. These requisites must co-exist in order to incorporate a document into the will. The absence of any one of them will prevent such incorporation."

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Failure to deposit a contract to make a will within 30 days of the date the will was probated does not require a finding that the document was not properly incorporated into the will: Winkle v. United States, 381 FSupp 536 (1974).

2. An existing revocable and amendable living trust agreement, deed or settlement may be incorporated by reference in a will under this section: Bolles v. Toledo Trust Co., 144 OS 195, 29 OO 376, 58 NE(2d) 381 overruled in part in Smyth v. Cleveland Trust Co., 172 OS 489, 18 OO(2d) 42, 179 NE(2d) 60.

3. A trust agreement in actual existence, when incorporated in a will by reference and referred to as being actually in existence at the time the will is executed, is a document that is required to be deposited in the probate court when the will is probated in accordance with the provisions of this section: In re Bunting, 30 OO 269, 15 Supp 54 (PC).

4. Though an unfunded "pour over" trust is invalid under RC § 2107.63, such a trust may be upheld as a document incorporated by reference into the will pursuant to § 2107.05: Hageman v. Cleveland Trust Co., 45 OS(2d) 178, 74 OO(2d) 295, 343 NE(2d) 121 (1976).

5. A provision of a will incorporating an extrinsic writing into the will, pursuant to RC § 2107.05, has no effect unless such extrinsic writing is deposited with the probate court within thirty days after the will is probated, unless the court grants an extension of time for good cause shown: Hirsch v. Hirsch, 32 OApp(2d) 200, 61 OO(2d) 212, 289 NE(2d) 388 (1972).

6. Incorporated trust agreement and will must be read together: Shawan v. City Bank Farmers Trust Co., 21 OLA 432.

7. A will which contains a provision attempting to "pour over" assets into an inter vivos trust which was not validly created, followed by language expressing that it was not the testator's intention to incorporate such trust agreement "as a probate trust" unless necessary to avoid his intestacy is thereby effective to incorporate such trust agreement by reference under this section: Knowles v. Knowles, 33 OO(2d) 218, 4 OMisc 153, 212 NE(2d) 88 (PC).

8. In order to incorporate a document in a will, the will must refer to the document so as to show that it is in existence, it must identify it, and must show testator's intention to incorporate it; the document must in fact be in existence at the time of execution of the will, and it must correspond to the description: Miller v. Mackenzie, 23 NP(NS) 158, 31 OD 497.

§ 2107.06 Bequests to charitable purpose and governmental units.

(A) If a testator dies leaving issue and by his will devises or bequeaths his estate, or any part thereof, in trust or otherwise to any municipal corporation, county, state, country, or subdivision thereof, for any purpose whatsoever, or to any person, association, or corporation for the use or benefit of one or more benevolent, religious, educational, or charitable purposes, such devises and bequests shall be valid in their entirety only if the testator's will was executed more than six months prior to the death of the testator. If such will was executed within six months of the testator's death, such devises and bequests shall be valid to the extent they do not in the aggregate exceed twenty-five per cent of the value of the testator's net probate estate, and in the event the aggregate of the devises and bequests exceeds twenty-five per cent thereof, such devises and bequests shall be abated proportionately so that the aggregate thereof equals twenty-five per cent of the value of the testator's net probate estate.

(B) The execution of a codicil to the testator's will within six months of his death shall not affect the validity of any such devises and bequests made by will or codicil executed more than six months prior to his death, except as the same are revoked or modified by the codicil. If a codicil executed within such period increases the aggregate of such devises and bequests to more than twenty-five per cent of the value of the testator's net probate estate, such increase by codicil is invalidated to the extent that such increases, plus the aggregate contained in the will and not revoked by the codicil, exceeds twenty-five per cent of the value of the testator's net probate estate; and the amount of the codicil's increase of each such devise and bequest in the will and each such devise and bequest contained in the codicil which was not contained in the will shall be abated proportionately.

(C) The portion of any such devises and bequests which is invalid under this section shall be distributed per stirpes among such testator's issue unless expressly otherwise provided in the will or codicil.

(D) As used in this section, "the value of the testator's net probate estate" means the probate inventory value of all the testator's assets which are subject to the jurisdiction of the probate court, less all debts and costs and expenses of administration, but prior to the payment of any estate or inheritance taxes, and "issue" means a child or children, including an adopted child or adopted children, and their lineal descendants.

Construction and application

1. The mortmain statute does not apply to the testamentary grant of a power of appointment or the testamentary exercise thereof: In re Lowe, 119 App 303, 27 OO(2d) 319, 191 NE(2d) 196.

2. This section does not apply when those whom the statute was designed to protect have, in fact, no interest to protect: Central Natl. Bank v. Morris,

10 OApp(2d) 225, 39 OO(2d) 433, 227 NE(2d) 418.

3. The mortmain statute has no application to an inter vivos trust: Drew v. Richards, 17 OO(2d) 92, 177 NE(2d) 633 (App).

3.1 To the extent that property of a decedent may not pass to a charitable institution because of the invalidity of the bequest under Ohio's mortmain statute, and to the extent that no provision is expressly made in the will for the bequest of such property to some other qualified beneficiary, the decedent is intestate as to such property and the same passes as prescribed by subdivision (C) of that statute, notwithstanding the testator has specifically disinherited the only person who could qualify as a beneficiary under that subdivision: Balyeat v. Morris, 28 OApp(2d) 191, 57 OO(2d) 301, 276 NE(2d) 258.

3.2 The doctrine of dependent relative revocation is not applicable in mortmain cases at least where the later document expressly revokes all prior wills: Newman v. Newman, 28 OO(2d) 154, 199 NE(2d) 904 (PC).

—Purpose

4. This section was designed for the protection of issue and adopted children, or their lineal descendants: Central Natl. Bank v. Morris, 10 OApp(2d) 225, 39 OO(2d) 433, 227 NE(2d) 418.

4.1 Grandchildren are not heirs at law where all the testator's children have survived him, and do not come within the protection of this section: Central Natl. Bank v. Morris, 10 OApp(2d) 225, 39 OO(2d) 433, 227 NE(2d) 418.

4.2 The purpose of the mortmain statute is to prevent a testator, under the fears incident to impending death, from disposing of his estate to the prejudice of his descendants: Campbell v. Musart Society, 2 OO(2d) 517, 131 NE(2d) 279 (PC).

4.4 A gift by will of the residue, provided the recipients pay certain sums to designated charities was conditional, and the condition was invalid as against the mortmain statute, where the testator died less than one year from the execution of the will: Roenick v. Dollar Sav. &c. Co., 21 OO(2d) 452, 179 NE(2d) 379 (App).

Nature of charitable gifts

6. A bequest for charitable uses, where the objects are sufficiently defined, and the person designated as trustee acquires a capacity to hold by subsequent act of incorporation, take effect as an executory devise: Trustees v. Zanesville Canal &c. Co., 9 O 203.

7. A gift to charitable use receives the most liberal construction: Zanesville Canal &c. Co. v. Zanesville, 20 O 483; Landis v. Wooden, 1 OS 161.

8. A devise of the residuum of an estate to such poor of two certain townships as were not able to support themselves, to be divided by the executors, is a valid devise: Landis v. Wooden, 1 OS 161.

9. Charitable bequest held not to be void for uncertainty: Miller v. Teachout, 24 OS 525.

10. An unincorporated society is capable of receiving a bequest of personalty not amounting to a trust: American Tract Soc. v. Atwater, 30 OS 78.

11. A residuary clause, "The residue of my estate I give to The X Trust Company to be devoted to the needy and poor women," creates a valid testamentary charitable gift: Palmer v. Oiler, 102 OS 271, 131 NE 362.

13. This section (formerly GC § 10504), rendering void a devise or bequest made to charity by a will executed within one year of the testator's death, under stated conditions, has no reference to a good and sufficient charitable trust in praesenti: Cleveland Trust Co. v. White, 134 OS 1, 11 OO 377, 15 NE(2d) 627 [affirming 58 App 339, 9 OO 239, 16 NE(2d) 588].

14. The testatrix having died within one year of the execution of her will, the gift in remainder to the charitable and educational institutions became invalid by reason of the provisions of this section and the remainder descends as intestate property to the testatrix's sons: Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 84 App 345, 39 OO 487, 84 NE(2d) 612.

Issue of body

20. "Issue of his body, or legal representatives" means "lineal descendants": Patton v. Patton, 39 OS 590.

21. One, not of the blood of the testator, who has been designated an heir under GC § 8598 (see now RC § 2105.15), is not "issue of the body" within the meaning of this section: Theobald v. Fugmann, 64 OS 473, 60 NE 606.

22. Where a testator devises or bequeaths property in trust, the income to be paid to his children and others for a period of time and at the expiration of such period the corpus of the trust property to be divided among certain charities, the devise or bequest to the charities is invalid under this section if the testator dies within one year after the execution of his will, leaving issue of his body: Kirkbride v. Hickok, 155 OS 293, 44 OO 297, 98 NE(2d) 815.

23. Where, under such circumstances, the children of the testator take the benefits accruing to them under the will and express a determination not to waive the provisions of this section, they do not thereby violate an in terrorem clause providing for their disinheritance if, by procedure in court or in any way for any cause, real or imaginary, they make any effort to break, change or set aside the will or any part thereof, nor do they consent that the provision as to the charities shall be considered valid: Kirkbride v. Hickok, 155 OS 293, 44 OO 297, 98 NE(2d) 815.

24. A child legally adopted under law of Ohio is included within meaning of word "issue" as used in former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10): Miller v. Shepard, 29 App 22, 162 NE 788.

Failure to comply with statute

31. Devise to child for life, remainder to Ohio state university, but if this should fail, then to nephews and nieces. Codicil requesting the child to ratify the devise to the university, and if she did so, then the devise to nephews and nieces is revoked. The child confirmed the devise by deed to the university. Held, the nephews and nieces can take nothing under the will: Ohio State University v. Folsom, 56 OS 701, 47 NE 581 [reversing Folsom v. Haas, 9 CC 473, 6 CD 460; approved, Thomas v. Trustees, 70 OS 92].

32. Bequests void under this section do not inure to the benefit of the residuary legatee, but are subject, as undisposed of property, to the statutes of descent and distribution: Davis v. Davis, 62 OS 411, 57 NE 317, 78 AmSt 725 [reversing Davis v. Hutchings, 15 CC 174, 8 CD 52, and sustaining Davis v. Hutchings, 4 NP 276, 6 OD 371].

33. For a charitable trust which is invalid because the method of creating the administrative board is too vague and the method of executing the charity is too ambiguous, see Dirlam v. Morrow, 102 OS 279, 131 NE 916 [affirming judgment of court of appeals, which affirmed Morrow v. Dirlam, 22 NP(NS) 565, 30 OD 27].

36. A person adopted pursuant to and in accordance with the law of a state other than Ohio, which, at the time of adoption, was the domicile of the adopting parent, is an "adopted child" within the purview of the provisions of this section, even though such person had attained his majority at the time of his adoption: Barrett v. Delmore, 143 OS 203, 28 OO 133, 54 NE(2d) 789.

37. This section does not apply to a case where property is transferred in trust by the owner thereof in his lifetime, even if such transfer is in anticipation of his approaching death: Redkey v. Worthington, 22 CD 56, 13 CC(NS) 177 [reversed on the ground that title did not pass to trustee, Worthington v. Redkey, 86 OS 128]; Andrew v. Kling, 18 CC(NS) 134, 32 CD 639.

38. A charitable bequest is void where deceased died within a year, leaving issue: The William Hooper Will, 4 NP 186, 6 OD 560.

38.2. A testator whose grandchild, his only living blood relative, was adopted by another before testator's death, died without issue or the lineal descendant of issue within the meaning of the mortmain and adoption statutes considered in pari materia, and a provision in his will, executed within one year prior to his death, devising property to certain charitable institutions was valid: Campbell v. Musart Society, 2 OO(2d) 517, 131 NE(2d) 279 (PC).

38.3. Where the testator died within a year of making his will, and left a daughter, bequest of a sum of money in trust for the benefit of a music center is invalid under this section: Lloyd v. Campbell, 23 OO(2d) 329, 189 NE(2d) 660 (PC).

38.4. A gift to an organization or fund which has as one of its purposes better police protection for the whole community is a gift for a "benevolent purpose" within the purview of this section: Anderson v. Malone, 32 OO(2d) 407, 205 NE(2d) 131 (PC).

38.5. The police relief and pension fund of a municipality is so interrelated with the operation of a municipal corporation that a gift to it falls within the purview of this section as a gift to a municipal corporation: Anderson v. Malone, 32 OO(2d) 407, 205 NE(2d) 131 (PC).

38.6. This section, which invalidates under certain conditions gifts, devises or bequests for charitable purposes, contained in a will where the testator dies within a year of the date of execution thereof, permits and authorizes a waiver by the persons or classes named therein of the benefits thereby created with the consequent validation of such gifts, devises or bequests of a charitable nature as are contained in the will under consideration: Ireland v. Cleveland Trust Co., 80 OLA 94, 11 OO(2d) 237, 157 NE(2d) 396 (PC).

Actions to determine validity

40. In an action to determine the validity of a bequest to a charity under this section, only those of the testator's issue who are heirs have rights under that statute: Central Nat. Bank v. Morris, 38 OO (2d) 265, 9 OMisc 167, 222 NE(2d) 674 (PC).

Codicil

44. Codicil executed within one year of testator's death revoking bequest, and thereby increasing residue which went to charities, was held not void under former GC § 10504 (see now RC § 2107.06): Ruple v. College, 35 App 8, 171 NE 417.

45. Former GC § 10504 (see now RC § 2107.06) rendering void bequest made to charity by will executed within one year prior to testator's death, must be strictly construed: Ruple v. College, 35 App 8, 171 NE 417.

46. A devise of real estate to an educational institution under a codicil which was executed within one year of the death of the testatrix is merely voidable, and the persons intended to be benefited by this section may waive its benefits and thus validate the devise: Deeds v. Deeds, 42 OO 384 (PC).

48. Under the provisions of this section, it is intended that the property composing the invalidated gift will go to the persons named in the statute who are disappointed by the will or codicil; but no benefit can be conferred by this statute unless there is a residuary clause in favor of the class named in the statute or unless the class named can take by intestacy: Deeds v. Deeds, 42 OO 384 (PC).

49. Since this section is not a prohibition against the holding of property by charitable corporations, there is no reason to invoke the protection of the statute when the statutory benefit is impossible of conferment: Deeds v. Deeds, 42 OO 384 (PC).

49.1. A codicil is subject to the restrictions of this section, invalidating charitable bequests made by a will executed within a year of the testator's death: Newman v. Newman, 28 OO(2d) 154, 199 NE(2d) 904 (PC).

50. The testatrix having died within one year of the execution of her will, the gift in remainder to the charitable and educational institutions became invalid by reason of the provisions of this section and said remainder descended as intestate property to the testatrix's sons: Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 53 OLA 129, 84 NE(2d) 612 (App).

[DEPOSIT]

§ 2107.07 Deposit of will. (GC §§ 10504-6, 10504-7)

A will may be deposited by the maker, or by some person for such maker, in the office of the judge of the probate court in the county in which such testator lives. Such will is to be safely kept until delivered or disposed of as provided by section 2107.08 of the Revised Code. The judge, on being paid the fee of one dollar, shall receive, keep, and give a certificate of deposit for such will.

Every will which is to be deposited must be enclosed in a sealed wrapper, which shall be indorsed with the name of the testator. The judge shall indorse thereon the date of delivery and the person by whom such will was delivered. The wrapper may be indorsed with the name of a person to whom it is to be delivered after the death of the testator. Such will shall not be opened or read until delivered to a person entitled to receive it, or otherwise disposed of as provided in section 2107.08 of the Revised Code.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The presumption that a will once proven to exist, and to have been in the custody of the testator, and which cannot be found after his death, was destroyed by the testator animo revocandi, does not arise when such will was deposited in the office of the probate court and was never called for thereafter by the testator and could not be found a few days after his death or at any subsequent time: Egbert v. Egbert, 10 App 432, 29 OCA 584 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 507, 64 Bull 61].

2. There being no statutory provisions governing the deposit of deeds in escrow with a probate judge, the deposit of a deed in escrow can not be received by the probate judge in his official capacity, and in the absence of such statutory provision there is no implied reservation in the person depositing the deeds in escrow with the probate judge to recall the same: Gordon v. Bartlett, 62 App 295, 16 OO 13, 23 NE(2d) 964.

During the lifetime of a testator, such testator's will, deposited according to section 2107.07 of the Revised Code, shall be delivered only to him or to some person authorized by him by a written order proved by the oath of a subscribing witness. After such testator's death such will shall be delivered to the person named in the indorsement on the wrapper of the will, if there is a person named who demands it.

If no person named in the indorsement demands the will, it shall be publicly opened in the probate court within two months after notice of the testator's death and retained in the office of the probate judge until offered for probate. If the jurisdiction belongs to any other court, such will shall be delivered to the person entitled to its custody, to be presented for probate in such other court. If the judge who opens such will has jurisdiction of it, he shall immediately give notice of its existence to the executor named in the will. If no executor is named, the judge shall give notice to other persons immediately interested.

[PRODUCTION]

If real or personal estate is devised or bequeathed by a last will, the executor, or any interested person, may cause such will to be brought before the probate court of the county in which the decedent was domiciled. By citation, attachment, or warrant or, if circumstances require it, by warrant or attachment in the first instance, such court may compel the person having the custody or control of such will to produce it before the court for the purpose of being proved.

If the person having the custody or control of such will intentionally conceals or withholds it or neglects or refuses to produce it for probate without reasonable cause, he may be committed to the county jail and kept in close custody until he produces the will. Such person also shall be liable to any party aggrieved for the damages sustained by such neglect or refusal.

Such citation, attachment, or warrant may be issued into any county in the state and shall be served and returned by the officer to whom it is delivered.

The officer to whom such process is delivered shall be liable for neglect in its service or return in like manner as sheriffs are liable for neglect in not serving or returning a capias issued upon an indictment.

2. This section gives a right to any person interested to propound a will for probate: Missionary Soc. v. Ely, 56 OS 405, 47 NE 537.

3. Whether former GC § 10511 (see now RC § 2107.09) was repealed by former GC § 10604 (see now RC §§ 2113.01, 2129.04) was discussed but not decided in State ex rel Barbee v. Allen, 96 OS 10, 117 NE 13.

4. Proceedings to require the production of a will under GC § 10504-10 (RC § 2107.09), proceedings to admit a will to probate under GC § 10504-15 (RC § 2107.11), and proceedings to establish a lost, spoliated or destroyed will under GC § 10504-35 (RC § 2107.26) et seq, may be maintained only in the probate court of the county in which the testator was domiciled at the time of death: State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE (2d) 84.

6. It was prejudicial error to refuse to grant a new trial where newly discovered evidence clearly relevant on the question of whether a will had been revoked had been presented to the court in the trial of the special proceeding under GC § 10504-10 (RC § 2107.09), before the motion for a new trial was overruled: In re Woods, 61 OLA 548, 105 NE(2d) 589 (App).

7. A beneficiary under a will cannot maintain an action for its wrongful destruction during the testator's lifetime, since he has no legal interest in legacies given by will during the lifetime of the testator: Van Develde v. Van Develde, 22 CC(NS) 277, 33 CD 566.

§ 2107.10 Effect of withholding will. (GC § 10504-14)

No property or right, testate or intestate, shall pass to a beneficiary named in a will who knows of the existence of such will for three years and has the power to control it, and, without reasonable cause, intentionally conceals or withholds it or neglects or refuses within such three years to cause it to be offered for or admitted to probate. The estate devised to such devisee shall descend to the heirs of the testator, not including any heir who has concealed or withheld the will.

1. A widower who after his wife's death in 1922 retained her will in his possession and failed to produce it for probate, lost all rights given him in the will by virtue of former GC § 10542 (see now RC § 2107.10), and no action was required to divest him of such rights; GC § 11225 (RC § 2305.11), as to forfeitures, did not apply: Stillwell v. Tudor, 80 App 190, 35 OO 514, 75 NE(2d) 94.

2. A son who took possession of his mother's will in 1941 and withheld it until 1945 when, in response to a citation, he produced it for probate, was within the operation of this section, and could not inherit. Divesting as to him was in the nature of a forfeiture and subject to the limitation in GC § 11225 (RC § 2305.11): Stillwell v. Tudor, 80 App 190, 35 OO 514, 75 NE(2d) 94.

3. A daughter who never knew of her mother's will until it was produced for probate, would be neither estopped nor barred by the statute of limitation from invoking the provisions of this section. Another daughter who knew of the execution of the will, but did not know its contents, never had it in her possession and never saw it again until the time of probate, had the right to inherit: Stillwell v. Tudor, 80 App 190, 35 OO 514, 75 NE(2d) 94.

4. A beneficiary under a will who fails to cause such will to be offered for probate within three years after knowing of its existence, is not, by virtue of this section, deprived of his legacy or devise unless his withholding or neglect or concealment or refusal to cause it to be offered for probate is intentional and without reasonable cause, for the purpose of delaying its administration or defeating some rights or benefits given by the terms of the will: Hoskins v. Lentz, 7 OO 214 (PC).

6. The failure of a remainderman to have a will probated during the life tenant's life, where the remainderman had access to the will, and had exclusive control of it within three years after the life tenant's death, amounted to an intentional withholding of and neglect to probate the will, within the punitive provisions of this section: In re Varley, 27 OO 162, 10 OSupp 109 (PC) [affirmed, 27 OO 159 (App)].

7. The common pleas court does not have jurisdiction of an appeal on questions of law and fact from the probate court in an action for a declaratory judgment requiring the court to say whether the action of a beneficiary of a will, by withholding it from probate, made him amenable to the penalties provided by this section and former GC § 10542 (see now RC § 2107.10), since the subject thereof does not fall within the provisions of GC § 10501-56 (RC § 2101.42): In re Varley, 37 OLA 280, 46 NE(2d) 878 (App).

8. Where a testatrix devised her undivided one-half interest in real property to her five children and directed that her husband be permitted to reside in the house while unmarried, the children acceded to their father's wishes not to probate the will for twenty-five years, and did not have the power to control the will until after their father's death when it was offered for, and admitted to probate, their acts did not bring them within the purview of this section so as to work a forfeiture against them: In re Kusar, 34 OO(2d) 32, 5 OMisc 23, 211 NE(2d) 535 (PC).

18. Although a devise lapses by neglect to cause a known will to be offered for or admitted to probate, it will not lapse for neglect in causing a copy of a will, probated elsewhere, to be recorded in the county where the devised property may be situated: Carpenter v. Denoon, 29 OS 379.

19. Where devisee of land under will was in possession and control of will for more than three years after death of testatrix, but neglected to offer same for probate, as required by former GC § 10542 (see now RC § 2107.10), such devisee took nothing under the will, and land described therein passed to heirs. This section does not provide for forfeiture of interest that has vested, but prevents an estate from passing to negligent devisee: Barron v. McCann, 25 App 520, 159 NE 104.

20. The sole devisee under a will, having knowledge and possession of the will and opportunity for more than three years after testator's death to submit it to probate, but neglecting to offer it for probate as required by former GC § 10542 (see now RC § 2107.10), is thereby barred as a devisee thereunder, and the property descends to testator's heirs: Lawson v. Thomas, 48 App 311, 1 OO 483, 193 NE 655.

21. If devisees fail to offer for probate a will which is within their control, such will becomes inoperative as to them; title vests in the heirs, and a judgment rendered against an heir is a valid lien: Loos v. Buffalo-Springfield Rubber Co., 32 OCA 443, 35 CD 809 [motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 89].

22. Where deceased left two wills, the later of which was probated, and this probate was contested and set aside after three years, after which the beneficiary, in whose custody the earlier will was, procured probate thereof, he was not debarred from taking as a devisee under this will by the fact that more than three years had elapsed before he offered it for probate: Avery v. Howard, 7 NP(NS) 97, 19 OD 71.

23. One retaining an attorney to secure for her the administration of her deceased husband's estate is not entitled to information acquired by her counsel in a prior professional relation concerning the will of her husband's brother, notwithstanding the fact that such knowledge might have enabled her to prevent the beneficiary from taking under such will under the above statute: Long v. Bowersox, 8 NP(NS) 249, 19 OD 494.

24. This section is punitive and must be strictly construed. Mere delay or lapse of time does not start this provision for forfeiture into operation, but to do so requires that an action be brought and a decree entered declaring the forfeiture: Mitchell v. Long, 9 NP(NS) 113, 20 OD 41.

[PROBATE]

§ 2107.11 Jurisdiction to probate. (GC § 10504-15)

A will shall be admitted to probate:

(A) In the county in which the testator was domiciled if, at the time of his death, he was domiciled in this state;

(B) In any county of this state where any real or personal property of such testator is located if, at the time of his death, he was not domiciled in this state, and provided that such will has not previously been admitted to probate in this state or in the state of such testator's domicile.

For the purpose of this section, intangible personal property is located in the place where the instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock, or chose in action is located or if there is no such instrument where the debtor resides.

1. Whether the adjudication of the probate court, that decedent was domiciled within its jurisdiction, was conclusive was avoided in Hoffman v. Fleming, 66 OS 143, 64 NE 63 [for holding below that such adjudication was void, see Fleming v. Hoffman, 8 NP 86, 10 OD 560], the court holding that the sureties on the executor's bond were estopped to deny jurisdiction.

2. It is final where the domicile of decedent is claimed to be without the state: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming on rehearing, 88 OS 609, which modified in memorandum opinion, *Miller v. 3. It is final where his domicile is claimed to be in another county in the same state: State ex rel Barbee v. Allen, 96 OS 10, 117 NE 13.

4. The jurisdiction of a probate court acquired under GC § 10509-1 to appoint an administrator for the estate of an intestate who was a resident of the county of such court at the time he died is terminated and superseded by the admission to probate of a will of the same decedent by the probate court of another county in which such decedent was domiciled at the time of death: *State ex rel Overlander v. 5. Such judgment is final in case of an application by the executor to the probate court for instructions as to his duties: Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

6. When, upon a hearing of an application for the probate of a will and for letters testamentary, the probate court finds that the testator at the time of his death was a resident of the county in which the application is made, an order or judgment of the court admitting the will to probate and issuing letters testamentary thereon, however erroneous the conclusions of law and fact upon which the judgment or order is based may be, cannot be reviewed or set aside by a superior court in a proceeding in prohibition: *State ex rel Barbee v. 7. The matter of the domicile of the testatrix is a question of fact to be determined from the evidence: State ex rel Clary v. Probate Court, 151 OS 497, 39 OO 319, 86 NE(2d) 765.

8. Domicile as used in this section means the place where one has voluntarily fixed his habitation, not for special or temporary purpose, but with intention of making it his permanent home, and to which when he is absent, he intends to return: In re Stephan, 17 OO 361 (PC).

9. In the amendment of this section and GC § 10504-22 (RC § 2107.18), the common law has not been changed nor has the legislature pre-empted the field by the provisions made for original probate of the wills of nonresidents: In re McCombs, 52 OLA 353 (PC).

9.1 Where testatrix was not domiciled in Cuyahoga County at her death and no property subject to administration was located there, the will could not be probated there: In re Paich, 90 OLA 470, 186 NE(2d) 755.

10. A court of another state is not bound by an adjudication of a court of Ohio as to the domicile of intestate: Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

11. This section and GC § 10504-16 (RC § 2107.12) afford ample provision for reviewing a finding as to the domicile of the testator and the jurisdiction of the court: Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

12. An Ohio probate court has jurisdiction to admit the will of a nonresident decedent to probate, and administer his property located in the state: Gordon v. Holly Woods Acres, Inc., 27 OO(2d) 188, 328 F(2d) 253.

§ 2107.12 Contest of jurisdiction. (GC § 10504-16)

When a will is presented for probate, persons interested in its probate may contest the jurisdiction of the court to entertain the application. Preceding a hearing of a contest as to jurisdiction, all parties named in such will as legatees, devisees, trustees, or executors shall have notice thereof in such manner as may be ordered by the court.

When such contest is made, parties may call witnesses and shall be heard upon the question involved. The decision of the court as to its jurisdiction may be reviewed on error.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-16; 114 v 320 (348). Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10521.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

See also case notes under RC § 2107.11.

1. While the declaration of a testator in his will as to his domicile is not conclusive, yet when there has been no material change in the situation with reference to it, between the execution of the will and the death of the testator, such declaration is evidence of high character, and will determine the question in the absence of more convincing proof to the contrary: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming on rehearing Miller v. Miller, 15 CC (NS) 481, 24 CD 43; which was modified in memorandum opinion, Wilberding v. Miller, 88 OS 609, and was on appeal from Miller v. Miller, 13 NP (NS) 1].

1.1 Under this section, in a proceeding to admit a will to probate, "persons interested in its probate" include those whose interests are opposed to its probate. One who contends that there has been a former adjudication by a denial of probate may, under these sections, contest jurisdiction by asserting the defense of res judicata, and if aggrieved may prosecute error to the finding on such defense: State ex rel Young v. Morrow, 131 OS 266, 5 OO 584, 2 NE(2d) 595.

1.2 The probate court has no jurisdiction to consider an application to vacate the probate of a will filed while an action to contest the will is pending in the common pleas court: State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate Court, 172 OS 1, 15 OO(2d) 43, 173 NE(2d) 100 [affirming 113 App 1, 17 OO(2d) 1, 162 NE(2d) 574].

2. The acceptance of a bequest of personal property does not bind the beneficiary not to contest the will, as in the case of the acceptance of real property, but the money or property so received may be returned to the executor and the legatee left free to contest the will: Spangler v. Beare, 2 App 133, 19 CC(NS) 512, 26 CD 37.

3. In an action to contest a will, declarations by a party to the record, who is a legatee with others under the will, are inadmissible to prove that the will was contrary to the intentions of the testator or was procured by undue influence: Seal v. Goebel, 11 CC (NS) 433, 21 CD 286.

4. In such a case it is essential that the jury be instructed that the evidence of the contestants, in order to warrant the setting aside of the will, should not only outweigh the evidence adduced by the defendant, but also the presumption arising from the order admitting the will to probate: Seal v. Goebel, 11 CC(NS) 433, 21 CD 286.

5. Where the jury, in an action to contest a will, returned a verdict establishing its validity, but by a manifest error inserted the date of the execution of the will as the date of its probate, and the record shows that but one paper writing purporting to be the last will of the decedent was exhibited to the jury, and that, if the date of probate as given by the jury was correct, the right to contest the will would have been barred, it is not error for the court to treat the date given by the jury as mere surplusage and enter a judgment upon the verdict correcting the error and establishing the validity of the will: Seal v. Goebel, 11 CC(NS) 433, 21 CD 286.

No will shall be admitted to probate without notice to the surviving spouse known to the applicant, and to the persons known to the applicant to be residents of the state who would be entitled to inherit from the testator under sections 2105.01 to 2105.21 of the Revised Code, if he had died intestate.

1. Where a will has been forged, and probated by perjured testimony without notice to the next of kin, and the return of service on them has been falsified, and the party procuring such forged will and its probate as a will is the sole beneficiary, and has procured a transfer of title to himself, he is a trustee ex maleficio for the next of kin: Seeds v. Seeds, 116 OS 144, 156 NE 193, 52 ALR 761.

2. An order of probate of a will without notice to persons entitled to notice, and without waiver by such persons, is void and is subject to direct attack by those who neither received notice nor waived service of notice: Scholl v. Scholl, 123 OS 1, 173 NE 305.

3. Mere knowledge of the death of the decedent and subsequent information of the order of probate will not estop such next of kin from attacking the order of probate, where it is not shown that the proponents of the will were misled by silence or delay, or that they were prejudiced thereby: Scholl v. Scholl, 123 OS 1, 173 NE 305.

3.1 The admission of a will to probate ordinarily cannot determine the rights of all interested parties, for only the surviving spouse and next of kin known to be residents of the state are required by provisions of GC § 10504-17 to be notified: In re Frey, 139 OS 354, 22 OO 411, 40 NE(2d) 145.

4. Next of kin, nonresident in the state, are required to be made defendants in error and served with summons, or publication made, in a proceeding in error to reverse a judgment refusing to admit a will to probate, notwithstanding the fact that notice to them of the hearing on the application to probate the will is dispensed with by statute: In re Nozica, 13 App 480.

5. An order of the probate court admitting a will to probate, made without the service of notice upon the next of kin resident in this state, as required by this section and without waiver thereof, is void: Young v. Guella, 67 App 11, 21 OO 66, 35 NE(2d) 997.

6. Where probate of a will has been refused, interested parties may repropound it when they have not been served with notice of the offering of the will for probate: In re Stacey, 4 NP 143, 7 NP 277, 6 OD 142 [for opinion allowing probate, see 6 OD (NP) 501].

7. The words, "known to be residents of the state," as used in GC § 10504-17 (RC § 2107.13), means that such knowledge must be had by either the proponent of the will or the court: In re Hammer, 99 App 1, 58 OO 104, 130 NE(2d) 437.

8. Where the son of a decedent files an application to admit the decedent's will to probate, which application is accompanied by a waiver of notice signed by the applicant's sister but not by the applicant; on the same day that the will is admitted to probate, applicant files an application to be appointed as executor, which includes his sworn statement that the will has been admitted to probate; and the applicant accepts the appointment and proceeds to administer the estate; the applicant and anyone else are estopped from denying that the will was duly admitted to probate, on the ground that the applicant neither received nor waived notice prior to the admission of the will to probate: In re Warrick, 118 App 542, 26 OO(2d) 62, 196 NE(2d) 132.

9. The purported probate of a will is void where notice of the filing of an application to admit to probate was not given to the adopted daughter of a deceased son of the testatrix, known to be a resident of Ohio: Vance v. Byerly, 2 OO(2d) 216, 140 NE(2d) 912 (CP).

10. Under GC § 10504-17 (RC § 2107.13), notice of the application for probate of a will is required only as to heirs and the surviving spouse of the decedent who are residents of the state of Ohio: Armstrong v. Brufach, 59 OO 352 (CP).

11. Notice may be served upon a minor who is in the military service and temporarily outside the United States, and who is entitled to notice of the probate of decedent's will under this section, by leaving such notice or a copy thereof at his usual place of residence in Ohio, or by sending it to such residence by registered mail: Case v. Case, 55 OO 317, 124 NE(2d) 856 (PC).

12. A motion to set aside the proceedings to admit a decedent's will to probate for the reason that the application for appointment of the executor did not list the name of a person who would take under the half-and-half statute will be overruled since this section specifically provides that notice need not be given to any person who would be entitled to inherit from the testator solely by reason of relationship to a deceased spouse of the testator: In re Hennekes, 34 OO(2d) 204, 214 NE(2d) 273 (PC).

13. One who would inherit under the half and half statute, must be made a party to an action to contest a will: Bussell v. Cline, 82 OLA 331.

Upon demand by an interested party, the probate court shall cause at least two of the witnesses to a will, and other witnesses whom a person interested in having the will admitted to probate may desire to have appear, to come before the court. On request of the interested person, the court shall compel the attendance of any witness by subpoena. Witnesses shall be examined, and may be cross-examined, in open court, and their testimony reduced to writing and filed.

1. Evidence in opposition to the validity of the will cannot be offered at probate: Hathaway's Will, 4 OS 383; Kammann v. Kammann, 6 App 455, 26 CC(NS) 60, 29 CD 349 [dismissed, 96 OS 600]; Barr v. Clostermann, 3 CC 441, 2 CD 251 [affirmed, without report, Clostermann v. Barr, 27 Bull 392]; *Wadsworth v. 2. Where a will is duly executed, probated and admitted to record, error will not lie to review the testimony upon which the order of probate was made: Mosier v. Harmon, 29 OS 220.

2.1. Although two witnesses are all that are required, it does not follow that only two need be called to prove the will, where more than that number have attested: Mosier v. Harmon, 29 OS 220.

3. For a charge of a trial court where the attending physician of testator was a witness to a codicil, and such witness signed an affidavit to the effect that the testator was of sound mind, while at the trial he gives as his opinion that testator was not of sound mind, see Bahl v. Bial, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

4. Even though all who have apparently signed an instrument as attesting witnesses affirmatively testify that the instrument was not executed according to law, such execution and attestation may be established by other competent evidence: In re Lyons, 166 OS 207, 2 OO(2d) 26, 141 NE(2d) 151 (Haynes v. Haynes, 33 OS 598.)

5. For history of this section, see In re Lester, 76 App 263, 31 OO 579, 64 NE(2d) 71.

5.1 Both subscribing witnesses need not testify positively with respect to the due execution of the will, but the court may give full weight to the testimony of one subscribing witness and disregard the testimony of the other subscribing witness: In re Wood's Will, 67 NE(2d) 11 (App).

6. In a hearing on an application to admit a will to probate, it is error for the court to admit in evidence, over the objection of the proponent, letters written by the testator, intended to reflect upon his mental condition. This section does not contemplate the offering of evidence to controvert the testimony of the witness called by the proponent: In re Carson, 83 App 510, 38 OO 547, 75 NE(2d) 248.

7. The fact that one subscribing witness forgets the facts of execution does not render a will invalid: Egbert v. Egbert, 10 App 432, 29 OCA 584 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 507, 64 Bull 61].

8. A client who requests his attorney to prepare his will and to act as a subscribing witness consents that such attorney may testify as fully as any other subscribing witness; and the client thereby waives the exemption of GC § 11494: Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

9. The statute does not provide for a contest touching the admission of a will to probate. Parties interested in not having the will admitted to probate have no right to call witnesses under this section: Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110.

10. The fact that testator is shown to have had possession of a paper which he believed to be a will, which was in writing and signed by him and signed by witnesses, is not sufficient to establish the existence of a will, if the witnesses who saw the document did not see any words of a testamentary character, such as "give and bequeath," "last will and testament," or "I appoint as executor"; since such instrument may have been a deed or a contract: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

11. A declaration made by a testator to the effect that he has made a will, or that he has revoked a will, is not independent evidence of such fact, and it is not admissible without some foundation of direct evidence or presumption as to the existence of such fact: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

11.1 Where a testator signed his will out of the presence of the witnesses, the mere failure of a witness to hear the testator designate the signature as his signature to "his will" is not sufficient to defeat the will where, at its probate, other witnesses testified that the signature was acknowledged by the testator to be his signature to his will: In re Leffel's Will, 8 NP(NS) 591, 54 Bull 336.

12. The testimony of one competent witness to a will, that all formalities necessary to its due execution were complied with by the testator and the witness, is sufficient proof, if believed, for admission of the will to probate, notwithstanding the other witness to the will fails to remember or denies compliance with one or more of the essential statutory requirements to its due attestation: In re Watts, 19 NP(NS) 225, 27 OD 87.

12.1 As to probate where one subscribing witness denies the facts of execution, see In re Watts, 19 NP(NS) 225, 27 OD 87.

13. In the probate of a will, the opponents are not permitted to introduce evidence; but witnesses offered by the proponents may be cross-examined within reasonable limits: In re Stocker, 26 NP(NS) 112.

14. Under the provisions of this section a person objecting to the admission of a will to probate is not permitted to call witnesses, even on the issues specified in RC § 2107.18: In re Piasecki, 30 OO(2d) 169, 201 NE(2d) 840 (PC).

§ 2107.15 Witness a devisee or legatee.

If a devise or bequest is made to a person who is one of only two witnesses to a will, the devise or bequest is void. The witness shall then be competent to testify to the execution of the will, as if the devise or bequest had not been made. If the witness would have been entitled to a share of the testator's estate in case the will was not established, he takes so much of that share that does not exceed the bequest or devise to him. The devisees and legatees shall contribute for that purpose as for an absent or afterborn child under section 2107.34 of the Revised Code.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. This does not apply to a verbal will, an interested witness to which cannot qualify: Vrooman v. Powers, 47 OS 191, 24 NE 267, 8 LRA 39.

2. If the testimony of a devisee and legatee is relied upon to show the revivor or republication of a first will, he should be under no greater disability than an attesting witness to the will: Collins v. Collins, 110 OS 105 (128), 143 NE 561, 38 ALR 230.

3. Under this section a devisee or legatee is not an incompetent witness to a will; but if his testimony is necessary to prove the will, then the bequest or devise is void: Fazekas v. Gobozy, 78 OLA 258, 150 NE(2d) 319 (App).

4. In Ohio a witness-executor or witness-trustee is not an incompetent subscribing witness to a will by reason of such fact: Fazekas v. Gobozy, 78 OLA 258, 150 NE(2d) 319 (App).

5. The words, "devise or bequest," as they appear in RC § 2107.15 do not encompass the compensation paid to an executor for his services on behalf of the estate after the death of the testator: Blankner v. Lathrop, 169 OS 229, 230, 8 OO(2d) 221, 159 NE(2d) 229 [affirming 79 OLA 6, 154 NE(2d) 95].

(A) If it appears to the probate court that a witness to such will has gone to parts unknown;

(B) If the witness was competent at the time of attesting its execution and afterward became incompetent;

(C) If testimony of a witness cannot be obtained within a reasonable time.

1. In the absence of testimony to the contrary, it will be presumed that a will appearing in legal form and signed at the end by a testator while in the armed forces of the United States was attested and subscribed as provided by law, and that the testator had capacity to make a will and was free from restraint at the time of its execution: In re Blickensderfer, 28 OO 42 (PC).

§ 2107.17 Depositions taken by commission.

When a witness to a will, or other witness competent to testify at the probate proceeding, resides out of its jurisdiction, or resides within it but is infirm and unable to attend court, the probate court may issue a commission with the will annexed directed to any suitable person. In lieu of the original will, the probate court, in its discretion, may annex to the commission a copy of the will made by photostatic or any similar process. The person to whom the commission is directed shall take the deposition or authorize the taking of the deposition of the witness as provided by the Rules of Civil Procedure. The testimony, certified and returned, shall be admissible and have the same effect in the proceedings as if taken in open court.

The probate court shall admit a will to probate if it appears from the face of the will, or if demanded under section 2107.14 of the Revised Code, from the testimony of the witnesses that its execution complies with the law in force at the time of execution in the jurisdiction where executed, or with the law in force in this state at the time of death, or with the law in force in the jurisdiction where the testator was domiciled at the time of his death.

Jurisdiction to probate

For the effect of the adjudication of the probate court as to the domicile of the testator, see case notes under RC § 2107.11.

1. While the will of a testator domiciled within this state at his decease may be admitted to probate in any county where the testator owned real or personal estate, letters testamentary can only issue from the probate court of the county in which he resided at the time of his death: Limes v. Irwin, 16 OS 488.

2. The will of a person whose domicile, at the time of his death, is in this state, is properly admitted to original probate at the place of such domicile, without regard to where the will was made, or where such person died: Converse v. Starr, 23 OS 491.

3. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to admit wills to probate, and to record them, together with the testimony, as provided in GC § 10504-24 (RC § 2107.20): Brown v. Burdick, 25 OS 260.

Nature of probate

8. In determining whether a will which is presented for probate and which is complete and regular in appearance and which apparently complies with all formalities should be admitted to probate, the probate court is not authorized to determine as a fact whether such will has been attested and executed according to law, but is merely required to determine whether there is substantial evidence tending to prove that fact, i.e., evidence which will enable a finding of that fact by reasonable minds: In re Lyons, 166 OS 207, 2 OO(2d) 26, 141 NE(2d) 151.

9. In a proceeding to probate a will it is not the duty of the court to weigh the evidence for or against the validity of the will, further than to determine whether there is substantial evidence tending to establish the essential facts necessary for the probate thereof as set forth in this section: McWilliams v. Central Trust Co., 51 App. 246, 5 OO 104, 200 NE 532.

10. Application to admit a will to probate is a special proceeding within the meaning of GC § 12258 (see now RC § 2505.02), which provides that an order affecting a substantial right made in a special proceeding is a final order which may be vacated, modified or reversed: Missionary Soc. v. Ely, 56 OS 405, 47 NE 537.

11. Except as to questions of jurisdiction (see GC § 10504-16 [RC § 2107.12]), no provision is made in a proceeding to probate a will for hearing evidence, which is offered by one who resists the admission of such will to probate: Kammann v. Kammann, 6 App 455, 26 CC(NS) 60, 29 CD 349 [dismissed, 96 OS 600; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 238, 62 Bull 309].

12. A proceeding to admit a will to probate is a proceeding in rem: In re Nozica, 13 App 480.

13. In admitting a will to probate, the court is limited to a consideration of testator's capacity and freedom from restraint, and whether the instrument has been duly attested and executed. It cannot consider how the will is to operate: Mitchell v. Long, 9 NP(NS) 113, 20 OD 38.

14. A will cannot be admitted to probate in part and denied probate in part on the ground that certain gifts therein are contrary to public policy and illegal. The entire will must be admitted to probate and the question of such illegality must be determined later: In re Schrader, 20 NP(NS) 433, 63 Bull 95.

15. It will be presumed that the testator had capacity to make a will and that the will was made free from restraint, where it is not affirmatively shown that the testator labored under some legal disability: In re Stocker, 26 NP(NS) 112.

16. A purported will may be refused admission to probate if the circumstances surrounding its execution are such as to show that the free agency of the testator was destroyed as far as the objects of his bounty are concerned, even though such circumstances when taken separately are inconclusive: In re Maurer, 31 NP(NS) 247.

Necessity of probate

21. The probate of a will is indispensable to give validity to it: Lessee of Swazey's Heirs v. Blackman, 8 O 5.

22. When it appears that a will was duly attested and executed, and that the testator at the time of executing it was of full age, of sound mind and memory, and not under restraint, the mandatory duty rests upon the court to admit the will to probate: In re Halterman, 27 OO 521, 12 OSupp 150 (PC).

23. A title as devisee is not acquired until probate of the will: Douglas v. Miller, 3 NP 220, 4 OD 414.

24. A will does not pass title to realty before probate; see case notes under RC § 2107.61.

Effect of probate

29. Probate of a will, taken within the county, at another place than the county seat, is competent evidence to establish the will: Le Grange v. Ward, 11 O 258.

30. The order of the probate court, which recites that the will was presented for probate, and that the subscribing witnesses were sworn and examined in open court, and their testimony reduced to writing and filed, by order of court, and that thereupon the court ordered the will to be filed and admitted to record, is sufficient evidence that the will was proved according to law and ordered to be recorded: Holman v. Riddle, 8 OS 384.

31. A judgment of a probate court of another state wherein decedent was domiciled, is binding upon all who entered their appearance in such proceeding, at least if they received benefits thereunder, and on all claiming under them: Hopper v. Nicholas, 106 OS 292, 140 NE 186.

32. Before a proceeding to contest a will is begun, the order of probate has the force and action of a judgment; but it is said that such order is practically suspended when contest proceedings are instituted; and such order is superseded by the final judgment in such contest proceedings: Kammann v. Kammann, 6 App 455, 26 CC(NS) 60, 29 CD 349 [dismissed, 96 OS 600; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 238, 62 Bull 309].

33. If one of the heirs of a deceased testator is given a legacy by testator's last will and testament, and is named as executor and he applies for the probate of such will, acts as executor, distributes the estate and applies to the probate court for a transfer of the realty devised to him, such heir is estopped from bringing a second action to contest such will: Patterson v. Atkinson, 7 App 495, 27 OCA 427, 29 CD 354 [citing Leedy v. Cockley, 14 CC(NS) 72, 22 CD 299].

33.1 An order of a probate court admitting a will to probate is not a final appealable order. The only available challenge to such an order is a will contest, which is in the nature of an original action or "trial de novo," in the court of common pleas: Carr v. Howard, 17 OApp(2d) 233, 46 OO(2d) 360, 246 NE(2d) 563 [reversing 42 OO(2d) 174]; State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate Court, 113 App 1, 17 OO(2d) 1, 162 NE(2d) 574 [affirmed 172 OS 1, 15 OO(2d) 43, 173 NE(2d) 100].

34. In construing a will, the original will, together with the certified copy of the order of probate, may properly be introduced in evidence and considered by the court: Wolf v. Menager, 14 OD(NP) 128, 48 Bull 617.

35. Where the beneficiary under a forged will, fraudulently probated, was the husband of the decedent and is father of next of kin, there is a fiduciary relation which imposes upon him the legal duty to protect their interests; and violation of that duty makes him a trustee ex maleficio: Seeds v. Seeds, 116 OS 144, 156 NE 193, 52 ALR 761.

Record of will

40. A will is admitted to record where an order for such admission is made, and the regular uniform entry is used, although the will itself is not spread upon the record: McClaskey v. Barr, 54 Fed 781, 7 OFD 556.

Evidence, etc.

For capacity, see case notes under RC § 2107.02.

For execution, see case notes under RC § 2107.03.

For revocation, see case notes under RC § 2107.33 et seq.

45. The contestant has the right to prove want of due execution of the will, though he has not averred it: Dew v. Reid, 52 OS 519, 40 NE 718.

47. In order to probate the will the one offering it must prove that testator knew the nature of the instrument and realized that it was his last will and testament, but it is not necessary that this fact be known to or proved by the attesting and subscribing witnesses or either of them. It may be shown by any competent evidence: In re Reckard, 15 NP(NS) 465, 24 OD 609.

49. As to admission to probate where evidence of witnesses conflict, see In re Stacey, 6 OD(NP) 501 [for later opinion in same case, see 4 NP 143, 7 OD 277, 6 OD 142].

50. Only a prima facie case of testamentary capacity need be made out to secure probate of a will: In re Will of Ludlow, 4 NP 155, 6 OD 344 [for another opinion in same case, see 4 NP 99, 6 OD 106].

53. The court has only to be judicially satisfied that the will was duly attested and executed and that the testator possessed the requirements of the above section: In re Jones, 2 NP 194, 2 OD 409 [for other opinions in same case, see 2 NP 190, 2 OD 409; 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409].

54. In a will contest case it is misleading to charge the jury that it is of no importance what the probate judge did in probating the will, and that they are not to be influenced by what he did: Walsh v. Walsh, 18 CC(NS) 91, 32 CD 617.

Prima facie proof of execution

61. It is not necessary, in order to probate a will, that both attesting witnesses orally testify that all the statutory requirements, regarding the execution of the will, had been complied with: In re Schulz, 102 App 486, 3 OO(2d) 41, 136 NE(2d) 730.

62. Where each of the attesting witnesses testified that he signed his name in the presence of and at the testator's request; that each signed separately not in the presence of each other; that he did not hear testator by spoken words acknowledge his signature, but each understood, when he signed, that he had been requested by testator to witness his will and each observed the handwritten words "witness of will" in testator's handwriting and his signature, there was sufficient evidence to make a prima facie case of due execution: In re Kail, 16 OO(2d) 93, 176 NE(2d) 850 (App).

63. If the applicant for probate of a will makes a prima facie case on the validity of the execution and attestation, and on the capacity and freedom from restraint of the testator, the will must be admitted to probate: In re Piasecki, 30 OO(2d) 169, 201 NE(2d) 840 (PC).

Hearing, issues

71. This section, relating to the admission of a will to probate, indicates that the only proper subjects of inquiry are the execution and attestation of the will, plus the question whether the testator was of full age, of sound mind and memory, and not under restraint: In re Piasecki, 30 OO(2d) 169, 201 NE(2d) 840 (PC).

72. Under this section and GC § 10504-22 (RC § 2107.18), the following principles govern the hearing on an application to admit a will to probate: (a) no issue is presented for a contest of the will between its proponents and opponents; (b) opponents of the will may cross-examine witnesses fully upon the dueness of attestation and execution, the mental capacity of the testator and undue influence, but are not allowed to call witnesses against the admission of the will to probate; (c) a prima facie case in favor of the validity of the will is all that is required, and when all the evidence shows as a matter of law that such a case is made out, the court must admit the will to probate, even though the evidence is conflicting: In re Elvin, 146 OS 448, 32 OO 534, 66 NE(2d) 629.

If it appears that the instrument purporting to be a will is not entitled to admission to probate, the court shall enter an interlocutory order denying probate of the instrument, and shall continue the matter for further hearing. The court shall order that not less than ten days' notice of the further hearing be given by the applicant, the executor named in the instrument, or a commissioner appointed by the court, to all persons named in the instrument as legatees, devisees, beneficiaries of a trust, trustees, or executors. Upon further hearing, witnesses may be called, subpoenaed, examined, and cross-examined in open court or by deposition, and their testimony reduced to writing and filed in the same manner as in hearings for the admission of wills to probate. Thereupon, the court shall revoke its interlocutory order denying probate to the instrument, and admit it to probate, or enter a final order refusing to probate it. A final order refusing to probate the instrument may be reviewed on appeal.

Such notice shall mention the probate of the will and that the person notified is named in the will as a beneficiary. The fact that such notice has been given shall be evidenced by an affidavit of the executor filed in the probate court. The executor need not give such notice to persons who have been notified of the application for probate or of a contest as to jurisdiction or to persons whose names or places of residence are unknown and cannot with reasonable diligence be ascertained and the executor files in the court his affidavit to that effect. [LOST, SPOLIATED, OR DESTROYED WILLS]

When an original will is lost, spoliated, or destroyed subsequent to the death of a testator, or before the death of such testator if the testator's lack of knowledge of such loss, spoliation, or destruction can be proved by clear and convincing testimony, or after he became incapable of making a will by reason of insanity, and such will cannot be produced in the probate court in as complete a manner as the originals of last wills and testaments which are actually produced therein for probate, the court may admit such lost, spoliated, or destroyed will to probate, if such court is satisfied the will was executed according to the law in force at the time of its execution and not revoked at the death of the testator.

Definitions

1. For definition of a lost will, see Gibson v. Gibson, 6 CC(NS) 269, 15 CD 698 [affirming In re Gibson, 14 OD(NP) 331, which affirmed 1 NP(NS) 552, 49 Bull 58, and was affirmed, without report, Gibson v. Gibson, 72 OS 677].

2. A lost will is a will that cannot be found: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

3. A spoliated will may be a will which is mutilated or which is in part lost or destroyed: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

4. A destroyed will is said to be one that cannot be produced: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

5. Tearing with intent to revoke is not spoliation within the meaning of this section, and such will cannot be probated: In re Jones, 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409 [for other opinion in same case, see 2 NP 190, 2 OD 409].

6. The words "lost and destroyed" in this section are used in their popular meanings, the former referring to a will that cannot be found after a search but still may be in existence, and the latter to one that is not in existence: In re Downie, 35 OO(2d)

31, 6 OMisc 36, 213 NE(2d) 833 (PC).

7. "Spoliation," as used in this section means the doing of some act manifest on the face of the will by someone other than the testator: In re Downie, 35 OO(2d) 31, 6 OMisc 36, 213 NE(2d) 833 (PC).

Construction

10. The spirit of this statute is, to some extent, in odium spoliatoris, and to render the same practically effective, it must be so administered: Banning v. Banning, 12 OS 437.

11. Under the constitution and laws of Ohio, proceedings to admit to probate lost, spoliated or destroyed wills, are statutory in nature, and appeals from probate court to the court of appeals from a denial of admission of such documents to probate are not equitable in nature and, therefore, do not invoke the chancery powers of the court of appeals: In re Bowles, 93 App 461, 51 OO 197 113 NE(2d) 259.

Evidence of existence

13. Where a will has been lost or destroyed before the death of the testator, the law presumes that he revoked it, and where he became insane after he made the will, the evidence to overcome this presumption must be certain, satisfactory and conclusive that it was unrevoked and in existence after he became "incapable by reason of insanity to make a will": Cole v. McClure, 88 OS 1, 102 NE 264.

14. Where a will is in the custody of the testator from the time of its execution until his death, and is found among his effects after his death with the entire surname of testator's signature torn off and with "X" marks in ink through his initials which are on the margin of each page of the will, it will be presumed that the will was mutilated by the testator with the intention of revoking the same: In re Tyler, 159 OS 492, 50 OO 419, 112 NE(2d) 668.

15. In such case, to establish a claim that the mutilation occurred subsequent to the death of the testator, the evidence must satisfy the mind of the probate judge, and to establish a claim that the mutilation was made by some one other than the testator before his death and without his knowledge, the evidence must be clear and convincing: In re Tyler, 159 OS 492, 50 OO 419, 112 NE(2d) 668.

16. In order to establish the execution and contents of an alleged lost will, the evidence must be clear, positive, free from bias, and convincing beyond a reasonable doubt; and it must be proved that the will was in existence at the death of the testatrix and thereafter destroyed or lost, or that it was in existence at the time the person became incapable of making a will by reason of insanity: In re Ayres, 19 OO 465 (PC).

17. It is said that a will being in the custody of a person other than the testator, and not being in existence after death of the latter who was incapable of revoking it, or not having access to it, it must have been fraudulently destroyed in the lifetime of the testator, or subsequent to his death. If so destroyed it was fraudulently so done, and the legal result is the same precisely as if it had continued in existence up to the time of the death of the testator: In re Thompson, 16 NP(NS) 121, 59 Bull 307 (Ed), 59 Bull 344.

18. A paper in seven pieces, found in decedent's pocket after his death, is not subject to probate as a spoliated will although one piece is missing, where it became in such a condition from being pocket-worn before decedent's death: In re Miller, 26 NP(NS) 209.

19. A will which has not been legally revoked or canceled may be admitted to probate although the signatures of the witnesses thereto are partially obliterated, if the witnesses can identify the portion of the signatures remaining: In re Miller, 26 NP(NS) 209.

20. Where, by testator's neglect, a material clause of his will becomes so obliterated before his death that it can no longer be read in full, the missing part must be supplied by competent evidence before the will can be admitted to probate: In re Miller, 26 NP(NS) 209.

21. Lack of knowledge of the loss of a will during the lifetime of the testator is a negative fact which can only be established by evidence of his conduct and statements made to persons interested as well as others, and his treatment of such beneficiaries during his lifetime and also evidence as to whether there was a change in testator's interest in those who are beneficiaries under such lost will, as well as the care with which the will is drawn and the relationship between the deceased and those who would, by law, succeed to his property upon his death, in the absence of a will. Broad latitude in receiving evidence must be allowed of all surrounding circumstances to permit a full inquiry on such issue: In re Bowles, 96 App 265, 54 OO 296, 114 NE(2d) 229.

22. Requiring the proponent of a lost will, in an application for its probate, to establish lack of knowledge "by the best evidence" constitutes reversible error: In re Bowles, 96 App 265, 54 OO 296, 114 NE(2d) 229.

23. Where the only issue presented in an application to probate a lost will is that the deceased did not have knowledge of such loss, there being no question as to its provisions and proper execution, the quantum of proof required by this section, is that the proponent must establish by clear and convincing evidence that testator did not know of its loss: In re Bowles, 96 App 265, 54 OO 296, 114 NE(2d) 229.

23.1 A decedent's brother, who makes application to probate an alleged lost will of such decedent, may not testify, in a hearing on an application to probate such will, concerning matters occurring prior to the death of such decedent. (RC § 2317.03): In re Karras, 109 App 403, 11 OO(2d) 334, 166 NE(2d) 781.

23.2 In such case, declarations made by such decedent prior to his death may be introduced into evidence, provided the proper foundation is made therefor: In re Karras, 109 App 403, 11 OO(2d) 334, 166 NE(2d) 781.

23.3 The law in Ohio states that when a will is not found it gives rise to a presumption of revocation. Therefore the burden of proof was on the proponents to prove by clear and convincing evidence such as to satisfy the court that said will was not revoked but was lost: In re Simon, 20 OO(2d) 59, 86 OLA 380, 177 NE(2d) 92.

24. Under the provisions of this section the testator must have a lack of knowledge of the spoliation in order for the spoliated will to be admissible: In re Steel, 37 OO(2d) 70, 219 NE(2d) 237 (PC).

Procedure for admission

31. Where a will is admitted to probate on the ground that the original will has been destroyed, the omission of the record to state that the destruction of the original will was subsequent to the death of the testator, does not render the order admitting such will to probate, void: Converse v. Starr, 23 OS 491.

32. Probate of a paper as a last will and testament is not reviewable on error, though an order refusing to probate such paper is reviewable. The admission to probate of a lost or spoliated will can be annulled or revoked in no other manner than that prescribed for other wills: Hollrah v. Lasance, 63 OS 58, 57

NE 964 [affirming 16 CC 187, 8 CD 788].

33. An appeal lies to the court of common pleas from an order of the probate court overruling an application to find and establish the contents of a lost will: Roth v. Siefert, 77 OS 417, 83 NE 611.

34. Proceedings to require the production of a will under GC § 10504-10, proceedings to admit a will to probate under GC § 10504-15, and proceedings to establish a lost, spoliated or destroyed will under GC § 10504-35 et seq may be maintained only in the probate court of the county in which the testator was domiciled at the time of death: State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE(2d) 84.

35. A will, lost or destroyed, cannot be probated unless it was in existence subsequent to the death of the testator: Sinclair's Will, 5 OS 291; Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820; Cole v. McClure, 88 OS 1, 102 NE 264; Gibson v. Gibson, 6 CC(NS) 269, 15 CD 698 [affirming In re Gibson, 14 OD(NP) 331, which affirmed 1 NP(NS) 552, 49 Bull 58, and was affirmed, without report, Gibson v. Gibson, 72 OS 677]; In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

36. The fact that a lost will was made in conformity to a contract between the testator and the proponent is not ground for the admission of such will to probate: In re Fox, 84 App 135, 39 OO 165, 85 NE(2d) 585.

37. General Code § 11421-2 [RC § 2315.22], providing for separate findings of fact and conclusions of law, has no application to a proceeding in the probate court to probate a lost will: In re Hughes, 84 App 275, 39 OO 404, 85 NE(2d) 583.

38. Contest of copy of lost will admitted to probate: Carr v. Howard, 17 OApp(2d) 233, 46 OO(2d) 360, 246 NE(2d) 563 (reversing 15 OMisc 5, 42 OO(2d) 174, 237 NE(2d) 180).

39. Executed and attested carbon copies of a will cannot be admitted to probate in lieu of the original last will and testament: In re Steel, 8 OMisc 133, 37 OO(2d) 70, 219 NE(2d) 237 (PC).

§ 2107.27 Notice of application; testimony; probate. (GC §§ 10504-36, 10504-37, 10504-38, 10504-40)

When application is made to the probate court to admit to probate a will which has been lost, spoliated, or destroyed, the party seeking to prove such will shall give a written notice to the surviving spouse and to the next of kin of the testator known to be residents of the state, and to all persons, known to reside in the county where the testator resided at the time of his death, whose interest it may be to resist the probate. The party seeking to prove such will shall give the written notice not less than five days before the day on which such proof is to be made, or give notice, by publication in a newspaper printed in the county, not less than thirty days before the day set for hearing such proof.

In such cases, the court shall cause the witnesses to such will and other witnesses whom a person interested in having such will admitted to probate may desire to have appear, to come before the court. Such witnesses shall be examined by the probate judge and their testimony reduced to writing and filed by him in his court. When witnesses reside out of its jurisdiction, or reside within such jurisdiction but are infirm or unable to attend, the court may order their testimony to be taken and reduced to writing by some competent person, which testimony shall be filed in such court.

If upon such proof, the court is satisfied that such last will and testament was executed in the manner provided by the law in force at the time of its execution, that its contents are substantially proved, that it was unrevoked at the death of the testator, and has been lost, spoliated, or destroyed since his death or since he became incapable of making a will by reason of insanity, or before the death of the testator if his lack of knowledge of such loss, spoliation, or destruction can be proved by clear and convincing testimony, such court shall find and establish the contents of such will as near as can be ascertained and cause them and the testimony taken in the case to be recorded in such court.

The contents of such a last will and testament shall be as effectual for all purposes, as if the original will has been admitted to probate and record.

Notice

1. The notice herein provided for does not make the parties served therewith parties to the proceeding: Estate of Jones, 2 NP 194, 2 OD 404.

2. It is error to establish a spoliated will without notice: Baugarth v. Miller, 26 OS 541 [affirming Miller v. Bengart, 1 Bull 126].

3. Under former GC § 10544 (see now RC § 2107.27) it was held that where no person interested in resisting the probate of a lost, spoliated or destroyed will resides within the county in which application is made to admit the same to probate, notice must be given by publication, in the manner and for the time required by the statute: Baugarth v. Miller, 26 OS 541 [affirming Miller v. Bengart, 1 Bull 126].

3.1 When an application is made to the probate court to admit a lost will to probate, written notice must be given to the administrator of the estate who is a resident of the county and known to the applicant: In re Simon, 20 OO(2d) 59, 86 OLA 378, 177 NE(2d) 92 (PC).

Presumptions

8. When a will, once known to exist, and to have been in the custody of the testator, cannot be found after his decease, the presumption is that testator destroyed it with intent to revoke it: In re Simon, 378, 86 OLA 20 OO(2d) 59, 380, 177 NE(2d) 92. Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820; Cole v. McClure, 88 OS 1, 102 NE 264; Gibson v. Gibson, 6 CC(NS) 269, 15 CD 698 [affirming In re Gibson, 14 OD(NP) 331, which affirmed 1 NP(NS) 552, 49 Bull 58, and affirmed, without report, Gibson v. Gibson, 72 OS 677]; In re Blymeyer's Will, 7 NP 591, 5 OD 399; In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

9. Declarations of testator that he destroyed his will or meant to destroy it are admissible to strengthen the presumption that a will in testator's custody, and missing on his death, was revoked by him: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820.

10. The probate of a copy is prima facie evidence of the contents and due execution of the will, but it is only prima facie and all the matters essential to the probate of a copy are as rebuttable as the numerous other matters that may be an issue in the contest of a will where the probate of a copy is not involved: Chenoweth v. Cary, 17 OO 76 (App) [appeal dismissed, 136 OS 123].

10.1 A will, which was at all times in the exclusive possession of the decedent and which was not found at the time of his death, presumptively was revoked and a proponent had to prove that it was not revoked by clear and convincing evidence: In re Simon, 20 OO(2d) 59, 177 NE(2d) 92 (PC).

Burden of proof and sufficiency of evidence

15. The burden of proof as to the existence of the will after testator's death is on the proponents: Gibson v. Gibson, 6 CC(NS) 269, 15 CD 698 [affirming In re Gibson, 14 OD(NP) 331, which affirmed 1 NP(NS) 552, 49 Bull 58, and affirmed, without report, Gibson v. Gibson, 72 OS 677].

17. Where a will has been lost or destroyed before the death of the testator, the law presumes that he revoked it, and where he became insane after he made the will, the evidence to overcome this presumption must be certain, satisfactory and conclusive that it was unrevoked and in existence after he became "incapable by reason of insanity to make a will": Cole v. McClure, 88 OS 1, 102 NE 264.

18. General Code § 10504-38 (RC § 2107.27) seeks to surround the probate of copies with special precautionary provisions. The court must be satisfied that the will was executed in the mode provided by law; that its contents are substantially proved; that it was unrevoked at the death of the testator and has been destroyed since his death or before his death if his lack of knowledge of such destruction can be proved by clear and convincing testimony: Chenoweth v. Cary, 17 OO 76 (App) [appeal dismissed, 136 OS 123].

19. A higher degree of proof than the mere preponderance of the evidence is required under GC § 10504-38 (RC § 2107.27), in order to warrant the court to probate a claimed lost or spoliated will: In re Ayres, 36 OLA 267, 43 NE(2d) 918 (App) [affirming 19 OO 465 (PC)].

20. The contents of a will, which has been destroyed together with the record thereof, cannot be established by the testimony of a single witness who speaks entirely from memory after an interval of more than thirty years since he saw the will and heard it read: Consumers Brew. Co. v. Hardway, 2 App 171, 17 CC(NS) 475, 26 CD 443 [affirmed on motion of defendant, Hardway v. Consumers Brew. Co., 13 OLR 31].

21. The contents of a lost or spoliated will may be established by the testimony of one witness: Egbert v. Egbert, 10 App 432, 29 OCA 584 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 507, 64 Bull 61].

22. The burden of proof is on the proponents. When subscribing witnesses are dead, secondary evidence may be introduced, and a copy of a will made shortly after testator's death, by his attorney, is admissible to prove the contents: In re Estate of Larence, 5 NP 20, 7 OD 246.

23. To establish the contents of a spoliated will upon declarations alone of the testator, without other clear and convincing evidence as to the precise provisions of the will, would be an unsafe rule of evidence: In re Thompson, 16 NP(NS) 121, 59 Bull 344.

24. A spoliated will cannot be admitted to probate, notwithstanding declarations which sufficiently establish its existence at the time of the death of the testator, if it is impossible to determine its contents by clear and convincing evidence as to its provisions: In re Thompson, 16 NP(NS) 121, 59 Bull 344.

—Testimony of witnesses

29. Testator's declarations that he has destroyed, or intended to destroy, his will, are admissible to corroborate the presumption, from its nonappearance, that he had destroyed it: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820.

30. Under GC § 10504-37 (RC § 2107.27) it is within the discretion of the probate court to permit persons opposing the probate of a lost will to cross-examine the witnesses offered by the proponents: In re Ayres, 19 OO 465, 33 OLA 1 (PC) [affirmed 36 OLA 267, 43 NE(2d) 918 (App)].

31. Declarations of the testator are not of themselves alone sufficient to establish the execution of a lost or destroyed will, but are admissible in evidence and have great weight when corroborated by other evidence: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

32. On probate of a spoliated will, although those adverse to the probate cannot offer evidence, yet they may be allowed to question witnesses, not as a cross-examination to controvert evidence, but to elicit all facts and circumstances bearing on the execution or revocation of the will: In re Jones, 2 NP 190, 2 OD 409 [for other opinions in this case, see 2 NP 194, 2 OD 404; 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409].

33. Merely being a legatee does not make a person so interested as that he may call witnesses: In re Jones, 2 NP 190, 2 OD 409 [for other opinions in this case, see 2 NP 194, 2 OD 409; 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409].

34. But no witness in resistance to the probate will be heard, and if a cross-examination by a legatee shows that he is in fact hostile to the probate he will not be allowed to call witnesses either before or after he became a party: In re Jones, 2 NP 194, 2 OD 409 [for other opinions in same case, see 2 NP 190, 2 OD 409; 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409].

Procedure

39. Probate of a lost or spoliated will can be revoked in no other manner than that prescribed with respect to wills not lost or spoliated: Hollrah v. Lasance, 63 OS 58, 57 NE 964 [affirming 16 CC 187, 8 CD 788].

40. The order admitting a lost will to probate is prima facie evidence of the due attestation, execution and validity of the will; and in proceedings to set aside such probate, plaintiff, to obtain a verdict, must prove by a preponderance of the evidence either want of mental capacity or undue influence, or that the alleged paper writing was not the will of testatrix: Bloor v. Platt, 78 OS 46, 84 NE 604.

41. As to findings of the jury and charge of the court in proceedings to set aside the probate of a lost will, see Bloor v. Platt, 78 OS 46, 84 N.E. 604.

Effect of will so established

46. The record of a spoliated will, duly found, admitted to probate, and recorded, is prima facie evidence in a future proceeding to contest the validity of such will, not alone of its due attestation and execution, but also of its contents: Banning v. Banning, 12 OS 437.

47. The establishment of a spoliated will is prima facie evidence of the will on contest, and the burden is on the contestants to invalidate it: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820; Hutson v. Hartley, 72 OS 262, 74 NE 197.

48. An order of the probate court admitting a paper to probate as a last will and testament is not reviewable on petition in error, though an order refusing to admit such paper to probate is reviewable: Hollrah v. Lasance, 63 OS 58, 57 NE 964 [affirming 16 CC 187, 8 CD 788].

49. An order overruling an application to find and establish the contents of a lost will is appealable. An order of the common pleas court finding and establishing the contents of a lost will is not reviewable upon petition in error: Roth v. Siefert, 77 OS 417, 83 NE 611.

50. When no evidence is offered on the trial to show when a will was lost or destroyed, whether before or after the death of the testator, the order of probate admitting the will to record is sufficient evidence of the existence of the will after such death to justify a verdict sustaining the will: Egbert v. Egbert, 10 App 432, 29 OCA 584 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 507, 64 Bull 61].

If a will is lost, spoliated, destroyed, mislaid, or stolen, after it has been admitted to probate but before it has been recorded, upon notice being given, as provided by section 2107.27 of the Revised Code, to persons whose interest it may be to resist the probate and record of such will, the probate court may hear testimony, and if satisfied that the contents of the will have been substantially proved, the court may record such will as thus proven, which record shall have all the effect of a record of the original will.

§ 2107.29 Record of will destroyed. (GC § 10504-41)

When the record of a will is destroyed, a copy of such will or a copy of such will and its probate may be recorded by the probate court if it appears to the court's satisfaction that such record has been destroyed and if it appears, by reason of a certificate signed and sealed by the probate judge, or by the clerk of the court of common pleas, that such copy is a true copy of the original will or a true copy of the original will and its probate.

[REVOCATION]

A will shall be revoked by the testator by tearing, canceling, obliterating, or destroying it with the intention of revoking it, or by some person in the testator's presence, or by the testator's express written direction, or by some other written will or codicil, executed as prescribed by sections 2107.01 to 2107.62 of the Revised Code, or by some other writing that is signed, attested, and subscribed in the manner provided by those sections.

If after executing a will, a testator is divorced, obtains a dissolution of marriage, or has his marriage annulled, or upon actual separation from his spouse, enters into a separation agreement whereby the parties intend to fully and finally settle their prospective property rights in the property of the other, whether by expected inheritance or otherwise, any disposition or appointment of property made by the will to the former spouse, any provision in the will conferring a general or special power of appointment on the former spouse, and any nomination in the will of the former spouse as executor, trustee, or guardian, shall be revoked unless the will expressly provides otherwise.

Property prevented from passing to a former spouse because of revocation by this section shall pass as if the former spouse failed to survive the decedent, and other provisions conferring some power or office on the former spouse shall be interpreted as if the spouse failed to survive the decedent. If provisions are revoked solely by this section, they shall be deemed to be revived by testator's remarriage with the former spouse or upon the termination of a separation agreement executed by them.

A bond, agreement, or covenant made by a testator, for a valuable consideration, to convey property previously devised or bequeathed in a will, does not revoke the devise or bequest. The property passes by the devise or bequest, subject to the remedies on the bond, agreement, or covenant, for a specific performance or otherwise, against the devisees or legatees, that might be had by law against the heirs of the testator, or his next of kin, if the property had descended to them.

Capacity to revoke

1. Capacity to revoke a will must be equal to the capacity to make a will no more complicated than a descent if intestate: In re Jones, 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409 [for other opinions in same case, see 2 NP 190, 2 OD 409; 2 NP 194, 2 OD 404].

Statutory methods

2. The methods of revoking a will provided in RC § 2107.33 are exclusive. An unsigned statement in the handwriting of a testatrix on the margin of her will that she intends to revoke a bequest contained therein, which writing does not touch that in the will itself, is not a cancellation of the will, but is a mere writing without the formalities required by statute for the making or revoking of a will: Kronauge v. Stoecklein, 33 OApp(2d) 229, 62 OO(2d) 321, 293 NE(2d) 320 (1972).

3. It is within the jurisdiction of the probate court to determine what passes under a will and what application of other circumstances and conditions affect or control the passing of interests under the will: Skorapa v. Skorapa, 17 OO(2d) 97, 177 NE (2d) 310 (PC).

Tearing, canceling, etc.

7. Intent to revoke without an act of tearing, etc., is inoperative: Kent v. Mahaffey, 10 OS 204.

8. The sign, or symbol, of the attempt to tear, obliterate, cancel or destroy the will must be apparent upon the instrument purporting to be the will: Kent v. Mahaffey, 10 OS 204.

9. There can be no partial revocation by tearing, canceling, etc.: Giffin v. Brooks, 48 OS 211, 31 NE 743 [affirming 3 CC 110, 2 CD 64]; Coghlin v. Coghlin, 79 OS 71, 85 NE 1053 [affirming 9 CC(NS) 385, 19 CD 251]; Porterfield v. Porterfield, 4 NP(NS) 654, 17 OD 448.

9.1 This section sets out the ways in which a will may be legally revoked. An "agreement" whereby stepchildren waived any and all right which they might have had to share in the estate of their stepmother, is not one of those ways: McFayden v. Hanisch, 169 OS 471, 8 OO(2d) 477, 160 NE(2d) 272.

10. Pencil marks drawn through a will presented for probate, not on the will when executed, there being evidence of statements that testatrix intended to change her will, are not sufficient to effectuate a cancellation by act to the instrument under GC § 10504-7 (RC § 2107.33): Cummings v. Nichols, 6 OO 414 (App).

11. Drawing ink lines through a clause after execution, with intent to revoke the clause, but not the whole will, does not revoke the clause. If all the words of such clause remain legible, the whole will should be admitted to probate, including the erased clause: Giffin v. Brooks, 48 OS 211, 31 NE 743 [affirming 3 CC 110, 2 CD 64]; Porterfield v. Porterfield, 4 NP(NS) 654, 17 OD 448.

12. Intent to revoke must concur with the physical act of destruction or partial destruction. Tearing in pieces a part of the will with the intent to remove the torn portions only therefrom does not revoke the will, where such pieces are afterwards recovered and put together, and the sheet in legible condition is placed in the will without the knowledge of the testator: Coghlin v. Coghlin, 79 OS 71, 85 NE 1053 [affirming 9 CC(NS) 385, 19 CD 251].

13. A written direction to the custodian of a will to "dispose of" it, is not a revocation if such custodian does not receive such instruction, and such will is not destroyed, at least if testator knows that it remains in existence: Lesnett v. Hunter, 15 App 388, 32 OCA 298.

14. Revocation of a will within the provisions of GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107.33) may be accomplished by tearing, however slight, if done with the intention of revoking the will: In re Eliker, 32 OLA 465.

15. Tearing with intent to revoke is not spoliation: Jones' Will, 2 NP 209, 2 OD 409.

16. Lines drawn through the clause of a will, by express direction of the testator, for the purpose of canceling such clause, and done before the same is signed, render such clause ineffective, and it is no part of the will of the testator: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

Other will, etc., in writing

21. Written will cannot be revoked by subsequent nuncupative will: McCune v. House, 8 O 144.

22. Codicil does not revoke former will except to extent that its provisions are inconsistent with will, unless intent to revoke is expressed: Foye v. Foye, 35 App 283, 172 NE 386.

23. As a will and codicil are to be taken and construed together as parts of the same instrument, and the intent of the testator gathered from the whole, a codicil to a will will not revoke the same any further than is clearly expressed or necessarily to be inferred from it: Collier v. Collier, 3 OS 369.

24. The making of a subsequent will, when the terms thereof are inconsistent with an earlier will, operates as a revocation of the earlier will without specific words of revocation, by virtue of GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107.33), although such subsequent will is not in existence and could not be probated as a "lost, spoliated, or destroyed" will under GC § 10504-35 (RC § 2107.26): Hennessy v. Volz, 59 App 1, 12 OO 335, 16 NE(2d) 1019.

25. A codicil, by the terms of which specified property is given in fee simple and absolutely to a devisee named, revokes that portion of the will whereby the same property is given to the same devisee as a life estate: Moller v. Wareham, 30 NP(NS) 315.

26. Where the language of a codicil is, "Whereas in said will the one-third equal share in said property was devised to my son N without the intervention of trusteeship, and whereas since the execution thereof good and sufficient reasons satisfy me that the same is required in his case as well as in that of his sister, now I do therefore revoke the said devise and bequest to him and do transfer the same to his wife and children instead," it was held that the codicil did not enlarge the trusteeship provided for the sister, but transferred the devise from N to his wife and children: Wade v. Bartlett, 16 CC(NS) 391, 31 CD 565.

27. It is said that if a second will purports to revoke an earlier will it does not operate as a revocation until it takes effect as a will at the death of the testator: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

28. Will is wholly revoked by execution of second will only if second will contains express revocation clause, or is utterly inconsistent with provisions of first will: Paully v. Crooks, 41 App 1, 179 NE 364.

29. Second will, if inconsistent in part with provisions of first will, revokes first will to extent of inconsistency: Paully v. Crooks, 41 App 1, 179 NE 364.

30. A provision in a will "hereby revoking all former wills by me made," is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107-33) for revocation of a former will: Westfall v. Notman, 18 OLA 407.

31. Indorsements upon a will, which are not witnessed as provided by law, will not work a revocation of any provisions in the will: Porterfield v. Porterfield, 4 NP(NS) 654, 17 OD 448.

32. A codicil operates as a revocation of a will only as far as is absolutely necessary to give effect to the provisions of such codicil: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

33. Where the contest of a will is based upon the claim that the will which has been admitted to probate is not the last will of the decedent, it is incumbent on the plaintiffs to show that the will in question was annulled and revoked by a later valid will, either by an express statement to that effect in the later will, or by reason of the fact that the provisions of the later will are wholly inconsistent with those of the original will: Crane v. Tunkey, 11 OLR 454, 58 Bull 316.

Intent to revoke

34. Under GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107.33), when there is an obliteration of a part of a will the intention of the testator accompanying the act must govern, and if a revocation of the entire will was not intended there is no revocation: Kerfel v. Trimbach, 69 OLA 419, 125 NE(2d) 753 (App).

Change in circumstances

38. A will was executed, making a bequest to an intended wife as such. She afterwards married the testator and then abandoned him, and subsequently obtained a divorce. Held: This did not constitute a revocation: Charlton v. Miller, 27 OS 298.

39. Where the evidence shows that a testatrix made disposition of her entire estate by a codicil to her will in favor of a beneficiary to whom she was married more than a year later, that such codicil contained no mention of a prospective marital relationship between the testatrix and the beneficiary as the motivation for such disposition, that subsequently there was a written property settlement agreement between the parties followed by divorce, in which agreement there was no reference to any testamentary disposition, and that the testatrix lived for several months thereafter without changing or expressly revoking such testamentary disposition of her property, a determination and adjudication by the court of appeals that the facts and circumstances presented are insufficient to constitute a revocation implied by law, under the latter part of GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107.33), will not be disturbed by this court on appeal: Codner v. Caldwell, 156 OS 197, 46 OO 89, 101 NE(2d) 901, discussed in 13 OSLJ 423.

39.1 Under the circumstances of a divorce decree coupled with a full settlement of property rights, a court is warranted in finding that there is, as to legacies and devises to the divorced spouse, an implied revocation of a will executed during the marriage: Yunker v. Johnson, 160 OS 409, 52 OO 320, 116 NE(2d) 715.

40. While an instrument in writing, such as a deed, may have the effect, under GC §§ 10504-47 and 10504-52 (RC §§ 2107.33 and 2107.36), of revoking a devise in a will, it does not thereby become a will and subject to the rules of construction applicable to wills but retains its original character, and, if a deed, is subject to the rules of construction applicable to deeds: Gordon v. Bartlett, 62 App 295, 16 OO 13, 23 NE(2d) 964.

42. Divorce and settlement of property rights revokes prior will of one spouse only so far as it is in favor of other spouse: Pardee v. Grubiss, 34 App 474, 171 NE 375.

43. A separation agreement in which the right of each party to dispose of his or her property by will, without interference by the other, is expressly declared, and both parties waive every conceivable right based on the marital relation and as heir, surviving spouse, or in any other capacity, does not in fact or in law effect a revocation of the wife's will made prior to the divorce action: Sutton v. Bethell, 97 App 52, 51 OO 293, 116 NE(2d) 594.

43.1 Where it is shown that a testator obtained a divorce and executed a property settlement pursuant thereto, a court may validly conclude that by such acts he intended, within the provisions of RC § 2107.33, to revoke his previously made last will and testament devising all of his property to his spouse: In re Estate of McQuay, 44 OApp(2d) 74, 73 OO(2d) 63, 335 NE(2d) 743 (1975).

43.2 A divorce decree in effect restoring to the parties their separate property rights, but not coupled with a voluntary separation agreement contemplating a full settlement of their property rights, does not warrant a court finding an implied revocation of a will executed during marriage: Lang v. Leiter, 103 App 119, 3 OO(2d) 184, 144 NE(2d) 332.

43.3 Where a divorce is coupled with settlement of property rights, there is an implied revocation of a prior will of one spouse in favor of the divorced spouse, under this section, but only so far as said will makes bequest or devise to divorced spouse: Skorapa v. Skorapa, 17 OO(2d) 97, 177 NE(2d) 310 (PC).

44. A divorce, coupled with a full property settlement, is such a subsequent change in testator's circumstances that any legacy or bequest in a will executed during marriage for benefit of divorced wife is impliedly revoked, but divorce alone, without a separation agreement executed during coverture, does not impliedly revoke a devise or bequest for either one of the divorced parties: Davis v. Davis, 24 OMisc 17, 51 OO(2d) 388, 258 NE(2d) 277 (CP) [see also In re Davis, 22 OMisc 14, 50 OO(2d) 37, 256 NE(2d) 281].

Partial revocation ineffective

45. There can be no partial revocation of a will: Kerfel v. Trimbach, 69 OLA 419, 125 NE(2d) 753 (App).

45.1 Where the original will unquestionably contained six legatees on page one thereof and it was apparent that someone had deleted the last two bequests, the act of cutting or tearing a portion of the will done at some time subsequent to the execution of two codicils ratifying and confirming the original will and prior to the testator's death, did not constitute an intent to revoke the will in its entirety: In re Downie, 35 OO(2d) 31, 6 OMisc 36, 213 NE(2d) 833 (PC).

Procedure

47. Revised Code § 2741.04, providing that a jury shall try the issues in a will contest, does not preclude a directed verdict or a summary judgment, when appropriate: Kronauge v. Stoecklein, 33 OApp(2d) 229, 62 OO(2d) 321, 293 NE(2d) 320 (1972).

48. If a will is revoked by the testator himself, under this section, or by operation of law, under former GC § 10561 (see now RC § 2107.34), and is, nevertheless, admitted to probate and record, any person interested in having it set aside as invalid may contest its validity: Myers v. Barrow, 3 CC 91, 2 CD 52.

Evidence, presumptions, etc.

53. When a will, once known to exist, and to have been in the custody of the testator, cannot be found after his decease, the presumption is that testator destroyed it with intent to revoke it: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820; Cole v. McClure, 88 OS 1, 102 NE 264; Gibson v. Gibson, 6 CC(NS) 269, 15 CD 698 [affirming In re Gibson, 14 OD(NP) 331, which affirmed 1 NP(NS) 552, 49 Bull 58, and affirmed, without report, Gibson v. Gibson,

72 OS 677]; In re Blymeyer's Will, 7 NP 591, 5 OD 399; In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

54. Declarations of testator that he destroyed his will or meant to destroy it are admissible to strengthen the presumption that a will in testator's custody, and missing on his death, was revoked by him: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820.

55. Where a will is proved to have been once executed and the testator retained custody of it or had ready access to it, and it cannot be found after his death, a legal presumption is raised that the will was destroyed by testator with intention of revoking it: Chenoweth v. Cary, 17 OO 76 (App) [appeal dismissed, 136 OS 123].

56. Where a revoking instrument is not introduced in evidence and the only evidence introduced is to the effect that the testator stated that he intended to execute such an instrument, the prior will is not revoked: Dyce v. Koch, 79 OLA 596, 157 NE(2d) 130.

57. The fact that a testator has been adjudged insane and that a will in his custody has been destroyed does not raise a presumption that such destruction was accomplished by him while he was insane if there was a substantial period of time both before and after his insanity during which he might have destroyed such will: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

Other questions

61. An unrevoked and unamended, revocable and amendable living trust, the terms of which have been incorporated in a will by reference, does not invalidate a testamentary devise to the trustee of such trust to be administered according to the terms and conditions of the trust and is not repugnant to the provisions of GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107.33): Bolles v. Toledo Trust Co., 144 OS 195, 29 OO 376, 58 NE(2d) 381 [contra, Smyth v. Cleveland Trust Co., 172 OS 489, 18 OO(2d) 42, 179 NE(2d) 60].

62. The provisions of GC § 10504-47 (RC § 2107.-33) apply exclusively to cases in which the estate or interest of the testator in property previously devised or bequeathed by him is altered, but not wholly divested: Gordon v. Bartlett, 62 App 295, 16 OO 13, 23 NE(2d) 964.

63. The making of a change in a will, which there is reason to believe was done for reasons satisfactory to the testator, is not, where standing alone, a sufficient reason for setting the instrument aside on the ground of undue influence, notwithstanding the will as so changed did not, in the opinion of some, make a fair and reasonable distribution of the estate of the testator: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

64. A beneficiary under a will cannot maintain an action for its wrongful destruction during the testator's lifetime, since he has no legal interest in legacies given by will during the lifetime of the testator: Van Develde v. Van Develde, 22 CC(NS) 277, 33 CD 566.

65. This section prevents the application of the doctrine of equitable conversion to devises of real estate which is under covenant of some character at the devisor's death: Sells v. Needles, 34 OO 186, 69 NE(2d) 767 (PC).

§ 2107.34 Afterborn or pretermitted heirs.

If, after making a last will and testament, a testator has a child born alive, or adopts a child, or designates an heir in the manner provided by section 2105.15 of the Revised Code, or if a child or designated heir who is absent and reported to be dead proves to be alive, and no provision has been made in such will or by settlement for such pretermitted child or heir, or for the issue thereof, the will shall not be revoked; but unless it appears by such will that it was the intention of the testator to disinherit such pretermitted child or heir, the devises and legacies granted by such will, except those to a surviving spouse, shall be abated proportionately, or in such other manner as is necessary to give effect to the intention of the testator as shown by the will, so that such pretermitted child or heir will receive a share equal to that which such person would have been entitled to receive out of the estate if such testator had died intestate with no surviving spouse, owning only that portion of his estate not devised or bequeathed to or for the use and benefit of a surviving spouse. If such child or heir dies prior to the death of the testator, the issue of such deceased child or heir shall receive the share the parent would have received if living.

If such pretermitted child or heir supposed to be dead at the time of executing the will has lineal descendants, provision for whom is made by the testator, the other legatees and devisees need not contribute, but such pretermitted child or heir shall take the provision made for his lineal descendants or such part of it as, in the opinion of the probate judge, may be equitable. In settling the claim of a pretermitted child or heir, any portion of the testator's estate received by a party interested, by way of advancement, is a portion of the estate and shall be charged to the party who has received it.

Though measured by sections 2105.01 to 2105.21, inclusive, of the Revised Code, the share taken by a pretermitted child or heir shall be considered as a testate succession. This section does not prejudice the right of any fiduciary to act under any power given by the will, nor shall the title of innocent purchasers for value of any of the property of the testator's estate be affected by any right given by this section to a pretermitted child or heir.

Vesting of specific interest reversed to pretermitted child, 6.2

1. An adopted child has the right to have a will revoked under former GC § 10561 (see now RC § 2107.34): Surman v. Surman, 114 OS 579, 151 NE 708, (affirming 21 App 434, 153 NE 873).

3. The fact that the testatrix survived the child does not revive a will that has been revoked under this section: Ash v. Ash, 9 OS 383.

4. Where a child of a testator is born after the probate of his will, the birth of the child revokes the will: Evans v. Anderson, 15 OS 324.

5. A reversionary interest, whether vested or contingent, is not a provision for an after-born child. To save a will from the revocation provided by the act, the provision must be expressly and specifically made: Rhodes v. Weldy, 46 OS 234, 20 NE 461, 15 AmSt 584.

5.1. Where a testator had no children at the time of executing his will and has made clear his intention that his will shall apply to unborn children, it is not for the court to inquire whether such provision was large or small, equal or unequal, vested or contingent, present or future: Rhodes v. Weldy, 46 OS 234, not followed: McMillan v. McMillan, 12 NP(NS) 593, 23 OD 69.

5.2 Where a person having a child or children executes his will and thereafter another child is born, for whom no provision is made in the will or by codicil thereto, the estate of testator as to such after-born child is intestate: Krueger v. Krueger, 111 OS 369, 145 NE 753.

6. The surviving children of a designated heir who predeceases his designator are not, upon death of such designator, heirs at law or next of kin of such designator, and do not under the statute of descent and distribution have any right of inheritance in the estate of such designator, unless, by virtue of the provisions of this section, the designation of the heir occurs after the execution of a last will and testament of the designator and no provision is made in such will or by settlement for such designated heir or his children, in which event, unless it appears by such will that it was the intention of the testator to disinherit such designated heir, the children of the latter receive a share equal to that which he, if living, would have been entitled to receive out of the estate if such designator-testator had died intestate: Kirshe-man v. Paulin, 155 OS 137, 44 OO 134, 98 NE(2d) 26.

6.1 Where a testatrix executed a will devising her entire estate to her husband and providing that if he predecease her, such entire estate shall be placed in trust for "the use and benefit of my children" and further providing that "the income of my said estate to be used for the purpose of maintaining, supporting, and educating my said children until the youngest shall become twenty-five years, when a distribution shall be made between my said children, share and share alike," provision is made in such will for children born after, as well as for those living at the time of its execution, and there is no preemption of such after-born children: The Provident Sav. Bank &c. Co. v. Nash, 75 App 493, 31 OO 290, 62 NE(2d) 736.

6.2 The interest reversed to a pretermitted child by this section in the real estate of which a testator died seized, is a specific interest which passes and vests in the pretermitted child instantly upon the death of the testator: Twitchell v. Alexander & Liggett, Inc., 115 App 51, 20 OO(2d) 186, 184 NE(2d) 421.

7. The creation of an irrevocable trust in favor of the testator's adopted son constitutes a settlement as contemplated by this section, and by virtue thereof the adopted child is precluded from taking any portion of the testator's estate owned by him at the time of his death: City Nat. Bank v. Kelly, 19 OO 231 (PC).

9. Under this section a statement in a will that an item therein leaving all of testator's property to his wife should remain in full force and effect regardless of whether or not any child should thereafter be born to testator and his wife, discloses an intention to disinherit a child subsequently adopted by the testator and his wife, although such provision refers only to a child "born" to them, and consequently such adopted child is not entitled to share in the deceased's estate as a pretermitted heir: York v. York, 42 OLA 242, 60 NE(2d) 70 (App).

9.1 Where a testator at the time of the execution of his will has six living children and his wife is six months pregnant with a seventh child and the evidence reveals that the testator was fully aware of the prospective birth of the seventh child within a few months time, and, under these circumstances devises his entire estate to his spouse without reference to the living children and the child yet unborn, an intention to disinherit said afterborn child may be implied from the language of the will and the after-born child has no interest in the estate: Spieldenner v. Spieldenner, 54 OO 290, 122 NE(2d) 33 (PC).

9.2 Where it was known that decedent had two sons, their ages and the date of decedent's will, a mistake in failing to apply the provisions of this section, relating to pretermitted heirs in the original distribution of the estate and the inheritance taxes thereon was a mistake of law and exceptions by the state to a redetermination of the inheritance tax after distribution in accordance with this section are well taken: In re Cones, 88 OLA 577, 184 NE(2d) 776 (PC).

10. Where a will contains a clause disinheriting an unborn child, such clause does not constitute a provision for the after-born child within the meaning of this section, and the intention of the testator, being contrary to law, does not control: German Mut. Ins. Co. v. Lushey, 66 OS 233, 64 NE 120 [affirming 20 CC 198, 11 CD 52; which affirmed 7 NP 62, 10 OD 24].

11. Court of common pleas has jurisdiction to enforce the right of contribution given, by this section, to a child born after execution of the will of its parent: McGarry v. Smith, 22 OS 190.

13. Where testator acquired property after the execution of his will, and also had a child born thereafter, unprovided for in the will (there being other children), that child's share must be worked out of the entire estate, and not out of the after-acquired property; and its guardian may, therefore, maintain a suit for the partition of the property specifically devised: Weiland v. Muntz, 2 CC(NS) 71, 15 CD 185.

§ 2107.35 Encumbrances.

An encumbrance upon real or personal estate for the purpose of securing the payment of money or the performance of a covenant shall not revoke a will previously executed and relating to such estate.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-50; 114 v 320 (356); 127 v 36 (37), § 1. Eff 9-4-57.

Analogous to former GC § 10557.

Comment

An interesting case, which dealt with a very similar statute in California, is In the Matter of the Estate of Frederick A. Woodworth, 31 Cal 595. The California statute read as follows:

"A charge or encumbrance upon any estate for the purpose of securing the payment of money for the performance of any covenant or agreement shall not be deemed a revocation of any will relating to the same estate which was previously executed, but the devises and legacies therein contained shall pass subject to such charge or incumbrance."

In construing this statute, the court says at page

607 of the opinion: "It is further claimed that section fifteen of the 'Act concerning wills' (being the section above quoted) requires the devisees of lands incumbered by mortgages to take them cum onere without any right to have them exonerated out of the personal estate. It is plain, however, that no such object was contemplated or provided for in this section. The object was simply to provide in express terms that a subsequent mortgage should not be construed as a revocation of the will as to the mortgaged land—that it should still go to the devisee, but subject to the mortgage. That is to say, that as to the mortgagee and devisee, neither the mortgage nor the devise should fail, unless the entire mortgaged estate should be required to satisfy the debt secured. This is a provision affecting the rights of the parties to the mortgage and devise. It has no reference whatever to the order of priority as between legatees, devisees and heirs. The words 'subject to such charge or incumbrance' mean no more nor less, in this connection in a statute, than in the same connection in a will. And the signification of these words, in a similar connection in wills, had long been settled by an unvarying line of decisions. Says Jarman: 'Thus it is settled that a devise of lands subject to the mortgage or incumbrance thereupon, does not so throw the charge on the estate as to exempt the funds, which by law are preferably liable.' (From Jarman on Wills, 553-4.) (Other authorities are cited.) It was with reference to this settled construction of similar language in wills that these words were used in the statute. Like many of the provisions already cited, it only enacted in express terms the rule of the common law upon the subject. . . ."

It would seem that the Ohio statute should receive the same construction in this particular as the California statute above quoted, and there is an unreported decision by the probate court of Cuyahoga county in accord with the California case above cited.

An act of a testator which alters but does not wholly divest such testator's interest in property previously devised or bequeathed by him does not revoke the devise or bequest of such property, but such devise or bequest shall pass to the devisee or legatee the actual interest of the testator, which would otherwise descend to his heirs or pass to his next of kin; unless, in the instrument by which such alteration is made, the intention is declared that it shall operate as a revocation of such previous devise or bequest.

1. A deed of conveyance, made subsequent to a devise, does not revoke the will, unless it makes an entire disposition of the estate; but to any portion undisposed of by the deed, the will attaches pro tanto, and carries it to the devisee: Brush v. Brush, 11 O 287.

2. A devise of all the personalty and real estate will carry the proceeds of sale of real estate remaining on hand at death and not otherwise disposed of: Kent v. Mahaffey, 10 OS 204.

3. The provisions of GC § 10504-52 (RC § 2107.36) apply exclusively to cases where the provisions of the instrument by which such alteration is made are wholly inconsistent with the terms and nature of the previous devise or bequest: Gordon v. Bartlett, 62 App 295, 16 OO 13, 23 NE(2d) 964.

3.1 Where a testator devised certain real estate to his wife, and subsequently a guardian was appointed for the testator on the ground of physical incompetency, to which the testator gave written consent, a sale of the real estate by such guardian, under authority of the probate court, will result in an ademption: Roderick v. Fisher, 97 App 95, 54 OO 264, 122 NE(2d) 475.

4. Where a testator, subsequent to making his will, executed a conveyance whereby his entire estate and interest in property specifically devised were wholly divested, such conveyance constitutes a complete revocation of the devise, although the property sold was not fully paid for and a mortgage had been executed to secure the balance of the purchase price: Lewis v. Thompson, 142 OS 338, 27 OO 262, 52 NE(2d) 331, discussed in 30 OO 94.

4.1 This section prevents the application of the doctrine of equitable conversion to devises of real estate which is under covenant of some character at the devisor's death: Sells v. Needles, 34 OO 186, 69 NE(2d) 767 (PC).

4.2 Mineral rights reserved when land is conveyed will pass to the original devisees: In re Knickel, 89 OLA 135, 185 NE(2d) 93.

4.3 Revised Code § 2107.36 has no bearing on the situation where the testator sells the real estate specifically devised: Mastics v. Kiraly, 93 OLA 193, 196 NE(2d) 172.

5. Where testatrix, in her will, devised specific real estate, and thereafter conveyed such real estate to another, and later the same was reconveyed to the testatrix, such devise passes under the will and is not revoked: Ridenour v. Callahan, 8 CC(NS) 585, 19 CD 65.

6. Where a nephew is bequeathed one thousand dollars in cash, to be a charge on real property which testatrix devised to her husband for life, then to remaindermen, but sold during her lifetime, legacy does not become payable until after death of husband: Rugg v. Larimore, 27 NP(NS) 97.

7. Since GC § 8510 (RC § 5301.01) provides that a deed must be subscribed by two witnesses, an instrument which purports to be a deed but which is subscribed by one witness only, is not a deed; and accordingly such instrument cannot operate to defeat a specific devise of such realty in a prior will made by the grantor in such alleged deed: Mateer v. Croft, 6 App 13, 26 CC(NS) 182, 29 CD 9 [reversing and remanding judgment of common pleas court; judgment on retrial was also reversed, and motion to certify record overruled, *Croft v. 1. If part of a will has been revoked expressly by codicil, the subsequent destruction of such codicil and the oral declarations of testator to persons who are not the original subscribing witnesses to the will, and who did not subscribe as witnesses after such declaration, cannot revive such parts of the will: Collins v. Collins, 110 OS 105, 143 NE 561, 38 ALR 230.

2. Will executed nine years before execution of probated will could not be admitted to probate, where later will had been probated and had remained unchallenged until long after period for contest had passed and only reason suggested for probating earlier will was that under later will charitable bequests would be defeated: State ex rel Haughey v. Lueders, 46 App 287, 187 NE 724, 39 OLR 255.

3. A will is revoked by the execution of a second will duly executed, when the second will contains an express clause of revocation, or is utterly inconsistent with the provisions of the first will; and, if the second will be inconsistent in part with the provisions of the first will, it revokes the first will to that extent: Paully v. Crooks, 41 App 1, 179 NE 364.

3.1 An unwitnessed, signed paper writing in which the testator has declared his intention to revive his earlier will and codicil is not effective to revive the earlier will since he has failed to comply with the formal requirements for the re-execution of a will and codicil: Shinn v. Phillips, 8 OApp(2d) 58, 31 OO(2d) 537, 197 NE(2d) 564 (App).

4. Where a revoked codicil cannot be reproduced in full, and it cannot be determined what portions of the original will were revoked, and what parts remained unaffected by execution of the codicil, the original will must be refused admission to probate unless it can be shown that the original will was subsequently revived as provided by this section: In re Paulus, 27 OO 283 (PC).

5. Under this section which provides that the revocation of a second will does not revive the first unless the terms of such revocation show that the testator intended to revive the first will or unless after such revocation of the second will he republishes the first will, testator's intention to revive the first will must appear from the wills themselves, and such intention cannot be shown by evidence of testator's oral declarations: In re Patterson, 11 OLR 373, 58 Bull 305.

6. In an action to contest a will, proof of the destruction, cancellation or revocation of a later will does not revive an earlier will, unless the revocation of the later will discloses an intention to revive the earlier will, and such intention can be gathered only from the instrument itself, or the former will must be republished with all the statutory formalities of its first publication: Crane v. Tunkey, 11 OLR 454, 58 Bull 316.

7. In the absence of contrary intent, revocation of the second will does not revive the first will, and the court's refusal of requested charge in the language of this section, where pertinent, is prejudicial error: Westfall v. Notman, 18 OLA 407.

8. It is said that this section applies only to a case in which the second will was in existence at the death of the testator and was destroyed after his death so that it could have been admitted to probate as a spoliated will under GC § 10504-38 (RC § 2107.27) et seq. It is said that if such will is destroyed by testator during his lifetime, there is no second will in existence at the time of testator's death and accordingly this section cannot affect the validity of the first will: In re Murray, 20 NP(NS) 305, 63 Bull 81.

9. A codicil operates not only as a new adoption of the will to which it refers, but also as a revocation of an intermediate will: In re Stocker, 26 NP(NS) 112.

§ 2107.39 Election by surviving spouse.

After the probate of a will and the filing of the inventory, appraisal, and a schedule of debts where ordered, the probate court shall issue a citation to the surviving spouse, if any be living at the time of the issuance of the citation, to elect whether to take under the will or under section 2105.06 of the Revised Code. If the spouse elects to take under section 2105.06 of the Revised Code, the spouse shall take not to exceed one-half of the net estate unless two or more of the decedent's children or their lineal descendants survive, in which case the spouse shall take not to exceed one-third of the net estate. Unless the will expressly provides that in case of such an election there shall be no acceleration of remainder or other interests bequeathed or devised by the will, the balance of the net estate shall be disposed of as though the spouse had predeceased the testator. The election shall be made within one month after service of the citation to elect. On a motion filed before the expiration of the one-month period, and for good cause shown, the court may allow further time for the making of the election. If no action is taken by the surviving spouse within the one-month period, it is conclusively presumed the surviving spouse elects to take under the will. The election shall be entered on the journal of the court.

When proceedings for advice or to contest the validity of a will are begun within the time allowed by this section for making the election, the election may be made within three months after the final disposition of the proceedings, if the will is not set aside.

When a surviving spouse succeeds to the entire estate of the testator, having been named the sole devisee and legatee, it shall be presumed that the spouse elects to take under the will of the testator, and no citation shall be issued to the spouse as provided in this section, and no election shall be required, unless the spouse manifests a contrary intention.

Comment

The former analogous sections to GC § 10504-55 were GC § 10566 and a part of GC § 10571, which provided that "in case such election is made in person in the manner specified in the preceding section (former GC § 10570) the same shall be entered upon the minutes of the court." This section as it was enacted in the new probate code, effective January 1, 1932, was as follows:

"After probate of the will and filing of the inventory, appraisal and schedule of debts, the probate court on the motion of the executor or administrator, or on its own motion, forthwith shall issue a citation to the surviving spouse if any, to elect whether to take under the will or under the statute of descent and distribution; but in the event of election to take under the statute of descent and distribution, such spouse shall take not to exceed one-half of the estate. Such election shall be made not later than one month after service of the citation to elect, and when made shall be entered upon the minutes of the court."

This new statute made the following changes in the former sections:

1. Election to take under the statute gives to the electing spouse the increased intestate share but not to exceed one-half of the estate (one-third if there is more than one child).

2. Election is made after filing of inventory and schedule of debts, thus affording an opportunity to know what the estate consists of.

3. The time limit for election is reduced, as a part of the effort to expedite the closing of an estate.

4. Election is permitted even though there may be no provision in the will for the surviving spouse. Former GC § 10566 provided for an election by the widow or widower only in cases where provision had been made in the will for such widow or widower. However, our supreme court in construing this former section held where no provision was made for a widow in the will, that nevertheless if she elected to take under the law, she would be entitled to her distributive share of the personal estate. See Doyle v. Doyle, 50 OS 330, 34 NE 166. It goes without saying that she would be entitled to her dower in the real estate, under the former section.

This section was amended in 1935 so as to provide that if the surviving spouse elects to take under the statute of descent and distribution such spouse shall take not to exceed one-half of the net estate. Formerly this section provided that in case of such election the spouse should take not to exceed one-half of the estate, and there was some controversy as to whether net estate or gross estate was meant, and this change clarified the matter. Before this change, however, it had been held the term "estate," as used in this section, was the amount of the estate after the payment of debts and cost of administration and not the gross estate. See Weller v. Weller, 32 NP(NS) 329. The statute was further amended in 1935 so as to provide that if no citation is issued, then such election of the surviving spouse shall be within nine months after the appointment of the executor or administrator, or the further time allowed by the court therefor for good cause shown, on motion filed before the expiration of such period.

1. A widow is not deprived of a distributive share of the personal estate of her deceased husband, by his leaving a will in which he disposed of all of it to others, without making any provision for her. As to her in such case, he is regarded as dying intestate: Doyle v. Doyle, 50 OS 330, 34 NE 166.

1.1. Property which would pass to a surviving spouse under former GC §§ 8574, 8578 (RC § 2105.06) or 8592 (repealed, 114 v 320 [475]), in case of intestacy, cannot be said to be "secured" to such surviving spouse by a will, and under a gift by a testator to a surviving wife of a property which is "secured" to her by the laws of Ohio, "in the cases where wives survive husbands who died intestate," she cannot take what she would have taken under this section if he had died intestate but merely that part of which he cannot deprive her by his will: Foster v. Clifford, 87 OS 294, 101 NE 269, AnnCas 1915B, 65 [reversing Clifford v. Foster, 14 CC(NS) 391, 23 CD 429; which affirmed 10 NP(NS) 446].

1.2 The phrase "under the statute of descent and distribution," as [formerly] used in this section and GC § 10504-60 (RC § 2107.41), does not mean that the surviving spouse is actually placed within the operation of the statute of descent and distribution (GC § 10503-4 [RC § 2105.06]), but such phrase is used as merely definitive or descriptive of the share to be taken by the surviving spouse within a limitation of not to exceed one-half of the estate: Miller v. Miller, 129 OS 230, 2 OO 45, 194 NE 450.

2. The actual taking of a share of such estate by such surviving spouse is under this section and GC § 10504-60 (RC § 2107.41); GC § 10503-5 (RC § 2105-10), relating to the "descent" of an estate which came from a deceased spouse, has no application; therefore, upon the death of the surviving spouse intestate, his or her whole estate passes under GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06), pertaining to descent and distribution: Miller v. Miller, 129 OS 230, 2 OO 45, 194 NE 450.

3. The debts and other expenses enumerated in GC § 10509-121 (RC § 2117.25) include the federal estate tax: Tax Commission ex rel Price v. Lamprecht, 107 OS 535, 140 NE 333, 31 ALR 985; Davidson v. Miners and Mechanics Sav. & Trust Co., 129 OS 418, 430, 2 OO 404, 409, 195 NE 845, 98 ALR 1318; In re Gatch, 38 OO 279 (PC) [affirmed, 43 OO 143 (App) and 153 OS 401].

4. Under GC § 10504-55 (RC § 2107.39) et seq a citation may be issued to compel an election; but whether the citation is issued, the election of the surviving spouse may be made either in person in the probate court or by written instrument signed by the spouse and duly acknowledged and filed in the probate court within the time allowed for making an election: Juhasz v. Juhasz, 134 OS 257, 12 OO 57, 16 NE(2d) 328.

5. If election is made in person the court is required to explain the provisions of the will and what the rights are under it as well as what the rights are by law: Juhasz v. Juhasz, 134 OS 257, 12 OO 57, 16 NE(2d) 328.

6. In case of refusal to take under the will, the statutes do not contemplate a determination of contested rights upon an election whether it is made in person or by written instrument: Juhasz v. Juhasz, 134 OS 257, 12 OO 57, 16 NE(2d) 328.

7. The filing of the written election by the widow, which election had incorporated in it a statement to the effect that the antenuptial agreement was procured by fraud and was repudiated, did not present an issue on the validity of the agreement for determination by the court: Juhasz v. Juhasz, 134 OS 257, 12 OO 57, 16 NE(2d) 328.

8. A valid voluntary trust in praesenti, formally executed by a husband and existing at the time of his death, in which he reserved to himself the income therefrom during life, coupled with an absolute power to revoke the trust in whole or in part, as well as the right to modify the terms of the settlement and to control investments, bars the wife, upon the death of the settlor, from a claimed right to a distributive share of the property in the trust upon her election to take under the statutes of descent and distribution: Smyth v. Cleveland Trust Co., 172 OS 489, 18 OO(2d) 42, 179 NE(2d) 60.

9. Under this section a surviving spouse cannot elect to take under a will or under the statute of descent and distribution until after the probate of the will: Raleigh v. Raleigh, 153 OS 160, 41 OO 209, 91 NE(2d) 241, discussed in 19 CinLRev 411, 64 HarvLRev 513.

9.1 Where a widow elects under GC § 10504-55 (RC § 2107.39), to take under the statute of descent and distribution and the applicable portions of that statute (GC § 10503-4 [RC § 2105.06]) provide that "personal property shall be distributed" and any "real estate or inheritance shall descend and pass in parcenary" in part to the surviving spouse, the amount of the federal estate tax on the decedent's estate should be deducted therefrom before computing the widow's share thereof: Campbell v. Lloyd, 162 OS 203, 55 OO 102, 122 NE(2d) 695.

9.2 Where a deceased husband, by his will, made a specific bequest of a certain number of shares of stock in a corporation for the creation of a trust for the benefit of one of his employees, and where the remaining portion of his estate is sufficient, after the payment of all debts and other obligations, to provide his relict, who elected not to take under the will, with the share of his net estate to which she is entitled under the provisions of RC § 2105.06, the relict's share of the net estate is an undivided fractional interest in the real estate plus such additional amount of personal property not specifically bequeathed under the will, either in kind or in money, as shall make her total share of the net estate that amount to which she is entitled under the provisions of the statute: Winters Nat. Bank & Co. v. Riffe, 2 OS(2d) 72, 31 OO(2d) 56, 206 NE(2d) 212.

9.3 After nine months following the appointment of the fiduciary initially charged with the administration of an estate under a will, a surviving spouse, who remains alive and competent, is precluded by this section from making a valid election to take against the will of his deceased spouse, unless, before the expiration of the nine-month-period, he requests and is allowed further time for making the election: In re Wittman, 3 OS(2d) 66, 32 OO(2d) 49, 209 NE(2d) 427.

9.4 This section does not by its words apply only "after the probate of a will" in Ohio. The words, "In Ohio" do not appear in the statute: Pfau v. Moseley, 9 OS(2d) 13, 38 OO(2d) 8, 222 NE(2d) 639.

9.5 Where a widow elects, as provided in this section, to take under the Ohio statute of descent and distribution (RC § 2105.06), the amount of the federal estate tax on the decedent's estate should be deducted therefrom before computing the widow's share thereof: Weeks v. Vandever, 13 OS(2d) 15, 42 OO(2d) 25, 233 NE(2d) 502.

9.6 The presence or absence of a tax provision in the will of a testator does not alter the statutory share of a surviving spouse electing to take against the will as provided in this section: Weeks v. Vandever, 13 OS(2d) 15, 42 OO(2d) 25, 233 NE(2d) 502.

9.7 A widow who elects not to take under the will of her deceased husband is entitled to only so much of the personality belonging to the said estate as would have passed to her had her husband died intestate: Harbeson v. Mellinger, 2 App 75, 18 CC(NS) 504, 25 CD 195.

9.8 A surviving spouse cannot be deprived, by the last will of the decedent, of the distributive share fixed by statute: Whyde v. Lunn, 15 App 297, 32 OCA 183 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 372]; State ex rel Zollinger v. Sloane, 24 OD(NP) 119.

9.9 A widower, electing not to take under the will of his wife who died testate but leaving no children or their legal representatives, is entitled to take such portion of the personality as though decedent had died intestate leaving children: Whyde v. Lunn, 15 App 297, 32 OCA 183 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 372].

10. A surviving spouse may make an election at and after the admittance of the will to probate, within the time limited, and need not wait until the schedule of debts is filed and citation issued: Davis v. Warner, 47 App 495, 192 NE 270, 40 OLR 384.

11. The relict of a deceased spouse who is presumed "to elect to take under the statute of descent and distribution" is limited by this section to a distributive share "not to exceed one-half of the estate" of the deceased spouse: Miller v. Miller, 49 App 220, 3 OO 170, 197 NE 134 [affirmed, 129 OS 230].

11.1 Where testator, who died March 3, 1927, devised the balance of his estate to his wife and to his son, "each to share according to law, suggesting that they hold the same in common as long as it may be consistent, dividing the proceeds" one-third to the wife and two-thirds to the son, the widow, electing to take under the will, takes, by the provisions of GC § 10572 (repealed, 114 v 320, 475; see GC § 10504-61), then in force, the interest provided by law but as a devisee and tenant in common with the son, and is entitled to partition: Bunnell v. Bunnell, 53 App 235, 6 OO 488, 4 NE(2d) 698.

12. Where a testatrix devises one-half of her real estate to her spouse for life, remainder to be sold and the proceeds divided among devisees, and the other half to a devisee in fee, the surviving spouse electing not to take under the will and there being no surviving children or parents of the deceased, does not take the whole estate under the provisions of GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06), but is limited to one-half the net estate under the terms of this section: Shearn v. Shearn, 60 App 317, 14 OO 262, 21 NE(2d) 133.

13. The election by a surviving spouse to renounce the provisions of a will made for her and to take under the law, as provided by this section, does not destroy the efficacy of the testator's last will and testament as to other provisions, and the surviving spouse is not entitled to have her one-half of the net estate administered as though there were no will: In re Ellis, 66 App 121, 19 OO 392, 32 NE(2d) 23.

13.1 The plain intentment of RC § 2107.39 is that the election of the surviving spouse shall be made after the filing of the inventory and appraisalment, at which time the explanation by the probate judge as to her rights under the will and under the law, as required by RC § 2107.43 can be made to such spouse: In re Bersin, 98 App 432, 57 OO 475, 129 NE(2d) 868.

13.2 In the absence of a showing that the testator intends the effect of an election of a surviving spouse to take against the will should be borne to the contrary, when the election results in the executor being deprived of property, or interests in property, to such extent and in such manner, that the property, or interests in property, remaining available for distribution to different classes of legatees named in different items of the will would, if so distributed, cause the reduction resulting from said election to be borne equitably, but not necessarily equally or proportionately, between said classes, distribution shall be made accordingly without further adjustment or contribution between the classes: Blackford v. Vermillion, 107 App 26, 7 OO(2d) 350, 156 NE(2d) 339.

13.3 Where a testator in his will directs the executor to sell all the property of his estate and to divide the proceeds from certain real property among his grandchildren and to divide the proceeds from the residue, consisting of other real property and the personal property, among his children, and the surviving spouse elects to take under the statute of descent and distribution, the surviving spouse is thereupon vested, as of the time of testator's death, with a fee simple title in an undivided one-third interest in all the real property owned by testator at the time of his death; is entitled to all the rents and profits from such undivided one-third interest in real property which was received after the date of testator's death and to an undivided one-third interest in all the personal property of the estate, including rents and profits received after testator's death from such personal property and from the other undivided two-thirds interest in real property; such share of the surviving spouse is a charge against all the remaining property of the estate, both real and personal, available to the executor; and the different classes of legatees bear an equitable, but not necessarily equal or proportionate, share of the reduction in the assets of the estate which was caused by the election of the surviving spouse to take under the statute of descent and distribution: Blackford v. Vermillion, 107 App 26, 7 OO(2d) 350, 156 NE(2d) 339.

13.4 The period of time prescribed by this section within which a surviving spouse may make an election to take under the will of a decedent or under the statute of descent and distribution is not extended by the filing after the termination of such period of an action alleging that an election made during the period is void and praying that it be held void: In re Wolfel, 3 OApp(2d) 11, 32 OO(2d) 75, 209 NE(2d) 594.

13.5 Legatees under the will of a decedent have no legal interest in or right to contest an election of a surviving spouse made under this section, and are not properly appellees in an appeal by the guardian of the surviving spouse: In re Strauch, 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95 [affirmed, 15 OS(2d) 192, 44 OO(2d) 158, 239 NE(2d) 43].

13.6 Where an antenuptial agreement places restraints upon a testator and where such testator neglects to comply properly with such provisions in his will, and the widow, within nine months following the appointment of the executor, brings an action in a declaratory judgment proceeding to determine the validity of such antenuptial agreement and seeks the advice of the court, such declaratory judgment action is a "proceedings for advice" as is contemplated in RC § 2107.39: Barlup v. Holloway, 25 OApp(2d) 44, 54 OO(2d) 77, 266 NE(2d) 241.

13.7 In such event the widow has three months after the final disposition of such declaratory judgment proceedings within which to make her election as to whether she will take under the statute of descent and distribution or whether she will take under the will: Barlup v. Holloway, 25 OApp(2d) 44, 54 OO(2d) 77, 266 NE(2d) 241.

14. Under GC § 10504-58 (RC § 2107.39), an action to construe a will, filed within the time allowed for making an election, extends the time for the election to any time within three months after the final disposition of the will construction case: In re Jones, 15 OO 250 (PC).

15. Where a wife dies testate, and her surviving spouse elects not to take under the will, this section measures the share of the estate passing to the surviving spouse, and legal title does not pass by "descent" within the meaning of GC § 10504-5 (RC § 2107.06): Fee v. Linthicum, 11 OO 568 (CP).

16. The term "net estate," as used in this section, means so much of the testator's property as remains for distribution after payment of the surviving spouse's statutory allowances, his other debts, funeral expenses and expenses of administration: Citizens Nat. Bank v. Linn, 22 OO 195 (PC).

19. A widow who elects to take under the statute of descent and distribution, the decedent having left two children, is entitled on distribution to one-third of the net estate after deducting the marital deduction from the gross estate. She must bear her proportionate share of the burden of the whole of the federal estate tax: In re Miller, 42 OO 325 (PC).

19.1 For the purpose of determining whether distribution should be made under the terms of a will or under the provisions of law when a surviving spouse has elected to take against a will, an executor has the right to object to the making of an election by such spouse: In re Gould, 1 OO(2d) 372, 140 NE(2d) 801 (App).

20. The purpose of that part of this section, stating that in the event of election to take under the statute of descent and distribution "such spouse shall take not to exceed one-half of the net estate," is to limit a widow who declines to take the provision made by her husband to not more than one-half of the estate in lieu of the provision made for her in the rejected will, relates entirely to testamentary disposition of estates and does not limit the widow's rights to intestate property by virtue of GC § 10503-4 (RC § 2105.06): Goodfellow v. Wilson, 32 OLA 569.

21. A surviving spouse who, under and by virtue of the provisions of this section (119 v 397), elects to take under the statute of descent and distribution and not under the will of the decedent, takes one-half of the net estate, real and personal, of the decedent, and has a vested interest in fee in the real estate: Barlow v. Winters Nat. Bank & Co., 41 OLA 457, 59 NE(2d) 212 (App).

22. Special legacies to other persons are not to be considered in determining the net estate of a decedent, to one-half of which the surviving spouse, who elects, under the provisions of this section (119 v 397), to take under the statute of descent and distribution and not under the will is entitled, such legacies being payable only out of the remaining one-half of the net estate as so ascertained: Barlow v. Winters Nat. Bank & Co., 41 OLA 457, 59 NE(2d) 212 (App).

23. Where the estate of a decedent, including the interest therein of the surviving spouse who has elected, under the provisions of this section (119 v 397), to take under the statute of descent and distribution and not under the will, is committed to a trustee for management, such surviving spouse is entitled to a proportionate share of the income of the trust estate: Barlow v. Winters Nat. Bank & Co., 41 OLA 457, 59 NE(2d) 212 (App).

23.1 A court of equity will permit an election to take under the statute of descent and distribution and against a will to be rescinded if made without full knowledge of the elector's rights and the condition of the estate: Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 69 OLA 102, 124 NE(2d) 851 (CP).

23.2 Elections under this section, involve choice and intelligent choice involves a knowledge of both the facts and the law applicable thereto and where such election is made by a widow, without full knowledge of the condition of the estate, and of her rights, but in ignorance of both, it cannot be asserted that she has made any choice or election: Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 69 OLA 102, 124 NE(2d) 851 (CP).

23.3 Under this section the surviving spouse, not only of a testator who was domiciled in Ohio at the time of his death but also of a testator who was not domiciled in, but owned property in Ohio, and whose will has not previously been admitted to probate in any other county of Ohio or elsewhere, has the right to elect whether to take under the will or under the statute of descent and distribution: In re Gould, 1 OO(2d) 366, 140 NE(2d) 793 (PC).

23.4 The probate court will permit an earlier election where the surviving spouse waives the right to have the inventory and appraisal and schedule of debts filed prior to making the election: In re Rogers, 10 OO(2d) 205, 160 NE(2d) 442 (PC).

23.6 In order to prevent the application of an acceleration of the remainder or other interest the testator must use words which anticipate the situation in which the spouse would elect to take against the will or at least must use words which prohibit the acceleration in any event: Funkhouser v. Dorfmeier, 31 OO(2d) 42, 202 NE(2d) 226 (PC).

23.7 The requirement for an expressed prohibition against acceleration is not satisfied by the creation of a contingent remainder. The provisions of the amended statute do not limit its application to vested remainders: Funkhouser v. Dorfmeier, 31 OO(2d) 42,

202 NE(2d) 226 (PC).

23.8 Where testator died without issue, leaving a widow and certain brothers and sisters his only heirs at law, and the widow elected not to take under the will, but took her distributive share of the personal estate under the law, and subsequently died intestate without issue, leaving neither brother nor sister or their legal representatives, she took her distributive share of said personal estate by favor of the provisions of this section and GC § 8592 (repealed, 114 v 320 [475]), and not under any provisions of GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06); hence the provisions of GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) are not effective to divert the descent of such personal property from her heirs generally: Seney v. Schroth, 25 CC(NS) 185, 35 CD 239.

24. The term "estate" as used in this section is the amount of the estate after the payment of debts and costs of administration, and not the gross estate: Weller v. Weller, 32 NP(NS) 329.

25. But the husband may, by a gift inter vivos during his last illness, dispose of all his personality to his daughter, that he might die intestate and thereby defeat his wife in sharing in the property. This is not a testamentary devise: Hickman v. Huntington & Co., 7 NP 79, 9 OD 503.

26. Under a former statute (Swan's Stat 998, §§ 46, 47) the election of the widow had to be made within six months after probate of the will: Stilley v. Folger, 14 O 610.

No provision for wife

34. A widow for whom no provision is made in the will of a deceased husband, has the same rights in his personal estate as she would have where provision is made for her which she rejects: Hutchings v. Davis, 68 OS 160, 67 NE 251 [reversing, sub nomine, In re Hutchin's Estate, 21 CC 720, 12 CD 29]; Doyle v. Doyle, 50 OS 330, 34 NE 166; Coon v. DeMoore, 2 CC(NS) 444, 15 CD 776 [affirmed, without report, Coon v. Coon, 71 OS 537].

What constitutes election

39. Election in fact, without formal entry on the records: Baxter v. Bowyer, 19 OS 490 [see also Campbell v. Greenwalt, 67 OS 520]; Stockton v. Wooley, 20 OS 184; Nimmons v. Westfall, 33 OS 213; Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288, 107 NE 770, AnnCas 1916C, 1198 [affirming Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433, 26 CD 338; for opinion below, see Creed v. Bates, 14 NP(NS) 81, 31 OD 552].

40. Acts must be of an unequivocal character: Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288, 107 NE 770, AnnCas 1916C, 1198 [affirming Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433, 26 CD 338; for opinion below, see Creed v. Bates, 14 NP(NS) 81, 31 OD 552].

41. The act of a testator's widow in acquiescing in his will after his death, the will having been made in accordance with the mutual understanding of testator and his wife while they were both alive, and her act in receiving payments from an executor as payments made to her under the will of her deceased husband, is sufficient evidence to justify the trial court in finding that the widow elected to take under the will; and after her death her heirs cannot be heard to claim that she had not elected to take under the will and that accordingly she had in law taken her dower and distributive share: Ewalt v. Ames, 6 App 374, 27 OCA 465, 29 CD 133, 62 Bull 389 (Ed).

42. A widow's declarations, conduct or actions do not amount to an election to take, where it is not shown that she was acquainted with the contents of the will, or that she knew the benefits flowing to her under the will were less liberal than the law would give her, or because for a time she recognized the will and accepted benefits thereunder, where it appears that she had very little knowledge of the value of her husband's estate or as to the disproportionate share given her by the will: Ward v. Sark, 19 NP (NS) 401, 27 OD 229.

43. The election by a widow to take under the law, instead of under the will of her late husband which bequeathed to her for life the entire income of his estate from every source derived, accelerates the remainder and causes it to vest at once in accordance with the terms of the will: Dymond v. Dymond, 12 NP(NS) 506, 22 OD 563.

Revocation

48. An election, formally made and entered upon the journal at the instance of the widow, cannot afterwards, even within a year from the service of citation, be set aside at her pleasure: Davis v. Davis, 11 OS 386.

49. A widow is not estopped from denying that she in fact elected to take under the will of her deceased husband, or from asking that an alleged election by her be canceled and set aside, where the probate judge did not at the time of said election explain to her the provisions of the will and her rights, both thereunder and by law, in the event of her election or refusal to elect to take: Ward v. Sark, 19 NP(NS) 401, 27 OD 229.

Election as a bar

54. For a case where the widow became entitled to all the personal property whether she elected to take under the will or not, see Gardner v. Gardner, 13 OS 426.

55. Election not to take under the will deprives the widow of bequests made to her by the will in lieu of dower: Jones v. Lloyd, 33 OS 572.

56. An election to take under the will, after sale of decedent's realty, subject to dower, does not bar a creditor of the surviving spouse: Hessenmueller v. Mulrooney, 4 NP 50, 6 OD 123.

—Not to year's support

61. A widow electing to take under the will is not thereby barred of her right to a year's support: Collier v. Collier, 3 OS 369 [followed and approved, Spangler v. Dukes, 39 OS 642].

62. Where a widow, without following the statutory form for making an election, sets up no claim for dower, but actually and in fact takes under the will, and for a series of years has the use and occupancy of the property so devised, she is barred of her dower, and estopped to deny her election to take under the will: Thompson v. Hoop, 6 OS 481.

63. Where, by the terms of a will, it is plainly shown to be the intention of the testator to bar his widow of a first year's support, and a provision is made for her in lieu thereof, if she elects to take under the will she is not entitled to the allowance: In re Estate of Witner, 7 NP 143, 10 OD 30.

64. If testator gives to his widow the entire income of his estate, and does not provide expressly that such income is in lieu of the first year's allowance, the election of the widow to take under the will does not bar her of such allowance: In re Messang, 20 NP(NS) 60; sub nomine, In re Massang, 26 OD(NP) 533.

—Property not disposed of by will

69. An election to take under a will does not bar a widow of her right to the distributive share of personal estate not disposed of in the will: Bane v. Wick, 14 OS 505.

70. Where a widow elects not to take under the will of her deceased husband, which creates a trust in her favor, her renunciation, in the absence of any other disposition of the property covered by the said trust, accelerates the enjoyment of the property by the remainderman, subject to the dower interest of the widow therein but without terminating another independent trust created by said will: Blocher v. Trick, 8 App 222, 28 OCA 46, 30 CD 98.

71. A widow who has rejected the provisions made for her in her husband's will and elected to take under the law, is not entitled to a distributive share in the proceeds of real estate, which by the terms of the will was not to be sold until her death, but which, upon order of the probate court, has been sold before that time: March v. McClintic, 24 CC(NS) 413, 34 CD 655.

72. Election by a widow to take under the will of her deceased husband does not preclude her inheritance of land as to which her husband died intestate and to which no reference was made in the will: Bowers v. McGill, 12 NP(NS) 124, 22 OD 407, 56 Bull 413 (Ed); see also 56 Bull 421 for same report.

—Dower

77. B died testate, leaving land encumbered by a mortgage for his debt, made by himself and wife, who survived him; she elected to take under the will; the proceeds of the land, added to the personalty, made a sum large enough to pay all debts (including the mortgage), the statutory allowance for one year, the cost of administration, dower, and leave a surplus for the devisees. Held: The widow, as against the devisees, is entitled to dower in the entire proceeds of the land: Kling v. Ballentine, 40 OS 391.

78. An election to take under the will bars dower even in intestate land: Swihart v. Swihart, 7 CC 338, 4 CD 624; but see McDonald's Estate, 2 NP 232, 4 OD 396.

79. A widow, who elects to take under the will, is not barred of dower in lands not disposed of by the will unless the will expressly provides that the devise to the widow is in lieu of her dower rights in such undivided lands: [Swihart v. Swihart, 7 CC 338, 4 CD 624 denied]; Estate of McDonald, 2 NP 232, 4 OD 396.

Estoppel

84. The election to take under the will does not estop the widow from setting up her right as heir to the estate, from contesting the validity of the will, nor from controverting the validity of devisees therein made: Carder v. Commissioners, 16 OS 353.

85. A widow who elects to take under the will of her husband, which devises to her all of his realty, does not thereby estop herself from setting up title to an undivided interest therein in her own right: Barnes v. Christy, 102 OS 160, 131 NE 352 [for a later case in supreme court, see 107 OS 630].

86. Where the widow, with the full knowledge and acquiescence of the heirs and devisees of the testator, sets up no claim for dower, but actually takes possession and has the use and occupancy of the property devised to her under the will for a series of years after the probate of the will, the heirs or devisees are estopped to deny the election of the widow to take under the will: Stockton v. Wooley, 20 OS 184.

General principles

91. Under an election to take under a will, the widow holds no interest as doweress, but holds under the will only, and hence can proceed under GC § 11925 (RC § 5303.21), which allows a life tenant, but not a doweress, to ask sale of entailed lands: Dukes v. Dukes, 4 CC 507, 2 CD 676.

92. If the widow die before probate of the will and election by her to take thereunder, the property so devised will pass to the deceased widow's heirs: Hawkins v. Barrow, 15 CC 141, 8 CD 251 [affirming 35 Bull 97].

93. Where the widow takes possession and occupies land devised to her by her husband's will, with the knowledge of the heirs at law, for a series of years after the time in which she may make her election, she will be presumed to have made her election in fact: Nimmons v. Westfall, 33 OS 213.

94. If the records have been destroyed by fire after settlement of an estate, a court will presume that the above required citation was issued and that the widow elected to take the more valuable estate: Weaver v. King, 12 CC(NS) 129, 21 CD 199.

95. A release of dower by election is for the benefit of the heirs or those entitled to inherit and not a means of conveyance to strangers: Hessenmueller v. Mulrooney, 4 NP 50, 6 OD 123.

96. In order to bar a widow of her right of dower, her election must be made either by matter of record in the proper court, as required by statute, or actually and in fact under such circumstances as would create against her an estoppel of her right to claim under the law: Millikin v. Welliver, 37 OS 460; see also Hayes v. Heyl, 81 OS 563, 91 NE 1130.

—Compensation

101. An election to take under the law, or a failure so to elect, divests the provision made by the will, and such portion will be sequestered to compensate the disappointed devisees: Jennings v. Jennings, 21 OS 56; Holdren v. Holdren, 78 OS 276, 85 NE 537, 18 LRA(NS) 272 [for opinion on former hearing, see Holdren v. Holdren, 74 OS 520]; Dunlap v. McCloud, 84 OS 272, 95 NE 774, 35 LRA(NS) 851.

102. Where a testator devises all his real estate to certain individuals and his widow elects not to take under the will and demands assignment of her dower, if it appear that there is enough land to set off the dower without interfering with the lands specifically devised, this should be done; otherwise, the devisees who are disappointed by the widow's election to be endowed in the lands of her husband, are entitled to compensation out of rejected provisions made for her in the will; yet when the rejected provisions do not fully compensate, the resulting uncompensated loss should fall upon the residuary estate in preference to the specific devisees, unless a contrary intention appear from the will: Dunlap v. McCloud, 84 OS 272, 95 NE 774, 35 LRA(NS) 851.

—Citation to widow

107. When the widow appears in open court, without service of citation, and declines to make her election, she does not thereby waive the issuing and service of citation, or estop herself from denying that a citation has been served: Bowen v. Bowen, 34 OS 164.

108. In an action against a widow for appropriating personal property which, plaintiffs claim, did not pass to her because she had not taken under the will, the petition must allege that she was cited and had elected not to take under the will: Spreen v. Sandman, 2 CC 441, 1 CD 577 [petition in error dismissed, Spreen v. Sandman, 26 Bull 247].

109. If a citation has not issued and formal election has not been made, a widower will be held to take under the law by virtue of former GC § 10571 (see now RC § 2107.39) unless it is shown clearly that he elected in fact to take under the will: Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288, 107 NE 770, AnnCas 1916C, 1198 [affirming Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433, 26 CD 338; for opinion below, see Creed v. Bates, 14 NP(NS) 81, 31 OD 552].

110. Where, due to an oversight, no citation has been issued to a widow to appear and elect whether she will take under her husband's will or at law, and she has made no election as prescribed by former GC §§ 10567, 10570, 10571 (see now RC §§ 2107.40, 2107.43, 2107.39), she is, despite lapse of time and presumptions arising therefrom, entitled to a citation and opportunity to make an election: Adams v. Taylor, 37 OLR 496 (App).

—Debts of testator

115. When wife takes, by provision of will, one-third of the realty for life, it is equivalent to dower, and she takes free from claims of creditors: Baxter v. Bowyer, 19 OS 490 [see also Campbell v. Greenwalt, 67 OS 520]; Parker v. Parker, 13 OS 95; Jennings v. Jennings, 21 OS 56.

116. Where a widow elected to take under the will, which, after certain bequests and devises, gave to the widow the residue of the estate "to be used by her for the payment of his debts," etc., it was held that the widow did not become personally liable for the debts, beyond the assets which came to her hands applicable to their payment: Watts v. Watts, 38 OS 480.

117. If testator leaves his personal property and certain real property to his wife, and thus shows an intention to exonerate the personal property from the payment of his debts, and his wife refuses to take under the will, the legatees and devisees who take under the will must assume the burdens imposed by the will, and they must pay the debts of testator, including the cost of administration, if the will provides that they are to make such payments, even though the effect will be to give the widow her distributive share of the personal property without payment of any part of testator's debts therefrom: Harbeson v. Mellinger, 2 App 75, 18 CC(NS) 504, 25 CD 195.

[§ 2107.39.1] § 2107.391 [Citation to make the election.]

(A) The citation to make the election referred to in section 2107.39 of the Revised Code shall be sent to the spouse by certified mail. Notice that the citation has been issued by the court shall be given to the administrator or executor.

(B) The citation shall be accompanied by a general description of the effect of the election and the general rights of the spouse. The description shall include a specific reference to the procedures available to the spouse under section 2107.40 of the Revised Code and to the presumption that arises if the spouse does not make the election within the one-month period. The description of the effect of the election and of the rights of the spouse need not relate to the nature of any particular estate.

(C) The surviving spouse electing to take under the will may manifest the election in writing.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10567

1. All persons interested in the will must be made defendants in an action by the widow for the construction thereof. This rule is followed in federal courts: Stevens v. Smith, 126 Fed 706 [certiorari denied, 193 US 671].

2. From the construction placed on the provisions of a will, at the suit of a widow under this section, error may be prosecuted to the supreme court from the judgment of the circuit court for reversal of the same: Davis v. Coffman, 55 OS 556, 45 NE 707 [for report of this case on merits, see 39 Bull 307].

3. Where property specifically devised must be taken for payment of testator's debts, his widow is entitled to be judicially advised whether, if she accepts the provisions made for her by the will, she will be obliged to contribute her proportion of the loss to the person from whom the property so devised is taken: Allen v. Tressenrider, 72 OS 77, 73 NE 1015.

§ 2107.41 Failure to make election; presumption. (GC § 10504-60)

If the surviving spouse dies before probate of the will, or, having survived such probate, thereafter either fails to make the election provided by section 2107.39 of the Revised Code or dies before the expiration of the time set forth by such section without having made such election, such spouse shall be conclusively presumed to have elected to take under the will and such spouse and the heirs, devisees, and legatees of such spouse who dies either before or after probate of the will without having elected, and those claiming through or under them shall be bound thereby, and persons may deal with the property of the decedent accordingly; provided that where applicable the provisions of section 2105.21 of the Revised Code shall prevail over the provisions relating to the right of election of a surviving spouse.

1. The provisions of former GC § 10571 (see now RC §§ 2107.39, 2107.43) that if the widow or widower fails to make an election within the time specified, it shall be deemed that she or he has elected to take under the will, have no application in a case where the widow was mentally incompetent at the time of the death of the testator and continued in such condition until her death two months later, during which period no action was taken by the probate court: Ambrose v. Rugg, 123 OS 433, 175 NE 691.

2. This section, which provides, inter alia, that if a surviving spouse dies before the expiration of the time limit provided by law without having made an election, such spouse shall be conclusively presumed to have elected to take under the will, does not by such provision deny due process of law and is constitutional: In re Knofer, 143 OS 294, 28 OO 203, 55 NE(2d) 262 [affirming 73 App 383].

3. Where the surviving spouse of a testator dies before the expiration of the time for making election, she shall be conclusively presumed to have elected to take under the will notwithstanding that during the period between the testator's death and her death she was continuously insane and incapable of making an election: In re Knofer, 143 OS 294, 28 OO 203, 55 NE(2d) 262 [affirming 73 App 383, 29 OO 93, 52 NE(2d) 667].

4. This section is not applicable if the surviving spouse referred to therein dies before the probate of the will of his spouse, and, in such case, after the probate of the will of the latter and the filing of the inventory, appraisement and schedule of debts thereunder, the probate court is authorized to make an election for the estate of the deceased surviving spouse as will be most advantageous to that estate: Raleigh v. Raleigh, 153 OS 160, 41 OO 209, 91 NE (2d) 241.

4.1 If a surviving spouse remains alive and competent and, within nine months after the appointment of the first fiduciary charged with the administration of the estate under the will of the deceased spouse, no citation is issued and served upon him to elect whether to take under the will or under RC § 2105.06 and within such nine-month period he also fails voluntarily so to elect, he will be conclusively presumed to have elected to take under the will, regardless of whether or not the inventory, appraisement and schedule of debts are filed: In re Witteman, 3 OS(2d) 66, 32 OO(2d) 49, 209 NE(2d) 427.

5. This section, providing for a conclusive presumption of election, is not violative of due process, where the surviving spouse fails to elect by reason of continued insanity, and his guardian fails to make application for a commission to elect, within the time provided by GC § 10504-55 (RC § 2107.39): In re Iwinski, 83 App 463, 38 OO 491, 77 NE(2d) 375; In re Iwinski, 49 OLA 609.

5.1 A void election, as contrasted with a voidable one, is void ab initio, and if no valid election is made thereafter within nine months after the appointment of the executor, and nothing has occurred or failed to occur which would operate to extend such nine month period, the surviving spouse shall be conclusively presumed to have elected to take under the will of the decedent, as provided by this section: In re Wolfel, 3 OApp(2d) 11, 32 OO(2d) 75, 209 NE (2d) 594.

6. Under this section, as amended 116 v 116, if the surviving spouse fails to make an election, or dies at any time before the expiration of the time limit provided by law without having elected, the spouse "shall be conclusively presumed to have elected to take under the will": Price v. Herbert, 11 OO 138 (App).

7. This section applies solely to a competent surviving spouse, while GC § 10504-63 (RC § 2107.45) applies solely to an incompetent spouse: In re Jones, 15 OO 250 (PC).

9. Renunciation may be made after an election to take under the will, but to be operative it must be made within a reasonable time after the death of the testator: In re Hartman, 29 OO 256, 14 OSupp 112 (PC).

10. A surviving spouse is required to elect whether to take under the provisions of a will within nine months after the appointment of the executor or administrator, whether or not a citation be issued as provided by law, and upon failure to make such election a conclusive election to take under the will is made by law which cannot be subsequently negated by action of the surviving spouse: In re Hartman, 29 OO 256, 14 OSupp 112 (PC).

§ 2107.42 Election to take under the will; effect.

If a surviving spouse elects to take under the will, the spouse shall be barred of all right to an intestate share of the property passing under the will and shall take under the will alone, unless it plainly appears from the will that the provision for the spouse was intended to be in addition to an intestate share. An election to take under the will does not bar the right of the surviving spouse to an intestate share of that portion of the estate as to which the decedent dies intestate. Unless the will expressly otherwise directs, an election to take under the will does not bar the right of the surviving spouse to remain in the mansion of the deceased consort, nor the right of the surviving spouse to receive the allowance for the support provided by section 2117.20 of the Revised Code.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-61; 114 v 320 (357); 116 v 385; 119 v 394; 136 v S 145. Eff 1-1-76.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Under the provisions of this section (114 v 357), if a surviving spouse elects to take under a will, such spouse shall be barred of all rights to an intestate share of the estate, and shall take under the will alone, unless it plainly appears from the will that the provision therein for the spouse was intended to be in addition to an intestate share: Jones v. Webster, 133 OS 492, 11 OO 184, 14 NE(2d) 928.

2. Under this section (114 v 357), a testator may, by express direction in his will, bar the right of his widow to receive one year's allowance for the support of herself and children if she elects to take under the will: Bolles v. Toledo Trust Co., 144 OS 195, 29 OO 376, 58 NE(2d) 381 (overruled in part by Smyth v. Cleveland Trust Co., 172 OS 489, 18 OO(2d) 42, 179 NE(2d) 60.)

3. The exemption allowed to a surviving spouse by the provisions of GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13) of the articles enumerated therein or a proper amount of cash in lieu thereof, must be allowed, if the selection allowed by the statute is made by such spouse even though such spouse later elects to take under a will conditioned that the surviving spouse be barred of all claims against the estate in order to take thereunder: Landfear v. Scharkofsky, 5 OApp 213, 3 OO 48, 197 NE 810.

4. Where the will of a husband, after making certain provisions for his wife, recites that "the foregoing devises and bequests to my said wife . . . shall be in lieu of her dower and all other interest which she may have in my estate," if the wife elects to take under the husband's will, such election shall bar her of her year's allowance and money exemption; and where, in such will, household goods are specifically bequeathed to the wife, such election shall bar the wife of her right under GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13) to select such household goods as property exempt from administration: Atwood v. Miller, 24 OO 398 (PC).

5. When the surviving spouse elects to take under the will, she is entitled to an intestate share of that portion of the estate as to which the decedent dies intestate: Abram v. Wilson, 37 OO(2d) 288, 8 OMisc 420, 220 NE(2d) 739 (PC).

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. A widower electing to take under will of his wife is not barred of his right to statutory allowance of personal property not deemed assets of estate of wife, unless will expressly provides that provisions made for him are in lieu thereof (former GC § 10572): In re Guthrie, 28 NP(NS) 447; Brown v. Routzahn, 63 Fed(2d) 914 [reversing 58 Fed(2d) 329].

2. Where the testator provides in his will that the interest given to widow "shall be in lieu of her statutory allowances" and the widow fails to make an election within time, she will be barred of her right to the year's allowance, but not of her right to the set-off: In re Felman, 32 NP(NS) 73.

3. When a widow elects to take under a will which divides the real and personal estate of the testator between her and two children, giving to the widow and her heirs one-third of the real estate, and more than one-third of the personalty, she is not entitled to a distributive share of the personal property, under the statute, for the reason that the personal property is not intestate, although a subsequent clause of the will recites that the devises and bequests to the wife were not intended to be in lieu of her dower, either in his real or personal estate: Parker v. Parker, 13 OS 95.

4. The provisions above, prescribing the time and manner of election by widows, are inapplicable to the case of foreign widows. But the rule which this section prescribes for the construction of the terms of a will applies to all wills disposing of lands situated in this state. And as to such wills, whether foreign or domestic, the rule is that the widow cannot have both the testamentary provision and dower unless that plainly appears, by the will itself, to have been testator's intent: Jennings v. Jennings, 21 OS 56.

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145
AMENDMENT]

INDEX

Dower and distributive share, 1
Right as heir, 7 et seq
Year's allowance, 17 et seq

Dower and distributive share

1. In order to bar a widow of her right of dower, her election must be made either of record in the proper court, as required by statute, or in fact under circumstances as would create against her an estoppel of her right to claim under the law: Millikin v. Welliver, 37 OS 460; see also Hayes v. Heyl, 81 OS 563, 91 NE 1130.

2. Where the widow elects to take under the will, she will be barred of dower in land of which her husband was seized as an estate of inheritance during coverture, and which was sold and conveyed on foreclosure of a mortgage executed by him, in which she did not join, unless it plainly appears by the will that she should have such provision in addition to her dower: Corry v. Lamb, 45 OS 203, 12 NE 660.

Right as heir

7. Where a husband possessed of nonancestral real estate dies testate, but without issue, property devised to his widow in fee, with no devise over in the event that she elected not to take under the will, does not become intestate property as to her, and she cannot take as heir at law the property thus devised to her in lieu of dower and her distributive share: Armstrong v. Armstrong, 11 CC(NS) 474, 21 CD 261.

10. A widow whose husband dies testate, leaving no children, who elects to take under the law, gets less than she would if he had died intestate. She is therefore interested in the will and may maintain an action to set it aside: Moyses v. Neilson, 7 NP 607, 9 OD 623.

11. Where the husband dies testate, leaving no children, the widow, who elects to take under the law, gets such interest in his estate as she would if he had died leaving children, but if he dies intestate, leaving no children, she gets a life estate in all his property or the entire estate, according to the source from which the property came to the husband: Moyses v. Neilson, 7 NP 607, 9 OD 623.

12. Election by a widow to take under the will of her deceased husband does not preclude her inheritance of lands as to which her husband died intestate and to which no reference was made in the will: Bowers v. McGill, 12 NP(NS) 124, 22 OD 407, 56 Bull 413 (Ed); see also 56 Bull 421 for same report.

Year's allowance

17. Where a will specifically gives the widow the income of all the testator's estate during her life, she is entitled to the income from the time of the testator's death, and debts of the testator and the expenses of administration must be paid from the corpus of the estate. In such case, where the will does not otherwise expressly direct, the widow is entitled to receive the year's allowance provided by former GC § 10572 (see now RC § 2107.42): Hegner v. Hegner, 9 App 147, 31 OCA 418 [motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 199, 62 Bull 291].

18. Where a widow accepts under the will, which contains a request that no appraisement of the estate be made, she does not thereby waive her right to a year's allowance: In re Estate of Rierdon, 5 NP 516, 5 OD 606.

19. Where the terms of the will plainly show that testator's intent was to bar his widow of a first year's support, and a provision is made for her in lieu thereof, if she elects to take under the will, she is not entitled to the allowance: In re Estate of Witner, 7 NP 143, 10 OD 30.

20. If the testator gives to his widow the entire income of his estate, and does not provide expressly that such income is in lieu of the first year's allowance, the election of the widow to take under the will does not bar her of such allowance: In re Messang, 20 NP(NS) 60; sub nomine, In re Massang, 26 OD (NP) 533.

§ 2107.43 Election made in person.

The election of a surviving spouse to take under section 2105.06 of the Revised Code and thereby refusing to take under the will shall be made in person before the probate judge, or a deputy clerk who has been appointed to act as a referee under the provisions of section 2315.37 of the Revised Code, except as provided in sections 2107.44 and 2107.45 of the Revised Code.

When the election is made in person before such judge or referee, the judge or referee shall explain the will, the rights under such will, and by law, in the event of a refusal to take under the will.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. While this section requires the judge or referee appointed by him to explain the will, the rights under such will and under the law, the right of the widow to elect to take under the law or under the will is an absolute right in the nature of a personal privilege which cannot be taken from her: In re Callan, 101 App 114, 1 OO(2d) 64, 135 NE(2d) 464.

2. Where a surviving spouse, in making her election to take against the will, relied upon the erroneous advice of her counsel as to what she would receive under the will, or at law, to her detriment, and the probate judge did not make any further explanation of her rights as required by this section, a court of equity, where there were no intervening rights of third parties, will permit her to rescind such election: Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 69 OLA 102, 124 NE(2d) 851 (CP).

1. A widow's written election under former GC § 10571 (see now RC §§ 2107.39, 2107.43), and recorded, is a valid election, if her rights under the will and the law had been fully explained to her before the election was executed: Bell v. Henry, 121 OS 241, 167 NE 880.

3. The signing by a widow of an acknowledged election to take under will and filing in the probate court is within former GC § 10571 (see now RC §§ 2107.39, 2107.43), and must stand as valid unless set aside for fraud: Bell v. Henry, 28 OLR 527.

5. If a citation does not issue under former GC § 10566 (see now RC § 2107.39) and an election is not made formally, the surviving spouse will take under the law, by virtue of this section, unless it is clearly shown that such surviving spouse elected in fact to take under the will: Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288, 107 NE 770, AnnCas 1916C, 1198 [affirming Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433, 26 CD 338; for opinion below, see Creed v. Bates, 14 NP(NS) 81, 31 OD 552].

6. A widow who elects not to take under the will of her deceased husband is entitled to only so much of the personalty belonging to the said estate as would have passed to her had her husband died intestate: Harbeson v. Mellinger, 2 App 75, 18 CC (NS) 504, 25 CD 195.

9. Under the provisions of former GC § 10571 (see now RC §§ 2107.39, 2107.41, 2107.43) when the citation is issued and served, and no election is made within one year from the said service, it shall be claimed that she or he elected to take under the will: In re Citations, 4 OLA 87.

12. The executor is not the proper plaintiff in a proceeding in mandamus to compel the probate judge to enter upon the records of his court an oral election actually made by the widow in open court, which the probate judge has determined judicially to be a valid election. Such petition will be dismissed unless amended by substituting the proper plaintiff: State ex rel Zollinger v. Sloane, 24 OD(NP) 119.

13. If the widow appears in open court and makes an oral election to take under the will, and the court finds in its judicial capacity that she has elected to take under the will, such election is complete under this section even though the probate judge does not enter such election in writing upon the records of the court: State ex rel Zollinger v. Sloane, 24 OD(NP) 119.

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10570

Who may elect

1. The right to elect is a right to be exercised by the widow in person. If she die without having made her election, those who claim under her can only claim so much of her husband's personal estate as she was entitled to under the law: Millikin v. Welliver, 37 OS 460; see also Hayes v. Heyl, 81 OS 563, 91 NE 1130.

2. Not applicable where the will is not probated at the time of the death of the widow or widower: Hawkins v. Barrow, 15 CC 141, 8 CD 251 [affirming 35 Bull 97].

Probate court

7. A deputy clerk of the probate court is without right or authority to receive the election of the widow or widower to take under the will of a deceased consort; and an election so made may be set aside in a court of equity. The duty of receiving such election is a judicial one and cannot be performed by a deputy clerk: Mellinger v. Mellinger, 73 OS 221, 76 NE 615.

Explanation of rights

12. The entry of an election by a widow to take under the will need not show affirmatively that the judge had explained to her the provisions of the will, etc., for in the absence of averment or proof to the contrary, such explanation will be presumed. But the probate judge has no right to cancel an election previously made and entered on his journal, at her instance, for an alleged mistake on her part as to the provisions and effect of such will, for such election, when made and recorded, can be vacated only on petition to the court of common pleas, or other court having general equity jurisdiction: Davis v. Davis, 11 OS 386.

13. It is not the duty of the probate judge to explain to a widow her rights as an heir, at the time of the election. He is to advise her as to the effects of the election on her rights as a widow: Carder v. Commissioners, 16 OS 353.

14. The explanation of the rights of the widow which the probate court is to make under this section is the explanation of her rights to dower and the distributive share of the personalty which cannot be taken away from her by will, and her rights under the will. It is not the duty of the probate court to explain to her her rights in case of the partial intestacy of the deceased spouse: Bowers v. McGill, 12 NP(NS) 124, 22 OD 407, 56 Bull 413 (Ed); see also 56 Bull 421 for same report.

16. If the will provides that A may occupy a certain farm for a certain period of time at a certain rental, and that he shall then have the option of purchasing it at a certain sum, A has no interest during such period except as tenant; and the fact that he made valuable improvements during such period, does not prevent the testator's widow from avoiding her election, if such election is made without full knowledge of her rights: Ward v. Sark, 19 NP(NS) 401, 27 OD 229.

Foreign wills

28. General Code § 10570 (see now RC § 2107.43) requiring an election by a widow to take under the will of her husband, applies to domestic wills so far as it relates to the time and manner of making an election: Waterfield v. Rice, 111 Fed 625, 49 CCA 504, 14 OFD 282.

§ 2107.44 Commission issued to take election of spouse. (GC § 10504-62)

On an application in behalf of a surviving spouse, the probate court may issue a commission, with a copy of the will annexed, directed to any suitable person, to take the election of such spouse. In such commission the court shall direct such person to explain the rights of such spouse under the will and under sections 2105.01 to 2105.21, inclusive, of the Revised Code.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-62; 114 v 320 (358); 122 v 498, § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10573.

Am-Jur2d: § 1622 et seq.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Revised Code § 2107.44 permits the election of a surviving spouse to be taken by a commissioner appointed by the court upon application on behalf of a surviving spouse: Baker v. Hutyera, 56 OO(2d) 230, 27 OMisc 19, 267 NE(2d) 604 (CP).

§ 2107.45 Election made by one under legal disability. (GC §§ 10504-63, 10504-64)

When, because of a legal disability, a surviving spouse is unable to make an election as provided by section 2107.39 of the Revised Code, as soon as the facts come to the knowledge of the probate court, the probate court shall appoint some suitable person to ascertain the value of the provision made for such spouse by the testator and the value of the rights in the estate of such testator under sections 2105.01 to 2105.21, inclusive, of the Revised Code. Such appointment by the court shall be made at any time within the time allowed for election under section 2107.39 of the Revised Code.

When the person appointed returns the report of his investigation, the court shall determine whether the provision made by the testator for the surviving spouse in the will or the provision under sections 2105.01 to 2105.21, inclusive, of the Revised Code, is better for such spouse and shall elect accordingly. The court shall thereupon record upon its journal the election made for such spouse, which election, when so entered, shall have the same effect as an election made by one not under such disability.

HISTORY: GC §§ 10504-63, 10504-64; 114 v 320 (358); 125 v 903 (963). EFF 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC §§ 10574, 10575.

1. Legatees under a will have no right to contest an election not to take under a will by the probate court on behalf of a surviving spouse who because of legal disability is unable to make such election on his own behalf: In re Strauch, 15 OS(2d) 192, 44 OO(2d) 158, 239 NE(2d) 43 [affirming 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95].

1.1 The executor and testamentary trustee under a deceased husband's will, as well as a legatee under the will, have interests which conflict with what is "better" for the incompetent widow and, therefore, they have no standing to contest the court's election on behalf of the spouse pursuant to the provisions of RC § 2107.45: In re Cook, 19 OS(2d) 121, 48 OO(2d) 113, 249 NE(2d) 799.

1.2 The election provided by statute for a surviving spouse to choose whether she desires to take under her husband's will or under the statute of descent and distribution is solely for the benefit of the surviving spouse, and where that spouse is under a legal disability the probate court must elect on her behalf the provision which is better for her, considering only her interests: In re Cook, 19 OS(2d) 121, 48 OO(2d) 113, 249 NE(2d) 799.

1.3 Only the guardian of such spouse or some other party acting on behalf of such spouse may question that determination: In re Cook, 19 OS(2d) 121, 48 OO(2d) 113, 249 NE(2d) 799.

2. An order made by a probate court in a special proceeding under GC §§ 10504-63 and 10504-64 (RC § 2107.45), relative to the election by a surviving spouse under legal disability, determining whether the provision in the will or the provision by law is better for the spouse, and electing accordingly, is a final order affecting a substantial right in a special proceeding, and appealable under GC § 12223-2 (RC § 2505.02): In re Knoffler, 73 App 383, 29 OO 93, 52 NE(2d) 667 [affirmed, 143 OS 294].

2.1 General Code § 11397 (RC § 2311.21), prescribing that no action or pending proceeding shall abate by the death of either or both parties thereto, applies only to actions or proceedings of an adversary character, and does not apply to a special proceeding under GC §§ 10504-63 and 10504-64 (RC § 2107.45), relative to election of a surviving spouse to take under a will: In re Knoffler, 73 App 383, 29 OO 93, 52 NE(2d) 667 [affirmed, 143 OS 294].

3. General Code § 10504-63 (RC § 2107.45) cannot be construed to preserve the right of a surviving spouse, an incompetent, to elect to take under the will or by law until such time as the facts of his incapacity come to the knowledge of the probate court: In re Iwinski, 83 App 463, 38 OO 491, 77 NE(2d) 375.

4. A probate court, in determining that the best interest of an eighty-three-year-old incompetent widow would be served by the court's exercising, in such widow's behalf, the widow's election to take against the will and under the laws of intestacy, is not, under such circumstances, abusing its discretion, where the value of the widow's interest under the law was two hundred sixty-seven thousand, seven hundred thirty-six dollars, as against eighty-three thousand, nine hundred dollars under will, though such election defeated the joint testamentary plan of both testator and spouse: In re Callan, 101 App 114, 1 OO(2d) 64, 135 NE(2d) 464.

5. When the probate judge, acting in pursuance of and in accordance with this section, has made election in behalf of an incompetent widow to take either under the will or under the law of intestacy, the election so made has the same effect as if made by one not under disability, and the widow's right thereby becomes absolute; and third parties are without right to complain: In re Callan, 101 App 114, 1 OO(2d) 64, 135 NE(2d) 464.

6. The election by the probate judge made in behalf of an incompetent widow to take either under the law or under the will is made solely for the benefit of the incompetent spouse and not for the benefit of third parties: In re Callan, 101 App 114, 1 OO(2d) 64, 135 NE(2d) 464.

7. The probate judge in determining in behalf of an incompetent widow whether to take under the will or under the law of intestacy must determine whether provision made by the testator for the surviving spouse in the will or provision under the law "is better for such spouse" and elect accordingly: In re Callan, 101 App 114, 1 OO(2d) 64, 135 NE(2d) 464.

9. An order of a probate court making an election for an incompetent surviving spouse under this section, is subject to the control of the court and may be vacated under RC § 2101.33, within term time: In re Strauch, 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95.

10. In making an election for a surviving spouse under this section, a probate court is to determine which is better as between the provision "in the will" and the provision under the statutes. The court may not consider provisions by the decedent or others outside the will and cannot consider the effect of an election upon legatees, heirs, next of kin or the tax collector: In re Strauch, 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95.

11. An incompetent surviving spouse's lack of financial need, her probable intent to honor the testator's intent, and the existence of a plan of disposition of assets are not permissible standards for making an election under RC § 2107.45: In re Strauch, 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95.

12. Where the provision in a will is a simple bequest worth $8,820.50, and the statutory share is $44,102.50, it is an abuse of discretion for a probate court to elect on behalf of the incompetent spouse to take under the will and against the statutory right: In re Strauch, 11 OApp(2d) 173, 40 OO(2d) 331, 229 NE(2d) 95.

13. Where testator refers in his will to direct gifts made during his lifetime to his wife for her care, support and comfort, such reference may not be construed as a "provision in the will" under GC § 10504-64 (RC § 2107.45), relative to the election by the probate court for such surviving spouse who is under legal disability because of incompetency: In re Morton, 6 OO 343 (CP).

14. In making an election under GC §§ 10504-63 and 10504-64 (RC § 2107.45), for a surviving spouse because of incompetency, the probate court, having plenary power at law and in equity fully to dispose of the matter, should put itself in the place of the surviving spouse and assume that such surviving spouse is one having at least ordinary business ability, and in addition the qualities of fairness, loyalty and respect for the memory and good deeds of the deceased spouse: In re Morton, 6 OO 343 (PC).

15. The death of an incompetent spouse within the time limit for making an election does not raise a presumption that she shall take under the will of her deceased husband: In re Jones, 15 OO 250 (PC).

16. Where the wills of a husband and wife were made in pursuance of a plan to minimize estate and inheritance taxes, and the wife's bequest of her entire estate directly to her children, rather than to her husband, was made to minimize the impact of federal estate taxes upon their joint estates, the probate court may properly make an election for the incompetent surviving husband to permit the wife's estate to pass directly to her legatees: In re Rieley, 28 OO(2d) 122, 194 NE(2d) 918 (PC).

[CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION]

§ 2107.46 Action by fiduciary.

Any fiduciary may maintain an action in the probate court against creditors, legatees, distributees, or other parties, and ask the direction or judgment of the court in any matter respecting the trust, estate, or property to be administered, and the rights of the parties in interest.

If any fiduciary fails for thirty days to bring such an action after a written request from a party in interest, the party making the request may institute the suit.

ACTIONS TO CONSTRUE WILLS

Scope of section

1. An action cannot be maintained in cases where no trust is involved: Collins v. Collins, 19 OS 468; Corry v. Fleming, 29 OS 147.

2. An action to construe a will which creates a charitable trust is equitable, and may be appealed to the court of appeals: Gearheart v. Richardson, 109 OS 418, 142 NE 890.

3. In an action brought by executors under favor of GC § 10504-66 (RC § 2107.46), asking for the construction of a will, the petition raises all the issues in the case, no other pleadings are required, and a default judgment cannot be rendered against a party in interest for failure to answer: Hood v. Garrett, 53 App 464, 7 OO 316, 5 NE(2d) 937.

4. In an action to construe a will it is error for the court to refuse relief on the ground that there is no present necessity for construing the will, the doubtful provisions thereof not being immediately operative, where there exist other valid reasons for the construction of the will at that time: Schreiner v. Cincinnati Altenheim, 61 App 344, 15 OO 228, 22 NE(2d) 587.

5. A proceeding under an application to the probate court by a guardian for its direction as to the payment of a claim presented to such guardian is not an "action" within the meaning of GC § 10504-66 (RC § 2107.46), when the claimant is not made a party to such proceeding: Sacks v. Johnston, 76 App 143, 31 OO 438, 63 NE(2d) 246.

5.1. Where an action is in the nature of a proceeding to determine heirship and the fact that the wording of the will requires consideration is only incidental, an action should not be brought under this section: Stewart v. Purget, 34 OLA 343, 37 NE(2d) 549.

6. The legislative intent in the enactment of the declaratory judgments act was not to "scrap" the statutory remedies nor the common law remedies, for under it the court's jurisdiction is alternative in most cases: Flowers v. Metcalf, 4 OO 301 (PC).

7. In a case brought under this section, where a husband refuses to take under his wife's will, his rights may be settled by a suit thereunder: Wilson v. Hall, 6 CC 570, 3 CD 589 [affirmed, without report, Hall v. Wilson, 53 OS 679].

8. Means provided to determine the rights of legatees under former GC §§ 10853, 10854 and 10855 [repealed, 114 v 320 (475)], are not exclusive. An action may be brought under former GC §§ 10857 and 10858 (see now RC § 2107.46): Davis v. Hutchings, 15 CC 174, 8 CD 52 [reversed on another point, Davis v. Davis, 62 OS 411].

9. An action can be maintained by an executor under this section to obtain the true construction of a will, only in cases where a trust is invoked or where the executor has duties to perform, in carrying out the provisions of the will, which require the guidance of the court: Chase v. Isherwood, 1 NP 31, 5 OD 1.

10. If there is anything to construe, a suit to construe will lie: Hollister v. Howe, 4 NP 168, 6 OD 157.

Jurisdiction

16. Where a trust is created for the benefit of an incorporated religious society, and there are two bodies claiming to be that society, a court of equity may require the claimants to interplead, and may proceed to ascertain the true beneficiary without compelling either party to establish its corporate rights at law: First Presbyterian Soc. v. First Presbyterian Soc., 25 OS 128.

17. This section confers upon the court of common pleas the exclusive jurisdiction to supervise or control the administration of a testamentary trust: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453 [affirmed, without opinion, May 4, 1915].

18. The probate court has no jurisdiction conferred upon it by law, to supervise or control the administration of a testamentary trust: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453.

19. Judgment construing will is not conclusive against beneficiary not party thereto and will not justify administration of estate contrary to will (former GC § 10857 [see now RC § 2107.46]): In re Kachelmacher, 40 App 282, 178 NE 314.

19.1 By this section, the probate court and the common pleas court are given concurrent jurisdiction of actions for direction or judgment in any matter respecting a trust, estate, or property of a decedent: Green v. Ryan, 95 App 345, 53 OO 311, 119 NE(2d) 668.

19.2 The probate court has jurisdiction of an action by an executrix for a judgment declaring that certain items of decedent's will bequeathing property to his former wife had been revoked by a decree granting decedent a divorce from his former wife: Davis v. Wallace, 27 OO(2d) 80, 192 NE(2d) 291 (App).

20. An action for construction of a will (former GC § 10857 [see now RC § 2107.46]), and determination of the rights of the trustee named therein, is a chancery case from which an appeal lies: Beck v. Alliance First Nat. Bank, 31 OLR 213.

21. An action brought in the common pleas court for the construction of a will, under favor of former GC § 10857 (see now RC § 2107.46), is a chancery case and appealable: Washburn v. Guild, 22 OLA 518.

22. Common pleas court has jurisdiction over guardian's action for judgment as to his duty respecting ward's estate, and must determine duty and decree performance therefore: Madden v. Shallenberger, 121 OS 401, 169 NE 450.

23. Proceeding by fiduciary for directions respecting estate not involving trust held not chancery case, and therefore not appealable to court of appeals (former GC § 10857 [see now RC § 2107.46]): Crowley v. Crowley, 124 OS 454, 179 NE 360.

Who may maintain action

26. A trustee in doubt as to his powers has the right to apply to a court of equity to define them and give judicial sanction to his acts, but in such case the court will only define the trusts and will not order a sale of property where no adverse right is asserted: Wiswell v. First Congregational Church, 14 OS 31.

27. An executor may maintain a civil action, under this section, in the court of common pleas, asking the direction of the court in any matter affecting the trust estate or property to be administered and the rights of the parties in interest: Merrick v. Merrick, 37 OS 126.

28. As to actions by next of kin to obtain construction before this section was passed, see Bowen v. Bowen, 38 OS 426.

28.1. One who as trustee under a will and as an individual is interested in a provision of the will authorizing the removal of certain of testator's real estate from the trust and the substitution of a sum of money to take its will may bring and maintain an action for a declaratory judgment in the probate court to secure a determination and declaration as to his obligations as trustee and as an individual with respect to such matter and as to the rights of the trust beneficiaries, where there is a present bona fide dispute between or among those concerned as to the interpretation of the will and doubt exists as to the proper interpretation: Sessions v. Skelton, 163 OS 409, 56 OO 370, 127 NE(2d) 378.

29. One who has no trust to administer under a will cannot maintain an action for the construction thereof: Bantz v. Rover, 14 CC(NS) 218, 24 CD 201 [citing and following Collins v. Collins, 19 OS 468; Corry v. Fleming, 29 OS 147].

30. Under former GC §§ 10857 and 10858 (see now RC § 2107.46) legatee under will was not entitled to file cross-petition for construction of will, where it was not shown that executor was requested in writing to file such action and failed for thirty days to do so; cross-petition is improperly filed where it does not show that construction sought will ever be important: Snyder v. Heffner, 33 App 379, 169 NE 460.

31. The declaratory judgments act, GC §§ 12102-1 to 12102-16 (RC §§ 2721.01 to 2721.15) is an independent act of the legislature, complete in its subjects of jurisdiction, and its remedy, not to be restricted or modified by "another established remedy"; consequently the heir at law or legatee under the will can appeal directly to the court without the intervention of an executor or trustee, as in the provisions of GC §§ 10504-66 and 10504-67 (RC § 2107.46): Flowers v. Metcalf, 4 OO 301 (PC).

31.1 This section authorizes action by fiduciaries for directions of a court as to property held in trusts: Fenn College v. Nance, 33 OO(2d) 292, 4 OMisc 183, 210 NE(2d) 418 (CP).

Questions on which instructions may be asked

37. If the executors are unable to determine the meaning of certain provisions of the will, and if they cannot distribute the fund in their possession until such construction is ascertained, and if the duty of the executors to pay a collateral inheritance tax depends upon the question whether the will gives a fee to the widow or a life estate only, the executors may maintain an action to have such will construed under the provisions of former GC § 10857 (RC § 2107.46) as well as under the principles of equity jurisprudence: Ohio Sav. Bank & Co. v. Clark, 7 App 6, 28 OCA 1, 29 CD 433, 63 Bull 9 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, Wolcott v. Ohio Sav. Bank & Co., 61 Bull 191].

38. Under former GC § 10857 (RC § 2107.46) an executor may bring an action to ascertain if there has been a valid gift inter vivos of shares of stock by the testator: McCoy v. Gosser, 8 App 145, 30 OCA 312 [motion to certify record overruled, Gosser v. Burns, 15 OLR 485].

39. For a proceeding by administrator to determine whether the purchase of United States money orders by his decedent amounted to a gift to the payee of such orders, see McKelvey v. McKelvey, 14 CC(NS) 331, 23 CD 117.

40. As long as the beneficiaries under a will are alive, the court will not, in an action to construe a will, determine the question of the duty of the executor in case one or more of such beneficiaries should die: Neville v. Carlet, 16 CC(NS) 544, 26 CD 469.

41. Under this section an executor and trustee may ask the judgment of the court as to whether a certain sum of money paid by the decedent during her lifetime should be treated as a gift or as an advancement: Ferris v. Goodin, 19 CC(NS) 477, 26 CD 110.

42. A guardian may bring a suit under this section to obtain the instruction of the court as to whether a claim, made upon the ward's estate, is legal: Wing v. Hibbert, 7 NP 124, 8 OD 65, 20 CC 404, 11 CD 190.

45. For a suit for instructions by the administrator of a broker, as to rights of customers, pledgees, etc., see Bank v. Andrews, 24 NP(NS) 361.

46. An administrator may institute an action in the common pleas court asking its judgment whether he should pay a certain year's allowance to the widow under former GC § 10656 (see now RC § 2117.20): McCalla v. McCalla, 46 Bull 280.

48. Statute authorizing fiduciary to sue for construction of will as respects trust, estate, or property to be administered does not authorize heir, legatee, creditor, or even fiduciary to ask court to determine owner of realty devised: Wagner v. Schrembs, 44 App 44, 184 NE 292.

49. Before a court will construe a will, it must appear that an immediate necessity therefore exists, such as a present or impending controversy, or that there is a provision of uncertain meaning under which the executor will be called to act soon: Beck v. Alliance First Nat. Bank, 31 OLR 213.

Pleading, procedure, etc.

54. Action under this section and next following is appealable: Swing v. Townsend, 24 OS 1.

55. Where a will required an executor to erect a monument, and he applied under this section for a construction of the will, but in his petition did not allege that he had, or would in the future have, any money to be applied to such purpose, the court held that the facts did not call for any judgment of the court: Rothgeb v. Mauck, 35 OS 503.

56. A petition, in a cause under this section, to obtain a construction of a single item of a will, which does not set forth the entire will, is bad on general demurrer: Devenney v. Devenney, 74 OS 96, 77 NE 688.

57. Since equity entertained actions to construe wills before the enactment of former GC § 10857 (see now RC § 2107.46) and since former GC § 10857 (see now RC § 2107.46) provides for construction as fully as formerly was entertained in courts of equity, a proceeding to construe a will is a chancery case within the meaning of Art. IV, § 6 of the constitution of Ohio; and such case may be appealed from the common pleas court to the court of appeals: Ohio Sav. Bank & Co. v. Clark, 7 App 6, 28 OCA 1, 29 CD 433, 63 Bull 9 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, Wolcott v. Ohio Sav. Bank & Co., 61 Bull 191].

58. General Code § 10504-66 (RC § 2107.46) gives the right of appeal from an order or judgment of a probate court in a proceeding by an executor to determine whether certain promissory notes were obligations belonging to the estate and whether they should be set forth in the inventory and appraisal: In re Doppes, 70 App 354, 25 OO 93, 42 NE(2d) 208 [affirming 21 OO 181 (CP)].

59. Res judicata applied re former action for construction: Tiedtke v. Tiedtke, 91 App 442, 49 OO 36, 108 NE(2d) 578.

60. In an action brought by a trustee of a charitable trust under this section, to construe the trust, and the common pleas court holds there is no trust, the trustee has the right to appeal to the circuit court in the interest of the cestui que trust: Hunt v. Edgerton, 9 CC(NS) 353, 19 CD 377.

61. Parties who are financially interested in the construction of a will, and whose rights will be affected by the decision of the court, are not competent to appear as witnesses in an action to construe such will. This includes persons who will take in any event but whose rights will be affected in one way if a portion of the fund is held to be income, and in another way if such portion of the fund is held to be capital: Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43, 58 Bull 125 (Ed) [on appeal from 13 NP(NS) 1; modified and affirmed in Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28].

62. The probate court has jurisdiction to allow attorney fees to be paid out of the estate, for services in an action to construe a will creating a trust: Schmalstig v. Conner, 46 FSupp 531, 24 OO 427.

63. In an action to construe a will the question of the competency of witnesses will be limited to matters pertaining to the estate, without regard to the fact that such witnesses may be interested adversely in the final distribution: Miller v. Miller, 13 NP(NS) 1 [for opinion on appeal, see 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43, 58 Bull 125 (Ed); which was modified and affirmed, Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28].

64. In an action to construe a will under former GC § 10857 (see now RC § 2107.46) an administrator of a devisee claiming under the will has the burden of proving the survivorship of such devisee: Ware v. Kinch, 29 OCA 353, 35 CD 547.

65. Under former GC § 10857 (see now RC § 2107.46) all persons affected must be brought into court, but persons having a contingent interest may be in court by representation: Parrott v. Parrott, 21 NP(NS) 71, 29 OD 152.

66. It is sufficient to make the trustee and the donees in tail parties to a suit to construe a trust. It is not necessary to make parties those who may take on the death of such donee in tail: Parrott v. Parrott, 21 NP(NS) 71, 29 OD 152.

67. Causes of action by executor for money, checks, certificates of deposit, building and loan pass book, and other evidences of property which the executor alleged defendant had taken from residence of deceased, are properly joined, under GC § 11306 (RC § 2309.05) and former GC § 10857 (see now RC § 2107.46): Russ v. Wilson, 27 App 34, 160 NE 735.

68. Where the common pleas court has construed a will under the uniform declaratory judgments act, GC §§ 12102-1 to 12102-16 (RC §§ 2721.02 to 2721.15), the court of appeals has no jurisdiction on appeal, as the action is not a chancery case: Whiting v. Bertram, 51 App 40, 3 OO 292, 199 NE 367.

69. Petition by widow as sole devisee of residuary legatee under former GC §§ 10857 and 10858 (see now RC § 2107.46), for construction of will of original testator, alleging that trustee, dividing rents and profits of estate among residuary legatees, refused to distribute any part of income to her after her husband's death, was held to state a cause of action under former GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52): Webb v. Biles, 27 App 197, 161 NE 218.

70. The administrator of an estate should make his inventory, including statutory set-offs, notwithstanding the claimed existence of antenuptial contract that would defeat such set-offs; the order of probate court requiring such inventory is not an adjudication that there is no such antenuptial contract, nor is it an interpretation of such contract: Keever v. Brown, 36 App 1, 172 NE 626.

70.1 In an action to construe a will, brought under favor of this section, the petition raises all issues of fact, but this general rule does not preclude the court from considering issues raised on the further pleadings of interested parties: Balduf v. Evans, 95 App 292, 53 OO 208, 118 NE(2d) 848.

71. In action by administrator of deceased wife, asking instruction of court as to proper distribution of funds on deposit with building and loan company, such deposit being in joint names of deceased wife and her husband, also deceased, building and loan company and personal representative of deceased husband are necessary parties: Chamberlain v. Snyder, 7 OLA 233.

72. Where an executor, under authority of GC § 10504-66 (RC § 2107.46), brings an action for instructions respecting the disposition of the estate to be administered, and appeal is taken to the common pleas court, an appeal from the judgment of the common pleas court involves the ordinary exercise of jurisdiction as set forth by the constitutional provisions applicable to courts of appeals: First Nat. Bank v. Rawson, 54 App 285, 8 OO 13, 7 NE(2d) 6.

CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF WILLS

[For index to case notes under heading "Actions to Construe Wills," see p. 157]

INDEX

Construction and operation of wills, 1 et seq
 Ademption, 430 et seq

Nature

1. Foreign wills construed by foreign laws; but property left undisposed of follows direction of Ohio laws: Brewster v. Benedict, 14 OS 368.

2. The laws of Ohio control construction of wills disposing of lands situated in this state: Jennings v. Jennings, 21 OS 56.

3. Rules for construing wills are less rigid than those for construing other instruments, especially in case of wills which appear to have been prepared by laymen and not by attorneys: Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349, 101 NE 344, 45 LRA(NS) 48, AnnCas 1914A, 104.

4. For a summary of the rules for the construction of a will in Ohio, see Miller v. Cline, 5 App 425, 25 CC(NS) 492, 30 CD 638.

5. A will is ambulatory in its nature, and takes effect only from the death of the testator: Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

Object

10. The cardinal rule of construction is to give effect to testator's intention: Decker v. Decker, 3 O 157; Townsend v. Townsend, 25 OS 477; Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128; Barr v. Denney, 79 OS 358, 87 NE 267; Union Sav. Bank & Co. v. Alter, 103 OS 188, 132 NE 834; Knepper v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476; Tax Commission v. Oswald, 109 OS 36, 141 NE 67; Owens v. Humbert, 5 App 312, 25 CC(NS) 522, 27 CD 307, 61 Bull 259 (Ed); Punch v. Clayton, 10 App 145; Huffman v. Berry, 15 App 372; Stark v. Marsh, 29 OCA 417, 35 CD 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Little v. Stark, 16 OLR 307, 63 Bull 350]; Cotty v. Arthur, 23 NP(NS) 513.

11. A testator may make use of such words as he pleases to express his intention, and if clearly manifested, it will be carried into effect, if it is not unlawful, or does not create an estate forbidden by law: King v. Beck, 15 O 559; Carter v. Reddish, 32 OS 1; Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128.

12. And with settled rules of construction as collateral aids to a correct interpretation, a will must speak for itself, and the intention of the testator gathered from what appears on its face: Worman v. Teagarden, 2 OS 380; Black v. Hill, 32 OS 313.

13. Will should not be construed technically but sensibly and liberally, in order to effect testator's intentions; neither should it be so construed as to destroy all benefit from a devise, if it can consistently be avoided: Thompson v. Thompson, 4 OS 333; Brasher v. Marsh, 15 OS 103.

14. If it appear from the will itself that testator's real meaning will be frustrated by a strict execution of the testator's directions, a more liberal construction will be given: Gilpin v. Williams, 17 OS 396 [for later opinion in this case, see 25 OS 283].

15. Must follow intention unless statutes prevent: Shaw v. Hoard, 18 OS 227.

16. In construing wills, the controlling principle is the ascertainment of testator's intent. But where that remains in doubt, resort must be had to settled rules of construction for aid in the solution of the difficulty: Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128; LaRoche v. LaRoche, 10 App 242, 29 OCA 113, 30 CD 519, 63 Bull 285 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 320, 63 Bull 398].

17. Although courts, in general, favor that construction under which estates will vest at time of testator's death, yet this, like every other rule of construction, will be controlled by testator's intent, as gathered from the whole will: Hamilton v. Rodgers, 38 OS 242.

18. The changed value of money and property, the changed circumstances and needs of the beneficiary, do not justify a court in modifying the provisions of a will to meet the changed circumstances and conditions: Union Sav. Bank & Co. v. Alter, 103 OS 188, 132 NE 834.

18.1 When will clearly reveals general plan or intention as to disposition of property, and situation arises which is not within the express terms of the will, such general plan may be regarded as existing but incompletely expressed, the failure to provide for situation inadvertent rather than intentional, and the gift implied for the purpose of completing the general plan: Casey v. Gallagher, 11 OS(2d) 42, 40 OO(2d) 55, 227 NE(2d) 801.

19. The inquiry is not, what thought did the testator wish to express by the language used, but what thought has he expressed by the words and sentences used in his will: Miller v. Cline, 5 App 425, 25 CC(NS) 492, 30 CD 638.

20. Real estate belonging to decedent may be sold and the corpus as well as the income used for the support of an imbecile son, when the language of the will indicates a purpose to provide for the care of such son regardless of the interests of the remaindermen: Riley v. Riley, 7 NP(NS) 100, 19 OD 150.

General principles

25. A construction which treats an interest as vested will be preferred to one which postpones vesting: Brasher v. Marsh, 15 OS 103; Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128; Bolton v. Ohio Nat. Bank, 50 OS 290, 33 NE 1115; Stark v. McEwen, 15 App 188 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 392]; Alter v. Alter, 31 OCA 113, 35 CD 671 [on appeal from 22 NP(NS) 517, 31 OD 290].

26. Every part of a will is construed from its four corners: Wagner v. Schrembs, 44 App 44, 184 NE 292; First Citizens Trust Co. v. Harris, 13 OLA 163.

Intention to be deduced from language

32. Words of exclusion will not control descent, as to property not devised: Crane v. Doty, 1 OS 279.

33. Grammatical accuracy need not be observed in construing a will, but it should be read with a view to the situation and circumstances of the testator, in reference to the subjects of his disposition and the objects of his bounty: Worman v. Teagarden, 2 OS 380.

34. If the context of the will requires it, the word "or" may be read "and": Ward v. Barrows, 2 OS 241; Persinger v. Britton, 10 App 164, 29 OCA 316.

35. A court will not speculate as to the intention of a testator whose will was written in a foreign language and the scholars who were called as witnesses did not agree in their translations, but in such a case the provisions of the statutes for distribution of the property of the descent will be applied: Walker v. Burtscher, 5 App 388, 26 CC(NS) 172, 61 Bull 407 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, 14 OLR 268].

36. In construing a will, effect must be given to every word, if possible: Tax Commission v. Oswald, 109 OS 36, 141 NE 67; Edwards v. Edwards, 14 App 49, 31 OCA 561.

37. The words which are found in the statutes will be presumed to be used in their ordinary meaning: Buehrle v. Commissioners, 14 App 334.

38. The fact that the residuary clause is inserted before a power of sale does not change the meaning of the will: Huffman v. Berry, 15 App 372.

39. The intention of a testator as expressed in the items of his will cannot be changed by the numbering of the various items of the will or the order in which they are arranged: Huffman v. Berry, 15 App 372.

40. Testator's intention must be ascertained from language in will: Wagner v. Schrembs, 44 App 44, 184 NE 292.

41. The intention of a testatrix must be gathered from the entire will, unaffected by extrinsic facts, unless there is some ambiguity therein: Stevens v. Wildesen, 54 App 185, 7 OO 497, 6 NE(2d) 793.

42. In construction of wills the intention of testator is the polar star for guidance of the court. Such intention must be ascertained from every part of the will construed from its four corners: Hollister v. Witherbee, 9 OO 37 (CP).

43. The intention of the testator is to be derived from the will itself, and when ascertained it must govern, even though it is contrary to the technical rules of law: Lacey v. Birdsall, 15 CC(NS) 60, 23 CD 460 [affirmed, without opinion, sub nomine, Birdsill v. Lacey, 88 OS 606].

44. The court must determine the intention of the testator from the language which is used in the will, and must not speculate as to what the real intention of the testator probably was as indicated by the surrounding circumstances: Sadler v. Sadler, 23 CC (NS) 353, 27 CD 445 [motion to certify record overruled, 13 OLR 420, 60 Bull 432; and citing Townsend v. Townsend, 25 OS 257].

45. In construing a will, punctuation is not conclusive: Kellough v. Moses, 32 OCA 49, 35 CD 685.

46. Under a provision in a will in the event that "at the death of my said wife in case she should have no children or child by me living, then and in that case if said farm was not sold by my said wife they shall each inherit said farm equally, share and share alike, and in case that my said wife shall not have any children living and she be the owner of said farm and homestead." The word "no" before the words "children or child" must be disregarded in order to give the will any meaning and to carry out the intention of the testator: McMillan v. McMillan, 12 NP (NS) 593, 23 OD 69 [affirmed by circuit court, without opinion].

47. In the construction of a will, the court must ascertain the intention of the testator from the language which he used in his will, together with such extrinsic evidence as is admissible: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

48. The intention of a testator must be ascertained from the words contained in the will: Teepen v. Schlachter, 18 NP(NS) 33, 28 OD 545 [affirmed, Schlachter v. Teepen, 24 CC(NS) 30, 29 CD 650; citing Townsend v. Townsend, 25 OS 477].

49. In construing a will, the court is limited to the language used by the testator; and the court cannot add or omit any words so as to reach a result different from that which would be reached from a fair construction of the words actually used: Kilgour v. Hey, 19 NP(NS) 81.

50. Bad grammar does not render invalid the evident intentions of testator: Brown v. Hunsicker, 22 NP(NS) 168, 31 OD 24.

Evidence in aid of construction

55. Parol evidence cannot be admitted to contradict or explain the contents of a will: Painter v. Painter, 18 O 247.

56. While the will cannot be construed by evidence received aliunde, parol evidence may be received for the purpose of counteracting fraud in the devise, and in some particular cases, to attach a trust to the estate devised, but in such cases courts will act with the extremest caution: Collins v. Hope, 20 O 492.

57. Will to be construed in the light afforded by the circumstances under which it was made and the subjects to which it relates: Thompson v. Thompson, 4 OS 333.

58. Technical words must be taken in their technical sense—otherwise, in their ordinary sense—unless it appear from the context that they were used in some secondary sense. All parts of the will must be construed together, and effect given, if possible, to every word of it. To ascertain identity, extrinsic facts may be shown, insofar as they can be made ancillary to the right interpretation of the words, but for no other purpose: Townsend v. Townsend, 25 OS 477.

59. Where words are fairly and legitimately applicable to one thing as its name, and are equally applicable to another thing as words of description, parol evidence is admissible to show in which of the two senses testator was in the habit of using the words: Boggs v. Taylor, 26 OS 604 [for another case involving same subject matter, see Boggs v. Taylor, 29 OS 172].

60. For to allow language to be varied or contradicted, or omissions supplied, or apparent ambiguities removed by parol testimony, would in effect be the repeal of the law requiring the will to be in writing, and introduce all the uncertainty, fraud and perjury which it was the intention of the law to prevent: Black v. Hill, 32 OS 313.

61. In construing will, extrinsic evidence may be received to show the circumstances under which it was made: Black v. Hill, 32 OS 313.

62. While a will should be read and construed by the light of the circumstances under which it was executed, yet those circumstances can affect its construction only when known to testator at the time of execution. Where the will provides that, if the widow claims dower in lieu of provision made, the property included in the provision shall be shared equally among the heirs, the word "heirs" means next of kin under the statutes of distribution exclusive of the wife: Jones v. Lloyd, 33 OS 572.

64. A case involving a question of the construction of a will may be a guide as to the general rules of construction, but otherwise such case will have but little weight unless in another case which is directly in point in its essential facts, circumstances, and phraseology: Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349, 101 NE 344, 45 LRA(NS) 48, AnnCas 1914A, 104 [affirming Moon v. Harness, 15 CC(NS) 139, 23 CD 337].

65. The testimony of an attorney is not competent to vary the terms of a written instrument prepared by him as such, and in a proceeding to construe a will the attorney who wrote the will, and with whom the testator consulted concerning it, is not competent to testify concerning a communication made to him by his client touching his estate, the objects of his bounty or the meaning and effect of provisions contained in the will: Knepper v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476.

66. In construing a clause in a will, testimony by the scrivener as to instructions given him by the testator at the time the will was written, or as to what the testator said at that time regarding his intention in the disposition of his property, is wholly incompetent: Zackman v. Dick, 1 App 36, 15 CC(NS) 593, 24 CD 450, 11 OLR 17.

67. Adverbs of time, such as "when," "then," "after," "thereafter," "from and after," and the like, all refer to the exact instant when the life estate ends; and in a devise of a remainder they are construed to relate to the time at which the enjoyment of the remainder begins and not to the time at which it vests: McCarthy v. Hansel, 4 App 425, 25 CC(NS) 283, 28 CD 608 [citing Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128].

68. Extrinsic evidence is not admissible for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of a testator, if the language used in the will is not ambiguous: Mater v. Croft, 6 App 13, 26 CC(NS) 182, 29 CD 9 [reversing and remanding judgment of common pleas court; judgment on retrial was also reversed, and motion to certify record overruled, Croft v. Mater, 15 OLR 115, 62 Bull 176].

69. For the purpose of adding to or controlling the terms of a will dispositive terms or expressions dehors the will, cannot be considered: Leopold v. Weaver, 9 App 379, 29 OCA 567 [motion to certify record overruled, Weaver v. Leopold, 16 OLR 455, 64 Bull 40].

70. A misdescription in a will of property which is the subject of a bequest gives rise to a latent ambiguity where the misdescription is not apparent until the facts are shown concerning the property which testator intended to bequeath, and extrinsic evidence is admissible to apply the will to its proper subject matter: Walsh v. Walsh, 13 App 315, 32 OCA 513.

71. Testimony showing that the son of the testator was heavily in debt is competent for the purpose of the testator in making no provision for said son and giving his entire estate to his son's wife and their children, thereby protecting the estate against the creditors of the said son: Kuester v. Yeoman, 14 CC (NS) 264 [sub nomine, Kuster v. Yeoman, 22 CD 476, 56 Bull 337 (Ed); affirmed, without opinion, sub nomine, Yeoman v. Kuester, 88 OS 592].

72. If the same word is used in different parts of the will with reference to the same subject matter, it will be presumed that it is always used in the same sense, unless the context shows a contrary intention: Sadler v. Sadler, 23 CC(NS) 353, 27 CD 445 [motion to certify record overruled, 13 OLR 420, 60 Bull 432].

73. Precedents are of little value in the construction of a will: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

74. Rules of construction are of value only for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the testator: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

75. Technical words which are employed in a will, will not be given their technical sense, if the context shows that they were used with a different meaning: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370.

76. A will which states that testator is not indebted to any of his children, and if any claim by them is made and reduced to judgment, such shall be deducted from the share given in the will, is binding upon the children: Sheets v. Hunter, 37 Bull 283; sub nomine, Scheets v. Hunter, 56 OS 761, 49 NE 1116.

Surrounding circumstances

81. Terms of wills and circumstances surrounding testators are so unlike that the decision of one case is not apt to aid in the determination of subsequent cases: Cassidy v. Hynton, 44 OS 530, 9 NE 129.

82. Circumstances existing when the will was made may be considered in ascertaining the intention of testator: Stark v. McEwen, 15 App 188 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 392]; Jewett v. Jewett, 21 CC 278, 12 CD 131 [affirmed, without opinion, 67 OS 541].

83. Language of will must be construed in light of circumstances under which testator used it: Wagner v. Schrembs, 44 App 44, 184 NE 292.

84. Testatrix' intention is of paramount importance, but it must be determined from language of will and applied to facts existing at time will was written, or possibly at testatrix' death: Nelson v. Minton, 46 App 39, 187 NE 576, 38 OLR 287.

85. In determining the testatrix' intention, conditions surrounding testatrix at the time of the execution of the will, as well as the phrasing of the will itself, may be considered: Allen v. Bellefontaine, 47 App 359, 191 NE 896, 40 OLR 320.

86. Former GC § 10579 (see now RC § 2107.50), provides that after-acquired real estate, as well as personal property, shall pass under the will "if such shall clearly and manifestly appear by the will to have been the intention of the testator." While this intention must "appear by the will," still testator's circumstances and surroundings may be considered, but they must be the circumstances surrounding her at the date of the will, and not long afterward: Newton v. McKinstry, 16 CC(NS) 219, 28 CD 536.

87. A gift over to two sisters of a life tenant, not naming them, will be construed as a gift to the three sisters who were living when the will was made: Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129, 29 OD 174 [appealed to court of appeals another ground; judgment of court of appeals reversed, Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315].

Will and codicil

92. In construing a will with codicils, the whole is to be taken as parts of one instrument. If both are signed and attested at same time, the codicil may be considered as part of the original will: Negley v. Gard, 20 O 310.

93. A will which devises realty in fee by clear and unequivocal language cannot be cut down by a codicil thereto in language not equally clear and certain: Clark v. Clark, 13 App 164, 31 OCA 472.

94. A will provided, "The remainder of my estate, real and personal, shall be divided equally between my children or their heirs share and share alike." A codicil provided "The sum of $88 lawful money of the U. S. bearing interest at six per cent from the first day of July, 1895, till paid shall be paid to my daughter Carolina White, her heirs or assigns, out from the share of the inheritance of my son, Henry White, deceased. The residue of said share shall be the only bequest to the heirs or assigns of said Henry White." It was held that under the terms and provisions of the will and codicil, the widow of Henry White is entitled to receive the share which would have gone to her husband if he had survived the testator, less the sum of eighty-eight dollars and interest thereon as provided in the codicil: White v. White, 19 CC(NS) 200, 26 CD 239 [affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 589].

95. A will and codicil must be construed together as though they were parts of the same instrument: Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473]; Sadler v. Sadler, 23 CC(NS) 353, 27 CD 445 [motion to certify record overruled, 13 OLR 420, 60 Bull 432; and citing Collier v. Collier, 3 OS 369].

96. In Ohio a will and a codicil are to be regarded as different parts of the same instrument; and a codicil may operate as a republication of a defectively executed will: Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion to certify record overruled, 61 Bull 152].

Inconsistencies

101. Where one devise is as specific as the other, if they are repugnant, the latter must prevail: Young v. McIntire, 3 O 498.

102. When an instrument is open to two constructions, the one consistent and the other repugnant to the law, or the one will give effect to the whole instrument and the other will destroy a part, the former must always be adopted: Pruden v. Pruden, 14 OS 251; Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128.

103. The rule which destroys a remainder in personal property, when an absolute power of disposition is given to the first taker, does not apply in any case where a total repugnancy between the remainder and prior interest does not exist: Pruden v. Pruden, 14 OS 251.

104. But a power of disposition reserved to the first taker, in favor of particular objects, or for the accomplishment of particular purposes, does not create such repugnancy, although such objects or purpose may call for an appropriation of the whole property, and a gift of what may remain unappropriated is valid and legal: Pruden v. Pruden, 14 OS 251.

105. To justify the rejection of a word, the repugnancy must arise on the face of the will: Davis v. Boggs, 20 OS 550.

106. Where property is devised by two descriptions, either of which is sufficient in form, but it is shown that one of them is erroneous and the other correct, the former should be rejected, and the property will pass by the latter description, according to the maxim, falsa demonstratio non nocet: Merrick v. Merrick, 37 OS 126.

107. Conflicting provisions of a will must be reconciled if possible, so as to conform to the manifest general intent: Foster v. Clifford, 87 OS 294, 101 NE 265, AnnCas 1915B, 65 [reversing Clifford v. Foster, 14 CC(NS) 391, 23 CD 429; which affirmed 10 NP (NS) 446]; Heath v. Borst, 13 App 115, 32 OCA 377.

108. Ambiguous language in a will should be construed as referring to the reason for making a will, rather than as a condition precedent to its taking effect: McMerriman v. Schiel, 108 OS 334, 140 NE 600.

109. Of two equally probable constructions, that is to be preferred which will give effect to the whole instrument: Tax Commission v. Oswald, 109 OS 36, 141 NE 67.

110. Under a will by which testator devises to his wife all his property to have and to hold "so long as she continue my widow and until my youngest child shall be of age," and testator further provides "When the youngest child arrives at full age or in case my wife should again marry" his property is to be divided between his wife and children according to the law for the distribution of estates where no wills have been made, it is held that the first clause gives a life estate to the widow if she does not marry; and in order to reconcile the second clause with the first it is said that the word "and" will be substituted for "or." Accordingly partition cannot be had during the life of the widow, even after the youngest child has come of age: Hammel v. Gould, 3 App 227, 20 CC(NS) 468, 27 CD 70.

111. Where an estate in fee simple is devised in clear and unequivocal terms, such estate will not be cut down or limited by a subsequent clause less conclusive: Persinger v. Britton, 10 App 164, 29 OCA 316.

112. Conflicting provisions in a will should be reconciled so as to conform to the manifest general intent, and it is only in cases where such provisions are wholly and absolutely repugnant that either of them should be rejected: Heath v. Borst, 13 App 115, 32 OCA 377.

113. A fee simple estate devised by a will in clear and positive language will not be cut down by a later provision in the will which is ambiguous: Stark v. McEwen, 15 App 188 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 392].

114. The word "no" may be rejected as an evident error in a clause which provides that if testator's wife "should have no child or children by me living then and in that case if such farm was not sold by my said wife they shall each inherit said farm equally, share and share alike": McMillan v. McMillan, 12 NP(NS) 593, 23 OD 69 [affirmed by the circuit court, without opinion].

115. Where a provision in a will is equivocal or of doubtful or uncertain meaning, the terms of the residuary clause will be so construed as to prevent intestacy: Robinson v. Robinson, 13 NP(NS) 613, 30 OD 666.

116. If a clause in a will is susceptible of two constructions, one of which is in harmony with the remaining provisions of the will and the other of which is at variance with them, the court will assume that the correct construction is the one which will harmonize this one with the rest of the will: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

117. For a case construing apparently conflicting testamentary provisions, see Brown v. Brown, 22 NP (NS) 410, 31 OD 407.

Presumption against intestacy

122. The rule that a testator will not be presumed to have died intestate as to any part of his estate to which his intention seems to have been directed, applies only to the construction of a will the language of which is equivocal: Gilpin v. Williams, 17 OS 397 [for later opinion in this case, see 25 OS 283].

123. A will must be read as a whole and effect given to all its provisions, in order rightly to understand either or any of them, and the testator will not be presumed to have intended to leave any of his estate undisposed of: Davis v. Corwine, 25 OS 675; Huffman v. Berry, 15 App 372.

124. In construing a will it will be presumed that the testator was acquainted with the statutes of descent and distribution which would control in case of intestacy: Foster v. Clifford, 87 OS 294, 101 NE 269, AnnCas 1915B, 65 [reversing Clifford v. Foster, 14 CC(NS) 391, 23 CD 429; which affirmed 10 NP (NS) 446].

125. Where the language in a will is equally susceptible of two different constructions, one of which will defeat and the other sustain its provisions, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the construction which will give effect to the will rather than the one which will defeat it: McMerriman v. Schiel, 108 OS 334, 140 NE 600.

126. The relic of a deceased husband or wife, who leaves a will bequeathing a life estate only, permitting the fee to go where the statute sends it, dies intestate as to the real estate inherited from such deceased husband or wife, and in consequence the title to such real estate passes under the provisions of former GC § 8577 (see now RC §§ 2105.01, 2105.10) and not under GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06): Goff v. Moore, 3 App 170, 20 CC(NS) 224, 26 CD 587 [for opinion below, see Goff v. Moore, 11 NP (NS) 543, 24 OD 552].

127. It is well-settled rule of law that where a person dies testate he is presumed to have intended to dispose of his whole estate unless the contrary clearly appears from the will: Punch v. Clayton, 10 App 145.

128. Courts will construe will to avoid intestacy, if possible, but cannot prevent a lapse, where words constituting testate disposition are lacking: Nelson v. Minton, 46 App 39, 187 NE 576, 38 OLR 287.

Construction as to interests of heirs

134. A will will be given that construction which is most favorable to the heir at law: Bane v. Wick, 19 O 328; see also Smith v. Berry, 8 O 365, and Reynolds v. Shirley, 7 O (pt.2) 39.

135. Negative words cannot disinherit an heir: Crane v. Doty, 1 OS 279; Mathews v. Krisher, 59 OS 562, 53 NE 52; Leopold v. Weaver, 9 App 379, 29 OCA 567 [motion to certify record overruled, Weaver v. Leopold, 16 OLR 465, 64 Bull 40].

136. A fee simple can be cut down only by language as clear and decisive as that by which it was given in the first instance: Parker v. Parker, 13 OS 95; Collins v. Collins, 40 OS 353; Borgmann v. Borg- mann, 16 App 292 [motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 367].

137. A fee simple is not cut down by the power of an executor to sell: Hoyt v. Day, 32 OS 101; Borgmann v. Borgmann, 16 App 292 [motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 367].

138. The fact that a devisee under a will is limited to a life estate does not exclude him, as heir, from any further interest which might come by reason of intestacy: Chaffin v. Dixon, 13 App 1, 31 OCA 97, 417 [motion to certify record overruled, Dixon v. Chaffin, 18 OLR 44, 65 Bull 217].

139. The will of Jacob Henry White, after providing for the payment of his just debts and funeral expenses and one dollar to each of his three children, willed his property as follows: "Third. All the rest of my property and estate I give and devise and bequeath to my beloved wife, Frances S. White, giving her full right and power to adjust and settle all claims due me at my death. Fourth. At the death of my said wife, Frances S. White, I will that all property and estate remaining after settling all claims due, such as expenses of last sickness and funeral expenses, and all that remains of my estate, to be divided equally, between my son, William White, Dora Stock, and the heirs of my son John White. That is to say, one-third of the remaining parts of my estate to William White, and one-third part of my estate to Dora Stock, and one-third part of my estate to the children of my son John White." It was held that the widow took a life estate in the fund left by her husband, from which should be paid the expenses of her last sickness and funeral expenses and the remainder to those named in her husband's will: White v. Freeman, 18 CC(NS) 559, 33 CD 212.

140. It is a generally accepted rule that courts favor an equal distribution of an estate between children of the same blood as the parent from whom the estate descended: Buehler v. Buehler, 2 NP(NS) 430, 14 OD 693.

141. In case of a doubtful construction of a will, it may be presumed that testator intended to treat all members of a class with equality: Gillis v. Long, 8 NP(NS) 1, 19 OD 253.

Description of property

146. If two gifts to the same person are connected by such words as "and also," a limitation in the second gift will be construed as applying to the first gift: Noble v. Ayers, 61 OS 491, 56 NE 199; Kellogg v. Moses, 32 OCA 49, 35 CD 685.

147. In the construction of wills a presumption prevails, especially in items not residuary, that where a more general description is coupled with an enumeration of things, the description shall cover only things ejusdem generis. This, however, is only a rule of presumption and must yield to the testator's intent as gathered from the whole instrument, but where the presumption is favored and supported by the evident intention of the testator as developed from a consideration of all the parts of the instrument, then such rule of presumption should be applied to the matter in question: Creamer v. Harris, 90 OS 160, 106 NE 967, LRA 1915C, 653, AnnCas 1916C, 1137.

148. One may leave a will and yet die intestate as to part of his property: Holmden v. Craig, 16 CC(NS) 157, 31 CD 461 [affirmed, without opinion, 83 OS 483].

—Specific illustrations

153. Where devise was of crops growing and matured at time of death, corn in crib passed to executors: Edwards v. Rainer, 17 OS 597.

154. A devise to A of a certain described tract, and also" another tract "for life," gives a life estate only in each tract: Noble v. Ayers, 61 OS 491, 56 NE 199.

155. If a testator devises and bequeaths to his widow that part of his estate which is "secured" to her by the laws of Ohio, "in the cases where wives survive husbands who died intestate," this does not mean the part which she would receive if he died intestate, but the part of which he cannot deprive her by his will: Foster v. Clifford, 87 OS 294, 101 NE 269, AnnCas 1915B, 65 [reversing Clifford v. Foster, 14 CC(NS) 391, 23 CD 429; which affirmed 10 NP(NS) 446].

157. An item of a will providing "I give to my sister . . . the full one-third of my estate," means a full one-third of the estate in fee subject only to a proportionate amount of the debts of the estate and costs of administration, and not one-third of the remainder of the estate after paying bequests and setting aside trust funds provided for in previous items of the will: Stark v. McEwen, 15 App 188 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 392].

158. The term "sinking fund" may be used with reference to accumulations of the principal of an estate to be derived from the sale of property for the purpose of reinvestment, and it is not necessarily limited to its ordinary meaning of accumulations of income to be used in the discharge of indebtedness: Babcock v. Monypeny, 18 CC(NS) 53, 24 CD 434 [affirmed, without opinion, 86 OS 365].

159. A bequest of "all my personal property of every kind whatsoever, except what is hereinafter by this will disposed of to other parties," does not carry with it money in the bank bequeathed by a subsequent clause of the will to two churches, which by reason of the statute against bequests within a year of testator's death, cannot take thereunder: Andrew v. Kling, 18 CC(NS) 134, 32 CD 639.

160. Under a will bequeathing to "my youngest son, A, the farm that I now live on, to have and hold the same during life, then to go to his heirs," a grantee of one of the heirs took no interest in the land capable of being asserted, where the death of his grantor occurred before the estate took effect: Lisle v. Miller, 21 CC(NS) 317, 25 CD 127.

161. A bequest by a wife of all her property both real and personal to her husband, includes a policy of insurance on the life of her husband (who was still living), made payable to her, her executors, administrators and assigns: Schlachter v. Teeppen, 24 CC(NS) 30, 29 CD 650 [affirming Teeppen v. Schlachter, 18 NP(NS) 33].

162. A devise of land which fixes the area and two of the sides and which provides that it shall have an outlet on a given road and that it should be laid out in the best shape possible is sufficiently certain: Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129, 29 OD 174 [appealed to court of appeals; judgment of court of appeals reversed, Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315].

164. A provision in a codicil that a devisee is to furnish testator's daughter A "with a comfortable home" means that A is to occupy a dwelling together with such devisee, and is to be furnished with the ordinary necessities and comforts of life, such as the devisee enjoys: Shocknessy v. Wright, 24 OD(NP) 574.

—After-acquired realty

See also case notes under RC § 2107.50.

169. A will containing the general residuary clause, "the balance and remainder of my property of every kind and description I give and bequeath, etc.," covers after-acquired real estate: Strock v. Strock, 6 App 275, 26 CC(NS) 561, 28 CD 145.

170. A disposition by will of "all the rest and residue of my estate and property," makes it "clear and manifest" that the testator intended that any real estate she might acquire after making the will should pass under it: Newton v. McKinstry, 16 CC(NS) 219, 28 CD 536.

Description of beneficiaries—heirs

176. "Heirs" construed "children": Parish v. Ferris, 6 OS 563; Stevenson v. Evans, 10 OS 307; Jones v. Lloyd, 33 OS 572; Weston v. Weston, 38 OS 473; Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 OS 238, 50 NE 721; Cultice v. Mills, 97 OS 112, 119 NE 200 [affirming court of appeals, which, on appeal, reached same conclusion as Mills v. Mills, 20 NP(NS) 501, 28 OD 382]; Denley v. Wheeler, 24 NP(NS) 357.

177. "Legitimate heirs" construed to mean legitimate issue living at the time of the death of the testator: Parish v. Ferris, 6 OS 563 [followed and approved, Niles v. Gray, 12 OS 320].

178. A provision that specific real property be sold, and the proceeds divided equally between testator's brothers and sisters and their heirs, "the children of any that may be dead to have the shares of their deceased parents," was held to mean that the proceeds of the sale should be divided equally between the brothers and sisters living and the issue of those dead. Heirs not used in a technical sense: Richey v. Johnson, 30 OS 288; see also Moree v. Andrews, 78 OS 388, 85 NE 1129.

179. A devise of the whole estate to an only child, but if such child died without issue surviving her, then to testator's heirs at law, was held to devolve the estate, upon the death of the child, upon the widow: Weston v. Weston, 38 OS 473.

180. For construction of a will providing that the proceeds of certain property should be "divided equally, share and share alike, between my aforesaid heirs," see Huston v. Crook, 38 OS 328.

181. "Heirs" construed, from testator's language in the will, to mean each relative to whom he had given a legacy: McKelvey v. McKelvey, 43 OS 213, 1 NE 594.

182. A bequest of the residuary estate, to be divided among testator's lawful heirs, share and share alike, must be divided among all heirs regardless of the degree of their relationship to the testator. They take per capita and not per stirpes: Mooney v. Purpees, 70 OS 57, 70 NE 894.

183. The rule that in the interpretation of a will the testator must be presumed to have meant what he said requires that a devise of a remainder "to the heirs at law" of a beneficiary for life be regarded as including an adopted child of the beneficiary, although there was not, when the will was executed or when testator died, any statute for the adoption of children: Smith v. Hunter, 86 OS 106, 99 NE 91.

184. In a will which devised one-half of an estate to the lawful heirs of the testator and one-half to the lawful heirs of his wife, after the death of his only son without issue, and which contained specific provisions as to the disposition of the shares of his sister (if she should survive the testator) and of the sister and brother of his wife; the persons included in the designation "lawful heirs" to whom "my estate shall go," are to be ascertained as of the date of the death of the testator or his wife respectively per stirpes, the representatives of deceased brothers and sisters to take the share that would have gone to their ancestor if living, except where the will itself otherwise provides: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming on rehearing Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43; which was modified in memorandum opinion, Wilberding v.

Miller, 88 OS 609; and was on appeal from Miller v. Miller, 13 NP(NS) 1].

185. Where a testator devises real estate to a son during his natural life and to his heirs, and in other provisions of the will the word "heirs" is used by the testator in the sense of "children," the word "heirs" in the devise to the son should be held to mean "children," and not to have been used in its technical sense to designate anyone capable of inheriting: Cultice v. Mills, 97 OS 112, 119 NE 200 [affirming Mills v. Mills, which, on appeal, reached same conclusion as 20 NP(NS) 501, 28 OD 382].

186. The phrase "nearest of kin," when employed in a last will and testament, in the absence of language in the will manifesting a different intention, is to be so construed as to embrace within its meaning such as would inherit under the statutes of descent and distribution, and in the order and proportion therein provided: Godfrey v. Eppele, 100 OS 447, 128 NE 886, 11 ALR 317.

187. Where an absolute estate in land has been conveyed to A and her "heirs," it cannot be reduced to a life estate by a construction of a subsequent clause which would make the word "heirs" read "children," unless the clause placing a limitation on the estate is as clear and unequivocal as the clause making the grant of a fee simple title: Zackman v. Dick, 1 App 36, 15 CC(NS) 593, 24 CD 450.

188. Under a gift to testator's children, subject to the life estate of testator's wife, the heirs take by descent and not by devise: Woodruff v. Woodruff, 3 CC(NS) 616, 13 CD 408 [reversing Woodruff v. Snowden, 7 NP 520, 10 OD 123].

189. The word "heirs" where used by a testator having living children will be regarded as synonymous with children: Kuester v. Yeoman, 14 CC(NS) 264 [sub nomine, Kuster v. Yeoman, 22 CD 476, 56 Bull 337 (Ed); affirmed, without opinion, sub nomine, Yeoman v. Kuester, 88 OS 592].

190. A testator devised the residue of his estate, "to the surviving children (or their heirs) of my sister Elizabeth, and my sister Mary, and my brother Arthur, share and share alike." It was held that, there being nineteen living children of Elizabeth, Mary and Arthur surviving at testator's death, and a grandchild of Elizabeth, child of her son who died before testator, that the residue of testator's estate should be divided into twenty equal parts and one part distributed to each of the children of Elizabeth, Mary and Arthur and one part to the grandchild of Elizabeth: Teagle v. Teagle, 17 CC(NS) 538, 32 CD 276.

191. In a devise to my son A "during his natural lifetime only, and at his death to the heirs of his body in fee simple," the words "in fee simple" are inconsistent with the preceding limitation "to the heirs of his body" and have the effect of enlarging the grant to one of fee simple in the heirs of the body of A. The words "heirs of the body" used in such devise are words of purchase and a mere designatio personarum, and are not words of limitation. They, accordingly, take by purchase; and the estate in remainder becomes operative after the death of A, and when his heirs are ascertainable: McCrea v. McCrea, 5 App 351, 22 CC(NS) 433, 29 CD 623.

192. The word "heir" is popularly used of one to whom property goes either by descent or by will: Hessenmueller v. Sirilo, 23 CC(NS) 313, 34 CD 256.

193. The word "heirs" means, in its technical sense, the ones upon whom the law casts the estate, at common law, immediately upon the death of the ancestor; and in a will such technical meaning is to be regarded as that intended by the testator, unless the context shows a contrary meaning: Barlow v. Otsott, 25 CC

(NS) 347, 35 CD 267.

194. The fact that the word "heirs" is used with reference to one who has left children, is not of itself sufficient to show that the word "heirs" is used to mean children: Barlow v. Otsott, 25 CC(NS) 347, 35 CD 267.

195. In a provision in a will, "It is my request that the balance of my estate be equally divided between my living heirs and the living heirs of my wife, A, share and share alike," the words "living heirs" refer to the persons to whom the property would have descended had the testator died intestate; not to persons who might be heirs if no nearer heirs were shown to exist. The words "share and share alike" show how the gift is to be divided; but do not enlarge the class "heirs": Stearns v. Stearns, 26 CC(NS) 158, 30 CD 351.

196. Under a bequest of one-third of my estate "to the heirs at law of my deceased brother B. W.," the widow of said deceased brother shares as an heir in all personality, including proceeds of property reduced to cash by direction of the testator: Wilson v. Allaman, 27 OCA 282, 29 CD 147 [affirming 20 NP (NS) 129].

197. A widow is not an heir per stirpes of her deceased husband: Robbins v. Pigg, 29 OCA 153, 35 CD 682 [motion to certify record overruled, Pigg v. Robbins, 16 OLR 80, 63 Bull 196].

198. The words "pro rata" and "heirs" defined under the will: Corbley v. Patterson, 3 NP 315, 3 OD 702.

199. A devise to "my legal heirs," followed by the statement that by legal heirs the testatrix meant her brothers and sisters, will be deemed to include a half-sister and a stepbrother, where it appears that she had but one full sister and no brother, but her half-sister and her stepbrother had always been called "sister" and "brother" by her: Griffitt v. Wetzel, 17 NP(NS) 49, 25 OD 257.

200. The word "heirs" in a will is prima facie used in its technical sense: Denley v. Wheeler, 24 NP (NS) 357.

—Children

205. A devise making "my two granddaughters (naming them) each heirs with my own children," is dispositive and evidences an intention on the part of the testatrix in this case to devise her property in equal shares to such grandchildren and her own children: Moon v. Stewart, 87 OS 349, 101 NE 344, 45 LRA(NS) 48, AnnCas 1914A, 104 [affirming Moon v. Harness, 15 CC(NS) 139, 23 CD 337].

206. Where a testator throughout his will has used the words "issue," "children" and "heirs" technically, accurately and understandingly, and in such use has recognized the distinction between the issue and heirs, a bequest to a trustee in trust for the period of ten years for the use and benefit of the children of testator, naming them, with a direction "that my trustees shall pay the same one-eighth part thereof to my son F. A. and his heirs," and a similar provision as to each of the other children, will be construed as a gift to F. A., and the other children of testator absolute, subject only to the provisions of the trust, and the words "and his heirs" will be construed as words descriptive of the estate and not as designating another class of beneficiaries: Union Sav. Bank & Co. v. Alter, 103 OS 188, 132 NE 834.

207. The term "all my sisters, nieces, nephews and my brother Frank," as used in a will, refers to the persons previously mentioned in said will as beneficiaries, and these beneficiaries having now all died the time for distribution has arrived, and the trustees under the will should now proceed to divide the property among the "then surviving children of my aforesaid nephews, nieces and of my brother Frank": Barbour v. Gallagher, 2 App 205, 15 CC(NS) 73, 23 CD 607 [affirmed, without opinion, Goodloe v. Barbour, 87 OS 510].

208. A gift to "the surviving children of my sister A, and my sister B, and my brother C, share and share alike" is a gift to the children of A, the children of B, and the children of C: Teagle v. Teagle, 17 CC(NS) 538, 32 CD 276.

209. Under a bequest of "the balance" of testator's estate to be "divided among the children living of Isaac and Jacob Falor, and Alice and Henry Reaves, of Swan, Iowa, share and share alike, providing they are living at my death," Alice and Henry Reaves share and share alike with the children living of Isaac and Jacob Falor: Falor v. Slusser, 18 CC(NS) 309, 29 CD 513.

210. In a devise to A and his children, "children" is a word of purchase: Clark v. Clark, 13 App 164, 31 OCA 472.

211. The term "children" is usually a word of purchase and not of limitation. But when used as synonymous with heirs, it is a word of limitation: Moreshead v. Rodetzky, 5 NP 256, 7 OD 225.

212. A devise to Mr. and Mrs. A and children, includes children of Mrs. A by her former marriage if Mrs. A is a sister of testator, and he knows the facts about her marriage and her children: Hinkson v. Adkins, 25 NP(NS) 16.

213. A gift to Mr. and Mrs. A and children does not include a child born to Mr. and Mrs. A after testator's death: Hinkson v. Adkins, 25 NP(NS) 16.

Description of estate given—words necessary to pass fee

218. A devise to A, coupled with a bequest to B, of a sum of money, to be invested in land by A for B's benefit, upon B's attaining a certain age, many years elapsing between the time of the devise and the date it was to be executed, confers a title in fee to A, and reposes in him a special trust the abuse of which will not affect the title of his vendees: Coonrod v. Coonrod, 6 O 114.

219. A devise of real estate to wife, to raise young children, with a time limitation of continuing widowhood, and upon her ceasing to be a widow, not to be disposed of until majority of youngest child, gives to the devisees a conditional freehold for the widow's life, and a contingent remainder to all the younger children, notwithstanding the remarriage of the widow: Davison v. Wolf, 9 O 74; Howe v. Fuller, 19 O 51, decided on same principle.

220. A devise of all of testator's estate to wife, for support of herself and family, and after her death to be divided by the executors among testator's children, with a direction to executors to lease the real estate and pay net proceeds to the wife, conveys to the executors more than a naked power; it gives them the title: Boyd v. Talbert, 12 O 212.

221. Devise to A and his heirs, in trust for B for life, and to such uses as she shall appoint, and to the use of her heirs, creates in equity, a fee simple in B: Armstrong v. Zane's Heirs, 12 O 287.

222. A devise in fee to A with a gift over if he dies "without issue," etc., "without children" means, prima facie, without issue or children living at A's death: Parish v. Ferris, 6 OS 563 [reversing 3 DecRep 353, 2 AmLReg 101]; Niles v. Gray, 12 OS 320; Taylor v. Foster, 17 OS 166; Piatt v. Sinton, 37 OS 353 [affirming Piatt v. Sinton, 5 DecRep 547, 6 AmLRec 483, 7 DecRep 381, 2 Bull 273]; Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 OS 238, 50 NE 721; Anderson v. United Realty

Co., 79 OS 23, 86 NE 644, 51 LRA(NS) 477 [affirming 9 CC(NS) 473, 19 CD 267, and affirmed, 222 US 164].

223. Personal property may be bequeathed with a gift over on the event of the death of the first legatee without issue living at the time of his death: Martin v. Lapham, 38 OS 538; Briggs v. Hopkins, 103 OS 321, 132 NE 843.

224. Under a devise to A and B, and on the death of either, to the survivor, and on the death of both without issue to C, the devise passes to B on A's death with issue, and on B's death without issue it passes to A's issue: Shaw v. Hoard, 18 OS 227.

225. A devise for life, coupled with the power to sell and convey, entitles the devisee to convey in fee, and the deed is a sufficient execution of the power: Bishop v. Remple, 11 OS 277.

226. "I give and bequeath to my daughter the remaining part of my real property," sufficient to create a fee: Niles v. Gray, 12 OS 320.

227. "To my wife, M, with power to distribute among my children; to divest on her marriage." M does not take a fee: Stableton v. Ellison, 21 OS 527; Huston v. Craighead, 23 OS 198.

228. A devise to a widow for her natural life, and giving her the management and power to dispose of the estate, and after her death, to the testator's children. Held: That the will did not give an absolute right to the personal property, nor a fee simple in his real estate, but gave a life estate, and she could not give the property to some of her children: Huston v. Craighead, 23 OS 198.

229. Where a devise was to A, provided he would take upon himself the support of L, which A did, it was held that a transfer of the estate by A to W was good, and that W held it absolutely, and could not be charged with the support of L: Huey v. Thomas, 23 OS 645.

230. Testator devised certain real estate to his granddaughter, S, and her issue, with a devise over, if S died before the age of twenty-one, leaving no issue then living, to two daughters of testator for life, and then to their issue, respectively. S died after twenty-one but had no issue. Held: "Issue," as used in connection with the devise to S, was a word of limitation and not of purchase, and S took an estate in fee tail. Also, as S's death did not occur until after she became twenty-one, the devise over to the daughters never took effect: Harkness v. Corning, 24 OS 416.

231. Where a testator made a devise to his son, John, "through his natural life and then to his heirs," and in another part of the will used the word "heirs" in the sense of "children." Held: That the son took a life estate only, with remainder to his children or issue, and not to his heirs generally, and that upon his death, without issue, the devise in remainder failed, and the estate reverted to the heirs of the testator: Bunnell v. Evans, 26 OS 409.

232. A devise to H for life, remainder to her children, remainder over to her brothers and sisters in default of issue surviving her or if such issue should die under twenty-one without issue, does not vest an estate in fee while H is living, where all her children are over twenty-one and have no issue: Bates v. Zinsmeister, 26 OS 461.

233. A devise of one-half of tract of land to testator's wife, and the other half to various persons, specifying the share of each, with power given to executor to sell and convey to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, if necessary for purpose of distribution among the devisees, conveys a fee to devisees by name in the shares specified, and is not a bequest of the proceeds of the land: Hoyt v. Day, 32 OS 101.

234. A devise of money for life, to be left on deposit at interest, the interest to be drawn and used by devisee, carries an absolute right to the interest: Gillen v. Kimball, 34 OS 352.

235. A devise of the "profits and benefits" of land does not convey a fee. Under the direction to sell in this case, the land was regarded for distribution as personality: Collier v. Grimesey, 36 OS 17.

236. Will construed to mean that the devisees took the estates as tenants in common: Corwine v. Mace, 36 OS 125.

237. Where there was a devise of a certain farm to testator's two sons, upon condition "that they shall not be allowed to sell and dispose of said farm until the expiration of ten years from the time my son, Charles, arrives at full age, except to one another, nor shall they mortgage or incur the same," was held to give the devisees a vested estate in fee simple. The restraint attempted to be imposed was against public policy: Anderson v. Cary, 36 OS 506.

238. A devise of all one's property, of every description, whether real, personal, or mixed, after paying all just debts, is a devise of the fee, without the aid of a statute declaring such to be the effect of the devise: Piatt v. Sinton, 37 OS 353.

239. A devise to two children with provision that in case either die without heirs capable of inheriting, its share should go to the survivor, vests an estate in fee in each, contingent upon death without children. And if one child does so die without children, the husband of that child will not take in preference to the surviving child: Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 OS 238, 50 NE 721.

240. Under a will which provides, "I give, devise and bequeath to my beloved wife, A B, so long as she remains my widow, my entire property both real and personal, wherever it may be situated. I do further devise to my said wife, in case she may desire so to do, the power to sell any of my real estate and deed or deeds to the purchaser thereof execute and deliver and thereby convey any or all of my real estate in fee simple to the purchaser or purchasers thereof and to their heirs and assigns forever," the widow takes only an estate for life, subject to be terminated on remarriage; and if she did not remarry, the real estate so devised to her passes on her death to the next of kin of the testator as an estate of remainder in fee simple: Fetter v. Rettig, 98 OS 428, 121 NE 696.

241. A devise to testator's wife of "all the proceeds of his real estate," not the real estate itself, but the proceeds thereof, is equivalent to a devise of the corpus of the real estate itself: Isherwood v. Isherwood, 16 CC 279, 8 CD 409 [on appeal from In re Isherwood, 7 NP 332, 5 OD 143; and affirmed, without report, Isherwood v. Isherwood, 57 OS 660, 38 Bull 280].

242. Where testator by will devises to his children specified realty in absolute language without words of limitation, and later in the same item attempts to limit or qualify the estate by providing "all of which real estate I give and bequeath unto the said Jane and Harvey unto them and their children, which real estate I design for their use, not to be disposed of by sale, neither by them nor their immediate children; in case either of the above children should die then the other to possess the whole," there arises a repugnancy, the language forbidding alienation is void, such qualifying provision is in the nature of a precatory declaration, and the devisees take a fee simple estate: Heath v. Borst, 13 App 115, 32 OCA 377.

243. Under a will devising realty to a wife "and to her children," each takes an equal undivided portion as tenant in common. The addition of the word "to"

after the word "and" is superfluous: Clark v. Clark, 13 App 164, 31 OCA 472.

244. The phrase "to our son David and his heirs of nearest kin," used in a will with nothing else manifesting a different intention, devises an estate in fee tail in the son David: Edwards v. Edwards, 14 App 49, 31 OCA 561 [explaining Augsberian Confession v. Sheffield, 90 OS 467].

245. A devise to testatrix's husband of specific real property "out of which no debt, legacy or other charge shall be paid or taken," and the rest of testatrix's real property to have and to hold during the term of his natural life, conveys an estate in fee simple in the property first mentioned, and a life estate in the balance: Silk v. Merry, 3 CC(NS) 91, 13 CD 218.

246. Words of inheritance are not necessary to transmit real property by will under former GC § 10580 (see now RC § 2107.51). The omission of words of limitation in a devise of land will not defeat the fee therein in the devisees named: Halley v. Hengstler, 3 CC(NS) 161, 13 CD 504 [affirmed, without report, 70 OS 452].

247. A widow who has received real estate under her husband's will "to be to her and to her disposal during her life," may dispose of the same by her will: McRoberts v. Barnard, 18 CC(NS) 225, 32 CD 697 [affirmed, without opinion, 81 OS 560].

248. A will devising real estate to one person generally and with absolute power of disposal, invests that person with a fee simple estate, notwithstanding the fact that the will further provides that whatever may be left of such real estate upon the death of such devisee shall pass to someone else: Tracy v. Blee, 22 CC(NS) 33, 28 CD 461.

249. A devise of fifty acres of land to the testator's widow to have and to hold for her benefit and support, gives the widow a fee: Chase v. Isherwood, 1 NP 31, 5 OD 1.

250. A bequest in trust for daughters to be "set off" to them on arrival at age, but still to be held in trust after coming of age, and said partition, the rents and profits only to be paid to them during life with the fee simple to their "heirs," gives them a life estate only: Kiersted v. Smith, 8 NP 378, 10 OD 279.

251. A devise to testator's daughter, A, and the heirs of her body, devises a fee tail. The children of such daughter, during the life of their mother, have no interest in such property which they can release or quitclaim by deeds given upon a nominal consideration and purporting to convey "all my right, title, interest and estate in and to the foregoing described real estate, whether vested or contingent, which I now have or may hereafter have or derive from the will of my late grandfather, B, giving and bequeathing said real estate to my mother A, and the heirs of her body": Carter v. Grossnickle, 11 NP(NS) 465, 22 OD 680 [affirmed, without opinion, Grossnickle v. Carter, 88 OS 577].

252. A devise of real estate in Ohio to A, "for the term of her natural life, and at her decease to go to the heirs of her body in fee," made by a resident of Ohio, after 1840 does not create an estate tail in A, but vests in A an estate for life, with remainder to the issue of her body. The rule in Shelley's case cannot be applied to declare such a devise an estate tail: Williams v. Haller, 13 NP(NS) 329.

253. Where a devise of land in fee simple has been created in clear and unmistakable terms, it cannot be reduced to one in tail by subsequent language which goes no further than to create a doubt as to the estate intended: Kilgour v. Hey, 19 NP(NS) 81.

254. In a will providing, "I give, devise and bequeath to my wife all my personal property and real estate and I give the full control of all my property as above mentioned and shall be in her own name after my death or if she wishes to do so and after her death it shall be divided equally among my legal heirs," gives to the wife the fee to the land: Brown v. Hunsicker, 22 NP(NS) 168, 31 OD 24.

255. A bequest "to my legally adopted daughter" of "all my property, real, personal and mixed, the same to be hers in fee simple," is a bequest of a fee simple to all said property, and not of a mere life estate, notwithstanding a different provision is made of said estate in a subsequent item of the will, to become effective in the event of the death of said daughter occurring before that of the testator or in case of failure on her part to claim said estate: Brooks v. Iler, 20 NP(NS) 180, 28 OD 624.

256. Under former GC § 10580 (see now RC § 2107.51), a devise of realty to A for life and remainder in fee simple to B, but if B dies without issue then to the next of kin of testatrix, held to mean if B dies during the lifetime of A, and if B survives A, then B's title becomes absolute in fee simple: Cavanaugh v. Rexer, 23 NP(NS) 60, 31 OD 493 [affirmed by court of appeals; motion to certify record overruled, Rexer v. Cavanaugh, 18 OLR 225, 65 Bull 469].

257. If testator has made a gift of land without specifying the interest conveyed, it will be presumed that testator passes a fee simple, if testator possessed such estate; but the subsequent provisions of such will may reduce the interest of the devisees to a life estate, if the language is positive and clear: In re Youtsey, 15 OLR 125.

258. A devise in absolute terms to A, and in a later clause of the will a limitation over in case of A's death without issue, is not a life estate and remainder, but a fee and executory devise and the first devisee may have partition: Patterson v. Earhart, 29 Bull 313, 11 DecRep 787, 6 OD(NP) 16.

—Vested and contingent interests

263. "To children, provided they reach a legal age," vested right on death of testator subject to be divested: Foster v. Wick, 17 O 250.

264. Where devise is to children, and if they should die before they reach twenty-one, or without lawful issue by marriage, then estate to go to wife; one child arrived at full age but died without issue. Held: The property went to her heirs and not to the widow: Ward's Lessee v. Barrows, 2 OS 241.

265. A gift to one in fee with a gift over in case of death without issue, passes a fee subject to a condition subsequent; and on the happening of such condition, the interest of the owner in fee terminates: Parish v. Ferris, 6 OS 563 [reversing 3 DecRep 353, 3 AmLReg 101]; Niles v. Gray, 12 OS 320; Taylor v. Foster, 17 OS 166; Taylor v. Foster, 22 OS 255; Smith v. Hankins, 27 OS 371 [affirming 13 DecRep 653, 1 CSCR 449]; Piatt v. Sinton, 37 OS 353 [affirming 5 DecRep 547, 6 AmLReg 483, 7 DecRep 381, 2 Bull 273]; Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 OS 238; Grandin v. Millikin, 9 App 372; Walker v. Walker, 20 CC 409, 11 CD 291.

266. A vested estate in fee simple may be created which will be divested in favor of another upon the happening of a condition: Jeffers v. Lampson, 10 OS 101; Collins v. Collins, 40 OS 353; LaRoche v. LaRoche, 10 App 242, 29 OCA 113, 30 CD 519, 63 Bull 285 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 320, 63 Bull 398].

267. After debts to wife, after wife to two sons, and their heirs and assigns forever. Held: After death of testator, the fee was vested, one moiety in each son, subject to be divested if he died during life of mother: Jeffers v. Lampson, 10 OS 101.

268. Where testator declares his "wish and desire" to be that all his real estate be equally divided between his eight children named. Held: The clause expressing the "wish and desire" was dispositive and gave a vested interest to all the children: Brasher v. Marsh, 15 OS 103.

269. Where testator devised certain lands to his daughter for life, with remainder to her children, then unborn, forever, without other disposition of the inheritance, the reversion in fee descended to and vested in the heirs of testator at his death, subject, however, to divest in the event that the devisee for life should die leaving children surviving her: Gilpin v. Williams, 25 OS 283 [for former hearing in this case, see 17 OS 396].

270. Where the will directed executor to sell real estate and pay proceeds to a trustee for the benefit of legatees, the legal title descended to the heirs, subject to the execution of the power of sale, but the right of possession passed to the executors: Elstner v. Fife, 32 OS 358.

271. The law favors vesting of estates, and in construing devises of real estate, the estate will be held to be vested in the devisee at the death of the testator, unless a condition precedent to such vesting is so clearly expressed that the estate cannot be regarded as so vested without directly opposing the terms of the will. Words of seeming condition will, if possible, be held to have the effect of postponing the right of possession only and not the present right of the estate: Linton v. Laycock, 33 OS 128; Alter v. Alter, 31 OCA 113, 35 CD 671 [on appeal from 22 NP(NS) 517, 31 OD 290]; In re Youtsey, 260 Fed 423.

272. A devise to trustees, to pay certain annuities out of the income, and after "final cessation" of said annuities, to distribute the estate in a specified manner, vests no estate in the beneficiaries until the time for distribution and the "final cessation" of annuities, mentioned in the will, takes place either upon the death of all the annuitants or upon the surrender or release of their annuities: Hamilton v. Rodgers, 38 OS 242.

273. Where testatrix devised part of residuary estate to two grandchildren, providing that in case both died without issue, the property coming to them should be given to the other grandchildren of the testatrix, it was held that if both children survived testatrix, their title became absolute, and on their subsequent deaths without issue passed to their legal heirs: Baker v. McGrew, 41 OS 113.

274. Under the will of A a life estate with power to consume was bequeathed to his widow, and at her death "should there be remaining of my estate and property a sum greater than five thousand dollars, I give and bequeath the remainder thereof to my son B." It was held that the son took a vested rather than a contingent remainder, and his daughter must therefore claim as his heir at law and subject to his debts: Tharp v. United States Fidelity & Co., 2 App 28, 21 CC(NS) 321, 25 CD 416.

275. A gift over on the termination of a life estate with a provision that if such remainderman dies before the termination of the life estate, his share is to go to his children, and if he has no children, to a designated beneficiary, passes a vested remainder: McCarthy v. Hansel, 4 App 425, 25 CC(NS) 283, 28 CD 608; LaRoche v. LaRoche, 10 App 242, 29 OCA 113, 30 CD 519, 63 Bull 285 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 320, 63 Bull 398].

276. Where the primary devise in fee simple takes effect upon such devisee arriving at majority, and the secondary contingent estate is to the children of the first devisee upon his death, the latter estate will be limited to the contingency of the death of the first devisee during his minority and before the fee simple devise to him becomes effective: Persinger v. Britton, 10 App 164, 29 OCA 316.

277. Where the vesting of a legacy is not postponed by the will, the death of the legatee, before payment, does not cast the legacy back into the estate, but it becomes payable to the personal representative of the deceased legatee in the manner provided in the will: Phillips v. Cole, 11 App 431, 30 OCA 49.

278. Where testator devises realty to his wife during her lifetime, and upon her death to his children, share and share alike, and the will provides that "if any of my children shall have died leaving children surviving them, then the children of said deceased child shall take the share that the parent would be entitled to if living," the phrase "shall have died" relates to the death of the testator's wife, since the testator in another item of his will, bequeathing personalty, shows his intention by providing, "if any of my children shall have died before my decease." Such will creates in each of testator's children a vested estate in the realty, subject to be divested upon the death of his child prior to that of his widow; and a conveyance by one of testator's children of his interest in the testate property, transfers a defeasible right or title to the property that is divested when such child dies before the termination of the life estate: Hudson v. Kellerman, 12 App 424 [motion to certify record overruled, 18 OLR 24, 65 Bull 185].

279. A devise to A for life with a provision that within five years A shall erect a monument to decedent at a value not less than five hundred dollars out of the income of such property vests a life estate in A, charged with the fund for the building of a monument: Rice v. Rice, 20 CC(NS) 173, 31 CD 269.

280. A testator directed his executors, after the termination of a life estate, to sell certain real estate and divide the proceeds, one-fourth each to four devisees, subject to the conditions and restrictions thereafter mentioned in the will. Another clause in the will provided that if any of the heirs and legatees mentioned in the will should die before distribution of his estate and without leaving children, their share should revert back to the estate and be equally divided amongst the remaining legatees. Another clause provided that the share of certain legatees should be held in trust by his executors with power to invest the same in real estate, of which the legatees were to have the use during their natural lives and at their deaths to pass to their children in such manner as they, by will, or as the law might direct. The executors having sold the real estate at the termination of the life estate, divided the proceeds, and invested the share of two of the devisees jointly in other real estate, and one of the devisees on whose behalf said last named real estate was purchased having died without children but leaving a will by which she attempted to dispose of her interest in said property. It was held that under the third item of the will an absolute estate was granted to each of the devisees named therein subject to be divested as to each by their death, leaving children; therefore, one of them dying without children had a right to dispose of her interest by will: Campbell v. McCue, 21 CC(NS) 67, 33 CD 269 [affirmed, without opinion, 78 OS 427; former judgment adhered to, without opinion, 79 OS 445].

281. Under a gift to A for life and A's issue on his death with a gift over to B in default of such issue, B takes a vested remainder if A is unmarried when such gift takes effect; and the death of B before A does not divest B's interest: Stark v. Marsh, 29 OCA 417, 35 CD 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Little v. Stark, 16 OLR 307, 63 Bull 350].

282. A bequest in the form of a direction to pay or to pay and divide at a future period vests immediately, if the payment be postponed for the convenience of the state, or to let in some other interest: Alter v. Alter, 31 OCA 113, 35 CD 671 [on appeal from 22 NP(NS) 517, 31 OD 290].

283. A gift to testator's children after the death of testator's widow is said to be contingent if the will contains a clause providing that if any of testator's children die before testator's widow, the share of such child should go to the other children, or to the legal representatives of the deceased's children per stirpes: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370.

284. The law favors the vesting of estates at the time of the death of the testator, unless it appears from the terms of the will that the vesting depended upon a condition precedent to its taking effect: Laver v. Kreiter, 19 NP(NS) 566, 27 OD 251 [on appeal, court of appeals reached same conclusion, 7 App 441, 29 OCA 157, 29 CD 554].

285. The law favors the vesting of estates; and unless the intention of testator to postpone the vesting of a devise or a bequest to some future time is clearly indicated in his will, such devise or bequest vests at testator's death: In re Youtsey, 15 OLR 125.

—Estates in futuro—remainders

290. Cross remainders are not raised by a devise "to my four sons, or the survivors of them and their heirs and assigns, to be equally divided when the youngest attains the age of twenty-one years": Lawrence v. McArter, 10 O 37.

291. Where a testator devises real estate to a son during his natural life and to his heirs, and in other provisions of the will the word "heirs" is used by the testator in the sense of "children," the real estate, upon the death of the son without children, does not pass to his widow, but the devise in remainder fails and the real estate will revert to the son's brothers and sisters or their representatives as heirs of the testator: Cultice v. Mills, 97 OS 112, 119 NE 200 [affirming Mills v. Mills, which, on appeal, reached same conclusion as 20 NP(NS) 501, 26 OD 382].

292. A devise to A with full power of sale, and with a gift over of whatever remains at A's death to B, gives to petitioner a life estate with power to sell, and a vested remainder in B, subject to be divested by the exercise of the power: Tax Commission v. Oswald, 109 OS 36, 141 NE 67 [approving and following Johnson v. Johnson, 51 OS 446].

293. Where by the terms of a will a fee is clearly given, a limitation over of the remainder is void as inconsistent with the fee granted: Hull v. Chisholm, 7 App 346, 28 OCA 142, 30 CD 182 [motion to certify record overruled, Chisholm v. Hull, 15 OLR 198, 62 Bull 291].

294. In the phrase "all the rest, residue and remainder of my real estate," the word "remainder" is used as synonymous with the words "rest and residue," and it is not used with the technical sense of a remainder of an estate in land depending upon a particular prior estate created at the same time and by the same instrument, and limited to take effect on the determination of that estate; even though such will was drawn by a lawyer, and the preceding paragraph gave a life estate to the husband of the testatrix: Sadler v. Sadler, 23 CC(NS) 353, 27 CD 445 [motion to certify record overruled, Sadler v. Sadler, 13 OLR 420, 60 Bull 432].

295. A remainder under a will is vested, although it is subject to divestment by the life tenant having issue surviving, and although the will provides that the remainder is to go "to my three grandsons, . . . the survivor or survivors of them": Stark v. Marsh, 29 OCA 417, 35 CD 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Little v. Stark, 16 OLR 307, 63 Bull 350].

296. Under a will which gives, devises and bequeaths "all my property, both real and personal, of which I may die possessed to my beloved wife, A, during her natural life, and at her death to be distributed in accordance with the laws of the state," the remainder is a contingent remainder which vests among those who are heirs at law of the testator at the time of the death of the life tenant: Carnes v. McAfee, 11 NP(NS) 517.

297. The estate devised by testator to his widow in this case, while it might under some circumstances amount to more than a life estate in value, is less than a life estate as that term is ordinarily understood, since the broad power and discretion confided in her to sell and use, is subject to the limitation that the income if sufficient, and proceeds from sales if necessary, can be used only for her own comfort, convenience and benefit, and neither the income nor principal can be used in building up a separate estate. Accordingly, the legatees have vested remainder in so much of the estate as remains unconsumed at the death of the widow: Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

—Executory interests

302. Bequest of money to married woman, with provision that if she should die without children, testator's living children should take. Executor claimed the right to hold the amount during her life. Held: If children of testator take at all, it is by way of executory devise, and not as legatees in remainder, and the married woman takes the bequest absolutely and is entitled to receive same: Lapham v. Martin, 33 OS 99.

303. An executory devise is a limitation of a future estate or interest in lands, or personalty, as the law admits in the case of a will, though it is contrary to the rules of limitations in conveyances at common law: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370 [citing Thompson v. Hoop, 6 OS 481].

304. An executory devise does not vest at the death of the testator: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370.

306. An executory devise based upon the contingency "should my daughter, Mary, die without issue her surviving," is dependent upon her death occurring before she arrives at the age of twenty years, the point of distribution provided in the will, and upon her arriving at the age of twenty years she takes an absolute fee simple title: Cotty v. Arthur, 23 NP(NS) 513.

—Absolute power to dispose of fee

311. If A devises land to B to use during life, with power to devise to whom she pleases, her devisee takes land unencumbered by her debts: Jones v. Shields, 14 O 359; see also Meehan v. Burr, 58 OS 689, 51 NE 1099.

312. A gift in general terms with the power to sell, and a gift over, on the death of the devisee, of the property which is not disposed of, passes a life estate with power to sell, and not a fee simple: Baxter v. Bowyer, 19 OS 490; Johnson v. Johnson, 51 OS 446, 38 NE 61; Enyart v. Keever, 52 OS 631, 44 NE 1135; Greene v. Trustees, 57 OS 628, 50 NE 1129; Campbell v. Greenwalt, 67 OS 520, 67 NE 1094; Fetter v. Rettig, 98 OS 428; Raymund v. Williams, 100 OS 544, 127 NE 925; Tax Commission v. Oswald, 109 OS 36, 141 NE 67. The same principle applies where full control, Min Young v. Min Young, 47 OS 501, 25 NE 168; or power to devise, Robbins v. Smith, 72 OS 1, 73 NE 1051 [affirming 5 CC(NS) 545, 17 CD 91, which affirmed 12 OD(NP) 164], is given.

313. A bequest of testator's whole estate to his widow with power to sell as she saw fit, but if anything remained at her death, it should be distributed to certain other persons, gave to the widow power to convey the fee, and the deed, good as against the widow, was good against the second devisees: Widows' Home v. Lippardt, 70 OS 261, 71 NE 770.

314. Where a testator vests in his widow a life estate in his lands, with the provision that within a reasonable time after the death of his widow certain land shall be sold by the executors named in the will and the proceeds divided equally among his five children, or if any of his children should die before distribution the share of such child or children should go to his or their heirs, "so that the proceeds of said lot may vest in my children and their heirs forever," the power given to the executors with respect to conferring title is a power coupled with an interest and vests the fee in the executors: Knisely v. Young, 15 CC(NS) 49, 23 CD 439.

315. Under a devise, "I give and bequeath to my wife, Rebecca, all my estate both real and personal to be used and disposed of by her according to her best judgment, and at her death to be divided equally between our five children," the wife did not take a title in fee simple, but a life estate only, with the right to dispose of and convey for her support or consumption; and the rights of the remaindermen are not affected by a conveyance of the property in trust: Shannon v. Shannon, 13 NP(NS) 193, 23 OD 467 [affirmed, without opinion, by the circuit court, which was affirmed, without opinion, 85 OS 456].

Gifts by implication

320. To raise an estate by implication an interest or estate in the property devised, less than the whole, must be created expressly by the will, and the person to take by implication must be named or described in connection therewith: Fisher v. Fisher, 12 OLR 561, 60 Bull 41.

Gifts to a class

325. Bequest to the remaining daughters, each now living, does not include unborn child, even though en ventre sa mere: Starling v. Price, 16 OS 29.

326. Where a devise is to wife for life, after her death to be divided by executors equally among children, or the survivors of them; one child died before widow. Held: No interest vested in the deceased child under the will, and the child of the deceased child was not entitled to share: Sinton v. Boyd, 19 OS 30.

327. Where the proceeds of a fund are to go to a class of persons included within certain territorial limits constituting a township, the fact that the township has been divided into two will not defeat the devise, but the individuals of the class living in one subdivision share equally with those in the other: Board of Education v. Ladd, 26 OS 210.

328. Devise of land to testator's children, with a proviso that in case of death of either, without heirs, share of deceased to go to survivor, vests in each an estate in fee: Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 OS 238, 50 NE 721.

329. The term "all my sisters, nephews and my brother Frank" as used in a will refers to the persons previously mentioned in said will as beneficiaries, and these beneficiaries having now all died, the time for distribution has arrived, and the trustees under the will should now proceed to divide the property among the "then surviving children of my aforesaid nephews, nieces and my brother Frank": Barbour v. Gallagher, 2 App 205, 15 CC(NS) 73, 23 CD 607 [affirmed, without opinion, Goodloe v. Barbour, 87 OS 510].

330. The words "are deceased" as used in a will which provides "If my wife should marry or at her natural death, I devise and bequeath my property to be equally divided among my children, except those children who are deceased," limit the devise to children living at the time of death of the widow: Burd-sall v. Burdsall, 15 CC(NS) 91, 23 CD 434.

—Survivorship

335. Unless contrary intention appears, words of survivorship should be referred to the period appointed for the distribution of the gift: Sinton v. Boyd, 19 OS 30; Wood v. Wood, 22 NP(NS) 302, 32 OD 40.

336. As to survivorship, see Harkness v. Corning, 24 OS 416; Taylor v. Foster's Admr., 17 OS 166; Niles v. Gray, 12 OS 320; Grandin v. Millikin, 9 App 372; Ware v. Kinch, 29 OCA 353, 35 CD 547.

337. Words of survivorship prima facie refer to the time of testator's death; but if the time of distribution, or of vesting an estate, be postponed in the will to a later date, the words of survivorship will relate to such later period: Renner v. Williams, 71 OS 340, 73 NE 221; see also Moree v. Andrews, 78 OS 388, 85 NE 1129.

338. Under a will which devises property to testator's children by name and provides that if one of them should die without issue, his share should pass to the survivors, and a codicil which makes provision for an after-born child, such after-born child takes as one of the survivors on the death of one of the other children without issue: Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

339. Where a testator bequeaths his property to his wife during life, with the provision that after her death it shall be divided among his children, and in the event of the death of any of the children without issue or heirs their shares shall revert to the surviving heirs of the testator to be divided equally among them, the intervention of the life estate fixes survivorship as of the time of distribution and after termination of the life estate: Wood v. Wood, 22 NP(NS) 302, 32 OD 40.

Per stirpes and per capita distribution

344. A bequest of the residuary estate, to be divided among testator's lawful heirs, share and share alike, must be divided among all heirs regardless of the degree of their relationship to the testator. They take per capita and not per stirpes: Mooney v. Purpus, 70 OS 57, 70 NE 894.

345. If a father devises land to his son, subject to a condition, on which the land is to go to the heirs of the body of such son, and such condition happens, the heirs of the body take such devise as from the testator in their own right and not by representation from their father; and such land is free from the burden of debts owing by their father to the testator: Rings v. Borton, 108 OS 280, 140 NE 515. [See now RC § 2105.05.2.]

345.1 Where corpus of trust was to be divided on termination among "the lawful heirs of my said children, who are of my blood an equal share thereof to the heirs of each of my children," such devise required corpus be divided into three stocks, there being three children, and that each third be distributed among the heirs of each of testator's children who are of his blood, by division and subdivision of each third according to the relative degrees of consanguinity: Casey v. Gallagher, 11 OS (2d) 42, 40 OO(2d) 55, 227 NE(2d) 801.

346. The testator bequeathed the residue of his estate to the children of his two sisters, share and share alike. It was held that the division should be made among said children per capita and not per stirpes: Holmes v. Fackelman, 2 App 258, 20 CC(NS) 109, 28 CD 606.

347. As a general rule, where a testator has left undetermined the proportions in which his beneficiaries are to take, the courts favoring equality will direct the distribution to be per capita rather than per stirpes: Broermann v. Kessling, 6 App 7, 28 OCA 321, 30 CD 103.

348. Under a bequest of the residue to be equally divided between the living heirs of testator and those of his wife, share and share alike, the phrase "share and share alike" qualifies the provision for each set of heirs, and the distribution among each set of heirs of the half so devised is to be as of the date of the death of the widow, and to be per capita and not per stirpes: Stearns v. Brandeberry, 9 App 300, 29 OCA 349.

349. If testator provides that on the death of his wife, his executor shall convert the unconsumed property into money and shall "distribute the same, share and share alike between my nephews and nieces, the children of my brother, B and of my deceased brothers and sisters, to wit: C, D and E," such distribution is to be made per capita and not per stirpes; and if the widow rejects the provisions of the will, the trust must nevertheless continue, since it cannot be known whether children will be born thereafter to B; and a trustee will be appointed to invest such trust property: March v. McClintic, 24 CC(NS) 413, 34 CD 655.

350. A provision that the residue of testator's estate "be equally divided, share and share alike, among my legal heirs" requires a per capita distribution: Jameson v. Glenny, 10 NP(NS) 168, 20 OD 353.

351. A testator who provides, "all the remainder of my estate I desire shall descend and pass according to the laws of inheritance of the state of Ohio," intends that the residue of his estate shall be distributed the same as the personal property of an intestate would be distributed, and where such testator left surviving him two nephews and one niece and children of two other nieces, the residue of his estate will be divided in five parts of which the two nephews and the niece will each get one-fifth, and each set of children of the deceased nieces one-fifth to be equally divided among them: Elliott v. Shaw, 15 NP (NS) 81, 23 OD 662 [sub nomine, Lee v. Elliott, 58 Bull 321 (Ed)].

352. A devise of the proceeds of a certain fund to the legal heirs of the testatrix and of her husband, the child or children of such as are deceased to take the parent's share, without designating as in other items of the will the shares each set of heirs should take, will be construed to mean that the distribution should be per capita and not per stirpes: Griffitt v. Wetzel, 17 NP(NS) 49, 25 OD 257.

Gifts of income

357. A bequest to a certain person for the education and support of another person for life, of all net income of his estate, is absolute and may be subject to claims of creditors: Thornton v. Stanley, 55 OS 199, 45 NE 318.

358. A gift of the "income" of stock, prima facie, means income as determined by the corporation in distributing profits: Lamb v. Lehmann, 110 OS 59, 143 NE 279.

359. Under a gift of the entire net income of stock to one for life, with remainder to another, cash and property dividends are to be paid to the life tenant, and stock dividends become a part of the corpus, dividends on which are also to be paid to the life tenant, the principal being paid, on the death of the life tenant, to the remainderman: Lamb v. Lehmann, 110 OS 59, 143 NE 279.

360. A direction in a will that the executor and trustee "set apart and keep suitably invested sufficient of my estate to produce a net yearly income" of a specified amount does not mean to hold the entire estate in trust, but only a fund, separate and apart, of sufficient amount to produce the income named: Stark v. McEwen, 15 App 188 [motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 392].

361. A wife without children died leaving a will whereby she devised the income of her real estate for five years to her husband and provided that at the end of the five years said real estate should become his in absolute ownership. The husband died within the five years. It was held that said real estate descended to the heirs of the husband: Holmden v. Craig, 16 CC(NS) 157, 31 CD 461 [affirmed, without opinion, 83 OS 483].

362. Where the income from property upon which an annuity is charged, is for several years insufficient to pay the full amount of the annuity, but in later years leaves a surplus after the payment of the annuity, the annuitant is entitled to have such surplus applied to the satisfaction of deficiencies in the annuity for the years it was not paid in full: Neville v. Carlet, 16 CC(NS) 544, 26 CD 469.

363. A provision in a will that the executor should apply the surplus money "at the rate of ten dollars a month during the winter months to buy flour and coal for the worthy poor" is void for uncertainty in designating the beneficiaries, and the additional fact that the surplus money amounts to eighteen thousand dollars from which the income would be over seven hundred dollars and that the executor is authorized to expend only thirty or forty dollars per annum shows that such gift is invalid: Collings v. Davis, 17 CC(NS) 221, 24 CD 84 [affirmed, without opinion, Davis v. Collings, 87 OS 504].

364. If it does not appear that legacies which are given to spendthrifts are intended to be cumulative, it will not be assumed that testator intended to give to such spendthrifts a greater portion of his estate than he gave to others who were related equally to the testator, and whose character and business capacity were not questioned: Babcock v. Monypeny, 18 CC(NS) 53, 24 CD 434 [affirmed, without opinion, 86 OS 365].

365. Where a will gives the income from an estate to a certain person for life, a stock dividend issued upon certain stocks belonging to the estate is capital and not income and does not go to the life tenant, but to the legatees in remainder: Raymond v. Perkins, 23 CC(NS) 385, 34 CD 296.

366. If a certain portion of the income of a trust fund is, by will, to be paid semi-annually to A for life and after the death of A to A's surviving children or their issue, and A dies between the dates for paying such income, the income thus accruing is to be treated as a part of the principal, although such proportionate shares of income do not constitute annuities: Barbour v. Gallagher, 2 App 205, 23 CC(NS) 490, 25 CD 433 [for earlier opinion, see 15 CC(NS) 73, 23 CD 607; which was affirmed, without opinion, Goodloe v. Barbour, 87 OS 510].

367. If no word of distinction is to be found in a will, a gift of "the income" must be construed as giving the entire income: Schinkal v. Kolb, 26 CC(NS) 30, 35 CD 68 [motion to certify record overruled, Kolb v. Schinkal, 13 OLR 22].

368. If a testator is domiciled in Ohio at a time of executing his will and at the time of his death, such will is governed by Ohio law, although he executed such will in New York when on a temporary visit to that place. Accordingly, a gift of income under such will may be assigned for value since such assignment is good at Ohio law although it is invalid at New York law: Lozier v. Lewis, 28 OCA 177, 30 CD 300 [affirmed, Lozier v. Lozier, 99 OS 254, 16

369. A bequest by a testator to his wife of all the income from his estate, real and personal, during her natural life, is a general bequest of the income from the residuary fund of his estate and begins to run from the moment of his death: In re Messang, 20 NP (NS) 60, 27 OD 481 [affirmed by court of appeals].

Conditions

374. No particular form of expression is necessary in a will to constitute a condition upon which an estate created by it may be defeated: Worman v. Teagarden, 2 OS 380.

375. When certain devises are void from remote limitation, the whole will is void: Mears v. Mears, 15 OS 90.

376. Testator made a devise to his son, charged with the payment of certain legacies, and provided that if he should be unwilling to accept the devise so burdened, the will should be void. Held: The son having accepted the provision, the will was valid: Scott v. Kramer, 31 OS 295.

377. Under a provision in a will requiring the executor to reject all claims presented by testator's children; and providing that if one of such children should recover upon a claim against the estate, such claim should be deducted from his share, and the amount recovered by an assignee of one of such children must be deducted from the share of the assignor: Scheets v. Hunter, 56 OS 761, 49 NE 1116, sub nomine, Sheets v. Hunter, 37 Bull 283.

378. A provision "in case that I meet with accident on this journey" is not a condition on failure of which the will does not take effect: McMerriman v. Schiel, 108 OS 334, 140 NE 600.

379. If a will contains two residuary clauses, and, taken as a whole, it shows that one of them is to take effect on the happening of a given event, after the execution of the will, such clause should be given effect if such event has happened: Hasse v. Morison, 110 OS 153, 143 NE 551.

380. Where land is devised by A to B, without qualification or condition except the proviso that, in the event B does not sell said land during his lifetime or make disposition thereof in his last will, the said land shall go to and become the property of persons named, the devise over is void; and in an action to set aside the will of B, it is not error to sustain an objection to testimony of the said secondary devisees on the ground that they are not persons having an interest in the will of B: Robraham v. Gregg, 2 App 108, 18 CC(NS) 338, 26 CD 142.

381. A provision in a will making the receipt of a legacy dependent on a separation of husband and wife is contrary to public policy and void, and the legatee takes the legacy absolutely: Moore v. Gwynne, 15 CC(NS) 31, 23 CD 463.

382. A testamentary provision that the property devised shall not be partitioned or sold until after the decease of the last survivor of the children of the testator is rendered void by the restraint which it imposes upon alienation, and an owner in fee simple of any part of the premises so devised may maintain an action in partition: Murdock v. Lord, 14 NP(NS) 156, 31 OD 593.

Classes of legacies and devises—specific

387. Giving a debt to be collected is a specific legacy, and the collection of the debt is an ademption of it: Gilbreath v. Winter, 10 O 64.

388. If a specific legacy is given to one who is an executor, title does not vest until such executor assents thereto: Roebing Sons Co. v. Shawnee Val. Coal Co., 78 OS 408, 85 NE 1127 [affirming without opinion judgment of circuit court; for opinion below, see 4 NP(NS) 113, 17 OD 8]; Kuerze v. Western Ger. Bank, 12 App 412, 31 OCA 296 [not considered on affirmance in 100 OS 547].

389. Under a will in which testatrix enumerates her personal property, worth about fifty dollars, in considerable detail, a gift of "one bureau and contents" will not pass a sum of money exceeding three hundred dollars which is found in such bureau: Creamer v. Harris, 90 OS 160, 106 NE 967, LRA 1915C, 653, AnnCas 1916C, 1137.

390. For the nature and effect of specific legacies, see Colored Industrial School v. Bates, 90 OS 288, 107 NE 770, AnnCas 1916C, 1198.

—Demonstrative

395. A bequest of "$2,000 of the first mortgage bonds of the Gallipolis Gas & Electric Co.," is a demonstrative and not a specific legacy: Nash v. Hamilton, 8 App 66, 28 OCA 206, 29 CD 462, 63 Bull 49 (Ed).

—Residuary

400. If the language of the testator in the residuary clause of the will will admit of a limited application, as well as one of a more general character, a court of equity will give it that construction which is most favorable to the heir at law: Bane v. Wick, 19 O 328; Carter v. Reddish, 32 OS 1.

401. A legacy forfeited by breach of condition, forfeiting the share of those who go to law to break the will, passes to residuary legatees without express words: Bradford v. Bradford, 19 OS 546.

402. Construction of the language of a residuary clause of a will: Forsythe v. Mintier, 39 OS 349.

403. A residuary devisee or legatee is presumed in law to be in the position of the last lienholder, after all prior lawful claims and charges have been satisfied out of the estate: Christian Assn. v. Davis, 106 OS 366, 140 NE 114.

404. Where a testator provides in his will that "It is my request that the balance of my estate be equally divided between my living heirs and the living heirs of my wife, . . . share and share alike," there are two classes created and the heirs of the testator take one-half of the estate and the heirs of the wife at the time of her death take the other half: Stearns v. Brandeberry, 9 App 300, 29 OCA 349.

405. Where a testator by one item in his will gave and bequeathed the residue of his entire estate to his children, share and share alike, and in the next item provided that should any of such children die without issue the portion going to such child should vest in the surviving child or children; and one of the children died without issue after the death of the testator, leaving a husband surviving to whom she devised all her estate, such husband did not get any of the estate of the original testator: Grandin v. Millikin, 9 App 372.

406. Where a testator, after making specific bequests, devises the residuum of his estate to his wife and by codicil devises to her a life estate in after-acquired property, without disposing of the remainder upon the termination of the life estate, the remainder passes to the wife under the residuary clause of the original will: Spriggs v. Fenner, 10 App 89.

407. "Residue" means all of testator's estate not otherwise disposed of: Huffman v. Berry, 15 App 372.

408. A general residuary clause in favor of the husband of testatrix passes the interest of testatrix in an insurance policy upon the life of her husband which is made payable to herself: Schlachter v. Teepen, 24 CC(NS) 30, 29 CD 650 [affirming Teepen v. Schlachter, 18 NP(NS) 33, 28 OD 545].

409. Since a construction of a will which avoids intestacy is to be preferred, a clause which provides

"all of my effects and household goods not mentioned above is to be divided between" two named beneficiaries, and which is followed by other bequests, is to be construed as giving to the beneficiaries named therein all of the personal property of the testator not specifically bequeathed by such subsequent bequests: Robinson v. Robinson, 13 NP(NS) 613, 30 OD 666.

—Charges on realty

415. When, by the terms of the will, the real and personal property are blended into one common fund, this is decisive of the intention of the testator to charge the legacies on the real estate in case of a deficiency of personal assets; and where there are pecuniary legacies in a will, and a partial disposition of real estate by specific devises, followed by a general devise of the residue of the real and personal estate to other parties, such residuary clause is such a blending of the real and personal estate in one common fund as to justify the implication that the testator intended, in case of failure of personal assets, to make the legacy a charge upon the realty: Moore v. Beckwith, 14 OS 129.

416. Pecuniary legacies, to be paid, together with the debts of the estate, from personal assets and funds arising from the sale of certain real estate, are not in the nature of specific bequests and cannot compel contribution from specific bequests. Bequest of a right to take toll, and a trust to pay out of toll a sum monthly, is not in the nature of a demonstrative legacy, and cannot be charged on the estate: Morris v. Harris, 19 OS 15.

417. In the case of a devise of property to wife, to hold in trust to pay debts, and for the good of the family, until a certain period, it was held that the year's allowance was a debt of the estate: Watts v. Watts, 38 OS 480.

418. Where the residue of an estate is given to the wife to pay debts, she does not, by accepting under the will, become personally liable for the debts: Watts v. Watts, 38 OS 480.

419. Where, in a will, the devisee in fee simple of land was instructed to pay certain legacies, he becomes personally responsible, by accepting such devise, to the legatees. And after his death his estate is so liable and even though the legatees become, by descent, the owners of the land, the legacies must be paid from the personality of the deceased devisee as any other debt of his estate: Case v. Hall, 52 OS 24, 38 NE 618, 25 LRA 766.

420. Legacies not specifically charged upon real estate will, nevertheless, be held to be charged upon such real estate, and be a lien thereon where it appears that the testator, at the time the will was made and at his decease, had no moneys or personal estate of any kind out of which such legacies could be paid, unless a contrary intention is manifest from the whole will: Theobald v. Fugman, 64 OS 473, 60 NE 606 [reversing Fugman v. Theobald, 12 OCD 720, which was on appeal from 3 NP 65; sub nomine, Fugmann v. Theobald, 4 OD(NP) 65].

421. The intention of a testator to charge legacies on real estate specifically devised must clearly appear or be clearly deducible from the language of the will. But it is not necessary that the charge shall be made in express terms or that any particular language be used. The intention to charge will be given effect when it clearly appears from the provisions of the instrument: Knepper v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476.

422. If a testator gives certain pecuniary legacies, and then, by specific devises and a residuary clause, he gives his entire estate to another, such estate will be charged with payment of such legacies: Knepper

v. Knepper, 103 OS 529, 134 NE 476.

423. Under a devise to A, the son of testator, "upon consideration that he pay to my daughter B, the one thousand dollars which I have bequeathed to her in item three, and which sum until paid I hereby make a charge upon said farm," which devise the son accepted the payment of such legacy to B is a charge upon the realty devised to A, and the testator's personal property is exonerated from payment of such legacy to the extent at least of the value of the realty devised to the son: Lacey v. Birdsall, 15 CC(NS) 60, 23 CD 460 [affirmed, without opinion, sub nomine, Birdsall v. Lacey, 88 OS 606].

424. A devise of real estate to testator's son A, "to have and to hold and the use thereof during his natural life, and should his wife, B, outlive him, then she shall have the use thereof during the remainder of her life, and at the decease of both, said property shall become and be the property of their children and their heirs forever," coupled with the direction that, "It is my will that my son, A, shall out of the income of aforesaid property, erect a monument upon the graves of myself and my husband, 'C,' within five years after my decease, at a value not less than five hundred dollars," vests in the son a life estate in said real estate, charged with the payment or accumulation of a fund of five hundred dollars for the building of a monument, and the son's interest in said real estate is subject to attachment: Rice v. Rice, 20 CC(NS) 173, 31 CD 269.

425. If a provision is made in a will for the support of A, and such provision is a lien upon testator's realty, A's act in joining in a conveyance of such realty operates as a waiver of A's lien, and as against mortgagees of other realty who claim under the devise, A cannot receive more out of the proceeds of such land than A would have received if A had not joined in such conveyance: Schocknessy v. Wright, 24 OD(NP) 574.

Ademption

430. Ademption is the extinction or withholding of a legacy in consequence of some act of the testator: Ellard v. Ferris, 91 OS 339, 110 NE 476, LRA 1916C, 613.

431. Where the subsequent gift is made to a child, or one to whom the testator stands in loco parentis, and the gift is of the same character or for the same purpose as the legacy, it will be presumed to be an ademption of the legacy pro tanto in the absence of an expressed intention to the contrary shown by the will or by extrinsic evidence: Ellard v. Ferris, 91 OS 339, 110 NE 476, LRA 1916C, 613.

432. Where the legacy is to a person other than a child of the testator, or to a person other than one to whom he stands in loco parentis, unless the gift is for the same specific purpose for which the legacy was intended, there is no presumption of such intention, but it must be clearly shown, either from the will itself, or by extrinsic evidence, that the ademption was intended by the testator: Ellard v. Ferris, 91 OS 339, 110 NE 476, LRA 1916C, 613.

434. Where the bonds described in a demonstrative legacy have been converted by the testatrix, the legacy is not thereby adeemed, but may be satisfied from any property or fund of the estate not specifically devised or bequeathed: Blocher v. Trick, 8 App 222, 28 OCA 46, 30 CD 98.

435. Testator having devised a life estate in his house and lot to a daughter, and "her share in the chattels and money that I may leave," the life estate is adeemed by his sale of the house and lot before his death, and she takes her share in the personality as a specific legacy and a like proportion in the residuary estate as an heir at law: Fisher v. Fisher, 12 OLR 561, 60 Bull 41.

Interest on legacy

440. A will provided that executors should "pay or loan" the different heirs a part of the estate not exceeding a certain proportion of the same, and eventually should divide the estate equally, it being testator's desire that each child should have the benefit of the same amount of property. Held: The payments to said heirs were not intended to bear interest, nor to be refunded unless it became necessary to equalize shares: Hosmer v. Sturges, 31 OS 657.

441. A legacy draws interest from one year after the notice of the appointment and qualification of the executor: Ebersole v. Cole, 19 NP(NS) 507, 27 OD 175.

442. While the contest of a will, pending its determination, is an impediment to payment of a legacy thereunder, it does not stop the running of interest on the legacy from the date it would otherwise have become payable: Ebersole v. Cole, 19 NP(NS) 507, 27 OD 175.

Election by persons other than widow or widower

447. Where land is directed to be sold and the proceeds distributed, the distributees may elect to keep the land: Holt v. Lamb, 17 OS 374.

448. Where, in a will, testator attempted to devise the property of another to a third person, and, in the same instrument, disposed of a portion of his own estate in favor of the proprietor whose rights he assumed, equity requires the latter to elect, either to give up the benefit conferred on him by the will, or, if he accept it, to convey, in conformity with the will, that portion of his own property which it purports to affect. In the former case, the property given up does not become intestate property, but passes under the will to the disappointed donee to the extent that may be necessary for his compensation: Bebout v. Quick, 81 OS 196, 90 NE 162.

449. Where a will provides for the investment of a certain amount of money in real estate and then to be deeded to a devisee, such devisee, prior to such purchase of real estate, may elect to take in money instead of the land; after such election, there is no authority for the investment of the money in real estate: Hegler v. Pridey (supreme court, without report), 38 Bull 1.

Powers of executors

465. Power to sell land, given to executors by will, may be exercised by one executor, if one only accepts the office under the will. Such power does not authorize an exchange or barter, but a sale for money only: Taylor v. Galloway, 1 O 232.

466. Power to sell lands, given by will to an executor, cannot be executed by administrator with will annexed: Wills v. Cowper, 2 O 124.

467. As to what terms in a will will give executor full power over testator's estate, see Steele v. Worthington, 2 O 182.

468. Power given to an executor to sell lands when advantageous, and proceeds to be distributed to children as they come of age, is a power connected with a trust, and executor entitled to possession of land: Dabney v. Manning, 3 O 321.

469. A power conferred on executors in this language, "giving them full and complete power as I myself possess to dispose of my property," etc., is a power coupled with an interest: Williams v. Veach, 17 O 171.

470. Power given to executors by will to sell and convey land becomes legally inoperative and ceases to exist when the estate is settled, or all claims against it are presumptively satisfied, by lapse of time, and no object of the testator remains to be attained: Ward v. Barrows, 2 OS 241.

471. As to duties of an executor, where the will directs him to continue a certain trade or business, see Gaudolfe v. Walker, 15 OS 251.

472. In the absence of clear and express authority in the will, an executor cannot carry on the business of the decedent; nor use the general assets therefor; nor charge such assets with debts: Lucht v. Behrens, 28 OS 231 [reversing Behrens v. Lucht, 13 DecRep 864, 2 CSCR 217]; Mills v. Connor, 104 OS 409, 135 NE 616.

473. Levy of attachment in an action against a devisee will not defeat or prevent the execution of a power of sale given by the testator to his executor, nor will such levy affect the title of the purchaser at the executor's sale: Smyth v. Anderson, 31 OS 144.

474. A devise to certain relatives with power to the executor to sell and convey the property so devised, if necessary, for the purpose of distributing it, was a devise in fee to the relatives, and the power of sale vested in the executor with a naked power only, not a power coupled with an interest, and could only be exercised, if necessary, for the purpose of making distribution: Hoyt v. Day, 32 OS 101.

475. Where testator bequeathed residue to his two daughters and their heirs "and in case the said daughter, Eliza, shall decease without lawful heirs of her body, her share to pass to the other sister and her heirs," it was executor's duty to make distribution as expressly directed, and such distribution was a complete administration of his trust. Whether the bequest over on the death of Eliza is void, because inconsistent with the bequest to her and her heirs, or is valid, was discussed but not decided: Ratliff v. Warner, 32 OS 334.

476. Where the will provided that if C, an executor, should die, or should "refuse to take upon himself the execution of the will," C's power should pass to W, and C made application to resign, in a Mississippi court, and his application was granted, but he afterwards resigned action as trustee. Held: The action of the Mississippi court did not affect C's power as trustee: Veazie v. McGugin, 40 OS 365.

477. Where the sole devisee of lands is appointed executor of the will of the testator and sells such lands in his individual capacity as devisee, the proceeds of such sale come into his hands as executor, and where the personal estate is insufficient to pay the debts of the testator he must apply the proceeds of the sale of such lands to the payment thereof: Hocking Val. R. Co. v. White, 87 OS 413, 101 NE 354, AnnCas 1914A, 190.

478. A direction in a will that the testator's moving picture business "shall be conducted during the life of the lease on said building" by two persons named, does not authorize them to execute a renewal lease on such building under an option held by the testator: Mills v. Connor, 104 OS 409, 135 NE 616.

479. Where a will directs the executors to have an appraisal made of all the property belonging to the estate at a certain date and gives to any devisee the right to take any one parcel of property, not exceeding his share in the estate, at its appraised value, the executors cannot, at a date subsequent to that fixed in the will, contract to sell a certain parcel to a third person, under a power given to them by will, without first having the appraisal made and offering the property to the devisees: Bailey Co. v. Bradley, 23 CC (NS) 59, 34 CD 102.

480. Where the will gives great discretion in the execution thereof, in the absence of fraud such discretion will not be interfered with: In re Estate of

Reynolds, 3 NP 292, 2 OD 11.

481. If a will confers upon the executor the power to sell realty, and such power is personal, the administrator with the will annexed does not possess such power. If, on the other hand, the will is a part of the trust, it passes to the administrator with the will annexed: Westwater v. Guitner, 18 NP(NS) 209, 30 OD 370.

Trusts

486. As to resulting trusts, see Bigelow v. Barr, 4 O 385.

487. "To certain trustees and their successors," the limitation over to successors void: Miles v. Fisher, 10 O 1.

488. Gift to a charitable use to receive a most liberal construction: Zanesville Canal &c. Co. v. Zanesville, 20 O 483; Blume v. Thompson, 15 NP(NS) 97, 23 OD 512.

489. Where the trust or charge is defined and limited, the purchaser must see to the application of the purchase money; otherwise, when it is general and unlimited: Clyde v. Simpson, 4 OS 445.

490. Where a will declared certain trusts in land, for the fulfillment of which the whole estate might be required, but the legal title descended to the heirs, who, in event of fulfillment or failure, would have beneficial interest. Held: The title was held by the heirs as trustees: Birchard v. Edwards, 11 OS 84.

491. Where a fund is created in trust for S for life, to be paid to her sons after her death, but they both died in her lifetime, leaving her as their next of kin, the trust has failed, and the beneficial interest having vested in S, equity will decree its payment to her: Taylor v. Huber, 13 OS 288.

492. Where the words of a will creating a trust clearly point out that trust and define its limitations, the same construction will be put on the will, whether it be regarded as executed or executory: Gilpin v. Williams, 17 OS 396 [for later opinion in this case, see 25 OS 283].

493. That all debts and charges "shall be paid out of testator's estate," will not throw the expense of administering property left in trust on the general estate: Morris v. Harris, 19 OS 15.

494. Where no trust is involved, and no advice to executor or trustee required, an action cannot be maintained for the mere purpose of obtaining the court's opinion as to the meaning or legal effect of a will: Corry v. Fleming, 29 OS 147.

495. Where testator directed his trustee to apply certain moneys so that they might be used for the interests of religion and for the advancement of the kingdom of Christ in the world, and then directed that the money be paid to certain religious societies, the will was not void for uncertainty, and an unincorporated society is capable of receiving a bequest of personality, not amounting to a trust: American Tract Soc. v. Atwater, 30 OS 77.

496. Where, by devise, an intermediate estate is created, and upon its termination the provision is that the land should be sold and proceeds equally divided among children, or their heirs, or that said children should divide the farm to suit themselves, this did not create a trust estate in executors: Nimmons v. Westfall, 33 OS 213.

497. A executed a written declaration of trust by which he recited that he did "hereby appoint B a trustee in trust to receive and hold, and after my death disburse the following sum of money and other valuable assets, to-wit, six thousand two hundred dollars ($6,200.00), which sums are to be disbursed as follows, to-wit:" followed by a list of the beneficiaries among whom such sum was to be divided. The money was paid by a check "To B, trustee in trust for A." It was deposited by B in B's name as trustee for A. The court held that B thereby became trustee for A and not for the persons to whom he was directed to pay such trust fund, and that A's death revoked B's authority to distribute such fund: Worthington v. Redkey, 86 OS 128, 99 NE 211 [reversing Redkey v. Worthington, 13 CC(NS) 177, 22 CD 63].

498. A corporation knowing that an executor had misappropriated stock certificates held by him as trustee for the granddaughter of the testatrix, required the executor to obtain the granddaughter's power of attorney, ratifying all his transactions with the stock. She was then twenty-two years old, but feeble, and not as capable of business as the average woman, and had been living with the executor's family as a daughter. She did not read the writing, did not know its contents, nor that he had converted and squandered her funds; he told her it empowered him to draw her funds and deposit them in another bank, and she trusted him implicitly as a father. It was held that the company is chargeable with notice of the fraud, being warned by him of his dread to disclose the truth to her. At that time she had no power over the corpus of the fund. For both these reasons the company cannot take benefit of the writing: Mook v. Akron Sav. &c. Co., 87 OS 273, 101 NE 278.

499. Where stock in a corporation was bequeathed in trust, with power to sell and reinvest the proceeds, under direction to pay the entire net income to the wife of testator during her life, and the company with the consent of all its stockholders afterwards transferred to a new company all of its assets, including a large surplus, which it had accumulated in its business and had invested in its plant, machinery and other assets used in the business (much of which was done during the life of the testator), each stockholder receiving two shares in the new company for one in the old company, the entire stock received by the trustees, in the new company, belongs to the corpus of the trust fund: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming, on rehearing, Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43; which was modified in memorandum opinion, Wilberding v. Miller, 88 OS 609; and was on appeal from Miller v. Miller, 13 NP(NS) 1].

500. If a trustee attempts to divide trust property in accordance with the terms of the trust, so that the issue of any of the deceased legatees should take the legacy given to such deceased legatees, full effect will be given to such intention: Bigham v. Harlan, 91 OS 440, 110 NE 1054.

501. Former GC § 10596 (RC § 2109.26) does not apply where the will has conferred personal discretion upon the individual who is named as trustee: Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315, 120 NE 828 [reversing court of appeals, which was on appeal from Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129].

502. For a charitable trust which is invalid because the method of creating the administrative board is too vague and the method of executing the charity is too ambiguous, see Dirlam v. Morrow, 102 OS 279, 131 NE 365 [affirming judgment of court of appeals, which affirmed Morrow v. Dirlam, 22 NP(NS) 565, 30 OD 27].

503. A testamentary trust to A as trustee for B, C and D, the income to be paid to each for life without the control of the husband over any one of them, and with power to devise such share of the corpus, with a gift over to the children of each who dies intestate, gives an absolute title to the income, but only a life estate in the corpus. The trust does not terminate on the death of the husband of each beneficiary; and the trust will continue as long as beneficiary is alive: Robbins v. Smith, 72 OS 1, 73 NE 1051 [affirming

5 CC(NS) 545, 17 CD 91, which affirmed 12 OD(NP) 164].

504. A gift to township trustees for a home for aged and destitute people of such township, or those who, by reason of misfortune, cannot care for themselves, is valid: Gearhart v. Richardson, 109 OS 418, 142 NE 890.

505. Where under the terms of a will general authority is given to the trustees of the estate to make such advancements to any of the sons of testator as may seem wise to said trustees, and one of the five sons is given no interest in the estate of his father and is not entitled to share in its distribution, such son cannot compel the executors to give him a statement of the advancements made to him and to his brothers by his father or permit an examination of decedent's books to obtain such statement: DuBrul v. DuBrul, 8 App 281, 30 OCA 158, 29 CD 646.

506. The purchase of stock in a corporation, upon which dividends may possibly be paid, is not in compliance with the provisions of a will which provides that the trust funds shall be put and forever kept at interest: In re Couden, 9 App 207.

506.1. Deviation is sanctioned by a court of equity to permit a departure from the terms of a trust where compliance is impossible or illegal, or where changed circumstances, not known or anticipated by a donor, would defeat or substantially impair the purposes of the trust: Fenn College v. Nance, 4 OMisc 183, 33 OO(2d) 292, 210 NE(2d) 418.

507. Under a will which provides a definite time for ending a trust and making a conveyance of all the property in fee simple, a gift over in case said beneficiaries die without leaving issue applies only to death before such period terminating the trust; and when such period arrives, the surviving beneficiaries take absolutely, and neither has any contingent interest in the property of the other: Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

508. Income arising after the termination of the trust under which an estate has been held follows the property and should be distributed in accordance with the provisions of the will: Barbour v. Gallagher, 15 CC(NS) 73, 23 CD 607 [affirmed, without opinion, Goodloe v. Barbour, 87 OS 510; for later opinion, see Barbour v. Gallagher, 2 App 205, 23 CC(NS) 490, 25 CD 433].

509. Where testator gave the residue of his estate to trustees, to hold one-third part, with all the income therefrom, for the use of his widow for her life, one-third for the use of his son for his life, and one-third for the use of his daughter for her life, and after the death of his wife the property given for her use to be held for the use of his son and daughter in equal shares; it was held that it was not to create separate trust estates but that the whole trust estate should be kept as one entire fund and the income divided among the legatees: Neville v. Carlet, 16 CC(NS) 544, 26 CD 469.

510. If a clause in a will authorizes the executor "to safely invest all monies," and such executor is shown to have received assets of greater value than the property which he owns at the time of his death, it will be presumed that he acted lawfully and in pursuance to his authority, and that he held such property in trust for the beneficiaries under such will: Hoehn v. Hoehn, 17 CC(NS) 113, 32 CD 53.

511. A clause in a will providing, "the surplus money he (the executor) shall apply at the rate of ten dollars a month during the winter months, to buy flour and coal for worthy poor," where said surplus money amounts to eighteen thousand dollars, is incapable of execution, invalid and insufficient to create a charitable trust. This provision does not warrant the creation by construction of a perpetual and increasing charitable trust. Furthermore, the beneficiaries are not restricted to any locality but embrace the whole world: Collings v. Davis, 17 CC(NS) 221, 24 CD 84 [affirmed, without opinion, Davis v. Collings, 87 OS 504].

512. A direction in a will that "a further trust shall be raised out of my estate" shows that such trust is to be "raised" after the trust created by the former clauses of the will. The expression "raised out of my estate" refers to the act of separating the proportion or share therein specified from the body of the estate: Babcock v. Monypeny, 18 CC(NS) 53, 24 CD 434 [affirmed, without opinion, 86 OS 365].

513. If a trust is created in realty which is situated in another state, the validity of such trust is determined by the laws of such state, but such foreign law is not otherwise to be regarded as affecting the construction of the will: Babcock v. Monypeny, 18 CC(NS) 53, 24 CD 434 [affirmed, without opinion, 86 OS 365].

514. A trust created in a will for the purpose of providing for the inmates of a county infirmary such luxuries as they would not have in the regular administration of the institution, is not illegal or impossible of accomplishment: Starr v. Forbes, 18 CC(NS) 176, 32 CD 670.

515. Whether the directors of the county infirmary and their successors could act as trustees of a trust created by will for the benefit of the poor of the county was considered but not decided, since such gift was valid, even if the directors were not proper trustees, and equity could appoint a trustee to administer such trust: Starr v. Forbes, 18 CC(NS) 176, 32 CD 670.

516. Under a will creating a trust for the testator's widow's life in property devised to a son and daughter, and directing "the same to be parted and divided between them share and share alike as they may agree; said division not to be made until after the decease of my said wife Matilda, but the property to remain intact until that event, and until then the rents of the real property shall go into my estate for the purpose of paying the eight hundred dollars per year to my said wife," etc., "and in case either my son or daughter should die before a division of my estate, leaving no heir or heirs, that in that case the whole of said property shall go to the survivor of them," unless all the beneficiaries of the trust consent, it is beyond the power of the parties or of the court to enforce a division of the estate until after the widow's death: People Sav. Bank v. Gardner, 18 CC(NS) 204, 32 CD 692.

517. Under a will authorizing a trustee to "hold, manage, control, and from time to time, as need be, reinvest"; so long as he acts in good faith, he is not subject to the control of the beneficiaries, nor of the courts, in the reasonable exercise of the discretion of any power conferred upon him: Alter v. Alter, 31 OCA 113, 35 CD 671 [on appeal from 22 NP(NS) 517, 31 OD 290].

518. Where a testator gives an absolute and vested bequest, but provides for a postponement of the enjoyment thereof, and when an exigency, nonexistent at the creation of the trust, arises, which is one not then anticipated by the testator, a court of equity may substitute another course of management of the trust fund, in order to bring about a more complete realization of the proposed bounty. It may order an acceleration of the enjoyment of the income or principal of a trust which neither expressly nor impliedly authorizes such a course to be taken: Alter v. Alter, 31 OCA 113, 35 CD 671 [on appeal from 22 NP(NS) 517, 31 OD 290].

519. If a trust fails because personal discretion was given to the trustee and he has died before testator, subsidiary provisions as to collection of items for such trust fund will also fail: Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129, 29 OD 174 [appealed to court of appeals on other grounds; judgment of court of appeals reversed, Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315].

§ 2107.47 Protection of purchaser against later will. (GC § 10504-68)

The title, estate, or interest of a bona fide purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer, for value, without knowledge of a will, in land situated in this state derived from the heir of a decedent or from the beneficiary under a will shall not be defeated by the production of the will of such decedent, or of a later will, unless, in the case of a resident decedent, such will is offered for probate within six months after the settlement of the estate, or in the case of a nonresident decedent, unless such will is offered for record in this state within eighteen months from its final probate and establishment in the state or territory in which it was admitted to probate.

§ 2107.49 Rule in Shelley's case abolished. (GC § 10504-70)

When lands, tenements, or hereditaments are given by deed or will to a person for his life, and after his death to his heirs in fee, the conveyance shall vest an estate for life only in such first taker and a remainder in fee simple in his heirs. If the remainder is given to the heirs of the body of the life tenant, the conveyance shall vest an estate for life only in such first taker and a remainder in fee simple in the heirs of his body. The rule in Shelley's case is abolished by this section and shall not be given effect.

Scope and effect

1. The rule of construction above prescribed reverses the rule in Shelley's case. It applies to all wills, wherever made, whatever may be the rule governing that subject in the place of testator's domicile: Jennings v. Jennings, 21 OS 56.

2. The exception created by this section, in the application of the rule in Shelley's case, is limited to wills and has no application to deeds of trust: Neff v. Abert, 9 App 286.

4. Fact that niece designated as heir of devisee under former GC § 8598 [see now RC § 2105.15] was not such at testator's death, held not to exclude her from provisions of will devising property to daughter for life and at her decease to her heirs in fee, notwithstanding former GC § 10578 [see now RC § 2107.49]: Laws v. Davis, 34 App 157, 170 NE 601.

5. The purpose and effect of this section, as to construction of devises for life limited to heirs, was to abrogate the rule in Shelley's case as to wills, and not to establish a hard and fast rule of construction that must resolve all doubtful cases into devises of estates for life with remainder over: Halley v. Hengstler, 3 CC(NS) 161, 13 CD 504 [affirmed, without report, 70 OS 452].

6. The rule in Shelley's case is a rule of property and not a rule of construction to be applied in the determination of the meaning of language in a grant or devise, and since the abolition of this rule in Ohio, as to wills, in 1840, it cannot be invoked, either as a rule of property or construction, to determine the character of the estate devised: Williams v. Haller, 13 NP(NS) 329, 27 OD 343.

Rule in Shelley's case

13. Rule in Shelley's case was applicable to wills in Ohio before 1840: McFeely's Lessee v. Moore's Heirs, 5 O 464.

14. A will bequeathing an estate to A and his heirs forever, in trust for B, a feme covert, for life, and to such uses as, notwithstanding any coverture, she shall appoint, and after her death to the use of her heirs, is an equitable fee simple in the first cestui que trust: Armstrong v. Zane's Heirs, 12 O 287. (Note that the will in this case was made and testator had died before 1840, the date of the passage of the above statute.)

15. Before the rule in Shelley's case was, as to wills, abolished, a testator devised certain lands to his son for life, and at his death to go to his heirs, and, there being nothing else in the will to show that the testator used the word "heirs" to designate a more limited class—as children. Held: That, as the lands passed under the will precisely as they would have descended at law, the son took an estate in fee simple in the lands so devised: Brockschmidt v. Archer, 64 OS 502, 60 NE 623.

16. A will in which the testator devises real estate to his son for life "and at his death the same shall pass to and vest in fee simple in his heirs," where the meaning of the word "heirs" is problematical, will be construed as giving the son no more than a life estate and vesting the fee in those persons comprising his heirs, as determined by the statute of descent and distribution in effect at the time of his death: Holt v. Miller, 133 OS 418, 11 OO 85, 14 NE(2d) 409 [affirming 11 OO 357].

—After the statute—wills

22. Rule in Shelley's case not applicable to wills taking effect since 1840 (Swan's Stat, 999, § 47): King's Heirs v. King's Administrator, 12 O 390.

23. Where a testator made a devise to his son, John, "through his natural life and then to his heirs," and in another part of the will used the word "heirs" in the sense of "children." Held: That the son took a life estate only, with remainder to his children or issue, and not to his heirs generally, and that upon his death, without issue, the devise in remainder failed, and the estate reverted to the heirs of the testator: Bunnell v. Evans, 26 OS 409.

24. In the above case, the word "heirs" was construed as a word of limitation, enlarging the life estate to a defeasible estate in fee simple: Carter v. Reddish, 32 OS 1.

25. Where a testator invests his widow with a life estate in his property, with power to dispose of the remainder to his heirs, an attempted appointment of it in such manner as to secure to herself a substantial pecuniary benefit from its disposition not authorized by the testator, is an abuse of such power of appointment, and is void: Shank v. Dewitt, 44 OS 237, 6 NE 255.

26. Will devising land to testator's daughter for her natural life, and at her death to the issue of her body then living, held to require distribution per stirpes among living children and grandchildren, the children of a deceased child, where no intention to make per capita distribution appeared, in view of policy of law in favor of per stirpes distribution: Watson v. Watson, 34 App 311, 171 NE 257.

28. A will devising realty to the testator's son "during his natural life and then to his heirs," was held to give the son a life estate, and the son's adopted children inherit, not from their father, but take under the will as heirs: Hummel v. Davis, 22 OLR 49.

29. The fact that a devisee under a will is limited to a life estate does not exclude him, as heir, from any further interest which might come by reason of intestacy; therefore, where testator devises to one of his four children a life estate in certain realty with remainder to the heirs of the body of such child, the will containing no residuary clause and no other disposition of the premises being made, upon the death of testator there is a contingent remainder to the heirs of the body of the life tenant, and a reversion in fee vests in the heirs at law of testator, subject to be divested upon the birth of children of the life tenant, and such life tenant, dying without heirs of his body, can transmit by will his one-fourth interest in the reversion: Chaffin v. Dixon, 13 App 1, 31 OCA 97, 417 [motion to certify record overruled, Dixon v. Chaffin, 18 OLR 44, 65 Bull 217].

30. Where testator, by foreign will, devises Ohio land to his daughter "during her natural life, and at her decease to go to her lawful heirs," these words created only a life estate in such Ohio lands, although under the rule prevailing in such other state they would have conveyed a fee simple: Hosler v. Haines, 7 CC(NS) 261, 18 CD 79 [but case reversed, without report, Haines v. Hosler, 76 OS 588].

31. A devise of real estate in Ohio to A, "for the term of her natural life, and at her decease to go to the heirs of her body in fee," made by a resident of Ohio, after 1840, does not create an estate tail in A but vests in A an estate for life, with remainder to the issue of her body. The rule in Shelley's case cannot be applied to declare such a devise an estate tail: Williams v. Haller, 13 NP(NS) 329, 27 OD 343.

32. For a will construed as conferring a life estate with remainder over to testator's grandchildren as a class, see Pritchard v. Byrer, 24 NP(NS) 129 [affirmed by court of appeals; motion to certify record overruled, 19 OLR 713].

33. Under the provision of this section, to the effect that a gift by will to a person for his life and after his death to his heirs in fee shall vest an estate for life only in the first taker, and a remainder in fee simple to his heirs, a will which makes a gift to A, without there specifying the interest which A is to take, but which provides further, "All of the foregoing devises to the several devisees as named are to be to them for their natural lives and on their decease are to go to the heirs of their bodies," gives to A a life estate only, and the remainder to the heirs of the body of A: In re Youtsey, 15 OLR 125.

34. Under former GC §§ 8622, 10578 (see now RC §§ 2131.08, 2107.49), a devise of lands to testator's children for their natural lives, directing that on their death the property should go to the heirs of their body, but if any should die without leaving heirs of their body, the lands, subject to the rights of curtesy or dower of the spouses of such children, should revert back and be divided equally between those living or their heirs per stirpes, would pass to a son of the testator an estate for his life, and to his issue an estate in fee simple upon his death: Youtsey v. Niswonger, 258 Fed 16, 169 CCA 154.

—Deeds

39. Where granting clause of deed stated to L. M., "during her life and then to her children that may be living and their heirs and assigns forever," clearly conveyed a life estate to L. M., with contingent remainder to such children as survived her, their heirs and assigns, and such estate was not enlarged by habendum clause providing "to L. M., her children and their heirs and assigns forever," the children of a child of L. M., who predeceased L. M., have no interest in the realty since the interest of their parent never became vested: Ferris v. Schuhholz, 107 App 63, 7 OO(2d) 397, 152 NE(2d) 285.

39.1. Language of a deed, which was in the nature of a testamentary disposition, liberally construed as if used in a will: Hoagland v. Marsh, 4 CC 31, 2 CD 402.

40. The rule in Shelley's case is a rule that is a part of the law of Ohio as to deeds. It is a rule of property and not a rule of construction. It has been abolished as to wills by statute since 1840: In re Dennis, 30 NP(NS) 118.

41. Where the granting clause of a deed is in the usual form and gives, grants, bargains, sells and conveys the premises therein described unto the grantee, B, his heirs and assigns, and the habendum clause reads, "To have and to hold said premises for and during his natural life, with reversion at his death to his children, heirs of his body, and their heirs and assigns, and if he dies leaving no children or legal representatives, then the above is to be and remain the property of the brothers and sisters of B, their heirs and assigns, forever," the rule in Shelley's case applies and the grantee takes an estate in fee simple: Akers v. Akron, C. & Y. R. Co., 20 CC(NS) 352, 31 CD 354 [affirmed, without opinion, 90 OS 432].

Intention to give fee

46. Where will devised real estate to testator's children and after their death to their bodily heirs in fee simple, remainder vested only after death of life tenants in their surviving children, and attempt by contingent remainderman to dispose of interest in estate before death of life tenant was of no effect: Pollock v. Brayton, 28 App 172, 162 NE 608 [see also 29 App 296, 163 NE 573].

46.1. Where property is devised by a mother to her son for life, and then to the heirs of his body, and if he die, without heirs of his body, the remainder to revert to the grantor, if living, and if not living, then the remainder to the grantor's heirs at law, it is incumbent upon the widow of the grantee-son, in an action to have quieted her title to such premises, to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that upon the death of the grantee-son without having had issue he had an absolute estate in fee simple in such premises which could pass to her as her heir or which could pass to her under the provisions of his will, i.e., that the grantor-mother had not successfully conveyed or devised away the reversion: Kohler v. Ichler, 116 App 16, 21 OO(2d) 221, 186 NE(2d) 202.

46.2. Where a testator devised the remainder of his estate in trust, stating that his children surviving him are to share in the net income of the trust estate so long as each shall live, but the will makes no provision as to the disposition of the trust estate subsequent to the death of the last surviving child, and four of the testator's children survive him, then (1) the will is not so uncertain that the testator's intent cannot be determined, (2) a valid testamentary trust is established, and (3) there is no merger of interests between the lifetime beneficiaries and the ultimate remaindermen which would void the trust: Moysey v. Moysey, 71 OO(2d) 191, 42 OMisc 27, 326 NE(2d) 870 (CP).

47. This statute was passed in pursuance of the policy of this state making the intention of a testator of paramount importance: Davis v. Saunders, 8 NP 161, 11 OD 259.

48. Where the intention of the will is to give to the first devisees an estate for life only, that controls, the rule in Shelley's case being abolished as to wills, cannot be appealed to to ascertain intention: Kiersted v. Smith, 8 NP 378, 10 OD 279.

49. Where the manifest intention of the testator was to grant his daughter a life estate only, but such devise was contained in a will executed and probated prior to the passage of the act abrogating (as to wills) the rule in Shelley's case, that rule applied, and the devise vested a fee simple in the daughter: Kimball v. Kimball, 13 OD(NP) 555.

50. This section, excluding the rule in Shelley's case from wills, does not defeat an intentional use of the word "heirs" as a word of limitation: Patterson v. Earhart, 29 Bull 313, 6 OD(NP) 16.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. In an action to construe a will the court may consider testimony relative to facts and circumstances surrounding the execution of the will by the testatrix, the extent of her estate, her associations, her solicitude or lack of solicitude for those who would be the natural objects of her bounty, and matters which may have motivated her in excluding her daughter from participating in her estate: Fitzgerald v. Beil, 20 OO 18, 33 OLA 423, 6 OSupp 119 (PC) [affirmed 34 OLA 631, 39 NE(2d) 186].

2. This section should be liberally construed in favor of those seeking to take advantage of its provisions with respect to after-acquired personal property: Fitzgerald v. Beil, 20 OO 18, 33 OLA 423, 6 OSupp 119 (PC) [affirmed 34 OLA 631, 39 NE(2d) 186].

3. Neither RC § 2107.50 nor § 2107.51 makes reference to a power of appointment: Dollar Sav. & Trust Co. v. Kirkham, 50 OO(2d) 318, 21 OMisc 163, 255 NE(2d) 892 (CP).

3.1 A testamentary power of appointment is an estate, right or interest in property within the meaning of RC § 2107.50, and may be exercised by the general residuary clause of a donee's will, there being no different intention manifested: Dollar Sav. & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 61 OO(2d) 134, 32 OMisc 81, 285 NE(2d) 768 (CP 1972).

4. Under this section, an after acquired interest in real estate passes under a will provision devising a partial interest in such real estate "unless such will manifests a different intention;" therefore a will which states, "I give and devise my one-half interest therein to my brother," manifests the intention that a one-half interest is all that testatrix devised: Graves v. Graves, 79 OLA 262, 155 NE(2d) 540 (PC).

Scope and construction

1. Under this section, lands acquired after the making of a will which disposes of all the testator's property owned by him at the time of his death, for specified purposes, will pass under its provisions: Pruden v. Pruden, 14 OS 251; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

2. The rule in Pruden's case, 14 OS 251, applies in a case where, at the time of making his will, the testator was interested in the property as a purchaser of a mortgage therein, of which property he subsequently became the owner in fee by conveyance of the equity of redemption: Lee v. Scott, 5 CC(NS) 369, 16 CD 799.

3. The doctrine of implied revocation of wills that formerly existed at common law does not obtain in Ohio as to after-acquired property devised by will, or to devised specific property conveyed by a testator after the execution of the will, and reconveyed to him before his death: Ridenour v. Callahan, 8 CC(NS) 585, 19 CD 65; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

4. "Manifestly," as used in this section, should receive but little consideration in construing wills; and where it reasonably appears from the will that the testator intended to devise after-acquired lands, the intention should be given effect notwithstanding these intensives: Carrel v. Carrel, 14 CD 416.

Common law rule

9. Prior to the enactment of this section in its present form, it would seem that lands acquired subsequent to the execution of a will would not, in general, pass to a residuary devisee without a republication of the will: Reynolds v. Shirley, 7 O (pt2) 39.

10. But even then it was held that if the testator, at the time of the making of the will, was in possession of land under a verbal contract of purchase, the devise of such land was good notwithstanding the fact that the legal title thereto was acquired after the execution of the will; for the acquisition of the title did not act as a revocation of the will, and the legal title therefor passed to the devisee and not to the heir: Smith v. Jones, 4 O 115.

11. A will executed in 1821, devising all and singular the testator's real estate and personal property, passes real estate acquired by descent after its execution and before his death: McClaskey v. Barr, 54 Fed 781, 7 OFD 556.

Statutory rule

16. Lands acquired subsequent to the execution of the will do not pass thereby unless the testator's intention to include therein such after-acquired property clearly and manifestly appears on the face of the will itself: Wright v. Masters, 81 OS 304, 90 NE 797, 135 AmSt 790.

17. Under a will which provides, "The balance and remainder of my property of every kind and description I give and bequeath to A and his wife, B, and to C and his wife D, share and share alike; that is, to A and his said wife the one-half of the amount left after all of the above gifts, and to C and his said wife the other half remaining after all of the above gifts," it is testator's intention, manifestly appearing on the will, that after-acquired realty shall pass: Strock v. Strock, 6 App 275, 26 CC(NS) 561, 28 CD 145.

18. Where a testatrix describing the estate devised uses interchangeably the terms "all my real estate" and "all the real estate of which I die seized," the same is sufficient to include after-acquired real property: Blacker v. Litten, 10 App 180, 29 OCA 423.

19. This section provides that after-acquired real estate, as well as personal property, shall pass under the will "if such shall clearly and manifestly appear by the will to have been the intention of the testator." While this intention must "appear by the will," still testator's circumstances and surroundings may be considered, but they must be the circumstances surrounding her at the date of the will, and not long afterward: Newton v. McKinstry, 16 CC(NS) 219, 28 CD 536.

20. A disposition by will of "all the rest and residue of my estate and property," makes it "clear and manifest" that the testatrix intended that any real estate she might acquire after making the will should pass under it: Newton v. McKinstry, 16 CC(NS) 219, 28 CD 536.

[§ 2107.50.1] § 2107.501 [Sale or condemnation award.]

(A) If specifically devised or bequeathed property is sold by a guardian, or if a condemnation award or insurance proceeds are paid to a guardian as a result of condemnation, fire, or casualty to the property, the specific devisee or legatee has the right to a general pecuniary devise or bequest equal to the net proceeds of sale, the condemnation award, or the insurance proceeds, and such a devise or bequest shall be treated as property subject to section 2107.54 of the Revised Code. This section does not apply if subsequent to the sale, condemnation, or casualty, it is adjudicated that the disability of the testator has ceased and the testator survives the adjudication by one year. The right of the specific devisee or legatee is reduced by any right he has under division (B) of this section.

(B) A specific devisee or legatee has the right of the remaining specifically devised or bequeathed property, and:

(1) Any balance on the purchase price, together with any security interest owing from a purchaser to the testator at death by reason of sale of the property;

(2) Any amount of condemnation award unpaid at death for the taking of the property;

(3) Any proceeds unpaid at death on fire or casualty insurance on the property;

(4) Property owned by the testator at his death as a result of foreclosure, or obtained in lieu of foreclosure, of the security for a specifically devised or bequeathed obligation.

1. This section, providing when whole estate shall pass, is not effective to defeat the intention of the testator expressed or clearly implied: Heath v. Cleveland, 114 OS 535, 151 NE 649.

2. In case of devise of real estate to A, and in case of A's death before taking possession or without issue of his body, over, the word "or," in view of language of whole will, may be construed as "and," hence estate does not pass to ulterior devisees unless both events occur: Van Tilburg v. Martin, 120 OS 26, 165 NE 539; Ward v. Barrows, 2 OS 241.

3. Where land is devised by language clearly indicating that fee simple is intended to be conveyed, and without words of limitation, devise cannot be limited by subsequent doubtful provision placing limitation thereon: Baker v. Alexander, 24 App 117, 156 NE 223.

4. Under the provisions of this section, in devises of real property, an absolute fee simple title passes if nothing appears in the will showing a contrary intent; the use of words of inheritance in the devise is the expression of an intent that the devisee shall have a fee simple title: Jones v. Jones, 48 App 138, 1 OO 111, 192 NE 811 [affirming 30 NP(NS) 81].

5. A devise to a wife of one-half of all the testator's real estate is a devise in fee; but such devise is controlled, and the interest reduced to an estate determinable when the youngest child arrives at full age, if the will contains a subsequent clause providing that at that time the property shall be disposed of and divided equally among the children: Howe v. Fuller, 19 O 51.

6. No words of perpetuity are essential in a will to pass an estate of inheritance; therefore, if the language used, as descriptive of the estate, is general, and sufficient to comprehend the property, without any words of limitation or provision in the will qualifying the interest devised, a fee in the land will pass: Thompson v. Hoop, 6 OS 480.

7. A devise "to my wife, Mary Ellison," which, at common law, imported a mere life estate, would, by this statute, pass a fee, unless the contrary intention appeared in the will: Stableton v. Ellison, 21 OS 527.

8. Construction of the words "dying without issue," upon certain conditions: Bates v. Zinsmeister, 26 OS 461.

9. Where the provisions of a will in each and all of its items are, when considered as an entirety, so obscure that, with the aid of all the light that can be shed on it by extraneous circumstances, no definite idea can be formed of the intention of the testator in any of the dispositions he has attempted to make, it should be held void for uncertainty, and the property left to descend and be distributed according to law: Cope v. Cope, 45 OS 464, 15 NE 206.

10. Under a will which bequeaths half of the residue to A and the other half to A in trust for B, to be paid to B in installments with a gift over to A in case B dies before such installments are paid, the entire estate is disposed of; and if A dies before B and B dies before such installments are all paid, the unpaid balance passes to the estate of A and is not intestate property: Punch v. Clayton, 10 App 145.

10.1 Where testator by will devises to his children certain specified realty in absolute language without words of limitation, and later in the same item attempts to limit or qualify the estate by providing "all of which real estate I give and bequeath unto the said Jane and Harvey unto them and their children, which real estate I design for their use, not to be disposed of by sale, neither by them nor their immediate children; in case either of the above children should die then the other to possess the whole," there arises a repugnancy, the language forbidding alienation is void, such qualifying provision is in the nature of a precatory declaration, and the devisees take a fee simple estate: Heath v. Borst, 13 App 115.

10.2 Under will devising to wife all property belonging to testator and reciting testator's request that property left at decease of wife shall be equally divided between others, wife took estate absolute and in fee simple, and provision for subsequent division of property was ineffectual: Trumbull v. Stentz, 30 App 34, 164 NE 57.

11. This section creates merely a rule of interpretation which must give way to the otherwise clearly expressed intention of the testator, but is to be applied where the language of the grant is such as to require interpretation: First Presbyterian Church v. Tarr, 63 App 286, 17 OO 57, 26 NE(2d) 597.

11.1 This section, which reads in part "Every devise . . . of lands . . . shall convey all the estate of the devisor therein, which he could lawfully devise, unless it clearly appears by the will that the devisor intended to convey a lesser estate," provides a rule of construction to be employed only when it aids a court to ascertain the intention of testator: Perdue v. Morris, 93 App 538, 51 OO 232, 114 NE(2d) 286.

11.2 Where a testator devises a life estate in real property to his wife and, at her death, to his son, but "should he die leaving no children" then to another, the words, "should he die leaving no children," refer to the death of the son without issue during the lifetime of his mother, and, where the son survives his mother title to such property becomes absolute in him: Trumbo v. Trumbo, 106 App 382, 7 OO(2d) 112, 155 NE(2d) 62.

11.3 A devise of real property "for the use and purpose hereinafter stated" to a county "to be held and occupied by the county as and for a county experiment farm" and conditioned upon the acceptance of such property for such use and purpose, otherwise the property to go to other persons, vests in the county a fee simple absolute, where the county so accepts the property: Taylor v. Dickerson, 113 App 344, 17 OO(2d) 367, 178 NE(2d) 46.

11.4 When a fee simple estate is given in one clause of the will in clear and decisive terms, such estate cannot be cut down by raising a doubt upon the extent, meaning, and application of a subsequent clause, nor by any subsequent words that are not as clear and decisive as the words of the clause giving the estate: Kohout v. Kohout, 4 OMisc 38, 31 OO(2d) 180, 203 NE(2d) 869.

12. This section proceeds upon the theory that the testator is presumed to have intended to complete the testamentary undertaking upon which he entered. When that presumption is plainly inapplicable, this statute does not govern. So it cannot avail to compel the courts to correct a false description of land: Gillis v. Long, 8 NP(NS) 1, 19 OD 253.

13. Words of perpetuity were never necessary in Ohio in a will to carry a fee, and now the above section goes further and passes a fee unless restrictive language expressly denies it: Patterson v. Earhart, 6 OD(NP) 16, 11 DecRep 787, 29 Bull 313.

14. If testator has made a gift of land without specifying the interest conveyed, it will be presumed that testator passes a fee simple, if testator possessed such estate; but the subsequent provisions of such will may reduce the interest of the devisee to a life estate, if the language is positive and clear: In re Youtsey, 15 OLR 125.

15. A devise of the whole of the proceeds of a farm to a society is a devise of the farm in fee. And where, in such case, the will prohibited a sale by the society, the prohibition is inoperative. And a quitclaim deed given by such society conveys an estate by purchase: Minor v. Shippley, 21 App 236, 152 NE 768, 23 OLR 551.

15.1 Where the item vesting a fee simple is clear and unambiguous, it cannot be modified by a subsequent attempt to lessen that fee already conferred: Union Trust Co. v. Taylor, 34 OLR 327.

15.2 Where an item in a will, standing alone, clearly conveys an absolute title without words of limitation, the devise cannot be reduced by subsequent vague and doubtful provisions: Martin v. Martin, 27 OLR 127.

15.3 A devise by a husband of all his real estate to his wife "to have and use for her own personal benefit and to distribute as she may direct," is an unconditional devise with power of disposition: Evans v. Molyneux, 26 OLR 102.

16. A devise of realty to minors "on their arriving at age," does not prevent an estate in fee simple vesting in such devisees: Truxell v. Truxell, 17 OLA 137.

17. A devise of all the testator's property to his wife "to be hers absolutely" conveys a fee simple estate which is not cut down to a lesser estate by a later item in the will providing "in case that my wife and I should die leaving no will I leave all my property real and personal to my children to be equally divided between them": Goubeaux v. Westfield, 18 OLA 54.

18. A will giving to the testator's wife all his property "so long as she bears my name," gives to the widow a life estate, subject to termination in case she remarries, and upon her death without remarriage, it descends to testator's heirs as intestate property: Failor v. Schmiedel, 18 OLA 106.

19. A devise of "all my real estate," to the testator's wife "to belong to" her "as long as she remains my widow" gives to the widow a life estate; Mentzer v. Shondel, 18 OLA 368.

20. Where testatrix, on devise of land to museum for scientific purposes and preservation of relics thereon, reserved no interest, she would have mere possibility of reverter: Harvard College v. Jewett, 11 F(2d) 119.

§ 2107.52 Death of devisee or legatee. (GC § 10504-73)

When a devise of real or personal estate is made to a relative of a testator and such relative was dead at the time the will was made, or dies thereafter, leaving issue surviving the testator, such issue shall take the estate devised as the devisee would have done if he had survived the testator. If the testator devised a residuary estate or the entire estate after debts, other legacies and devises, general or specific, or an interest less than a fee or absolute ownership to such devisee and relatives of the testator and such devisee leaves no issue, the estate devised shall vest in such other devisees surviving the testator in such proportions as the testamentary share of each devisee in the devised property bears to the total of the shares of all of the surviving devisees, unless a different disposition is made or required by the will.

1. Where by her will, a testatrix left the residue of her estate to two of her sisters, their heirs and assigns forever, and one of such sisters predeceased the testatrix, leaving an adopted daughter who survived the testatrix, such adopted daughter by virtue of the provisions of this section and GC § 10512-19 (114 v 474) (Repealed and reenacted GC § 10512-23 (120 v 434 (440)) (RC § 3107.13), took the estate given her adopting mother: Flynn v. Bredbeck, 147 OS 49, 33 OO 243, 68 NE(2d) 75.

2. At most, former GC § 10504-73, and the former analogous GC § 10581 represent an effort of the general assembly to make certain that the English common-law rule (that a portion of a residuary legacy which is not to a class and which lapses passes as intestate property) shall not be applied in certain instances, even if that rule should be recognized as the law of Ohio: Commerce Nat. Bank v. Browning, 158 OS 54, 48 OO 28, 107 NE(2d) 120.

3. The law does not favor lapses of charitable bequests: In re Barker, 162 OS 531, 55 OO 421, 124 NE(2d) 421.

3.1 Whether a legacy lapses by the death of the legatee in the testator's lifetime is governed by the law of the testator's domicile: Heater v. Mittendorf, 72 App 4, 26 OO 508, 50 NE(2d) 559.

4. The daughter of a testator's wife cannot, under this section, take property which such wife would have taken under her husband's will had she survived him: Kegler v. Kempter, 74 App 279, 29 OO 418, 58 NE(2d) 701.

4.1 General Code § 10512-23, as now in force, does not apply only to the rights of an adopted child under the antilapse statute; it gives to an adopted child every right and privilege of inheritance which is given a natural child, excepting only the inheritance of property "expressly limited to heirs of the body of the adopting parent or parents": In re Friedman, 86 App 97, 40 OO 510, 88 NE(2d) 230 (reversed 154 OS 1, 42 OO 97, 93 NE(2d) 273).

5. For history of this section, see Everhard v. Brown, 75 App 451, 31 OO 268, 62 NE(2d) 901.

6. The phrase "if such devisee," appearing at the beginning of the second sentence of this section, relative to succession on the death of a devisee, refers back to the phrase "child or other relative" appearing in the first sentence of the section: Hoetsch v. Lonsway, 81 App 361, 37 OO 207, 79 NE(2d) 363.

6.1 When a remainder is given to persons named or otherwise definitely designated, and there is no clause of survivorship, the fact that a construction of the will which will render the remainder contingent may produce an intestacy as to the share of any of such persons who may die without leaving children surviving, during the continuance of the precedent estate, is a consideration which will influence the court to regard the remainder as a vested one: Cleveland Trust Co. v.

Andrus, 95 App 503, 54 OO 125, 121 NE(2d) 68.

6.2 Where a testator devises to his brother an interest in real estate, and devises the residue of his estate of every kind and description, which he has a right to dispose of, to another brother and sister, the devise of real estate does not lapse as a result of the death of the devisee prior to that of the testator, but passes as part of the residuary estate: Zangerle v. Thomas, 115 App 37, 17 OO(2d) 432, 176 NE(2d) 157.

6.3 A devise of real property to the widow of the testator, for life, "and upon her death said property and the title thereto shall vest in the name and title of my sons ... absolutely and in fee simple," which language anticipates absolute ownership of the property by the testator's sons, subject to the life estate of his widow, is a devise of vested remainders to the sons as of the death of the testator: Lane v. Lane, 116 App 100, 21 OO(2d) 375, 187 NE(2d) 71.

6.4 Where a husband named as a devisee in the will of his spouse dies prior to the time of the death of said spouse, or the time of his death comes within the "presumption of order of death" as stated in RC § 2105.21, the devisee, not being a relative of the testatrix within the meaning of RC § 2107.52, and the will not containing a residuary clause, nor any other provision showing any other intention of the testatrix, the devise to the deceased spouse lapses and the testatrix dies intestate as to such property designated in such devise: Muckerheide v. Zink, 1 OApp (2d) 76, 30 OO(2d) 103, 202 NE(2d) 725.

6.5 A testamentary provision for "lineal descendants of my blood" furnishes "other clear identification" as required by RC § 3107.13(B), of the children of testator's predeceased son, without naming them, so as to enable them to succeed to a designated portion of testator's estate, although such children were previously adopted by nonrelatives: Saintignon v. Saintignon, 5 OApp(2d) 133, 34 OO(2d) 243, 214 NE(2d) 124.

7. Where a surviving spouse dies within three days after the death of the husband, leaving a will in which all of her property is bequeathed and devised to her husband, her estate passes to the "issue" of her husband, including an adopted child, as provided for in this section: Harrison v. Hillegas, 13 OO 523 (PC).

8. This section has no application to a bequest to two relatives of the testator who die without issue before the testator if such bequest is no part of a residuary clause; and such bequest lapses and descends as intestate property: Bryan v. Bryan, 17 OO 48 (PC).

9. A specific bequest and devise to a half-brother who predeceases the testator, leaving no issue, does not pass under this section, but lapses: Lane v. Berk, 23 OO 41, 7 OSupp 186 (PC).

10. The division of an estate in remainder which vests at the death of the life tenant is governed by the statutes of descent and distribution in effect at the death of the life tenant (this section): Holman v. Warrick, 23 OO 397, 8 OSupp 132 (PC).

11. Where in a will testator devised one-half of his estate to his wife, one-fourth to his son, and one-fourth to his granddaughter, and the son predeceased the testator without issue, the latter part of this section does not apply and the one-fourth share descends as intestate property: Kohn v. Kerr, 39 OO 381, 87 NE(2d) 489 (PC), discussed 19 CinLRev 301.

12. The wife of the testator is not to be considered as a relative entitled to a proportionate share of the one-fourth interest of a son who predeceased the testator without issue: Kohn v. Kerr, 39 OO 381, 87 NE(2d) 489 (PC), discussed 19 CinLRev 301.

13. Where a will leaves the residue of an estate to two stepdaughters and a niece to be divided equally among the three, and one of the stepdaughters has predeceased the testatrix, her one-third of the residue lapses and goes to the heirs of the testatrix as intestate property: Sands v. Ross, 41 OO 38, 89 NE(2d) 99 (PC).

14. Under this section when a devise of a residuary estate is made to a child or other relative of the testator and if such child or other relative was dead at the time the will was made, or dies thereafter, leaving no issue, the estate devised to such deceased devisee shall pass to and vest in such other devisee or devisees surviving the testator in such proportions as the testamentary share of each devisee in the devised property bears to the total of the shares of all the surviving devisees: Kammer v. Raver, 43 OO 302, 96 NE(2d) 439 (PC).

15. Where two of testator's eight children died, leaving children, prior to the execution of the will, one child after the execution of the will but before testator's death, leaving children, and the remaining five survived him, the residuary clause of his will leaving property "to be divided equally among my surviving children," refers to the five children which survived him. The right of issue of a deceased child to take its parent's share under this section is based upon the fact that the testator did, as a matter of fact, devise an estate to the deceased child: Kelley v. Talifer, 31 OLA 602.

16. This section, the purpose of which is to prevent the lapsing of bequests and devises clearly made to a child or other relative of a testator when such primary legatee or devisee dies before the testator, but leaving issue which survives him, is inapplicable where a primary legatee, not a blood relative, survived the testator but died before the distribution of his estate: Wilcox v. Central Nat. Bank, 46 OLA 65 (App).

17. Where the latter part of lapsing statute uses the words "one or more children or relatives," the word "relatives" should, in accordance with the maxim noscitur a sociis, be restricted to relationships which are consanguineous and not merely affinitive and therefore when a will devises the estate to son of testator, wife and granddaughter, the devise to the son who predeceases testator without issue does not pass under this section but passes as intestate property: In re Needle's Estate, 87 NE(2d) 489 (App).

19. Where a will contains a general residuary provision for disposition of all of the testator's property and a bequest of part of the residue lapses because of the death of the legatee one day after the death of the testator that part of the residue passes to the surviving residuary legatee instead of passing as intestate property: Schuck v. Schuck, 7 OO(2d) 198, 156 NE(2d) 351 (PC).

20. A bequest in a will "my brother, Howard Palmer, and I own a dwelling . . . and I give and devise my one-half interest therein to my brother, Howard Palmer, his heirs and assigns forever," does not lapse by reason of the fact that Howard Palmer predeceased the testatrix: Graves v. Graves, 79 OLA 262, 155 NE(2d) 540 (PC).

22. The word "issue" as used in this section, means "descendant," adopted as well as natural: Third Nat. Bank v. Glendening, 17 OO(2d) 337, 175 NE(2d) 239 (PC).

23. A grandchild of a relative of the testator comes within the term "issue" as used in the anti-lapse statute: Third Nat. Bank v. Glendening, 17 OO(2d) 337, 175 NE(2d) 239 (PC).

24. The phrase, "relative of a testator," contained in this section, does not include those "related" by affinity: Kovar v. Kortan, 32 OO(2d) 302, 3 OMisc 63, 209 NE(2d) 762 (PC).

25. As to bequests made to certain relatives of the testator in default of there being any grandchildren of the testator who survived his widow and children by ten years, the language of a codicil which provided that any property not finally disposed of under the will and codicil should pass to residuary legatees did not require a different disposition of the remainders than is contemplated by the anti-lapse statute, this section, especially since two of the named remaindermen had died since the execution of the will and the codicil made no change as to their bequests: Schneider v. Dorr, 32 OO(2d) 391, 3 OMisc 103, 210 NE(2d) 311 (PC).

26. A bequest of "all the rest and residue of property" which testatrix owns is sufficient to include a lapsed legacy: Kellogg v. Campbell, 3 OMisc 29, 32 OO(2d) 252, 209 NE(2d) 645.

27. A provision that a bequest is contingent upon the survival of the testator by the legatee, a relative of the testator, without an alternative provision that such bequest, upon the failure of the beneficiary to survive, shall go to another, does not prevent the application of this section, and such bequest will be taken by any issue of the named beneficiary who survive the testator: Detzel v. Nieberding, 36 OO(2d) 358, 7 OMisc 262, 219 NE(2d) 327 (PC).

28. A bequest conditioned by—who shall be living at the time of my decease—will prevent the operation of the antilapse statute, this section, and will cause the bequest to lapse: Day v. Brooks, 39 OO(2d) 441, 10 OMisc 273, 224 NE(2d) 557 (PC).

31. The anti-lapse statute, is inapplicable where a sister of the testatrix, the sole residuary devisee, dies without issue two months after the death of the testatrix: McSteen v. Barclays Bank Limited, 40 OO(2d) 489, 227 NE(2d) 280 (PC).

32. A bequest which contains a limitation to those of the group named who survive the testator is not subject to the anti-lapse statute: Shalkhauser v. Beach, 43 OO(2d) 20, 14 OMisc 1, 233 NE(2d) 527 (PC).

33. A bequest to a relative by affinity who predeceased testator, leaving no issue, lapses and fails under residuary clause of will. The anti-lapse statute does not apply to relative by affinity: Evans v. Cass, 51 OO(2d) 417, 256 NE(2d) 738 (CP).

34. When a relative devisee or legatee dies within thirty days after death of decedent, leaving a widow and one child, the child takes the share of decedent's estate that her father would have received by virtue of RC §§ 2105.21 and 2107.52. Ruble v. Waites, 72 OO(2d) 389 (PC 1975).

Scope

1. This section does not apply if to give it effect would defeat the declared intention of the testator: Larwill v. Ewing, 73 OS 177, 76 NE 503.

Common law rule

6. Where a wife died before her husband, provision for her in the latter's will lapsed at common law, and this is not changed by the above section: Trustees v. Wise, 17 CC 659, 6 CD 703.

7. Former GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52) changing common law rule relating to lapsing of devises and legacies should be liberally construed: Gale v. Keyes, 45 App 61, 186 NE 755, 38 OLR 227.

Statutory rule—child or relative

12. Where a devisee dies prior to the testator, such devisee not being a child or relative of testator within former GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52), and such will contains no residuary clause nor any provision showing any other intention, such devise lapses, and such testator dies intestate as to such property: Foreman v. Medina County Nat. Bank, 119 OS 17, 162 NE 42.

13. Will, whereby testator divided residuary estate among his children with devises over on alternate contingencies of death of any children "leaving issue" or "leaving no issue," held referable to death of children at any time, notwithstanding statute preventing lapses: Ohio Nat. Bank v. Harris, 126 OS 360, 185 NE 532.

14. Where testatrix, in will dividing estate between her own and her husband's relatives, knew that certain named relatives of her husband were dead, devises to them were void: Nelson v. Minton, 46 App 39, 187 NE 576, 38 OLR 287.

15. The phrase "other relative" should be restricted to relationships of the character indicated by the associated word "child," and should include those which are consanguineous, but not those which are affinitive. A devise by a wife to her husband will lapse if his death precedes hers, although he leaves issue of a former marriage surviving her: Schaefer v. Bernhardt, 76 OS 443, 81 NE 640 [affirming Bernhardt v. Bernhardt, 7 CC(NS) 517, 18 CD 686]; Hess v. American Bible Soc., 26 CC(NS) 439, 28 CD 172.

16. Under the provisions of this section, which are intended to prevent lapse of a legacy, the words "child or other relative of the testator," apply only to legitimate children; and a legacy to an illegitimate child of testator will lapse if such child dies before such testator, leaving children; even though it is evident from the relation of the parties that testator recognized his moral duty to provide for such child: Owens v. Humbert, 5 App 212, 25 CC(NS) 522, 27 CD 307, 61 Bull 259 (Ed); LaRoche v. LaRoche, 10 App 242, 29 OCA 113, 30 CD 519, 63 Bull 285 (Ed) [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 320, 63 Bull 398].

17. Under a will which devises property to testator's children by name and provides that if one of them should die without issue, his share should pass to the survivors, and a codicil which makes provision for an afterborn child, such afterborn child takes as one of the survivors on the death of one of the other children without issue: Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 App 337 [motion to certify record overruled, Gott v. Reynolds, 16 OLR 364, 63 Bull 473].

17.1 Where a will devises real estate to the brothers and sisters of the testatrix, individually, with no words of survivorship and no residuary clause, and one of such devisees predeceases the testatrix, leaving no issue, the devise as to the share of such devisee lapses: Bishop v. Jones, 29 OLR 48.

18. Where a will bequeathing property to testatrix's brothers and sisters provides that if any of such brothers or sisters predecease testatrix, the share of the estate bequeathed to such brother or sister shall pass to his or her child or children, and a brother of testatrix dies leaving two children, one of whom predeceases testatrix, leaving issue, such issue will, under authority of this section, share equally with the living child of the deceased brother: Thatcher v. Trouslet, 52 App 74, 6 OO 134, 3 NE(2d) 57.

19. This section is silent as to the disposition of a general legacy to a child or other relative who dies prior to the death of the testator without issue: Stevens v. Hill, 33 NP(NS) 39, 1 OO 247 (PC).

20. Where a son of the testator died prior to the death of the testator, owing testator an amount evidenced by promissory notes, but testator at no time presented the notes as a claim against the estate of the son, the amount of the notes will be set off against the share of testator's estate passing to a surviving child of the son under the provisions of this section, the child taking as the devisee would have done had he survived the testator: Deibel v. McFadden, 4 OO 420 (PC).

21. Under former GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52), the term "other relative" refers to one related by consanguinity and not by affinity: Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129, 29 OD 174 [appealed to court of appeals, judgment of court of appeals reversed, Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315].

—Leaving issue

26. Adopted child cannot save a legacy from lapsing. "Issue" does not include such child: Phillips v. McConica, 59 OS 1, 51 NE 445, 69 AmSt. 753; Theobald v. Fugman, 64 OS 473, 60 NE 606.

27. The fact that an adopted child of a devisee survived such devisee does not prevent lapse: Denley v. Wheeler, 24 NP(NS) 357.

28. This section permits no distinction between the issue of one who dies before the will was made and of one who dies after it: Shumaker v. Pearson, 67 OS 330, 65 NE 1005.

29. Where a devisee, who dies before testator, is indebted to the latter's estate, his issue is entitled to take only so much of the amount bequeathed as is left after payment of the debt of his parent, the primary devisee: Baker v. Carpenter, 69 OS 15, 68 NE 577.

30. Where property was devised to the "legal heirs" of testator's deceased brother, all persons who, at the time of the death of the deceased brother, are his "legal heirs," shall share in the property, and if any such "legal heirs" had died when the will was made leaving issue surviving the testator, such issue shall take the share of such deceased "legal heir": Youngblood v. Youngblood, 11 CC(NS) 276, 20 CD 482 [affirmed, without report, 78 OS 405].

31. Under former GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52), a widow of a legatee under a will is not entitled to the legacy, if the legatee dies before the testator, nor do the brothers of such legatee have any claim to the legacy: Robbins v. Pigg, 29 OCA 153, 35 CD 682 [motion to certify record overruled, Pigg v. Robbins, 16 OLR 80, 63 Bull 196].

32. If a deceased legatee left, as her next of kin, her husband, the legacy will lapse, for he is not her issue so as to come within the above provision: Norwood v. Mills, 1 NP 314, 3 OD 356; Hess v. American Bible Soc., 26 CC(NS) 439, 28 CD 172.

33. Testator devised his property to his wife for life, and after that to his children who were then living, providing that, if any of said children had previously died leaving issue, said issue should receive the share of its parent. One child had so died, leaving issue who had also died, leaving issue in turn. Held: The issue of such deceased issue takes the share of its grandparent: Moon v. Hepford, 2 NP 365, 3 OD 508.

34. A devise of real and personal property to be divided equally among the children of the devisors' brothers and sisters, some of the children being dead at the time of the making of the will, but leaving issue surviving the devisors, surviving issue of the deceased children take the share of their deceased parents: Mather v. Copeland, 5 NP 151, 7 OD 257.

—Gifts to a class

39. The provision of this section applies to a devise to "children" as a class: Woodley v. Paxson, 46 OS 307, 24 NE 599.

40. The provision of this section applies to a devise to nephews and nieces as a "class," as well as to "children" as a class: Porterfield v. Porterfield, 4 NP (NS) 654, 17 OD 448.

41. Under a gift to a class related to testator by affinity, the share of a member of the class who dies before the testator passes to the surviving members of the class, and not to the issue of such deceased member: Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129, 29 OD 174 [appealed to court of appeals, judgment of court of appeals reversed, Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315].

42. Where the devise was to "my nieces and nephews that are living," equally, one of whom, the father of the plaintiff, was the scrivener of the will and had transacted testator's business for many years but died prior to death of testator, plaintiff is entitled to that share of the devise which his father would have taken had he survived (former GC § 10581 [see now RC § 2107.52]): Gale v. Keyes, 45 App 61, 186 NE 755, 38 OLR 227.

43. Expression "and their legal representatives" construed: Lansdowne v. Lansdowne, 20 OLA 520.

44. The word "heirs" as used in the devise to E "my bookkeeper and his heirs forever," is a word of limitation and not of substitution, and caused the devise to lapse, where the death of the devisee occurred before that of the testator: Evers v. Williams, 29 NP(NS) 197 (affirmed 37 OLR 291).

Residuary gift

47. If there is no residuary clause, a lapsed legacy passes as intestate property; even though a bequest had been given to the next of kin as his full share of testator's estate: Leopold v. Weaver, 9 App 379, 29 OCA 567 [motion to certify record overruled, Weaver v. Leopold, 16 OLR 465, 64 Bull 40].

48. A lapsed legacy passes to the residuary legatee: Robbins v. Pigg, 29 OCA 153, 35 CD 682 [motion to certify record overruled, Pigg v. Robbins, 16 OLR 80, 63 Bull 196].

49. "Residuary estate" is here used in a technical sense, and should receive its technical construction: Jewett v. Jewett, 21 CC 278, 12 CD 131 [affirmed, 67 OS 541]; Hess v. American Bible Soc., 26 CC(NS) 439, 28 CD 172.

Other questions

54. Will providing for disposition of remainder interest in real estate or proceeds thereof, and for distribution of household goods, after death of life tenant, held to dispose of testatrix' "entire estate" within statute providing for disposition of share of childless devisee predeceasing testator: West v. Aigler, 127 OS 370, 188 NE 563.

55. Petition by widow as sole devisee of residuary legatee (former GC §§ 10857, 10858 [see now RC § 2107.46]), for construction of will of original testator, alleging that trustee refused to distribute any part of income to her after her husband's death, states cause of action under former GC § 10581 (see now RC § 2107.52): Webb v. Biles, 27 App 197, 161 NE 218.

56. A legacy given in payment of a debt, by the express terms of the will, does not lapse by the death of the legatee before the testator, but when by the will it appears that testator's intention was to confer a bounty it is not competent to show a different intent and to prevent a lapse by proof that the legacy was given in payment of a debt: McNeal v. Pierce, 73 OS 7, 75 NE 938, 112 AmSt 695, 1 LRA(NS) 1117.

57. Where the vesting of a legacy is not postponed by the will, the death of the legatee, before payment, does not cast the legacy back into the estate, but it becomes payable to the personal representative of the deceased legatee in the manner provided in the will: Phillips v. Cole, 11 App 431, 30 OCA 49.

58. There is no presumption that the devisee survives the testator where both die in a disaster, but evidence sufficient to establish a probability is enough where there is no conflicting testimony: Ware v. Kinch, 29 OCA 353, 35 CD 547.

59. Where testator by the second item of his will devised his property to his daughter and to all his grandchildren, "share and share alike," providing that, if any one of them die before the testator, the estate should go to the survivors, "share and share alike," and later, desiring to revoke this devise as to one granddaughter, did so by codicil, thus: "I hereby revoke so much of item second of my will as would include said Emma, and I hereby give and devise to my daughter, and all my other grandchildren, all my estate of every kind, share and share alike." Held: The codicil abrogated the provision of survivorship contained in the second item of the will: Jackson v. Shinnick, 3 NP 211, 6 OD 37.

Evidence

66. In case of death of a devisee before that of testator, it will be presumed that the testator had in mind the statute providing for descent of property in such a case (former GC § 10581 [see now RC § 2107.52]) and parol evidence is inadmissible to show a contrary intention: Ballman v. Ballman, 25 OLR 144.

[§ 2107.52.1] § 2107.521 [Power of appointment not exercised.]

A general residuary clause in a will, or a will making general disposition of all of the testator's property, does not exercise a power of appointment held by the testator unless specific reference is made to the power.

HISTORY: 136 v S 145. Eff 1-1-76.

See provisions, § 3 of SB 145 (136 v —) following RC § 2101.01.

§ 2107.53 Undevised real estate applied to debts. (GC § 10504-74)

When part of the real estate of a testator descends to his heirs because it was not disposed of by his will, and his personal estate is insufficient to pay his debts, the undevised real estate shall be chargeable first with the debts, as far as it will go, in exoneration of the real estate that is devised, unless it appears from the will that a different arrangement of assets was made for the payment of such testator's debts, in which case such assets shall be applied for that purpose in conformity with the will.

HISTORY: GC § 10504-74; 114 v 320 (360). Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10582.

When is a trust not a trust? Article by Robert P. Goldman and Evans L. DeCamp of the Cincinnati bar. 16 CinLRev 191.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. "A" inherited real estate from wife under former GC § 8574 (see now RC § 2105.06), and mortgaged the same and died intestate, seized of the same, leaving personalty sufficient to pay all debts, including said mortgage; the mortgage must be paid from the personalty: Medina County Nat. Bank v. Foreman, 27 App 400, 161 NE 366.

2. Heirs hold land of their ancestor subject to his debts and a purchaser from them takes the incumbrance with the title: Stiver v. Stiver, 8 O 217.

3. Debts of deceased are a lien on his realty, in default of personal assets: Ramsdall v. Craighill, 9 O 197.

4. A provision in a will, whereby testator gives all of his personal property together with certain real property to his wife, shows that he does not intend that his debts shall be paid out of the personal property: Harbeson v. Mellinger, 2 App 75, 18 CC(NS) 504, 25 CD 195.

6. A provision in a will to the effect that "out of my estate my children shall pay my funeral expenses and all my other debts," includes not only the debts which the testator owed at the time of his death, but all other obligations created by law which are to be paid out of his estate, such as the cost of administering such estate: Harbeson v. Mellinger, 2 App 75, 18 CC(NS) 504, 25 CD 195.

7. Where a will provided that the real estate be sold and the proceeds divided into nine parts, eight of which were to be given to specified heirs, and one part was left undisposed of, the undivided one-ninth was first applicable to the payment of testator's debts in exoneration of the real estate that was devised: Gilson v. Gilson, 11 CC(NS) 49, 20 CD 322.

When real or personal property, devised or bequeathed, is taken from the devisee or legatee for the payment of a debt of the testator, the other devisees and legatees must contribute their respective proportions of the loss to the person from whom such payment was taken so that the loss will fall equally on all the devisees and lega-tees according to the value of the property received by each of them.

If, by making a specific devise or bequest, the testator has exempted a devisee or legatee from liability to contribute to the payment of debts, or if the will makes a different provision for the payment of debts than the one prescribed in this section, the estate must be applied in conformity with the will.

A devisee or legatee shall not be prejudiced by the fact that the holder of a claim secured by lien on the property devised or bequeathed failed to present such claim to the executor or administrator for allowance within the time allowed by sections 2117.06 and 2117.07 of the Revised Code, and the devisee or legatee shall be restored by right of contribution, exoneration, or subrogation, to the position he would have occupied if such claim had been presented and allowed for such sum as is justly owing thereon.

This section does not affect the liability of the whole estate of the testator for the payment of his debts. This section applies only to the marshaling of the assets as between those who hold or claim under the will.

HISTORY: GC §§ 10504-75, 10504-76, 10504-77; 114 v 320 (360, 361); 119 v 394 (398); 119 v 394 (397), § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC §§ 10583 to 10585.

Comment

If the holder of a decedent's note, secured by mortgage upon the decedent's property, fails to present the claim upon the note to the executor or administrator within the period limited by statute, the claim in personam upon the note is barred. The lien of the mortgage upon the property continues unimpaired. The second paragraph of this section provides that under the foregoing circumstances, the rights of the devisee and legatee shall be the same as if a claim had been presented and allowed. This provision applies to any lien which will encumber the property in the hands of the devisee and legatee.

Construction and application

1. This section construed and applied in Campbell v. Lloyd, 162 OS 203, 55 OO 102, 122 NE(2d) 695.

1.1 Provision in will for payment of interest on two thousand dollar fund from sale of land, to legatee, gives specific legacy, and legacy was required to contribute its share to deficit created by testator's debts (former GC §§ 10583, 10584 [see now RC § 2107.54]): Shaw v. Shaw, 32 App 168, 167 NE 611.

2. Whether a bequest is a personal charge depends on the construction; it cannot be inferred unless the will secures to the devisee the advantage which is the consideration of such charge; where, after a devise of land, there is a direction to pay debts, the payment of debts is a charge upon the devise: Decker v. Decker, 3 O 157; Clyde v. Simpson, 4 OS 445; Nelons v. Truax, 6 OS 97; Moore v. Beckwith, 14 OS 129; Geiger v. Worth, 17 OS 564; Huey v. Thomas, 23 OS 645; Tope v. Tope, 18 O 520; Nelson v. Nelson, 19 O 282.

3. A widow who takes a devise in lieu of dower must contribute to debts of testator under this section: Allen v. Tressenrider, 72 OS 77, 73 NE 1015.

4. Under the provisions of GC §§ 10504-75 and 10504-76 (RC § 2107.54), the residue of an estate must be exhausted first before specific devisees and legatees can be forced to contribute to the payment of debts of an estate: Wilkinson v. Edwards, 15 OO 328 (PC).

5. Except where the will provides otherwise, the amount necessary to compensate a surviving spouse, who elects not to take under a testator's will, must be taken from renounced devises and bequests, the residue, general legacies, and specific and demonstrative legacies and devises, in the order named, and a disappointed legatee cannot call upon other beneficiaries whose gifts have a priority over his for either compensation or contribution: Citizens Nat. Bank v. Linn, 22 OO 195 (PC).

6. Where a father has devised houses of equal value to each of his two daughters and later executed deeds of the properties to the daughters, it was held that the husband of one daughter, to whom the father had given a mortgage prior to the execution of the deeds, might enforce the mortgage, one-half as against each property, and the fact that the deed to his wife had been delivered subsequently to that to the sister did not compel him to subject the properties in the inverse order of their alienation: Gates v. Stebbins, 21 CC(NS) 236, 33 CD 334.

11. Where land was devised to J. D., in consideration of which he was directed to pay at different periods to different persons, J. D. was only personally liable for the sum appointed to be paid in his lifetime; the amount falling due after the death of J. D. is a charge upon the land devised: Decker to Decker, 3 O 157.

12. Express words are not necessary to charge pecuniary legacies upon the real estate; an intention to do so may be derived by implication: Clyde v. Simpson, 4 OS 445.

13. Where the trust or charge is defined and limited, the purchaser must see to the application of the purchase money; otherwise when it is general and unlimited: Clyde v. Simpson, 4 OS 445.

14. As between specific legatees and devisees where the property or money devised or bequeathed is taken to pay debts contribution may be enforced. But as between general and specific devisees and legatees, the law is otherwise. In such case, property specifically devised or bequeathed is exempted from liability to contribution: Glass v. Dunn, 17 OS 413.

16. In the absence of a contrary intention expressed in the will where there are specific legacies and devises and a residuary estate is created, expenses incurred by executor in the successful defense of a will contest suit, including compensation paid to counsel for executors in defending the will are chargeable against the estate and will not be equitably apportioned among the several beneficiaries: In re Dickey, 87 App 255, 42 OO 474, 57 OLA 346, 94 NE(2d) 223.

17. Under GC § 10504-76 (RC § 2107.54), a specific devisee or legatee is exempt from the liability to contribute to the payment of debts when there is a residuary estate out of which the debts may be paid: In re Dickey, 87 App 255, 42 OO 474, 94 NE(2d) 223.

22. The purchaser of lands of a decedent at a judicial sale of an administrator, holds it discharged of liens for debts: Bank of Muskingum v. Carpenter, 7 O (pt.1) 21.

23. But heirs, holding land of their ancestor, hold it subject to his debts; a purchaser from them takes the encumbrance with the title: Stiver v. Stiver, 8 O 217.

24. The debts of a deceased person are a lien on the land of which he died seized, in default of personal assets, whether devised or cast by descent, which can only be removed by the payment of the debts or the lapse of time: Ramsdall v. Craighill, 9 O 197.

25. The charges imposed by law upon an estate must first be paid out of the estate as a whole before payment of the charges imposed upon the estate by the will of the testator: Young Mens Christian Assn. v. Davis, 106 OS 366, 140 NE 114.

26. If testator leaves his personal property and certain real property to his wife, and thus shows an intention to exonerate the personal property from the payment of his debts, and his wife refuses to take under the will, the legatees and devisees who take under the will must assume the burdens imposed by the will, and they must pay the debts of testator, including the cost of administration, if the will provides that they are to make such payments, even though the effect will be to give to the widow her distributive share of the personal property without payment of any part of testator's debts therefrom: Harbeson v. Mellinger, 2 App 75, 18 CC(NS) 504, 25 CD 195.

27. Prior to this statute it was considered to be the law that personal property was to be exhausted before realty: Ginder and Smith v. Ginder, 72 OLA 277, 134 NE(2d) 603.

27.1 The words "testamentary expenses" embrace all those expenses that arise out of the protection and defense of the will: In re Jacoby, 79 OLA 239, 247.

27.2 Effect of surviving spouse's election to take against the will: Winters Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. Riffe, 93 OLA 171, 194 NE(2d) 921.

28. Under this section general legatees and devisees must first contribute to the loss, as against specific legatees and devisees; but if the fund from the general devisees and bequests is insufficient to pay the debts, the specific devisees and legatees must contribute: Gionfriddo v. Palatrone, 26 OO(2d) 158, 196 NE(2d) 162 (PC).

29. In the absence of proof of the law of the place of the testator's domicile, the probate court may apply the provisions of this section for abatement pro rata among legatees, where there are not sufficient funds after payment of debts and expenses of administration to pay the pecuniary legacies in full: Mastics v. Kiraly, 26 OO(2d) 266, 196 NE(2d) 172 (PC).

30. A bequest of all personal property other than cash, stocks and bonds, is a general legacy which will abate in full where there is no residuary estate and the will makes no provision for the payment of debts different from that prescribed in this section: McArther v. McArther, 29 OO(2d) 137 (PC).

31. The underlying purpose of this section calls for ratable contribution between specific devisees and specific legatees, rather than the complete abatement of the specific legacies first: McArther v. McArther, 29 OO(2d) 137 (PC).

§ 2107.55 Portion of pretermitted heir, or of witness, subject to contribution. (GC § 10504-78)

When a part of the estate of a testator descends to a child born or adopted, or to an heir designated, after the execution of the will, or to a child absent and reported to be dead at the time of execution of the will but later found to be alive, or to a witness to a will who is a devisee or legatee, such estate and the advancement made to such child, heir, or witness for all the purposes mentioned in section 2107.54 of the Revised Code shall be considered as if it had been devised to such child, heir, or witness and he shall be bound to contribute with the devisees and legatees, as provided by such section, and may claim contribution from them accordingly.

When a sale of lands alienated or unalienated by a devisee or heir is ordered for the payment of the debts of an estate, sections 2107.53 to 2107.57, inclusive, of the Revised Code do not prevent the probate court from making such order and decree for the sale of any portion of the alienated or unalienated land as is equitable between the several parties, and making an order of contribution and further order and decree to settle

1. Where, in the probate of an estate, the only claims against the estate consist of the widow's claims for year's allowance, property exempt from administration and for reimbursement for funeral expenses paid by her, acceptance by the widow, the sole heir and devisee under the will, of transfer of all the assets of the estates effects a merger of such claims of the widow in the property transferred, constitutes a waiver by her of all her claims against the estate and, no debts of the estate remaining unpaid, a petition by the executor to sell land to pay debts consisting of the widow's claims for year's allowance, property exempt from administration and for reimbursement for funeral expenses paid will be denied: Kaczinski v. Kaczinski, 118 App 225, 25 OO(2d) 68, 193 NE(2d) 731.

2. The probate court in fixing the value of the life estate of appellant first applied the proceeds of the personal estate to the indebtedness of the estate, deducted the remaining indebtedness from the proceeds of the sale of the real estate and from the sum thus remaining then computed the value of the life estate. This was affirmed, with reservations: Brooks v. Prince, 72 OLA 161, 134 NE(2d) 78.

§ 2107.59 Sale of land by executor's successor. (GC § 10504-82)

When a last will and testament is admitted to probate, or a will made out of this state is admitted to record as provided by sections 2129.05 to 2129.07, inclusive, of the Revised Code, and lands, tenements, or hereditaments are given or devised by such will to the executors therein named to be sold or conveyed, or such estate thereby is ordered to be sold by such executors and one or more of the executors named in the will dies, refuses to act, or neglects to take upon himself the execution of the will, then all sales and conveyances of such estate by the executors who took upon themselves in this state the execution of the will, or the survivor of them, shall be as valid as if the remaining executors had joined in the sale and conveyance. But if none of the executors named in such will take upon themselves its execution, or if all the executors who take out letters testamentary die, resign,

2. Nuncupative will is completed by testamentary statement and witnesses' signatures; attestation clause being surplusage: Kellner v. Hagood, 39 App 351, 177 NE 637.

3. The act of 1795 conferred power to devise real estate by verbal will. The act of 1805 provided for the disposal of personal property only by nuncupative will. The acts of 1808, 1810, 1816 and 1824 permitted the disposal of real estate by verbal will, but the act of 1831 restricted nuncupative will to personalty: Lessee of Gillis v. Weller, 10 O 462 [followed in Ashworth v. Carleton, 12 OS 381]; see also Williams v. Pope, W 406.

4. A written will can neither be wholly nor partially revoked by a subsequent nuncupative will: Devisees of McCune v. House, 8 O 144.

5. Directions by an owner in respect to a disposition of his property, to take effect after death, are of no effect unless made through the medium of a last will and testament: Phipps v. Hope, 16 OS 586.

6. If the words reduced to writing and probated are not substantially the same as those spoken, the will is invalid: Bolles v. Harris, 34 OS 38.

7. The witnesses must be disinterested. A devisee who is a witness cannot regularize by renouncing, but the will is void. The witness' status is that of the time of signing: Vrooman v. Powers, 47 OS 191, 24

NE 267, 8 LRA 39; Parsons v. Wass, 16 CC(NS) 404, 31 CD 577 [reversing Wass v. Guardian Trust Co., 15 OD(NP) 677].

8. Where the witnesses to a nuncupative will are also devisees of real estate under it, but there is no evidence tending to show that at the time the will was made they expected to benefit from it, it is error for the court to direct a verdict declaring the will invalid: Parsons v. Wass, 16 CC(NS) 404, 31 CD 577 [reversing Wass v. Guardian Trust Co., 15 OD(NP) 677].

9. The fact that a nuncupative will attempts to dispose of both real and personal property does not make it invalid as to the personal property: Parsons v. Wass, 16 CC(NS) 404, 31 CD 577 [reversing Wass v. Guardian Trust Co., 15 OD(NP) 677].

§ 2107.63 Addition to trust estates.

A testator may by will devise, bequeath, or appoint real or personal property, or any interest in such property, to a trustee of a trust which is evidenced by a written instrument executed by the testator or any other person either before or on the same date of the execution of such will and which is identified in such will.

The property or interest so devised, bequeathed, or appointed to such trustee shall be added to and become a part of the trust estate, shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the court having jurisdiction of such trust, and shall be administered in accordance with the terms and provisions of the instrument creating such trust, including, unless the will specifically provides otherwise, any amendments or modifications thereof made in writing before, concurrently with, or after the making of the will and prior to the death of the testator. The termination of such trust, or its entire revocation prior to the testator's death, shall invalidate such devise, bequest, or appointment to such trust.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. In enacting the pour-over statute with all privileges and rights in the settlor during life, the legislature specifically reserved to the surviving spouse the right to elect against the will: Purcell v. Cleveland Trust Co., 28 OO(2d) 262, 94 OLA 455, 200 NE(2d) 602 (PC) [reversed 6 OApp(2d) 235, 35 OO(2d) 426].

2. When a decedent has executed both a will and a trust and it is clear from the language of those instruments that the trust was intended to be an inter vivos trust, a bequest to that trust made in the will fails for want of a taker if a valid inter vivos trust was not in existence at the time of the decedent's death: Hageman v. Cleveland Trust Co., 41 OApp(2d) 160, 70 OO(2d) 322, 324 NE(2d) 594.

3. In order for assets in a testator's estate to be "poured over" into an inter vivos trust through language in the will authorized by this section there must be such a trust in existence at the time of testator's death: Knowles v. Knowles, 33 OO(2d) 218, 4 OMisc 153, 212 NE(2d) 88 (PC).

§ 2107.64 Trustee as beneficiary.

A policy of life insurance may designate as beneficiary a trustee named by will. Upon qualification and issuance of letters of trusteeship the proceeds of such insurance shall be payable to the trustee to be held and disposed of under the terms of the will as they exist as of the date of the death of the testator and in the same manner as other testamentary trusts are administered; but if no qualified trustee makes claim to the proceeds from the insurance company within twelve months after the death of the insured, or if satisfactory evidence is furnished to the insurance company within such twelve month period showing that there is or will be no trustee to receive the proceeds, payment shall be made by the insurance company to the executors, administrators, or assigns of the insured, unless otherwise provided by agreement with the insurance company during the lifetime of the insured.

The proceeds of the insurance as received by the trustee shall not be subject to debts of the insured nor to estate tax to any greater extent than if such proceeds were payable to the beneficiary or beneficiaries named in the trust and not to the estate of the insured.

Such insurance proceeds so held in trust may be commingled with any other assets which may properly come into such trust.

Nothing in this section shall affect the validity of any life insurance policy beneficiary designation made prior to August 10, 1965, naming trustees of a trust established by will.

HISTORY: 131 v 618 (EFF 8-10-65); 132 v S 326 (EFF 7-1-68); 134 v H 1. EFF 3-26-71.

The provisions of § 3 of SB 326 (132 v —) read as follows:

SECTION 3. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on July 1, 1968, except that existing section 5731.43 of the Revised Code shall be repealed effective November 30, 1967, and section 5731.41 of the Revised Code shall take effect on December 1, 1967. The repeal of existing Chapter 5731. of the Revised Code shall not affect any inheritance tax therein levied upon successions to property resulting from a death which occurs on or before June 30, 1968, nor any rights or procedures relating to the levy, collection, apportionment, disbursement, adjustment, or refund, other than compensation of agents employed by the tax commissioner, of any such tax.

The provisions of § 4 of H 1 (134 v —) reads as follows:

SECTION 4. The repeal of section 5731.301 [5731-30.1] of the Revised Code shall not affect any inheritance tax levied by former Chapter 5731. of the Revised Code upon succession to property resulting from a death which occurred on or before June 30, 1968, nor any rights or procedures relating to the levy, collection, apportionment, disbursement, adjustment, or refund of any such tax.

not the duty of the court to give construction to the provisions of the will, nor to pass upon the validity or invalidity of the doubtful legacies or bequests therein contained: Mears v. Mears, 15 OS 90; Irwin v. Jacques, 71 OS 395.

3. The issue to be made up and tried in actions to contest a will cannot be varied or restricted by averments in the pleadings or by an order on the journal of the court, viz., "whether the writing produced is the last will or codicil of the testator, or not": Drew v. Reid, 52 OS 519, 40 NE 718.

4. On the trial of this issue the question of whether the will was properly or improperly admitted to probate by the probate court is not involved and cannot be inquired into: Stacey v. Cunningham, 69 OS 176, 68 NE 1001.

5. Contest of a will does not involve construction thereof: Irwin v. Jacques, 71 OS 395, 73 NE 683, 69 LRA 422.

6. Any person who has such a direct, immediate and legally ascertained pecuniary interest in the devolution of testator's estate as would be impaired or defeated by the probate of the will or be benefited by the setting aside of the will, is a "person interested": Bloor v. Platt, 78 OS 46, 84 NE 604; Chilcote v. Hoffman, 97 OS 98, 119 NE 364, LRA 1918D, 575.

7. A judgment creditor of an heir who has obtained a lien by levy on property, which in the absence of a will would be the property of the debtor heir by descent, is a person interested in a will or codicil within the meaning of this section, and can prosecute an action to contest the validity of an alleged will disposing of such property to a person other than such heir: Bloor v. Platt, 78 OS 46, 84 NE 604.

8. The right to contest a will is statutory and it can be exercised only in accordance with the provisions prescribed by statute: McVeigh v. Fetterman, 95 OS 292, 116 NE 518.

9. Where an action to contest a will is begun within the statutory period, the right to maintain such action is not forfeited by the fact that the party plaintiff consented in writing to the probating of the will and accepted a legacy thereunder where such consent and acceptance were induced by false and fraudulent representations as to the amount of the estate and the testamentary capacity of the testator, made by the executor under the will with the intent of inducing the legatee to abide by the will: Kelley v. Hazzard, 96 OS 19, 117 NE 182.

10. The expression "a person interested" in this section and the expression "other interested persons" in GC § 12080 (RC § 2741.02 [now RC § 2107.73]), are substantially the same and are identical in meaning: Chilcote v. Hoffman, 97 OS 98, 119 NE 364, LRA 1918D, 575.

11. An action may be brought by the heir of a disinherited heir of a testator, if such disinherited heir has died after testator's death, and before such contest proceedings are brought; although such plaintiff in the contest proceeding was not a party in interest at the time that such will was admitted to probate: Chilcote v. Hoffman, 97 OS 98, 119 NE 364, LRA 1918D, 575.

12. The right of a person to bring an action to contest a will passes with his pecuniary or property interest in the estate of the testator to his personal representative or heirs at law, under the statutes of descent and distribution: Chilcote v. Hoffman, 97 OS 98, 119 NE 364, LRA 1918D, 575.

13. A proceeding to contest a will is a civil action by the provisions of GC §§ 11238 and 12079 (RC §§ 2307.02 and 2741.01), and within the general issue which is made up on the journal as to whether the paper writing is the last will of the testator, a number of special issues are included, among which are: 1. That the testator was lacking in mental capacity. 2. That the testator was unduly influenced, as the term is defined by the law. 3. That there was a defective signing or attestation. 4. That the testator was not of legal age; and if one of such issues is correctly submitted to the jury, a general verdict in favor of the defendant will not be reversed for error in submitting one of the other issues if it does not appeal from the record upon which issue such verdict was rendered: Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

14. General Code §§ 12079 to 12087 (RC §§ 2741.01 to 2741.09) provide the exclusive mode of setting aside a last will and testament: Madden v. Shallenberger, 121 OS 401, 169 NE 450.

15. Under GC §§ 10504-15 and 10504-16 (RC §§ 2107.11 and 2107.12), in a proceeding to admit a will to probate, "persons interested in its probate" include those whose interests are opposed to its probate. One who contends that there has been a former adjudication by a denial of probate may, under these sections, contest jurisdiction by asserting the defense of res judicata, and if aggrieved may prosecute error to the finding on such defense: State ex rel Young v. Morrow, 131 OS 266, 5 OO 584, 2 NE(2d) 595.

16. A beneficiary under a prior unprobated will may maintain an action to contest a later probated will: Kennedy v. Walcutt, 118 OS 442, 161 NE 336; a beneficiary is not a necessary party to an action to contest a later probated will: Machovina v. Machovina, 132 OS 171, 7 OO 253, 5 NE(2d) 496.

17. An illegitimate son, designated as heir at law by his natural father, pursuant to the provisions of GC § 10503-12 (RC § 2105.15), is not authorized under this section to bring an action to contest the will of the brother of the natural father, which brother died subsequent to the decease of the natural father: Blackwell v. Bowman, 150 OS 34, 37 OO 323, 80 NE(2d) 493.

18. Mandamus denied to compel hearing on motion to determine interest of contestant, before final hearing: State ex rel Ticknor v. Randall, 152 OS 129, 39 OO 440, 87 NE(2d) 340.

19. The children of a designated heir who dies prior to the execution of a will by the designator, may not contest such will: Kirsheman v. Paulin, 155 OS 137, 44 OO 134, 98 NE(2d) 26.

20. An interested person who, pursuant to RC § 2741.01 and in compliance with RC § 2741.02, initiates an action to contest a will within six months after its probate may not thereafter, in face of RC § 2741.04, dismiss the action over the protest of a defendant who wants the will set aside: Andes v. Shippe, 165 OS 275, 59 OO 363, 135 NE(2d) 396.

21. The probate court has no jurisdiction to consider an application to vacate the probate of a will filed while an action to contest the will is pending in the common pleas court: State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate Court, 172 OS 1, 15 OO(2d) 43, 173 NE(2d) 100 [affirming 113 App 1, 17 OO(2d) 1, 162 NE(2d) 574].

22. The right to maintain an action to contest a will, where placed in issue, should be determined by the court without a jury before the trial on the issue of the validity of the will: Comer v. Comer, 175 OS 313, 25 OO(2d) 182, 194 NE(2d) 572.

23. A person interested in a will, within the meaning of RC § 2741.01, is one, who, at the time of the commencement of an action to contest a will, has a direct, pecuniary interest in the estate of the putative testator, that would be impaired or defeated if the instrument admitted to probate is a valid will: Steinberg v. Central Trust Co., 18 OS(2d) 33, 47 OO(2d) 154, 247 NE(2d) 303; Wical v. Bernard, 26 OS(2d) 55, 55 OO(2d) 66, 269 NE(2d) 45.

24. If property is devised to A, and the will provides that if A does not sell the property during his lifetime or dispose thereof by his last will, the property shall go to B, such devise to B is void, and B cannot bring an action to contest the validity of A's will: Robarham v. Gregg, 2 App 108, 18 CC(NS) 338, 26 CD 142.

25. The acceptance of a bequest of personal property does not bind the beneficiary not to contest the will, as in the case of the acceptance of real property, but the money or property so received may be returned to the executor and the legatee left free to contest the will: Spangler v. Beare, 2 App 133, 19 CC(NS) 512, 26 CD 37.

26. For a discussion of the history of a proceeding to contest a will in Ohio, see Slemmons v. Toland, 5 App 201, 25 CC(NS) 485.

27. If one of the heirs of a deceased testator is given a legacy by testator's last will and testament, and is named as executor, and he applies for the probate of such will, acts as executor, distributes the estate, and applies to the probate court for a transfer of the realty devised to him, such heir is estopped from bringing a second action to contest such will: Patterson v. Atkinson, 7 App 495, 27 OCA 427, 29 CD 354.

28. Whether the plaintiff is a person interested within the meaning of GC § 12079 (RC § 2741.01), is a preliminary question for the court: Wilson v. Wilson, 8 App 258, 28 OCA 309, 29 CD 393; Zinn v. Ferris, 15 CC(NS) 148, 24 CD 113.

29. A child is rendered legitimate by the fact that his parents intermarried before the birth of such child, although the mother was pregnant when such marriage took place; if the husband knew of the fact of such pregnancy; and a subsequent decree of divorce rendered before the birth of such child, does not render such child illegitimate. Accordingly, such child may maintain an action to contest the will of his father: Wilson v. Wilson, 8 App 258, 28 OCA 309, 29 CD 393, 63 Bull 49 (Ed).

30. Upon motion by plaintiffs to direct a verdict in an action to contest a will, in the absence of ambiguity appearing on the face of the will, it becomes the duty of the court to determine as a matter of law from the will itself whether or not it has been executed and attested in compliance with the requirements of the statute: Herbster v. Pincombe, 10 App 322, 31 OCA 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Pincombe v. Herbster, 16 OLR 79, 63 Bull 195].

31. Proceeding to contest will does not lie, absent allegation that will has been admitted to probate: Sours v. Shuler, 42 App 393, 181 NE 908, 36 OLR 544.

32. Promise not to contest will held sufficient consideration for promise of a share in the estate; showing of belief of success in the litigation unnecessary, when: Rutledge v. Hoffman, 81 App 85, 36 OO 405, 75 NE(2d) 608.

33. A person named as a beneficiary under a will and omitted as such under a subsequently executed will which revoked the former will, has an interest in it in that, under this section, he is eligible to contest it: Caswell v. Lermann, 85 App 200, 40 OO 148, 88 NE(2d) 405.

34. Any person who has a direct, immediate and legally ascertainable pecuniary interest in the devolution of a testator's estate that would be impaired or defeated by the probate of the will or benefitted by setting aside the will, is a "person interested," within the meaning of GC § 12079 (RC § 2741.01): Donovan v. Decker, 98 App 183, 57 OO 230, 122 NE(2d) 501.

35. Where stock in a bank is bequeathed to certain named legatees with the express direction that "none of said stock shall be sold by any of said legatees unless with the consent and approval of" the named president of such bank, such bank president is not an interested person in such will, and it is not necessary to make him a party in an action to contest such will: Durbin v. Durbin, 106 App 155, 6 OO(2d) 414, 153 NE(2d) 706.

36. An interested party, within the meaning of this section, providing for the contest of a will, is a person who, at the time of the commencement of an action to contest a will, has a direct, pecuniary interest in the estate of the putative testator, which would be impaired or defeated if the instrument admitted to probate is a valid will: Durbin v. Durbin, 106 App 155, 6 OO(2d) 414, 153 NE(2d) 706.

37. The will-contest provisions of RC chapter 2741 afford the exclusive remedy of contesting the validity of a will which has been duly admitted to probate: State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate Court, 113 App 1, 17 OO(2d) 1, 162 NE(2d) 574.

38. A person who is a beneficiary under a will has such an "interest" in a later will of the testator, which permits him to contest such subsequent will: Campbell v. Strasburger, 17 OApp(2d) 56, 46 OO(2d) 71, 244 NE(2d) 530.

39. The contest of a will is regulated by statutes the provisions of which are special and mandatory and prevail over general statutory provisions contained elsewhere in the Revised Code: Collins v. Nurre, 20 OApp(2d) 53, 49 OO(2d) 70, 251 NE(2d) 621.

40. Fundamental issues related to matters extrinsic to the contents of the will and calling into question the competence of the entire document—the issue of undue influence—must be raised by contesting the will under RC Chapter 2741, whereas issues related to the legal propriety, meaning or effect of the particular contents of the will—whether a clause or paragraph is in violation of the rule against perpetuities—are proper objects of an action for a declaratory judgment: Davidson v. Brate, 44 OApp(2d) 248, 73 OO(2d) 253, 337 NE(2d) 642 (1975).

41. An illegitimate child does not per se have a direct pecuniary interest in the estate of his natural father that would be defeated or impaired if the father's will, admitted to probate, is a valid will; thus, he has no standing to contest the will of his natural father: Moore v. Dague, 46 OApp(2d) 75, 75 OO(2d) 68, 345 NE(2d) 449 (1975).

42. A bona fide agreement entered into between a legatee of a testator, and his children, under which the children agree not to contest the will of the testator in consideration of the payment to such children of one-third of the legacy, is valid: West v. Leslie, 21 OO 89, 6 OSupp 251 (PC).

43. A will contest is no longer purely a proceeding in rem: Russell v. Cline, 10 OO(2d) 481, 161 NE(2d) 655 (CP).

44. The will contest provisions of RC §§ 2741.01 to 2741.09, inclusive, afford the exclusive remedy for challenging the validity of a will that has been duly admitted to probate: State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate Court, 113 App 1, 12 OO(2d) 307, 165 NE(2d) 668.

45. A surviving spouse should not be permitted to resort to an action to contest a will when the same result can be accomplished by the simple method of electing not to take under the will of the decedent: Klicke v. Uhlenbrock, 27 OO(2d) 290, 200 NE(2d) 497 (CP).

47. An action to contest a will was unknown at common law and has been created by RC § 2741.01: Alakiotis v. Lancione, 41 OO(2d) 381, 12 OMisc 257, 232 NE(2d) 663 (CP).

48. In a will contest, the general provisions of the civil code can be invoked when not contrary to any of the specific statutes relating to the contest of wills: Larimer v. Lowrey, 46 OLA 147 (App).

49. The validity of a will can be contested only by a civil action brought pursuant to GC § 12079 (RC § 2741.01) et seq, after the admission of such will to probate: In re Carson, 83 App 510, 50 OLA 119, 75 NE(2d) 248.

50. A next of kin who would be the sole beneficiary if a probated will were set aside has such pecuniary interest in the estate as to entitle him to contest the will: Adams v. Curklies, 88 App 225, 56 OLA 167, 91 NE(2d) 706 (App).

51. An executor's right to a fee is a right to payment for services rendered in administering the affairs of the estate of the testator or testatrix by virtue of his appointment to the office of trust, and such interest in a fee for services is separate and distinct from a pecuniary interest in the devolution of the estate under this section: Hermann v. Crossen, 81 OLA 322, 160 NE(2d) 404 (App).

52. The filing of a petition to contest a decedent's will does not suspend or extend the time in which a creditor shall present his claim to the executor of said decedent's estate under the provisions of RC §§ 2117.06, 2117.07: In re Kehoe, 94 OLA 469, 199 NE(2d) 29.

53. A daughter who went into possession of land devised to her by the will of her father, and leased the land and collected the rents under the lease from the date of the probate of the will, is estopped thereby from contesting the validity of the will; but the acceptance of the devise remains an absolute bar to a contest by her of the validity of the will, and where such an action has been brought by a devisee so situated, its dismissal by the trial court is not error: Leedy v. Cockley, 14 CC(NS) 72, 22 CD 299.

54. If the sole heir and next of kin is also the sole legatee and devisee, a more remote heir cannot maintain an action to contest such will: Taylor v. Bushnell, 29 OCA 497 [motion to certify record overruled, 17 OLR 4, 64 Bull 112].

55. A person cannot claim under a will and also against such will. This principle of equity, however, does not depend upon any doctrine of estoppel or election: Walker v. Hollister, 20 NP(NS) 225, 28 OD 299.

56. One who has entered into a contract with the beneficiaries under a will by which they agree not to oppose a contest thereof is not precluded from bringing an action to contest it: Rohr v. Gatch, 21 NP(NS) 65, 29 OD 158.

57. When the will stands as probated, a compromise agreement made in connection with a will contest does not affect the terms of the will; its provisions stand unaltered: In re McGreevey, 32 NP(NS) 212.

§ 2107.72 [Rules govern will contest action.]

The Rules of Civil Procedure govern all aspects of a will contest action, except as otherwise provided in sections 2107.71 to 2107.75 of the Revised Code.

1. In a proceeding under the statute to contest the validity of a will, it is error for the court to render final judgment on demurrer to answer; an issue must be made up and tried by a jury: Walker v. Walker, 14 OS 157.

2. It is error for the court to proceed by mere decree, and without the intervention of a jury, to set aside the will in a will contest case: Holt v. Lamb, 17 OS 374.

3. In a proceeding to contest a will the judgment binds only the parties to the action, and such parties, as between themselves, are estopped from setting up a will when it has once been set aside in an action, but as to all other persons in interest it is to be regarded as a subsisting will, and their rights stand wholly unaffected by such proceedings: Holt v. Lamb, 17 OS 374; McArthur v. Scott, 113 US 340, 28 LEd 1015, 5 SCT 652, 5 OFD 357.

3.1 When evidence is offered tending to show that the will has been altered in a material provision since its execution, and evidence is also offered tending to show that the alteration was made before its execution, the jury, if they find for the will, must determine the question in dispute, and establish by special verdict the will as it read when executed: Haynes v. Haynes, 33 OS 598.

4. If the will shows upon its face that it was not signed at the end thereof, the court may direct a verdict that the writing is not a valid will: Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104, 82 NE 1067; Schubert v. Christman, 16 App 432.

5. If substantial evidence has been offered by plaintiff in a will contest, it is reversible error for the trial court to instruct the jury to bring in a verdict sustaining such will: Wilder v. Taylor, 87 OS 520, 102 NE 1135 [reversing without opinion 14 CC(NS) 255, 23 CD 643, which affirmed 10 NP(NS) 209, 24 OD 621].

6. An action to contest a will is a civil action and a verdict by the jury must be rendered upon the concurrence of three-fourths or more of their number: Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61]; Slemmons v. Toland, 5 App 201, 25 CC(NS) 485, 28 CD 455; Baird v. Detrick, 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110 [affirmed, 8 App 198, 20 OCA 257].

7. If the jury makes a special finding that testator did not sign the will, error in the charge as to acknowledgment in the presence of an attesting witness is immaterial: West v. Lucas, 106 OS 255, 139 NE 859.

8. If a legacy has been paid under a will which is set aside thereafter, interest runs from the date at which the legacy is paid, and not from the date at which the will is set aside: Bermont v. Gotshall, 110 OS 425, 144 NE 137.

9. It is error to submit interrogatory to jury which requires finding as to whether attesting witnesses signed in presence of each other; also as to date of alleged subsequent will: McFadden v. Thomas, 154 OS 405, 43 OO 340, 96 NE(2d) 254.

10. Where in an action to contest a will, filed by creditors of a son of the deceased, the court finds that the will was not signed at the end, the court should grant the motion of the plaintiffs to direct a verdict invalidating the will, even though answers were filed denying generally the claims of plaintiffs that they are interested parties: Herbster v. Pincombe, 10 App 322, 31 OCA 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Pincombe v. Herbster, 16 OLR 79, 63 Bull 195].

11. If it is not admitted that a sheet of paper which is pinned to a will was added before execution, it is reversible error for the court to direct the jury to set the will aside: Smith v. Ellis, 15 App 38 [motion to certify record overruled, Ellis v. Smith, 19 OLR 512].

12. A probate court is without jurisdiction to hear and determine an application for an allowance to applicants' counsel for services in a prior action to contest a will, to which prior action applicants were parties: Union Sav. Bank &c. Co. v. Alter, 17 App 29 [motion to certify record overruled, 21 OLR 3].

13. This section, fixing the procedure in a will contest and providing that the issue shall be tried by a jury, simply means that a will contest in such a civil action as is tried by a jury in the ordinary manner of a jury trial in civil actions, and since the abrogation of the "scintilla rule" of evidence in this state, the trial court may grant a motion for a directed verdict where there is only a scintilla of evidence; and where both parties so move, the favorable inference given the party's evidence against whom the motion is directed disappears, and the testimony of each party is considered for what it is worth: Westfall v. Notman, 53 App 314, 7 OO 128, 4 NE(2d) 932.

14. An action to contest the validity of a will is expressly made a civil action by the provisions of this section and is not a special proceeding within the meaning of GC § 12223-2 (RC § 2505.02), which provides that "an order affecting a substantial right made in a special proceeding . . . is a final order": Hymel v. Bing, 67 App 432, 21 OO 367, 31 NE(2d) 112.

15. In a will contest, it is the duty of the trial court, in the absence of an answer, to make up the issue prescribed by this section, by an order on the journal before the impaneling of a jury: Meyer v. Welsbacher, 80 App 200, 35 OO 518, 75 NE(2d) 89.

16. The requirement of RC § 2741.04 that a will contest shall be tried by a jury is mandatory. A jury cannot be waived by agreement of the parties: Carr v. Howard, 17 OApp(2d) 233, 46 OO(2d) 360, 246 NE(2d) 563.

17. Where one service of summons in an action contesting a will is made within the time prescribed by RC § 2741.09 upon a defendant occupying the positions of surviving spouse, devisee, and executrix and, although such summons does not designate the specific relationship between the estate and the defendant, the various capacities of the defendant are clearly designated in the body of the complaint attached to the summons, an amendment of the original complaint after the expiration of the six month statute of limitations prescribed by RC § 2741.09, in order to formally add the same defendant in a different capacity, relates back to the date of the original pleading. Rule 15C, Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure: Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

18. Revised Code § 2741.04, providing that a jury shall try the issues in a will contest, does not preclude a directed verdict or a summary judgment, when appropriate: Kronauge v. Stoecklein, 33 OApp(2d) 229, 62 OO(2d) 321, 292 NE(2d) 320 (1972).

19. The will contest action is a special statutory proceeding within Title XXVII of the Revised Code and, pursuant to Civil Rule 1(C)(7), any civil rule which would permit the liberal amendment or joinder adding a necessary party under RC § 2741.02, relating the cause of action back to within the time limitation of RC § 2741.09, would by its nature be clearly inapplicable as it would operate to extend the jurisdiction of the courts of this state in derogation of mandatory statutory language. Civil Rule 82: Holland v. Carlson, 40 OApp(2d) 325, 69 OO(2d) 299, 319 NE(2d) 362 (1974).

19.1 Under the provisions of this section, as amended in 1961, the common pleas court has the power to effect a settlement in a will contest and to dismiss the action without impaneling a jury: Central Nat. Bank v. Eells, 33 OO(2d) 418, 5 OMisc 187, 215 NE(2d) 77 (PC).

20. This section requires that issue be made up, if not by pleadings, by entry of court: Harvie v. Goodale, 6 OLA 198.

21. The power to review the testimony in a will case, and if the verdict is clearly and manifestly against the weight of the evidence, to set aside the verdict and order a new trial, is not defeated by GC § 12082 (RC § 2741.04): Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

22. The procedure with reference to the contest of a will is regulated by the provisions of GC §§ 12079 to 12087 (RC §§ 2741.01 to 2741.09); and where such provisions are specific and are inconsistent with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, they apply to the exclusion of analogous provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure: Gomien v. Weidemer, 27 OCA 177, 29 CD 1.

23. In a will contest the sole issue is whether the paper writing in question is the last will of the testator or not, and such issue cannot be varied by the pleadings: Heimrich v. Dechant, 11 NP(NS) 511, 21 OD 106 [citing Dew v. Reid, 52 OS 519, 40 NE 718, and Windisch &c. Brew. Co. v. Opp, 17 CC 465, 9 CD 516].

§ 2107.73 [Parties to will contest.]

Persons who are necessary parties to a will contest are as follows:

(A) Any person designated in a will to receive a testamentary disposition of real or personal property;

(B) Heirs who would take property pursuant to section 2105.06 of the Revised Code had the testator died intestate;

(C) The executor or the administrator with the will annexed;

(D) The attorney general as provided by section 109.25 of the Revised Code;

(E) Other interested parties.

1. In a suit to contest the validity of a will, the legatees and devisees are indispensable parties; and the omission to make a legatee a party to such suit is error, for which the decree setting aside the will, will be reversed: Church v. Nelson, 35 OS 638.

2. Where the devisee of real estate transfers it after the probate of the will by which it was devised, the grantee is an interested person within the meaning of this section, and is a necessary party to an action subsequently brought to contest the validity of the will: Sears v. Stinehelfer, 89 OS 163, 105 NE 1047.

3. Where a verdict and judgment sustaining a will were duly entered, a party defendant, though served only by publication, may not have such judgment opened up and the issue as to the validity of the will again tried, upon application filed after the running of the statute of limitation: McVeigh v. Fetterman, 95 OS 292, 116 NE 518 [followed, Case v. Smith, 142 OS 95, 26 OO 282, 50 NE(2d) 142].

4. An executor named in a will is not "united in interest" with the heirs and devisees, and an action to contest a will is not commenced as to the heirs of the testator and the devisees under the will by the issuance of a summons for the executor, though duly served upon him: McCord v. McCord, 104 OS 274, 136 NE 902. See also, 91 OS 441, 110 NE 1063; 7 App 129, 28 OCA 137, 29 CD 429.

5. Service of summons upon one of the legatee-devisee defendants is to be deemed commencement of the action as to each of the defendants of that class, and also the executor. Actual service of summons can thereafter be made upon the remainder of the defendants of that class: Draher v. Walters, 130 OS 92, 3 OO 121, 196 NE 884; Morisse v. Billau, 70 App 215, 24 OO 558, 45 NE(2d) 798.

6. A beneficiary under an unprobated will is not a necessary party to an action to contest a later will duly admitted to probate: Machovina v. Machovina, 132 OS 171, 7 OO 253, 5 NE(2d) 496.

7. In an action to contest validity of will where none of heirs-at-law or next of kin is served with summons and no person "united in interest" with them is served within six months from date of probate, there is failure of compliance with this section, specifying who must be made parties, and common pleas court is without jurisdiction to entertain such action: Case v. Smith, 142 OS 95, 26 OO 282, 50 NE(2d) 142.

8. The sole beneficiary under a will, who is neither an heir-at-law nor next of kin of the decedent, is not "united in interest" with decedent's heirs-at-law or next of kin and an action to contest such will is not commenced as to testator's heirs-at-law by service of summons upon such sole beneficiary within six months from date of probate: Case v. Smith, 142 OS 95, 26 OO 282, 50 NE(2d) 142; nor is the action commenced as to the heirs and devisees by timely service upon the executor: McCord v. McCord, 104 OS 274, 135 NE 548.

9. Under the provisions of this section, all the devisees, legatees, and heirs of the testator, and other interested persons, including the executor or administrator, must be made parties to an action to contest a will: Peters v. Moore, 154 OS 177, 42 OO 254, 93 NE(2d) 683.

10. It is not a compliance with this requirement when a person's occupying the positions of heir, legatee and sole executor is made a party in his individual capacity as heir and legatee but not in his distinctive, official, fiduciary capacity as executor, and another person is sued as executor: Peters v. Moore, 154 OS 177, 42 OO 254, 93 NE(2d) 683.

11. This section clearly provides that the executor must be made a party to the action; and where this is not done within the statutory period the action must fail: Bynner v. Jones, 154 OS 184, 42 OO 257, 93 NE(2d) 687.

12. The provisions of the statutes relative to the right to contest the validity of a will are mandatory, and the enjoyment of the right is dependent upon compliance with the conditions and limitations there contained: Gravier v. Gluth, 163 OS 232, 56 OO 228, 126 NE(2d) 332.

13. Under RC §§ 2741.02 and 2741.09 it is mandatory and jurisdictional that the executor or administrator be made a party in an action to contest a will, and in such an action the court is without jurisdiction unless the executor or administrator is made a party, and a summons, duly followed by service, is issued within six months after the will has been admitted to probate: Mangan v. Hopkins, 166 OS 41, 1 OO(2d) 186, 138 NE(2d) 872.

14. For the purposes of a will contest, the theory that one person is only one legal entity even though acting in more than one capacity, tends to eliminate technical barriers in the path of justice. Cf. Mangan v. Hopkins, 166 OS 41, 1 OO(2d) 186 (concurring opinion of Taft, J.); Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

15. Under the mandatory provisions of RC §§ 2741.02 and 2741.09, the interested persons must be so named and made parties within the period of six months: Fletcher v. First Nat. Bank, 167 OS 211, 4 OO(2d) 268, 147 NE(2d) 621.

16. In a will contest, where the executor or administrator is made a party, is named in the caption of the petition as executor or administrator and in no other capacity, is described in the body of the petition as executor or administrator and in no other capacity, and in fact has no relation to such case in any other capacity, and where, attached to the petition, there is a precipe for the issuance of summons, naming such executor or administrator but not with his title attached, and where service of summons is made upon such executor or administrator, with the caption of the petition upon the summons, in which caption the party is named as executor or administrator and in no other capacity, such executor or administrator is summoned as a party to the will contest in his fiduciary capacity: Abbott v. Dawson, 167 OS 238, 4 OO(2d) 288, 147 NE(2d) 609.

17. One who takes under the half-and-half statute (RC

§ 2105.10) takes as an heir of the relict or surviving spouse and as such, under the provisions of this section is a necessary party in an action to contest the will of such relict: Kluever v. Cleveland Trust Co., 173 OS 177, 18 OO(2d) 461, 180 NE(2d) 579.

18. Where in a timely brought action to contest a will, a defendant is designated in the body of the petition as the executor of the deceased testator's estate, but in the caption of the petition, in the precipe for summons and in the summons which is served on him he is named in an individual capacity, and it is apparent that his sole relation to the estate is that of executor, there is sufficient compliance with the provisions of this section, to bring him into the action as executor, and a motion filed more than six months after the admission of the will to probate to dismiss the petition for failure to summon him as executor should be overruled: Porter v. Fenner, 5 OS(2d) 233, 34 OO(2d) 465, 215 NE(2d) 389.

19. Revised Code § 2741.02 is a remedial statute and the proceedings thereunder are to be liberally construed, and no person should be denied the assertion of a cause of action on captious or purely technical grounds. Porter v. Fenner, 5 OS(2d) 233, 34 OO(2d) 465, paragraph 1 of the syllabus, overruling Mangan v. Hopkins, 166 OS 41, 1 OO(2d) 186; Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

20. The complaint or record of the court's proceedings, rather than the caption of the pleadings, determines who the parties rightfully and legally are, Porter v. Fenner, 5 OS(2d) 233, 34 OO(2d) 465, paragraph 1 of the syllabus; Vance v. Davis, 107 OS 577, paragraph 1 of the syllabus; Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

21. The purport of RC § 2741.02, is that "interested persons" be made parties to a will contest: Hecker v. Schuler, 12 OS(2d) 58, 41 OO(2d) 277, 231 NE(2d) 877.

22. A will contest action otherwise rightly "brought" within the meaning of RC § 2741.09, will not fail under RC § 2741.02 for the sole reason that a person who is nonexistent within the period of six months following probate is not joined as a party thereto: Hecker v. Schuler, 12 OS(2d) 58, 41 OO(2d) 277, 231 NE(2d) 877.

23. An adopted child who was subsequently returned and permanently surrendered to a social agency, pursuant to RC § 5103.15, was nevertheless an heir of the adoptive parents and thus a necessary party to a will contest action: Maurer v. Becker, 26 OS(2d) 254, 55 OO(2d) 486, 271 NE(2d) 255 (1971).

24. That executrix who was also sole beneficiary remained silent until after year for will contest expired was held not waiver of her right to assert that she was not individually bound by judgment setting will aside in contest wherein she was not individually made party: Myers v. Hogue, 45 App 330, 187 NE 127, 39 OLR 122.

25. An action to contest a will must, under this section, be commenced within six months after probate of the will, and it is not sufficient that a petition to contest and praecipe for summons be filed within the time prescribed, but summons must also be issued within that time: Coughlin v. Passionist Monastery, 59 App 433, 13 OO 199, 18 NE(2d) 496.

26. Executrix who, in her official capacity, defended an action to contest will did not thereby enter her appearance as sole legatee, since executrix who is also sole legatee is not one and same person: Myers v. Hogue, 45 App 330, 187 NE 127; but the fact that an executrix-devisee is named in the caption of a petition to contest a will merely as devisee is not fatal, where the petition shows that such devisee was appointed as executrix: Morisse v. Billau, 70 App 215, 24 OO 558, 45 NE(2d) 798.

27. Whether an executor of a will, made a party defendant in compliance with this section, in a suit to set the will aside, is an adverse party within the meaning of GC § 11497 (RC § 2317.07), subject to cross-examination on call of a plaintiff seeking to set the will aside, is to be determined from the entire record in the case: Board of Education v. Pendleton, 80 App 249, 35 OO 554, 75 NE(2d) 182.

28. Although service of summons is made within the six-month period prescribed by this section, for bringing an action to contest a will, only on the defendant so individually named, service may be lawfully made on the executor after the expiration of such period: Bockert v. Bockert, 82 App 274, 37 OO 571, 87 NE(2d) 549.

29. In an action to contest a will, where the executor has been discharged, an administrator de bonis non is a necessary party, but he is not a party united in interest with a testamentary trustee and where such administrator is not served with summons within the statutory time, the court obtains no jurisdiction of such administrator although the trustee was served within time: Campbell v. Johnson, 83 App 225, 38 OO 301, 81 NE(2d) 238.

30. An executor not made a party to such an action within the statutory time cannot thereafter, by his general appearance in the action, confer jurisdiction of the subject matter upon the court: McKelvey v. McKelvey, 90 App 563, 48 OO 207, 107 NE(2d) 555.

31. In an action to contest a will there is no unity of interest between an executor and the heirs at law, and service of summons upon the latter, within the statutory time, and not upon the executor will not save the action. The provisions of GC §§ 12080 and 11410 (RC §§ 2741.02 and 2311.33) are mandatory: McKelvey v. McKelvey, 90 App 563, 48 OO 207, 107 NE(2d) 555.

32. The executor or administrator is a necessary party to an action to contest a will: Woodruff v. Norvill, 91 App 251, 48 OO 361, 107 NE(2d) 911.

33. Under GC § 12080 (RC § 2741.02) that all devisees, legatees and heirs of testator and other interested persons, including the executor or administrator, be made parties to an action to contest a will, the court is without jurisdiction unless an executor is made a party, and summons duly followed by service is issued within six months after a will has been admitted to probate: Martin v. Mansfield Sav. &c. Bank, 92 App 465, 50 OO 44, 110 NE(2d) 814.

34. Insufficient compliance with GC § 12080 (RC § 2741.02) is shown where the plaintiff in an action to contest a will fails to name a necessary executor as a party defendant, in the caption of the petition and fails to serve such party as executor, merely listing the party in the caption in an individual or corporate capacity, although referring to such defendant as executor in the body of the petition: Martin v. Mansfield Sav. &c. Bank, 92 App 465, 50 OO 44, 110 NE(2d) 814.

35. A reviewing court is bound by the record before it, and, where such record is silent as to the exact relationship of one sought to be made a party to the other parties to a cause or to a will in controversy, or as to whether such party is united in interest, the reviewing court is unable to determine whether such individual is a necessary party to the cause by reason of the requirements of GC § 12080 (RC § 2741.02): Roscoe v. Kolb, 93 App 352, 51 OO 96, 113 NE(2d) 746.

36. An action to contest a will must be brought within six months after the will is admitted to probate, and in such an action the executor of the estate is a necessary party (this section and GC § 12087 [RC § 2741.09]): Bessire v. Fisher, 96 App 465, 55 OO 46, 122 NE(2d) 491.

37. Where a necessary party to whom summons has not been issued until after the statutory period has elapsed, is not an heir or next of kin of the testatrix, is related only by marriage to the testatrix, and is a legatee under the will of such testatrix, together with other legatees under such will, who are also heirs and next of kin of such testatrix, the issuance of summons to such latter legatees so related to the testatrix does not cause the commencement of an action to contest a will within the statutory period, there being a defect of parties, required by RC § 2741.02: Staley v. Scheck, 99 App 242, 58 OO 405, 133 NE(2d) 189.

38. A person named as executor in a will, which appointment was revoked by a codicil duly probated as a part of such will, does not come within the category of "interested persons" and is not a necessary defendant in an action to contest such will and codicil: Bruckmann v. Shaffer, 108 App 531, 10 OO(2d) 20, 155 NE(2d) 491.

39. The doctrine of virtual representation does not apply to a will contest action where it is apparent from the allegations in the petition that the persons interested in the action are not so numerous that it would be impracticable or inconvenient to make them all parties to the action, and such action is not brought as a class suit: McKinney v. McKinney, 115 App 379, 20 OO(2d) 453, 185 NE(2d) 319.

40. On motion of another defendant, such misnomer may not be grounds for dismissal of a will contest action as constituting a failure of the plaintiff to make all necessary parties defendant within the six-month period of time as prescribed by RC §§ 2741.02 and 2741.09: Cook v. Sears, 9 OApp(2d) 197, 38 OO(2d) 209, 223 NE(2d) 613.

41. This section providing who must be made parties to a will contest, is a personal statute, and all of each class named therein must be made parties to such action. An actual party to such action can be made only by one of the methods of lawful service of summons upon those parties: Collins v. Nurre, 20 OApp(2d) 53, 49 OO(2d) 70, 251 NE(2d) 621.

42. A will contest action, otherwise rightly brought within the meaning of RC § 2741.09, will not fail under RC § 2741.02 just because persons named testamentary trustees in the will, but not appointed to such capacity within six months following probate of the will, are not joined as parties in that capacity, where such persons have been timely made parties in the capacity of co-executors (having been so named in the will and appointed by the probate court), and all the beneficiaries of the testamentary trust have been timely made parties to the action: Hirsch v. Hirsch, 32 OApp(2d) 200, 61 OO(2d) 212, 289 NE(2d) 386 (1972).

43. Where a court in a will contest proceeding directs a verdict sua sponte on the basis of a compromise agreement made in a private conference, which distributes the devised property among the claimants in attendance, and all of the parties in the case are not parties to the agreement, such verdict is void: Taylor v. Connell, 26 OApp(2d) 253, 55 OO(2d) 412, 271 NE(2d) 305 (1971).

44. All the devisees, legatees, and heirs of the testator, and other interested persons, including the executor or administrator, must be made parties to an action in testing the validity of a will (RC § 2741.02) and the court is without jurisdiction in such an action unless the executor is made a party and a summons, duly followed by service, is issued within six months after the will has been admitted to probate: Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

45. Where one service of summons in an action contesting a will is made within the time prescribed by RC § 2741.09 upon a defendant occupying the positions of surviving spouse, devisee, and executrix and, although such summons does not designate the specific relationship between the estate and the defendant, the various capacities of the defendant are clearly designated in the body of the complaint attached to the summons, an amendment of the original complaint after the expiration of the six month statute of limitations prescribed by RC § 2741.09, in order to formally add the same defendant in different capacities, relate back to the date of the original pleading. Rule 15(C), Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure: Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

46. In a will contest action all necessary parties under RC § 2741.02 must be named and made parties within the six-month limitation period of RC § 2741.09. This requirement is mandatory and jurisdictional: Holland v.

Carlson, 40 OApp(2d) 325, 69 OO(2d) 299, 319 NE(2d) 362 (1974).

47. The attorney general is not a necessary party in a will contest case, the purpose of which is to determine whether a given paper writing is the last will of a certain decedent and not to terminate a charitable trust under RC § 109.25: Spang v. Cleveland Trust Co., 1 OO(2d) 288, 134 NE(2d) 586 (CP).

48. Where the pleader in a will contest lists all of the devisees, legatees and heirs of the testator in the body of the petition, it is not necessary to identify them therein as to the capacity in which they are served and made parties: Hinde v. Hinde, 5 OO(2d) 465, 146 NE(2d) 646 (CP).

49. Any person who might inherit under the "half-and-half" statute, if the relic died intestate, should be made a party defendant (or plaintiff) along with all other parties necessary, in a suit to contest the will of such relic: Bussell v. Cline, 10 OO(2d) 481, 161 NE(2d) 655 (CP).

50. In a will contest action, all the devisees, legatees, and heirs of the testator, and other interested persons, including the executor or administrator, must be made parties to the action by virtue of this section: Campbell v. Duncan, 51 OLA 257, 81 NE(2d) 238 (App).

51. Although plaintiffs, in an action to contest a will, fail to bring in all necessary parties designated in this section, and thus are not entitled to maintain the action, they will be bound by the determination of the court should the case proceed to trial and result in a judgment sustaining the will: Fleming v. Jackson, 55 OLA 271 (App).

52. Where a will contestant fails to make personal service or service by publication on the sole heir under the will within six months from the date of the probate of the will, service made on such heir after the expiration of such time will, on motion, be quashed: Faust v. Cailor, 76 OLA 504, 146 NE(2d) 875 (App).

53. A party cannot represent another whose interests are adverse: Harris v. Maholm, 20 NP(NS) 439, 28 OD 228.

54. General Code §§ 11925 to 11934 (RC §§ 5303.21 to 5303.30) tend to show that, in a proceeding involving an estate tail, the heirs of the body of the donee in tail must be made parties: Harris v. Maholm, 20 NP(NS) 439, 28 OD 228.

55. A remainderman who is born after contest is bound thereby if his interest was represented by others of the same class: Stewart v. O'Neal, 237 Fed 897, 150 CCA 547.

§ 2107.74 [Order of probate prima-facie evidence of validity.]

On the trial of any will contest under section 2107.71 of the Revised Code, the order of probate is prima-facie evidence of the attestation, execution, and validity of the will or codicil. The contesting party may call any witness to the will as upon cross examination.

1. In a suit to contest the validity of a will, declarations of a legatee, who is a defendant, in reference to the mental capacity of the testator, are not admissible to impeach the will, where there are other defendants whose interest may be injuriously affected by the admission of such evidence: Thompson v. Thompson, 13 OS 356.

2. A witness cannot state his opinion as to testator's capacity to make a will: Runyan v. Price, 15 OS 1; Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766; Burns v. Crowe, 31 OCA 566, 35 CD 468 [motion to certify record overruled, Burns v. Crowe, 17 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278]. See discussion in Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing, 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

3. To maintain the issue on their part, the plaintiffs must prove the invalidity of the will by a preponderance of the evidence: Mears v. Mears, 15 OS 90; Bloor v. Platt, 78 OS 46, 84 NE 604.

4. For other questions of execution, see Glancy v. Glancy, 17 OS 134; Baker v. Baker, 51 OS 217, 37 NE 125; Sears v. Sears, 77 OS 104, 82 NE 1067, 17 LRA(NS) 353; Mader v. Apple, 80 OS 691, 89 NE 37, 131 AmSt 719, 23 LRA(NS) 515; Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 OS 307; Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280.

5. To invalidate a will for fraud or undue influence, it must appear that the fraud or influence complained of had some effect upon the testator in producing the very act of making his will: Monroe v. Barclay, 17 OS 302; Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

6. On a trial to contest the validity of a will, errors or irregularities of the probate court in admitting the will to probate cannot be inquired into on the trial; the order of probate can only be overcome by showing that the will is in fact invalid: Converse v. Starr, 23 OS 491.

7. The order of probate is conclusive evidence of validity on the trial of a collateral issue, between a stranger and the devisee respecting the property devised, even though a proceeding to contest the will may be pending: Brown v. Burdick, 25 OS 260.

8. The original will, when not lost or destroyed, should be produced to the jury. It is the basis of the inquiry and trial, and the verdict and judgment should be responsive to the question whether that paper is the last will of the testator or not: Haynes v. Haynes, 33 OS 598.

9. Where the probate court has found and established the contents of a lost, spoliated or destroyed will, this will be prima facie evidence of the due attestation, execution, validity and contents of the will, and the burden of proof will be on the contestants to invalidate such will: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820.

10. If a will which was in testator's custody cannot be found at the time of his death, a presumption that he revoked it arises; and his declarations to the effect that he intended to revoke it are admissible to strengthen such presumption: Behrens v. Behrens, 47 OS 323, 25 NE 209, 21 AmSt 820.

11. Evidence that testator signed out of the presence of the subscribing witnesses and that he did not acknowledge his signature in their presence renders the will invalid: Keyl v. Feuchter, 56 OS 424, 47 NE 140.

12. By the bringing of an action to contest the validity of a will, under the statute, plaintiffs admit the probate of the will so put in contest, and will not, therefore, on the trial of said cause, be permitted to question or deny either the regularity of the order of probate, or the authority and jurisdiction of the court that made it: Stacey v. Cunningham, 69 OS 176, 68 NE 1001.

13. Evidence that testator signed his will a little above a marginal provision which was a part of such will renders it invalid: Irwin v. Jacques, 71 OS 395, 73 NE 683, 69 LRA 422.

14. In a contest to set aside a will admitted to probate as a lost or spoliated will after the probate record had been introduced by the defendant, the burden remained upon the plaintiff to establish that such will is not the last will of the deceased. Such burden does not shift to the defendant upon proof tending to show that the will was, shortly before his death, in the custody of testator and could not be found among his effects shortly after his decease: Hutson v. Hartley, 72 OS 262, 74 NE 197.

15. The presumption that testator revoked a will, which is shown to have been in his custody shortly before his death, and which is not found thereafter, is a presumption of fact, not of law: Hutson v. Hartley, 72 OS 262, 74 NE 197.

16. In proceedings to set aside the probate of a will in existence after the death of the testatrix and lost, a paper alleged to contain the substance of such will having been admitted to probate, it is not error to charge the jury that "if no other or further proof were given in respect to the will or its contents, it being shown that the original will was lost after the death of the testatrix without fault of the defendants as beneficiaries, and at the time of the death of the testatrix it has not been revoked, the defendants would be entitled to your verdict," especially when such instruction is considered with the context: Bloor v. Platt, 78 OS 46, 84 NE 604.

17. In a will contest, it is error to omit to instruct the jury that the order of probate raises a presumption that the will is valid, or that the jury must not set the will aside unless they find that the evidence offered by the contestant outweighs the evidence offered by the defendant and the presumption arising from the order of probate: Hall v. Hall, 78 OS 415, 85 NE 1125.

18. In an action contesting a will, it is error to charge that the law scrutinizes with a greater care the acts of a son or daughter who is remembered in a will to a larger extent than any others bearing the same kinship, if such son or daughter is in close relationship of trust or confidence, or upon whom a testatrix would implicitly rely, than it would on others bearing no such relationship: Hall v. Hall, 78 OS 415, 85 NE 1125.

19. It is error to instruct the jury that preponderance of the evidence means the greater weight of the testimony: Hall v. Hall, 78 OS 415, 85 NE 1125.

20. The declaration of testator and his conduct are admissible to show that he did not intend to revoke as an entirety a will out of which he tore a single sheet: Coghlin v. Coghlin, 79 OS 71, 85 NE 1058.

21. For a proper question as to the opinion of the witness as to the capacity of the testator, see Dunlap v. Dunlap, 89 OS 28, 104 NE 1006.

22. If a physician has had an opportunity of observing the mental condition of testator, by having rendered medical services to him for a sufficient period of time, he may be asked his opinion as to the actual condition of testator's mind if such condition is in issue: Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

23. The fact that testator makes an unequal and unfair distribution of his property does not raise the presumption of undue influence: Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

24. The supreme court does not weigh the evidence, but it will examine the record to ascertain whether there is any evidence in support of the contention of the prevailing party in the trial court, and to ascertain whether the trial court should have rendered a verdict on the undisputed evidence: Bahl v. Byal, 90 OS 129, 106 NE 766.

25. As long as the rule prevails permitting lay witnesses to give opinion as to testator's sanity or insanity, wide latitude may safely be permitted as to both the form and substance of questions which have for their object the presentation to the jury of a replica of the testator's mind, with all its strength or weakness, and its powers or limitations: Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

26. The rule that capacity to make a will requires ability to recollect testator's family and to appreciate their claims upon his bounty is not limited to members of testator's household, but, in the absence of closer connections, includes such relatives as under the laws of descent and distribution of Ohio would be entitled to the next estate of inheritance should he have died intestate: Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

27. For an erroneous charge as to undue influence when there was no evidence from which undue influence might be inferred, see Niemes v. Niemes, 97 OS 145, 119 NE 503 [reversing 26 CC(NS) 513, 28 CD 61].

28. For a charge as to execution of will, see Underwood v. Rutan, 101 OS 306, 128 NE 78.

29. In a proceeding to contest a will the executor has no power to waive the privilege from testifying as to confidential communications as given by GC § 11494 (RC § 2317.02): Swetland v. Miles, 101 OS 501, 130 NE 22 [affirming 31 OCA 529]; Haley v. Dempsey, 14 App 326 [motion to certify record overruled, Dempsey v. Haley, 19 OLR 155; judgment on retrial sustaining will affirmed by court of appeals; motion to certify record overruled, Haley v. Dempsey, 21 OLR 300].

30. An attorney for testator may not generally testify as to communications between himself and testator, not in the presence of a third person: Swetland v. Miles, 101 OS 501, 130 NE 132; but if he is a subscribing witness to the will he may testify, as the testator has waived the privilege: Collins v. Collins, 110 OS 105, 143 NE 561, 38 ALR 230.

31. The fact the attorney who drew a will by which testator left his property to a board of education, attempted, though without success, to be named therein as executor is evidence tending to show undue influence; and it is error to withdraw such question from the jury: Board of Education v. Phillips, 103 OS 622, 134 NE 646.

32. Evidence that testator was of advanced age and weak mentally, and that the beneficiary lived with testator on intimate terms and was also on intimate terms with the attorney who drew the will, is sufficient evidence of undue influence to require submission of the issue to the jury: Board of Education v. Phillips, 103 OS 622, 134 NE 646.

33. Evidence of inferior capacity, not amounting to incapacity is admissible on the issue of undue influence: Board of Education v. Phillips, 103 OS 622, 134 NE 646.

34. Failure in a general charge in the contest of a will to restate, in connection with the instructions relating to testamentary capacity and undue influence, that the presumption arising from the probate of the will must be taken into account and weighed according to its proper proportionate value as part of the whole evidence in arriving at a preponderance, is not prejudicial error, where the special finding of the jury is in all respects consistent with the general finding and clearly shows justification for the verdict returned on the issue of "want of execution," where proper instructions in that respect were given in the part of the charge dealing with that subject: West v. Lucas, 106 OS 255, 139 NE 859.

35. If ambiguous language in a will might refer to the reason for making such will, or might amount to a condition precedent to the will's taking effect, the fact that the testator keeps such will in his possession without revocation for a long period of time after the possibility of such event has ceased, tends to indicate that it is not a condition precedent, but merely a statement of the reasons which lead to making the will: McMerriman v. Schiel, 108 OS 334, 140 NE 600.

36. In determining the mental capacity of testator and undue influence, the jury may consider his age, his mental and physical condition when he executed the will, his relations toward the various parties, his feeling toward them, the nature and extent of his property, and the reasonable or unreasonable character of the will: Collins v. Collins, 110 OS 105, 143 NE 561, 38 ALR 230.

37. Where a will is signed by the testator and certain words appear below the signature, as to which there is a question whether they have any relation to the dispositive provisions before the signature, upon a contest of such will, the proponents are entitled to offer competent "other evidence"; and it is for the jury to say whether the signature is at the end of such will: Hane v. Kintner, 111 OS 297, 145 NE 326.

38. To set aside will, evidence invalidating will must outweigh evidence sustaining will and presumption from order admitting will to probate; determination of validity of will should not be limited to evidence of either party, but issue should be determined by a preponderance of all evidence adduced (this section): Van Demark v. Tompkins, 121 OS 129, 167 NE 370.

39. Where witnesses subscribe a will on one occasion in the presence of the testator, and the testator subscribes or acknowledges in their presence on a subsequent occasion, resubscription by attesting witnesses is not necessary where they identify the instrument and recognize but do not disaffirm their signatures: Bloechle v. Davis, 132 OS 415, 8 OO 249, 8 NE(2d) 247 [reversing 23 OLA 85]; see also School v. Sterkel, 46 App 389, 189 NE 15, 40 OLR 9 [motion to certify overruled].

40. A lay witness who testifies to facts which show opportunity to observe mental state of testator may give opinion as to his soundness of mind and capacity to form the purpose and intent to dispose of his property by will: Weis v. Weis, 147 OS 416, 34 OO 350, 72 NE(2d) 245; but may not give opinion as to whether testator was able to dispose of his property by will: Gottfried v. Yochum, 155 OS 283, 44 OO 292, 98 NE(2d) 821.

41. By the plain terms of this section the only issue which is to be tried by a jury is whether the writing produced is the last will or codicil of the testator: Comer v. Comer, 175 OS 313, 315, 25 OO(2d) 182, 194 NE(2d) 572.

42. In a will contest, by virtue of the statute, the burden of proof is cast upon the contestant of the will and such burden never shifts from him: Kata v. Second Nat. Bank, 26 OS(2d) 210, 55 OO(2d) 458, 271 NE(2d) 292.

43. To charge the jury with reference to the admission of a will to probate, that "by prima facie evidence we mean that these matters certified by the probate court probably occurred," is to give less than full value to the certificate of the probate court and is erroneous, and the error involved therein cannot be cured by a correct statement in another part of the charge: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545].

44. The charge that "it is not essential to the validity of a will that all or any of the subscribing witnesses should testify that the testatrix was of sound mind and memory, provided you find from all the evidence before you that she was of sound mind and memory," is proper: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545].

45. It is error to refuse to charge in a will case that a person who attaches his name as a witness to a testamentary instrument impliedly certifies that the testator is of sound mind and competent to make a will; and, while the law will permit him to subsequently testify to the contrary, because the truth, if such it be, should be learned, yet the jury, in weighing his testimony, may consider the fact of such implied contradiction: Stark v. Cress, 4 App 92, 22 CC(NS) 88 [reversing Cress v. Stark, 14 NP(NS) 545].

46. In a proceeding to contest a will a nonexpert witness can be asked to give his opinion of the mental capacity of the testator only at the time when the testator was under the observation of such witness: Strick v. Kiss, 5 App 292, 26 CC(NS) 456, 27 CD 554.

47. For an improper question, see Shuly v. Fink, 5 App 359, 26 CC(NS) 106.

48. Since undue influence is generally established by circumstantial evidence and by inferences drawn from a full presentation of facts which are inconclusive when taken separately, a wide range of inquiry is to be permitted to bring before the jury the facts and influences which bore upon the preparation of the will: Koch v. Meyers, 7 App 306, 29 OCA 142, 30 CD 439.

49. Declarations of a subscribing witness made after leaving the room in which the will was executed, cannot be admitted on the theory that they are part of the res gestae: Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

50. The testimony of a witness cannot be impeached by showing that he has made contradictory statements unless his attention is called to such statements and he is given an opportunity to admit, deny, or explain such statements; and this rule is not changed by the subsequent death of the witness. Accordingly, evidence of such declaration made by a subscribing witness to a will cannot be offered at contest if such witness died before the trial of such case: Baird v. Detrick, 8 App 198, 28 OCA 257 [affirming 20 NP(NS) 209, 28 OD 110; motion to certify record overruled, 15 OLR 439, 62 Bull 476].

51. Though the order of probate is made prima facie evidence of the due execution, attestation and validity of the will, where in an action to contest a will, the court finds that the will was not signed at the end, the court should grant the motion of plaintiffs to direct a verdict invalidating the will: Herbster v. Pincombe, 10 App 322, 31 OCA 358 [motion to certify record overruled, Pincombe v. Herbster, 16 OLR 79, 63 Bull 195].

52. When no evidence is offered on the trial to show when a will was lost or destroyed, whether before or after the death of the testator, the order of probate admitting the will to record is sufficient evidence of the existence of the will after such death to justify a verdict sustaining the will: Egbert v. Egbert, 10 App 432, 29 OCA 584 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 507, 64 Bull 61].

53. The so-called presumption of undue influence arising from confidential relations between testator and beneficiary is a mere inference of fact and not a presumption of law regarding which the court should charge the jury: Haley v. Dempsey, 14 App 326 [motion to certify record overruled, Dempsey v. Haley, 19 OLR 155].

54. The testimony of an expert witness, like the evidence of every other witness, is to be considered by the jurors, who are to accord to it influence, much or little, and in such degree as it appeals to their intelligent and impartial minds, in view of all the facts and circumstances developed in the trial: Ross v. Stewart, 15 App 339, 32 OCA 217.

55. It is not error for the trial judge to say to the jury in a will case that "there is no evidence of duress, coercion, or undue influence" where no evidence has been offered in support of that question: Ross v. Stewart, 15 App 339, 32 OCA 217.

56. For a correct charge on testamentary capacity, see Ross v. Stewart, 15 App 339; 32 OCA 217.

57. The trial court is without power to dismiss an action to contest a will, after the issues have been made up: Perrine v. Perrine, 18 App 467.

58. Action to contest a will admits the regularity of order of probate, and jurisdiction of court: Aston v. Hauck, 22 App 430, 153 NE 277.

59. In will contest, subscribing witness' affidavit, made and offered in probate court as proof of execution of will, held incompetent, where witness was in court: Fox v. Lynch, 43 App 305, 183 NE 177.

60. In will contest, subscribing witness to will cannot be called for cross-examination by contestants after contestants have, without objection, permitted introduction of witness' affidavit as part of order of probate: Fox v. Lynch, 43 App 305, 183 NE 177.

61. Word "probate," within statute requiring sustaining party in will contest to offer will and "probate," held to mean order of probate, not including affidavit of subscribing witnesses to will: Fox v. Lynch, 43 App 305, 183 NE 177.

62. In will contest, though petition did not allege specific grounds of contest, excluding evidence respecting relations between testator and favored son, unjustness of will, and incoherent talk by testator, was held prejudicial error: Fox v. Lynch, 43 App 305, 183 NE 177.

63. In will contest, excluding testimony as to what witness observed about testator at time will was made, as bearing on testator's mental condition, held error: Fox v. Lynch, 43 App 305, 183 NE 177.

64. In will contest, that defendants' written preargument request to charge contained same error as plaintiffs' request was held not to preclude defendants from availing themselves of error in plaintiffs' request where court, of own volition, changed defendants' request in certain respects and also included error in general charge: Warn v. Whipple, 45 App 285, 187 NE 88, 39 OLR 49.

65. Order of probate is prima facie evidence of attestation as well as execution and validity of will: Steinle v. Kester, 46 App 245, 188 NE 395, 39 OLR 415.

66. In will contest, instruction to find against will if one or both of signatures of subscribing witnesses was not genuine was properly refused because instruction did not also incorporate presumption arising from probate of will: Steinle v. Kester, 46 App 245, 188 NE 395, 39 OLR 415.

67. The admission in a will contest of an order of probate containing unusual matter was not erroneous, in view of instruction correctly limiting evidential purpose and value: Scholl v. Sterkel, 46 App 389, 189 NE 15, 40 OLR 9.

68. An affidavit of the attesting witness subsequently disavowing signature to will was competent in will contest for impeaching purposes and to prove signature to will: Scholl v. Sterkel, 46 App 389, 189 NE 15, 40 OLR 9.

69. A request, in a will contest, to charge that jury found instrument was signed and executed on dates as shown therein, was properly refused as presupposing will was invalid because of discrepancies in dates: Scholl v. Sterkel, 46 App 389, 189 NE 15, 40 OLR 9.

70. An objection that a requested instruction that justness, reasonableness, and naturalness of will, and value and nature of testatrix' estate have weight on the question of testamentary capacity only according to the circumstances and in connection with other evidence required the jury to give some weight to testimony as to such matters, was held insufficient to require a refusal of the charge: Helmig v. Kramer, 48 App 71, 1 OO 93, 192 NE 388, 40 OLR 413.

71. Requested instructions, incorporating only one of testatrix' mental characteristics, on which will contestants relied to establish her testamentary incapacity, was properly refused as incomplete: Helmig v. Kramer, 48 App 71, 1 OO 93, 192 NE 388, 40 OLR 413.

72. A charge to the jury concerning a finding that would not be "sufficient to justify you in sustaining the will herein" is misleading as impelling the jury to the conclusion that the proponents have the duty of sustaining the will whereas the jury is always justified in sustaining the will by the presumption attending probate: Brown v. Jacoby, 55 App 250, 7 OO 343, 9 NE(2d) 693.

73. The fact that the chief beneficiary of a will was not a relative of the testator should not be considered as evidence of undue influence, in an action to contest the will, in the absence of definite evidence to that effect: Brown v. Jacoby, 55 App 250, 7 OO 343, 9 NE(2d) 693.

74. A physician who has examined, diagnosed and treated a patient for bodily ailments, may, in a proceeding to contest his will following death, give his opinion as to the soundness of his patient's mind; GC § 11494 (RC § 2317.02) to be strictly construed: Meier v. Peirano, 76 App 9, 31 OO 342, 62 NE(2d) 920.

75. The evidence justifying, it is error to refuse to charge, on request before argument, "... it is not the actual remembering of the names of those who have natural claims upon one's bounty, but the capacity and ability to remember such persons...": Meier v. Peirano, 76 App 9, 31 OO 342, 62 NE(2d) 920.

76. It is error to reject evidence, offered by contestants, in respect to appointment of guardian and adjudication of incompetency made about a month before execution of will, where it, with other evidence, would constitute some evidence of undue influence: Heath v. Kosier, 76 App 89, 31 OO 403, 61 NE(2d) 728.

77. Rejection of evidence, offered by contestants, of a statement of testatrix tending to indicate that the disposition of her property under her former will, executed about two weeks before the contested will, was consistent with the desires she had expressed previously, is not error, where the time when the statement was made is not shown: Heath v. Kosier, 76 App 89, 31 OO 403, 61 NE(2d) 728.

78. Refusal to give contestant's requested charge, as to where testatrix's property would go pursuant to a former will, is not error when the requested charge constituted an inexact statement of law: Heath v. Kosier, 76 App 89, 31 OO 403, 61 NE(2d) 728.

79. The so-called presumption of undue influence arising out of confidential relations (guardian and ward) between a beneficiary and the testator is neither a conclusive presumption nor one of law, but is a mere inference of fact which the jury may draw, but which the court may not charge the jury as a matter of law to find: Board of Education v. Pendleton, 80 App 249, 35 OO 554, 75 NE(2d) 182.

80. That testator's lawyer, who participated in drawing will, was named as a beneficiary does not alone give rise to a presumption that he used or abused his trust: Caswell v. Lermann, 85 App 200, 40 OO 148, 88 NE(2d) 405.

81. A family physician who had treated testatrix for physical ailments only, may testify as to her mental condition and capacity to make will: Carson v. Beatley, 86 App 173, 41 OO 25, 82 NE(2d) 745.

82. In a proceeding to contest a will, the court is required to overrule defendant's motion for a directed verdict, made at the close of plaintiff's evidence, where the plaintiff has produced credible evidence of a substantial character sufficient to overcome the presumption of due attestation, execution and validity of the will which arises from the order of probate: Truchess v. Brand, 98 App 118, 57 OO 195, 128 NE(2d) 157.

83. The jurisdiction of the trial court in a will contest is limited to one simple question: whether or not the writing produced is the last will or codicil of the testator: Skorapa v. Skorapa, 17 OO(2d) 97, 177 NE(2d) 310 (PC).

84. If a trust agreement is competent evidence in an action to contest a will, it is immaterial which party is required to or did introduce it in evidence: Toledo Trust Co. v. Koeninger, 14 OLA 633.

85. The court's statement in a charge to the jury in a will contest that "you as jurors are not at liberty to make a will for her," was held not error: Bergoon v. Berk, 17 OLA 507.

86. After the proponent has offered evidence in a will contest, the contestant, under GC § 11420-1 (RC § 2315.01) and this section, may by way of impeachment show that witnesses for the proponent made certain statements outside of court which contradicted their testimony in court: Underwood v. Hickin, 18 OLA 345.

87. A testament is placed in contest in a proceeding to test its validity with a presumption of validity in every respect consequent upon its probate: Meyer v. Geiger, 34 OLA 1.

88. Where, in a will contest case in which no answer was filed, the entry setting forth the issue of whether or not the writing produced was the last will and testament of the decedent, was dictated by the trial judge before the conclusion of the testimony, and then filed, and, at the time of impanelling the jury, such issue was given orally to the jury, there was a sufficient compliance with this section requiring that such issue be made up either by the pleadings or an order on the journal, so as to prevent prejudicial error: Fazekas v. Gobozy, 78 OLA 258, 150 NE(2d) 319 (App).

89. A person under guardianship for mental incompetency, by order of the probate court, is presumed to be insane; however, a last will and testament executed by such person while under legal guardianship and admitted to probate by a court of competent jurisdiction, is not presumed to be invalid. To the contrary, "the order of probate is prima facie evidence of the attestation, execution, and validity of the will ," Hermann v. Crossen, 81 OLA 322, 160 NE(2d) 404 (App).

90. Oral declarations of a testatrix as to her testamentary intentions, made during her last sickness and shortly after the execution of her will, are not admissible to show an intention contrary to that expressed in the will or contradict its terms, but are competent as tending to show the condition of her mind at the time the will was executed: Kuhl v. Reichert, 2 CC(NS) 42, 15 CD 693.

91. Questions of mental capacity and undue influence are for the jury. But the preponderance of evidence should be considered and given great weight by a reviewing court, even against the verdict of the jury: Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

92. The fact that a daughter, after leaving her father's house, brought suit against him for and made a settlement with him as to her share of her mother's estate, is evidence in a will contest tending to show that the daughter at that time regarded her father as of sound mind: Kettemann v. Metzger, 3 CC(NS) 224, 13 CD 61.

93. The statement in the charge to the jury in a suit to contest a will that "the important item of evidence bearing upon the condition of mind of the testator is the will itself," is erroneous in that the court invaded the province of the jury by inviting a substitution of its opinion for that of the jury as to what item of evidence should be regarded as of special importance: Rapp v. Becker, 4 CC(NS) 139, 16 CD 321.

94. An erroneous instruction to a jury regarding testamentary capacity, is not cured by giving elsewhere in the charge, proper rules and criteria for determining testamentary capacity, but which do not qualify such improper charge: West v. Knoppenberger, 4 CC(NS) 305, 16 CD 168.

95. Declarations made by a witness which tend to show her state of mind, and which afford circumstantial evidence of her purpose and design in treating the testatrix with apparent kindness and affection, as she did in her last illness, are admissible: Schoch v. Schoch, 6 CC(NS) 110, 17 CD 828.

96. In a suit to contest a will, it is not error to refuse to give a special charge to the effect that the fact of the testator's belief in spiritualism does not afford ground for setting the will aside, where the charge as requested does not embrace all the facts brought out at the trial concerning the belief and practice of spiritualism by the testatrix: Schoch v. Schoch, 6 CC(NS) 110, 17 CD 828.

97. Where the controlling issue is as to whether the alleged will is a forgery or genuine, any competent evidence tending to prove either fact is admissible, and to this end it is competent to introduce the disputed will in evidence for comparison with other written documents in evidence which have been proved to be genuine, or to introduce forged papers, where such papers will tend to show the evil purpose of the parties who may have forged the will in suit: Gurley v. Armentraut, 6 CC(NS) 156, 17 CD 199.

98. The legal presumption that a will once known to exist and to have been in the possession of the testator, but which cannot be found after his death, was destroyed by the testator, with the intention of revoking it, may be either fortified or weakened by evidence as to declarations by the testator subsequent to the making of the will: Gurley v. Armentraut, 6 CC(NS) 156, 17 CD 199.

99. Wills cannot be set aside by the admissions of different beneficiaries under the will made out of court: Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449.

100. Evidence of the faithfulness of the beneficiary to the testator is competent in a will contest because of the bearing which it has upon the question of the reasonableness of the will as executed: Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449.

101. Where a witness is called by the defendant in a will contest to give his opinion in chief as to the mental capacity of the testator, no right exists in favor of the plaintiff to cross-examine him upon the facts and ground upon which his opinion is based, until after the conclusion of the examination in chief: Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449.

102. Previous declarations of a witness, who is also a beneficiary under a will, are not a proper subject of cross-examination except for the purpose of impeachment: Moore v. Caldwell, 6 CC(NS) 484, 17 CD 449.

103. It is not error to charge that, in order to make a valid will, "it is necessary a person shall have sufficient mental capacity for the transaction of the ordinary affairs of life," when this was followed in a later paragraph by the express statement that "he need not have sufficient capacity to make a contract, but must understand substantially what he is doing and the nature of the act in which he or she is engaged": Welsh Hills Baptist Church v. Wilson, 9 CC(NS) 611, 19 CD 391 [affirmed without report, 75 OS 636].

104. In an action to contest a will, declarations by a party to the record, who is a legatee with others under the will, are inadmissible to prove that the will was contrary to the intentions of the testator, or was procured by undue influence: Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110.

105. Whether or not testator's eccentricities, peculiarities or delusions affect his testamentary capacity is a question for the jury under proper instructions, and to charge that they are of no consequence, if testator has sufficient mental capacity to transact ordinary business and of understanding the nature of the business in hand, is prejudicial: Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110.

106. An order admitting a will to probate is, by force of former GC § 10516 (see now RC § 2107.14), prima facie evidence only of its validity, from which it follows that in a proceeding to contest a will under this and the following sections, a statement by counsel in argument to the jury to the effect that the probate judge, experienced in such matters, had admitted the will to probate on the same evidence heard in the proceeding to contest, and that it would be presumptions in the jury to hold differently, constitutes misconduct of counsel prejudicial to the rights of contestants, for which a judgment based on a verdict sustaining the will is reversible: Wadsworth v. Purdy, 12 CC(NS) 8, 21 CD 110.

107. The presence of a beneficiary at the place at which a will was executed, and the fact that he gave advice to the testator with reference to such will, is not sufficient to justify a verdict setting aside the will on the ground of undue influence: Wilson v. Wilson, 14 CC(NS) 241, 22 CD 498, 56 Bull 377 (Ed) [reversing 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188].

108. Where a woman of fine character and delicate sensibilities executes a will, after long deliberation and with the full knowledge of her children, in which, contrary to her own strong desire to give the property received by her from her husband to her children, she disposes of the property in accordance with a written request received from her husband, the influence so operating upon her will not be treated, in an action brought by a grandchild to set the will aside, as an undue or improper influence: Wilder v. Taylor, 14 CC(NS) 255, 23 CD 643 [affirming 10 NP(NS) 209, 24 OD 621, and reversed without opinion, 87 OS 520].

109. Testimony showing that the son of the testator was heavily in debt is competent for the purpose of indicating the purpose of the testator in making no provision for the son and giving his entire estate to his son's wife and their children, thereby protecting the estate against the creditors of the said son: Kuester v. Yeoman, 14 CC(NS) 264; sub nomine, Kuster v. Yeoman, 22 CD 476, [affirmed, without opinion, Yeoman v. Kuester, 88 OS 592].

110. Where testimony is offered on the trial by the contestants of an alleged will, tending to show that one of the witnesses thereto made contradictory statements at different times touching his knowledge that the paper writing signed by him as such witness was subscribed and acknowledged as testator's will, it is error upon the part of the trial court to exclude such testimony: Tims v. Tims, 14 CC(NS) 273, 22 CD 506.

111. A jury cannot set aside a will on the ground that they do not regard it as a fair and reasonable will: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

112. The fact that the testator was afflicted with progressive locomotor ataxia and was for a number of years before his death physically unable to perform any task or to help himself in any way, is not sufficient ground for setting the will aside, where it appears that during all that time he directed in detail the operations on farms aggregating over three hundred acres, and with reference to the management of his said lands did all that could have been done by a person of a sound and active mind; and the only testimony tending to show mental incapacity was slight forgetfulness on certain occasions and failure to include in his will certain legacies which he had declared he intended to make: Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

113. It is erroneous to charge a jury that undue influence "is coercion produced by importunity, or by a silent, resistless power, which the strong will often exercises over the weak and infirm, so that the motive was tantamount to force or fear": Gregg v. Moore, 14 CC(NS) 570, 23 CD 534.

114. In the trial of a contest of a nuncupative will, the introduction of evidence of the two witnesses thereto, taken at the time of its probate and the journal entry therefor, may not be proper; but if proponents offer it, they cannot complain if it is given due effect to destroy the prima facie case made out by probate: Parsons v.

Wass, 16 CC(NS) 404, 31 CD 577 [reversing Wass v. Guardian Trust Co., 15 OD(NP) 677].

115. For a charge properly refused as to effect of order of probate, see Eggleston v. Gardner, 16 CC(NS) 455, 31 CD 627.

116. Where a will is signed by the testator in the absence of the witnesses, and he later acknowledges his will to the witnesses, this implies that he also acknowledges his signature to the will: Eggleston v. Gardner, 16 CC(NS) 455, 31 CD 627.

117. An expert may not be called upon to say whether one was competent to make a particular will, but only whether, in his opinion, his mental capacity was such as the law requires for the making of a valid will: Walsh v. Walsh, 18 CC(NS) 91, 32 CD 617.

118. In a will contest case it is misleading to charge the jury that it is of no importance what the probate judge did in probating the will, and that they are not to be influenced by what he did: Walsh v. Walsh, 18 CC(NS) 91, 32 CD 617.

119. Guardianship on the ground of interdependence does not raise the same presumption of testamentary incapacity as would be the case if the guardianship rested upon the ground of insanity or imbecility: Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

120. It is not error, after properly defining the capacity which a testator must have, the understanding which he must have of the extent of his property, his relation to the objects of his bounty, the effect of his will and the strength of mind necessary to perceive their obvious relations to each other, to add, "Though he may not be able to understand these matters in all their bearings as a person in sound and vigorous health of mind and body would do": Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

121. It is not error to charge that the law gives to testatrix "The right to dispose of her property by last will and testament lawfully executed in any way she saw fit. . . . You are not at liberty to make a will for her. That was her right. You are simply to decide whether the one she had made was sanctioned by and fulfilled the requirements of the law": Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

122. It is not error to refer to the alleged will as "The will" or "The will she has made": Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

123. For a charge as to burden of proof, see Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

124. The fact that a wife guides or even dominates her husband in the ordinary affairs of life, or has acquired an ascendancy over him, does not render his will made in her favor invalid: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

125. A declaration made by a testator to the effect that he has made a will, or that he has revoked a will, is not independent evidence of such fact; and it is not admissible without some foundation of direct evidence or presumption as to the existence of such fact: Kornfield v. Kornfield, 22 CC(NS) 363, 33 CD 617.

126. Hypothetical questions as to testator's mental condition cannot be asked a witness who is not an expert, even upon cross-examination: Hathaway v. Farley, 22 CC(NS) 462, 33 CD 668 [affirmed without opinion, 76 OS 562].

127. Declarations of testator if made near the time of the execution of the will, whether made before or after such execution, are admissible to prove the state of mind of testator, but are not admissible to prove the specific facts which are relied upon as constituting undue influence: Boepple v. Mellert, 24 CC(NS) 409, 34 CD 651.

128. If the plaintiffs, in a proceeding to contest a will, contend that the beneficiary under the will excluded the other members of the family from the testatrix, who was their mother, by violence, and that he brought her completely under his control by such violence and other similar means, and that he thus induced her to make a will which expressed his desires and not hers, evidence tending to show that such beneficiary was harsh and vile in his treatment of his father is admissible: Boepple v. Mellert, 24 CC(NS) 409, 34 CD 651.

129. In a proceeding to contest a will, in which the question of undue influence is raised, the actual relations existing between testator and other members of his family may be shown: Boepple v. Mellert, 24 CC(NS) 409, 34 CD 651.

130. If the trial court, in an action to contest a will, does not instruct the jury that the order of probate raises a presumption that the will is valid or that such order of probate was prima facie evidence of the due execution, attestation and validity of the will, such omission is erroneous; but if the verdict and judgment are in favor of the validity of the will, such omission is not prejudicial to the contestant; and such judgment will not be reversed for such error: Rogers v. Monroe, 26 CC(NS) 193, 29 CD 558.

131. In a proceeding to contest a will in which evidence has been offered to the effect that testator was slovenly in appearance, and in which evidence has been introduced as to his appearance in general, a photograph of the testator is admissible in connection with evidence tending to show that such photograph was a good likeness of the testator, and resembled him about the time of the execution of the will: Ware v. Slocum, 26 CC(NS) 317, 27 CD 348 [motion to certify record overruled, October 10, 1916; distinguishing Varner v. Varner, 16 CC 386, 9 CD 273, on the ground that in such case there was no evidence as to the accuracy of such photograph].

132. It will be presumed that a will was drawn in accordance with the wishes of testator: Morris v. Osborne, 27 OCA 161, 29 CD 280 [motion to certify record overruled, Morris v. Osborne, 61 Bull 152]; Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

133. Opinion evidence of lack of capacity of a testator which is based on the witness' observation of such testator is of no value if the evidence of such witness shows that the facts upon which such opinion is based do not warrant such opinion: Gomien v. Weidemer, 27 OCA 177, 29 CD 1.

134. Declarations of a testator made either before, after, or at the time of the execution of the will, are competent as evidence where the mental capacity of the testator is in issue: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 418 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

135. It is prejudicial error for a court to refuse to charge the jury that an order of probate under this section carried with it sufficient prima facie evidence to establish the validity of a will unless overcome by competent evidence: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

136. The fact that a will is written on pieces of paper of different sizes and kinds is not sufficient to show undue influence or forgery; especially if such fact is explained by competent evidence: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

137. Error cannot be predicated on the refusal of a court to receive the testimony of witnesses expressive of an opinion as to the mental testamentary capacity of the decedent, regardless of the competency of such witnesses to form a trustworthy opinion in that behalf: Burns v. Crowe, 31 OCA 566, 35 CD 468 [motion to certify record overruled, 17 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278].

138. Evidence to the effect that a beneficiary under a will obtained the consent of the decedent to the calling of a lawyer to draw the will, and that one was procured and the will executed, and that two weeks later the same beneficiary applied to the probate court for the appointment of a guardian for the decedent on the ground of imbecility and was subsequently named as one of the guardians appointed by said court, is sufficient to support the issue of undue influence: Burns v. Crowe, 31 OCA 566, 35 CD 468 [motion to certify record overruled, 17 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278].

139. A will made by one with no relatives who had any right to expect help from him, which gave all property to the Salvation Army and to some of its members, was sustained: Baillie v. Heimsath, 23 OLR 386 (App).

140. A scrivener of a will, who is also executor, and who appears to be an adverse party, may be cross-examined under GC § 11497 (RC § 2317.07) in an action to contest the validity of the will: Chaney v. Coulter, 29 OCA 177, 35 CD 481 [motion to certify record overruled, Coulter v. Chaney, 16 OLR 349, 63 Bull 446].

141. Deeds executed by a testator may be admitted in evidence in an action to set aside his will, where the purpose is to throw light on the mental capacity of the testator by showing his method of transacting business and the nature of the business transacted by him at about the time of making the will: Wilson v. Wilson, 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188.

142. A plaintiff in a will contest, although a son of the testator and a devisee under the will, is a competent witness to testify to acts of the testator, and the manner in which those acts were performed: Wilson v. Wilson, 7 NP(NS) 435, 19 OD 188.

143. Undue influence over a testator on the part of his second wife is not shown by the fact that the children of the second wife fared better than the contestant, a child of the first wife, where the second wife was not herself given an undue proportion of the estate: O'Rourke v. Kenny, 11 NP(NS) 602, 22 OD 56.

144. Under this section, when contestants of a will have produced evidence from which legitimate inferences could be drawn that a daughter had acquired a dominating influence over the testator five years preceding the will, declarations of the testator just preceding this period are not too remote to be admissible as material evidence of the last free exercise of his faculties and as showing his testamentary intentions: Otte v. Bullock, 22 NP(NS) 305, 31 OD 177.

145. Under this section, declarations of a legatee are admissible to show a general intent or disposition to exercise undue influence over the testator: Otte v. Bullock, 22 NP(NS) 305, 31 OD 177.

146. The reasonableness of the will may be considered by the jury on the issue of capacity to make it, and for this purpose the financial condition of the principal legatee may be inquired into: Snyder v. Ream, 1 Dayton TermRep (Iddings) 167.

§ 2107.75 [Administration costs of purported will.]

When the jury or the court finds that the writing produced is not the last will and testament or codicil of the testator, the trial court shall allow as part of the costs of administration such amounts to the fiduciary and to the attorneys defending such purported last will or purported codicil as the trial court finds to be reasonable compensation for the services rendered in such contest. The court shall order such amounts to be paid out of the estate of the decedent.

[DECISIONS CONSTRUING FORMER ANALOGOUS SECTIONS]

1. This section, as amended effective July 4, 1945, and authorizing the allowance as a part of the costs of administration of a decedent's estate, attorney fees for an unsuccessful defense of a purported will, is not unconstitutional, does not deprive the contestees of property without due process of law, and is not unreasonable: Lindsey v. Markley, 87 App 529, 43 OO 317, 96 NE(2d) 311.

2. The provisions of this section do not prohibit a contract between an attorney and a beneficiary under a will, providing for the amount which is to be paid for services rendered in defending such will. A probate court is not precluded from allowing, as a part of the expense in the administration of a decedent's estate, compensation to an executor and attorney for services rendered in the defense of such will, notwithstanding there is no provision for such allowance in this section: In re Teopas, 116 App 506, 22 OO(2d) 322, 188 NE(2d) 616.

§ 2107.76 [Probate forever binding; except.]

If within four months after a will is admitted to probate, no person files an action to contest the validity of the will, the probate shall be forever binding, except as to persons under any legal disability, or to such persons for four months after such disability is removed. The rights saved shall not affect the rights of a purchaser, lessee, or encumbrancer for value in good faith, nor impose any liability upon a fiduciary who has acted in good faith, or upon a person delivering or transferring property to any other person under authority of a will, whether or not the purchaser, lessee, encumbrancer, fiduciary, or other person had notice, actual or constructive, of the legal disability.

with him. The disability of nonresidence under an earlier form of this section was removed by temporary presence even in infancy: Powell v. Koehler, 52 OS 103, 39 NE 195, 26 LRA 480, 49 AmSt 705; see Meese v. Keefe, 10 O 362; Bradford v. Andrews, 20 OS 208.

7. Probate of a will is not reviewable on error, though a refusal to admit the will to probate is reviewable: Hollrah v. Lasance, 63 OS 58, 57 NE 964.

8. Since a proceeding to contest a will is conferred by a statute which prescribes the time within which such right may be exercised, the period of time thus fixed is a part of the right and not merely a period of limitations within which a right may be enforced by the courts: McVeigh v. Fetterman, 95 OS 292, 116 NE 518; McCord v. McCord, 104 OS 274, 135 NE 548 [see also 91 OS 441; 7 App 129, 28 OCA 137, 29 CD 429].

9. Where the next of kin have no knowledge of fraud, and fail to bring the action to contest within the period of one year (now six months) after they respectively arrive at majority, they may maintain a suit in equity within the period of four years after discovery of the fraud: Seeds v. Seeds, 116 OS 144, 156 NE 193, 52 ALR 761.

10. An action for damages will lie after expiration of time for contest of a forged will probated by perjured testimony: Morton v. Pettit, 124 OS 241, 177 NE 591, 34 OLR 479 [affirming 38 App 348, 176 NE 494]; also, a suit in equity commenced within four years after discovery of the fraud: Seeds v. Seeds, 116 OS 144, 156 NE 193, 52 ALR 761.

11. Service of summons upon one of the legatee-devisee defendants, in an action to contest the validity of a will, is to be deemed commencement of the action as to each of the defendants of that class and also the executor; actual service of summons can thereafter be made upon the remainder of the defendants of that class: Draher v. Walters, 130 OS 92, 3 OO 121, 196 NE 884.

12. Where a will contest is brought within the statutory time provided therefor but the petition fails to disclose that the plaintiff is a party interested in the will involved, an amendment of the petition to allege facts showing that the plaintiff is an interested party will be in furtherance of justice; and such an amendment may be made after the statutory period for the bringing of such will contest: Morton v. Fast, 159 OS 380, 50 OO 335, 112 NE(2d) 385.

13. Where, in an action to contest a will brought by three heirs at law of the decedent, the petition names as defendants the sole legatee and devisee, the executrix and three other heirs at law but fails to name numerous other heirs at law necessary to the determination of the validity of the will, and no service of process is sought or secured on any of the defendant heirs within six months after the will has been admitted to probate, the addition as plaintiffs of the heirs at law, who are not included in the petition, and the defendant heirs at law, who are not served with summons to the action, after the expiration of the statutory period of limitation, does not confer jurisdiction on the court to hear such contest: Gravier v. Gluth, 163 OS 232, 56 OO 228, 126 NE(2d) 332 [affirming 99 App 374, 59 OO 146, 119 NE(2d) 663, affirming 70 OLA 5116, 119 NE(2d) 663].

14. Devisee under unprobated will, not discovering fraud within statutory period for will contest, may maintain tort action for forgery and fraudulent probate of other will within four years after discovery of fraud: Pettit v. Morton, 38 App 348, 176 NE 494 [affirmed, 127 OS 241].

15. In suit to contest will, omission to allege will had been admitted to probate could be supplied by amendment filed year after probate: Sours v. Shuler, 42 App 393, 181 NE 908, 36 OLR 544.

16. An action to contest a will must, under GC § 12087 (RC § 2741.09), be commenced within six months after probate of the will, and it is not sufficient that a petition to contest and praecipe for summons be filed within the time prescribed, but summons must also be issued within

1. Where a will is set aside at the instance of one heir who is within the saving clause of the statute of limitations, it is wholly annulled and the entire estate is distributed: Meese v. Keefe, 10 O 362.

2. Where a proceeding to contest a will is commenced within the statutory period, although only part of the persons interested are made parties thereto, the right of action is saved as to all who are ultimately made parties, notwithstanding some of them are not brought into the case until after the period of limitation has expired: Bradford v. Andrews, 20 OS 222.

3. A will, once probated and recorded, is binding in every respect, except as evidence against interested persons, who may contest it within the time limited. But if interested persons do not so contest it, then it becomes forever binding upon them as it had been on all others from the date of probate and record. If interested persons contest the will, it nevertheless remains in full force during such proceeding for all purposes except as evidence in that contest: Brown v. Burdick, 25 OS 260.

4. This provision was first introduced into the wills act on February 18, 1808 (1 Chase, 571), and has continued to be the law down to the present time: Mosier v. Harmon, 29 OS 220.

5. The mode of contesting a will admitted to probate, provided by GC § 12079 (RC § 2741.01) and the above section, is exclusive: Mosier v. Harmon, 29 OS 220.

6. Disability of the contestant inures to all interested that time: Coughlin v. Passionist Monastery, 59 App 433, 13 OO 199, 18 NE(2d) 496.

17. The provision of GC § 12087 (RC § 2741.09), that “an action to contest a will or codicil shall be brought within six months after it has been admitted to probate,” is not a mere time limitation on the commencement of such an action but imposes a condition to the existence of the right: Woodruff v. Norvill, 91 App 251, 48 OO 361, 107 NE(2d) 911.

18. In an action to contest a will, service of summons on the devisees, one of whom was also the executor, does not constitute the commencement of an action against the executor as such: Woodruff v. Norvill, 91 App 251, 48 OO 361, 107 NE(2d) 911.

19. Where, in an action to contest a will the executors of the decedent's estate are named as such in the caption of the petition and so designated in the body of the petition, and in the precipe for summons such executors are named in their individual capacities only and as individuals are served with summons within the six-month period within which an action to contest a will must be brought, this section is not complied with: Bessire v. Fisher, 96 App 465, 55 OO 46, 122 NE(2d) 491.

20. The provisions of RC §§ 2107.23, 2741.02 and 2741.09, relative to actions to contest the validity of a will are mandatory and the enjoyment of the right to maintain such an action is dependent upon compliance with such statutory conditions and limitations: Gravier v. Gluth, 99 App 374, 59 OO 146, 119 NE(2d) 663.

20. The provisions of RC §§ 2107.23, 2741.02 and 2741.09, relative to actions to contest the validity of a will are mandatory and the enjoyment of the right to maintain such an action is dependent upon compliance with such statutory conditions and limitations: Gravier v. Gluth, 99 App 374, 59 OO 146, 119 NE(2d) 663 [affirmed, 163 OS 232, 56 OO 228, 126 NE(2d) 332.]

21. Where a party to such action has been dismissed as a plaintiff, he may be made a party defendant; and where others in the class have been properly served with summons, such party may be served after the six-month period of limitation: Frederick v. Brown, 102 App 117, 2 OO(2d) 115, 141 NE(2d) 683.

22. Where a petition is filed to set aside a will, service is obtained on all defendants, the case is never called for trial, is placed on the drop list and the plaintiff ordered to show cause why it should not be dropped, the attorney who filed the petition is deceased and his successor is not carried on the drop list and, therefore, fails to appear when the case is called, and the case is dismissed for want of prosecution, it is error to overrule a motion to reinstate the case, and there is a mandatory duty imposed upon the trial court by this section to make up the issue by an order on the journal, where the issue is not made up by the pleadings, and submit the issue to the jury: Sharp v. Johnson, 103 App 194, 3 OO(2d) 264, 144 NE(2d) 896.

23. An action to contest a will admitted to probate on January 25 is brought within the statutory period prescribed by this section where such action is instituted on July 25, on the same day there is filed a praecipe and summons issued for 13 defendants, designated as heirs at law and devisees and who are served on July 26, and an affidavit and order for service by publication on two nonresident defendants, who with a cemetery are designated as the only other legatees and devisees, the first publication is made on July 26 and publication completed but no notice mailed to such two defendants as required by RC § 2703.16 and the cemetery is served on July 26: Cover v. Hildebran, 103 App 413, 3 OO(2d) 435, 145 NE(2d) 850.

24. In the fixing of attorney fees, it is error to consider the grounds of the will contest: Logeman v. Wagner, 7 OApp(2d) 48, 36 OO(2d) 124, 218 NE(2d) 761.

25. The fiduciary and attorneys defending a purported will in a will contest action are entitled to “reasonable compensation for the services rendered in such contest,” and no fees for services in appeals attacking a judgment finding such paper writing not to be the last will alleged are allowable: Logeman v. Wagner, 7 OApp(2d) 48, 36 OO(2d) 124, 218 NE(2d) 761.

26. Where the captions of the complaint and the summons in an action contesting a will do not designate the specific legal relationship between the estate and a defendant occupying the positions of surviving spouse, devisee, and executrix, the requirements of RC § 2741.02 are satisfied where service of summons within the time prescribed by RC § 2741.09 is made upon such defendant, with a copy of the complaint concisely designating the capacities in which such person is named as defendant: Beverly v. Beverly, 33 OApp(2d) 199, 62 OO(2d) 303, 293 NE(2d) 562 (1973).

27. The will contest action is a special statutory proceeding within Title XXVII of the Revised Code and, pursuant to Civil Rule 1(C)(7), any civil rule which would permit the liberal amendment or joinder adding a necessary party under RC § 2741.02, relating the cause of action back to within the time limitation of RC § 2741.09, would by its nature be clearly inapplicable as it would operate to extend the jurisdiction of the courts of this state in derogation of mandatory statutory language. Civil Rule 82: Holland v. Carlson, 40 OApp(2d) 325, 69 OO(2d) 299, 319 NE(2d) 362 (1974).

28. The word “person” as used in this section, which grants authority to bring an action to set aside a will, is defined in GC § 10213, and does not include the state of Ohio: State ex rel Rich v. Page, 20 OO 155, 6 OSupp 104 (CP).

29. A motion to dismiss the petition for want of jurisdiction on the ground that the action was not commenced within the time specified by this section, will be overruled where trustees who were legatees and devisees under the will were served within six months of the probate: Lehman v. Bachelor, 28 OO 310, 14 OSupp 20 (CP).

30. In an action to contest the validity of a will, the legatee-devisee defendants are so “united in interest,” within the meaning of that phrase in GC § 11230 (RC § 2305.17) as to render service of summons upon any one of them within the time set by this section, sufficient to constitute commencement of the action against all of them: Wallenstein v. Wallenstein, 30 OO 96, 114 OSupp 61 (CP).

31. The fact that this section, prior to the amendment of this statute in 1898, included within its saving clause “persons absent from the state,” does not enable nonresident next of kin to bring an action to contest a will more than six months after probate: Feeley v. First Nat. Bank, 55 OO 324, 124 NE(2d) 800 (CP).

32. Persons who are legatees and devisees only are not such interested parties who have a right to contest a will, since as beneficiaries their interest is in sustaining, not contesting a will: Feeley v. First Nat. Bank, 55 OO 324, 124 NE(2d) 800 (CP).

33. A bona fide agreement entered into between a legatee of a testator, and his children, under which the children agree not to contest the will of the testator in consideration of the payment to such children of one-third of the legacy, is valid: West v. Leslie, 21 OO 89, 6 OSupp 251 (PC).

34. The six-month period established in RC § 2741.09, for the commencement of a will contest action, is a part of the right of action: Alakiotis v. Lancione, 41 OO(2d) 381, 12 OMisc 257, 232 NE(2d) 663 (CP).

35. The savings clause of RC § 2305.19, for commencing a new action when a suit has failed otherwise than on the merits, is not available in regard to a will contest action: Alakiotis v. Lancione, 41 OO(2d) 381, 12 OMisc 257, 232 NE(2d) 663.

36. Where an action to contest a will is not commenced within the time prescribed by the qualifying limitation attached to the grant of the right in this section, taking into consideration GC §§ 10216 and 11230 (RC §§ 1.14 and 2305.17), the right itself is extinguished by the lapse of time, and there remains no authority in the plaintiff to maintain the action and no jurisdiction in the court over the person or subject matter to hear and determine it: Christensen v. Maxen, 29 OLA 219.

37. Revised Code § 2741.09 providing that an action to contest a will shall be brought within six months after it has been admitted to probate is mandatory: Faust v. Cailor, 76 OLA 504, 146 NE(2d) 875 (App).

38. Where a beneficiary under a will consented in writing to the probate of the will and within six months the beneficiary brought an action contesting the will in the court of common pleas, the probate court did not have jurisdiction to vacate the probate of the will upon an application made, after term, by the beneficiary, after expiration of the statutory period for the contest of a will: State ex rel Cleveland Trust Co. v. Probate Court, 113 App 1, 12 OO(2d) 307, 165 NE(2d) 668.

39. In a will contest action all necessary parties must be before the court either as plaintiffs or defendants within the statutory six months period or the contest is not properly filed and the case should be dismissed: Kluever v. Cleveland Trust Co., 86 OLA 79, 173 NE(2d) 183 (App).

40. A granddaughter, upon attaining her majority, is not estopped from contesting the will of her grandmother by the fact that while she was a child of tender years the executors, one of whom was her guardian, distributed the available assets of the estate without filing an inventory or obtaining an order of distribution or filing any report thereof: Swetland v. Miles, 31 OCA 529 [not considered on affirmance in 101 OS 501].

41. An action contesting a will, if dismissed for want of prosecution, may be recommenced within one year after such dismissal, although the filing of the petition may in such event be after the two years prescribed by the statute of limitations: Hunt v. Hunt, 2 NP(NS) 577, 15 OD 571. (The correctness of this decision may be doubted in view of GC § 10504-32 [RC § 2107.23] and McVeigh v. Fetterman, 95 OS 292, 116 NE 518. Compare George L. Rackle &c. Co. v. Western &c. Indem. Co., 54 App 274, 7 OO 118, 6 NE(2d) 1007).

42. In proceedings to contest a will, only such parties as were interested in the will at the time of the probate thereof are proper parties plaintiff: Rockwell v. Blaney, 5 NP(NS) 580, 18 OD 436.

43. If an action to contest a will is brought within the time limited, the death of the plaintiff does not cause such action to abate: Heimrich v. Dechant, 11 NP(NS) 511, 21 OD 106.

44. Under this section, a motion made more than a year after probate to amend a petition which alleges that a will and two codicils are not the valid last will and codicils of the testator, so as to attack a third codicil, should be overruled: Trull v. Patrick, 22 NP(NS) 385, 31 OD 319 [on second trial in common pleas court will sustained, which judgment was reversed by court of appeals and cause remanded; motion to certify record overruled, Patrick v. Trull, 20 OLR 152].

45. The requirement of this section as to contest within two years is imperative and unqualified, except as to infants and other persons under disabilities, which clearly implies that those not in esse are barred and concluded as effectually as those living at the time of contest: McArthur v. Allen, 3 Fed 313, 13 OFD 523.

§ 2108.02 [Rights of donor; donee.]

(A) Any individual of sound mind and eighteen years of age or more may give all or any part of his body for any purpose specified in section 2108.03 of the Revised Code, the gift to take effect upon his death.

(B) Any of the following persons, in the order of priority stated, when persons in prior classes are not available at the time of death, and in the absence of actual notice of contrary indications by the decedent or actual notice of opposition by a member of the same or a prior class, may give any part of the decedent's body for any purpose specified in section 2108.03 of the Revised Code:

- (1) The spouse;
- (2) An adult son or daughter;
- (3) Either parent;
- (4) An adult brother or sister;
- (5) A guardian of the person of the decedent at the time of his death;
- (6) Any other person authorized or under obligation to dispose of the body.

(C) The donee shall not accept the gift if he has actual notice of contrary indications by the decedent or that a gift by a member of a class is opposed by a member of the same or a prior class.

The persons authorized in division (B) of this section may make the gift after or immediately before death.

(D) A gift of all or part of a body authorizes any examination necessary to assure medical acceptability of the gift for the purpose intended.

(E) The rights of the donee created by the gift are paramount to the rights of others except that a coroner, or in his absence, a deputy coroner, who has, under section 313.13 of the Revised Code, taken charge of the decedent's dead body and decided that an autopsy is necessary, has a right to the dead body and any part that is paramount to the rights of the donee. The coroner, or in his absence, the deputy coroner, may waive this paramount right and permit the donee to take a donated part if the donated part is or will be unnecessary for successful completion of the autopsy or for evidence. If the coroner or deputy coroner does not waive his paramount right and later determines, while performing the autopsy, that the donated part is or will be unnecessary for successful completion of the autopsy or for evidence, he may thereupon waive his paramount right and permit the donee to take the donated part, either during the autopsy or after it is completed.

[WILLS; DOCUMENTS]

§ 2108.04 [Gift made effective upon death.]

(A) A gift of all or part of the body under division (A) of section 2108.02 of the Revised Code may be made by will. The gift becomes effective upon the death of the testator without waiting for probate. If the will is not probated or if it is declared invalid for testamentary purposes, the gift, to the extent that it has been acted upon in good faith, is nevertheless valid and effective.

(B) A gift of all or part of the body under division (A) of section 2108.02 of the Revised Code may also be made by any document other than a will. The gift becomes effective upon the death of the donor. The document, which may be a card designed to be carried on the person, shall be signed by the donor in the presence of two witnesses who shall sign the document in his presence. If the donor cannot sign, the document may be signed for him at his direction and in the presence of two witnesses, having no affiliation with the donee, who shall sign the document in his presence. Delivery of the document of gift during the donor's lifetime is not necessary to make the gift valid.

(C) A gift of parts of the body under division (A) of section 2108.02 of the Revised Code, may also be made by a statement to be provided for on all Ohio operator's or chauffeur's licenses or motorcycle operator's licenses, or endorsements. The gift becomes effective upon the death of the owner. The statement must be signed by the holder of the operator's or chauffeur's license or endorsement in the presence of two witnesses, who must sign the statement in the presence of the donor. Delivery of the license during the donor's lifetime is not necessary to make the gift valid. The gift shall become invalidated upon expiration of the license or endorsement. Cancellation, revocation, or suspension of the license or endorsement will not invalidate the gift. The gift must be renewed upon renewal of each license or endorsement.

(D) The gift may be made to a specified donee or without specifying a donee. If the latter, the gift may be accepted by the attending physician as donee upon or following death. If the gift is made to a specified donee who is not available at the time and place of death, the attending physician may accept the gift as donee upon or following death, in the absence of any expressed indication that the donor desired otherwise. The physician who accepts the gift as donee under this division shall not participate in the procedures for removing or transplanting a part.

(E) Notwithstanding division (B) of section 2108.07 of the Revised Code, the donor may designate in his will, card, or other document of gift the surgeon or physician to carry out the appropriate procedures. In the absence of a designation or if the designee is not available, the donee or other person authorized to accept the gift may employ or authorize any surgeon or physician to carry out the appropriate procedures.

(F) Any gift by a person specified in division (B) of section 2108.02 of the Revised Code shall be made by a document signed by him or made by his telegraphic, recorded telephonic, or other recorded message.

After removal of the part, custody of the remainder of the body vests in the surviving spouse, next of kin, or other persons under obligation to dispose of the body.

(B) The attending physician or a physician selected by the donor shall determine the time of death. § 2109.01 Definition.

"Fiduciary" as used in Chapters 2101. to 2131., inclusive, of the Revised Code, means any person, association, or corporation, other than an assignee or trustee for an insolvent debtor or a guardian under sections 5905.01 to 5905.19, inclusive, of the Revised Code, appointed by and accountable to the probate court and acting in a fiduciary capacity for any person, association, or corporation, or charged with duties in relation to any property, interest, trust, or estate for the benefit of another; and includes the division of mental retardation or an agency under contract with the division for the provision of protective service under sections 5119.85 to 5119.89, inclusive, of the Revised Code, appointed by and accountable to the probate court as guardian or trustee with respect to mentally retarded and developmentally disabled persons.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. It was held under former GC § 11029 (see now RC § 2109.30) that the probate court had power to remove a trustee appointed by deed and appoint his successor: Pherson v. Mitchell, 12 App 336. That section, however, was repealed, effective January 1, 1932, and it would seem under this section that a trustee appointed by deed is not subject to the jurisdiction of the probate court because such fiduciary was not appointed by the probate court.

2. This section includes corporations under a definition of the term fiduciary: Judd v. City Trust & Co. Bank, 133 OS 81, 10 OO 95, 12 NE(2d) 288.

3. The superintendent of banks is not a "fiduciary" within the meaning of the term as defined by this section, and is not controlled by GC § 10501-59 (repealed, 118 v 78 [80]), relative to the bond of a party appealing in a fiduciary capacity: Fulton v. Tischer, 17 OLA 449.

4. The federal government is not included in the terms of this section, as a "person, association, or corporation, . . . accountable to the probate court": Edgeter v. Kemper, 73 OLA 297, 136 NE(2d) 630 (PC).

§ 2109.02 Appointment and duties.

Every fiduciary, before entering upon the execution of a trust, shall receive letters of appointment from a probate court having jurisdiction of the subject matter of the trust.

The duties of a fiduciary shall be those required by law, and such additional duties as the court orders. Letters of appointment shall not issue until a fiduciary has executed a written acceptance of his duties, acknowledging that he is subject to removal for failure to perform his duties, and that he is subject to possible penalties for conversion of property he holds as a fiduciary. The written acceptance may be filed with the application for appointment.

No act or transaction by a fiduciary is valid prior to the issuance of letters of appointment to him. This section does not prevent an executor named in a will from paying funeral expenses, or prevent necessary acts for the preservation of the trust estate prior to the issuance of such letters.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. Ordinarily, no act or transaction by a fiduciary shall be valid prior to the issuance of letters of appointment to him: Wrinkle v. Trabert, 174 OS 233, 22 OO(2d) 248, 188 NE(2d) 587.

2. The principal function of the fiduciary of an estate under a will is to protect, preserve and pay out the assets according to law and the will. Here there was no property, and consequently, no purpose to be served by the appointment of a fiduciary: Hecker v. Schuler, 12 OS(2d) 58, 41 OO(2d) 277, 231 NE(2d) 877 (1967).

3. Where an Ohio testatrix named the Indianapolis Humane Society as trustee of a residuary trust and the trust property was transferred to the society by express order of the probate court and removed to Indianapolis without the society seeking or receiving letters of appointment as trustee as required by Ohio law, an action brought seventeen years later by a trustee appointed by the Ohio probate court to obtain possession of the trust property and an accounting was barred by the Indiana statute of limitations: Hamrick v. Indianapolis Humane Society, Inc., 273 F(2d) 7, 11 OO(2d) 400, 174 FSupp 403, 11 OO(2d) 150.

4. Under this section every testamentary trustee, before entering upon the execution of a trust, must receive letters of appointment from a probate court having jurisdiction of the subject matter of the trust: Hamrick v. Indianapolis Humane Society, Inc., 11 OO(2d) 400, 273 F(2d) 7.

5. Federal courts have no supervisory powers over executors or administrators: Starr v. Rupp, 421 F(2d) 999, 53 OO(2d) 169, 25 OMisc 224.

6. Where a testamentary trust named cotrustees, and real estate comprising part of the trust res was located in the District of Columbia, an Ohio probate court appointing a sole trustee was without jurisdiction over the subject matter, as it had no power to change title to real estate in the District of Columbia, and full faith and credit is not required to be given its judgment: Hughes v. Hughes, 52 OO 137, 112 FSupp 899.

7. Since the United States Government is not a fiduciary over which the probate court has jurisdiction under this section there is no statutory authority that such Government, as trustee, must receive letters of appointment from the probate court prior to embarking upon the administration of a trust, and the executor, after the estate is completely administered, may deliver the trust fund to the United States Government as trustee and be discharged as provided by law of any further responsibility over said fund: Edgeter v. Kemper, 73 OLA 297, 136 NE(2d) 630 (PC).

[§ 2109.02.1] § 2109.021 [Filings by mail or in person.]

After letters of appointment are issued to a fiduciary, the court shall accept filings by mail in matters of estates, guardianships, or trusts, unless the court in writing notifies the fiduciary or attorney of record that a personal appearance is necessary, or a personal appearance is otherwise required by law. An improper or incomplete filing shall be rejected, and that court shall return it to the sender, and impose a cost of two dollars and fifty cents per improper or incomplete filing, chargeable against the estate.

HISTORY: 136 v S 145 (EF 1-1-76); 136 v S 466. EF 5-26-76.

§ 2109.03 Fiduciary's attorney. (GC § 10506-3)

At the time of the appointment of a fiduciary, such fiduciary shall file in the probate court the name of the attorney, if any, who will represent him in matters relating to the trust. After the name of an attorney has been filed, notices sent to such fiduciary in his official capacity shall also be sent by the court to such attorney who may sign waiver of service of any or all of such notices upon him. If the fiduciary is absent from the state, such attorney shall be the agent of the fiduciary upon whom summonses, citations, and notices may be served. Any summons, citation, or notice may be served upon the fiduciary by delivering duplicate copies thereof to the attorney designated by him. No probate judge shall permit any person to practice law in the probate court for compensation, unless he has been admitted to the practice of law within the state. This section does not prevent any person from representing his own interest in any estate, matter, action, or proceeding.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The presentation of a claim against an estate to the agent of an insurance company appointed by the administrator as his agent, does not satisfy the statute, and the claim becomes barred at the end of the time fixed by statute, unless otherwise properly presented: Beacon Mutual Indemnity Co. v. Stalder, 95 App 441, 54 OO 69, 120 NE(2d) 743.

2. In this section providing that a fiduciary shall file in the probate court the name of the attorney who will represent him as to the trust, that if the fiduciary is absent from the state such attorney shall be the agent of the fiduciary upon whom summonses may be served, and that any summonses may be served upon the fiduciary by delivering copies thereof to such attorney, the last provision is all-inclusive and is not limited or restricted to summonses in actions originating in the probate court: Meisner v. Fleming, 109 App 117, 10 OO(2d) 302, 164 NE(2d) 183.

3. This section provides, among other things, that if the fiduciary is absent from the state, fiduciary's attorney shall be the agent of the fiduciary upon whom service of summons may be made; but if the fiduciary is not absent from the state then the attorney named by the fiduciary is in no wise his agent upon whom summons may be served, but is merely an attorney representing the fiduciary in matters that may arise relating to the trust: Kaczinski v. Kaczinski, 83 OLA 469, 169 NE(2d) 36 (App).

4. This section, providing for service upon the agent of the fiduciary requires the one seeking the service of summons to affirmatively allege in the body of the petition that the fiduciary is absent from the state: Kaczinski v. Kaczinski, 83 OLA 469, 169 NE(2d) 36 (App).

5. This section setting out specific authorization for the attorney to do certain things in respect to the settlement of an estate is not all inclusive and the attorney has many more general powers in connection with the settlement of estate, and the doctrine of "inclusio unius est exclusio alterius" is not applicable: In re Clark, 40 OO(2d) 347, 11 OMisc 103, 229 NE(2d) 122 (CP).

6. The executor of a will cannot be required to name as his attorney in the administration of the estate, counsel specified by the testator in the will to be such attorney: In re Shinnick, 3 OO 458 (PC).

Unless otherwise provided by law, every fiduciary shall, prior to the issuance of his letters as provided by section 2109.02 of the Revised Code, file in the probate court in which the letters are to be issued a bond with a penal sum in such amount as may be fixed by the court, but in no event less than double the probable value of the personal estate and of the annual real estate rentals which will come into such person's hands as a fiduciary. The penal sum of the bond of a guardian of the person only shall be double the probable expenditures to be made by such guardian for the ward during one year. Such bond shall be in a form approved by the court and signed by two or more personal sureties or by one or more corporate sureties approved by the court and shall be conditioned that the fiduciary will faithfully and honestly discharge the duties devolving upon him as such fiduciary, and shall be conditioned further as may be provided by law; provided that if the instrument creating the trust dispenses with the giving of a bond the court shall appoint a fiduciary without bond, unless the court is of the opinion that the interest of the trust demands it, in which event the court may require bond to be given in such amount as may be fixed by the court.

When an executive secretary who is responsible for the administration of children services in the county is appointed as trustee of the estate of a ward pursuant to section 5153.18 of the Revised Code, and has furnished bond under section 5153.13 of the Revised Code, or when the division of mental retardation or an agency under contract with the division for the provision of protective service under sections 5119.85 to 5119.89, inclusive, of the Revised Code is appointed as trustee of the estate of a ward under such sections and any employees of the division or agency having custody or control of funds or property of such a ward have furnished bond under section 5119.89 of the Revised Code, the court may dispense with the giving of a bond.

When letters are granted without bond, at any later period on its own motion or upon the application of any party interested, the court may require bond to be given in such amount as may be fixed by the court. On failure to give such bond the defaulting fiduciary shall be removed.

No instrument authorizing a fiduciary therein named to serve without bond shall relieve a successor fiduciary from the necessity of giving bond, unless the instrument clearly evidences such intention.

The court by which a fiduciary is appointed may reduce the amount of the bond of such fiduciary at any time for good cause shown.

When two or more persons are appointed as joint fiduciaries, the court may take a separate bond from each or a joint bond from all.

GC § 10506-21 analogous to former GC §§ 10594, 10611.

Comment

This section is also derived from GC § 10506-5.

General Code § 10506-4 and those following were intended to replace all former sections relating to bonds of fiduciaries, which were former GC §§ 10591, 10606, 10614, 10920 and 10991. The requirement of GC § 10922 that a guardian take an oath was omitted, since it did not then obtain as to other fiduciaries. General Code § 10506-21 retained the substance of the first sentence in former GC § 10611, but omitted the second sentence which required that all sureties reside in the state, and the third sentence which required that all surety bonds be filed in the court taking them. It also replaced former GC § 10594.

Except at the time of issuance of letters of appointment, full power is vested in the probate court, under the provisions of both RC §§ 1107.14 and 2109.04, to require bond from a trust company as a testamentary trustee, solely within the discretion of the court: *Winters Nat. 6. Where a loss accrues to a trust fund through the default of one of five trustees appointed by will, his co-trustees will not be held responsible for such loss if they have acted in good faith and exercised that vigilance over the fund which a man of ordinary prudence would exercise over his own property: *State v. 7. But when trustees authorize one of their number to receive and control the trust fund, and are negligent in taking security and looking after the

10. General Code § 710-161 (RC § 1107.14), which provides that no bond shall be required from any trust company when appointed executor or administrator, has not been repealed by the subsequent enactment of GC § 10506-4 (RC § 2109.04) requiring every fiduciary to file a bond: Clippinger v. Wood, 44 OO 83, 98 NE(2d) 645 (CP).

11. Where a testator requests that bond be given by his executor in a stated amount, it is the duty of the probate court to fix the amount of such bond in accordance with GC § 10506-4 (RC § 2109.04), and the probate court in such case has no discretion to follow the testator's request or suggestion as to amount of bond of executor, if same is less than double the estimated value of the personal estate: *Tieman v. 12. An incorporated trust company which has deposited funds with the treasurer of state as provided by law is required, notwithstanding the provisions of GC § 710-161 (RC § 1107.14), to give a bond by reason of the provisions of GC § 10506-4 (RC § 2109.04), before being qualified to act as a fiduciary, where its appointment is made and letters are issued by the probate court: 1945 OAG No.631.

Purchase of trust property, 16

Appointment of trustee

1. The administration of a trust fund, by testamentary trustees created by will, is clearly within the jurisdiction of the probate court: Fidelity &c. Co. v. Wolfe, 100 OS 332, 126 NE 414 [affirming Wolfe v. Fidelity &c. Co., 11 App 58, 30 OCA 593].

2. Former GC §§ 10591 to 10600 (see now RC §§ 2109.04, 2109.05, 2109.26, 2109.27, 2129.27 to 2129.30) make no provision for the appointment of a trustee by the probate court, or for issuing letters to him as testamentary trustee: Seasongood v. Seasongood, 23 CC(NS) 369, 27 CD 200.

3. Rules governing testamentary trustees are same as those governing guardians and administrators. This section and former GC § 10596 (see now RC § 2109.26) are directory as to what court shall appoint such trustee. Jurisdiction to appoint testamentary trustee conferred by residence of beneficiary: Boals v. Clinigan, 6 NP(NS) 609, 16 OD 267.

Bond

4. In an action against sureties on the bond of a testamentary trustee, such sureties are bound by the judgment in a former proceeding determining the amount due from the trustee: Braiden v. Mercer, 44 OS 339, 7 NE 155; Slagle v. Entrekin, 44 OS 637, 10 NE 675; Smith v. Rhodes, 68 OS 500, 68 NE 7; Smith v. Worley, 12 App 367.

6. An order of the probate court releasing and discharging the sureties on a former bond after a new bond has been given and approved, is a valid order that cannot be challenged by any subsequent proceeding upon the former bond made in the court of common pleas: Fidelity &c. Co. v. Wolfe, 100 OS 332, 126 NE 414 [affirming Wolfe v. Fidelity &c. Co., 11 App 58, 30 OCA 593].

7. Testamentary trustees are included within the term "an interested party" in filing an application for a new bond: Fidelity &c. Co. v. Wolfe, 100 OS 332, 126 NE 414 [affirming Wolfe v. Fidelity &c. Co., 11 App 58, 30 OCA 593].

8. Former GC § 10591 (see now RC § 2109.04) authorizes the probate court to take a new bond from testamentary trustees, not only when manifestly required for the protection of a trust fund, but also for a substantial reduction of the expense of protecting such fund: Fidelity &c. Co. v. Wolfe, 100 OS 332, 126 NE 414 [affirming Wolfe v. Fidelity &c. Co., 11 App 58, 30 OCA 593].

9. A person appointed by the will executor, and also trustee, to carry on a business, must give separate bonds for each position, and a petition by him as trustee should aver that he has given bond as such: Pittsburgh, C. &c. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 8 CC 355, 4 CD 535.

Powers and duties of trustee

10. As a general rule, the powers of an executor are co-extensive with all the trusts devolved upon him by the will, and all acts done by him in executing such trusts will be regarded as done in his capacity as executor, unless it plainly appears from the whole will that the testator intended to create a special trust to be managed by the person named as executor in the capacity of special trustee: Matthews v. Meek, 23 OS 272.

11. The general rule in equity is that a trustee can acquire no personal interest in the trust property, and where he is authorized to do so by statute, the validity of his title depends, in equity, upon its bona fides: Rammelsberg v. Mitchell, 29 OS 22.

12. In equity, a trustee may not so manage the trust res as to make profit thereby for himself, for the beneficiaries in the trust have a right to expect and require the exercise of his best judgment, care and diligence on their behalf, and the gains resulting therefrom inure to their sole benefit: Cox v. John, 32 OS 522.

13. And what such trustee may not do directly, he may not do through the intervention of an agent or attorney; and it makes no difference whether such agent or attorney acts for the trustee solely, or for him and others, with a view to joint profit, for what he cannot do singly, the policy of the law will not permit him to participate in doing: Cox v. John, 32 OS 522.

15. A trustee under a will, who was also executor, wrongfully converted trust funds to his own use, for which he gave his note and mortgage to a third party for his beneficiaries. Held: That a promise by the beneficiaries, if he would resign, to release the mortgage, is void: Withers v. Ewing, 40 OS 400.

16. If a trustee of a testamentary trust invests the trust fund according to the direction of the will of the testator, and without his fault the trust fund is imperiled by reason of want of bidders at a foreclosure sale of the property mortgaged to secure the fund, and for the purpose of protecting the fund, he purchases the property at sheriff's sale, taking the title to the same in his own name as trustee, and the cestui que trust then being under no legal disability to act for himself, without protest on his part, enters into the possession of the land and uses and occupies it, or accepts from the trustee the rents or revenues thereof in lieu of the interest earnings of the trust fund had the same been continued at interest, such cestue que trust is estopped by his conduct from questioning the right or the authority of the trustee to make such purchase, and from demanding from him an accounting of an amount equal to the interest such fund would have earned during the time he so occupies the land or accepts the rents and revenues therefrom: Willis v. Holcomb, 83 OS 254, 94 NE 486.

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10606

Bond—requirement

1. Executors or administrators, whether appointed in this state or elsewhere, who have not given bond in this state, and who were original parties to the action, are not authorized to prosecute an appeal to the district court without giving an appeal bond or undertaking: Dennison v. Talmage, 29 OS 433.

2. An order for an administration bond must comply with the provisions of this section, which provide for what purpose such bond shall be given, and accordingly one who is devisee of realty and also executor under the will may be required to give bond as executor, even if the will provides that he shall not be required to give bond, but he cannot be required to give bond for the sole purpose of preserving the interest of the heirs in such realty if such will should be set aside: In re Wilson, 14 NP(NS) 443, 31 OD 663.

3. Where a will makes a person both trustee and executor, each separate from the other, such person must give separate bonds: Pittsburgh, C. &c. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 8 CC 355, 4 CD 535.

—Action thereon

4. Suit on administrator's bond, at the instance of the creditor, must aver a demand; an averment that the claim was allowed is not sufficient: Woodson v. State, 17 O 161.

5. Executor's or administrator's bond is governed by the laws in force at the time it was entered into; and such bond, describing decedent as James L. Finley, cannot, by parol evidence, be made applicable to Joseph L. Finley; therefore, the obligors thereon are not responsible for the estate of the latter: McGovney v. State, 20 O 93.

6. If the petition does not show the lapse of time necessary for suit on the bond, it is demurrable. Where the action is against the surviving bondsmen and administratrix of deceased bondsman, plaintiff assumes, as to such administratrix, the character of creditor of the estate. When the claim does not fall within any of the exceptions in § 98 of the administrators' act, such action cannot be maintained until the expiration of sixteen months: Hammerle v. Kramer, 12 OS 252.

§ 2109.05 Bond; trust created by will. (GC §§ 10506-19, 10506-20)

When deemed necessary by the probate court and not otherwise directed in the will, a bond, as provided by sections 2109.01 to 2109.58, inclusive, of the Revised Code, shall be required in all trusts created by will and not fully discharged, on the petition of an interested person and after notice to the trustee.

If such a trustee fails to give bond within the time ordered by the court, he shall be removed from his trust or be considered to have declined it. Another person may be appointed in his stead upon giving the required bond.

§ 2109.06 New or additional bond. (GC §§ 10506-9, 10506-10, 10506-11, 10506-12)

The probate court by which a fiduciary is appointed may, on its own motion or on the application of any interested party, and after notice to the fiduciary, require a new bond or sureties or an additional bond or sureties, whenever, in the opinion of such court, the interests of the trust demand it.

Immediately upon the filing of the inventory by a fiduciary, the court shall determine whether the amount of the bond of such fiduciary is sufficient and shall require new or additional bond if in the opinion of the court the interests of the trust demand it.

When a new bond is required as provided in this section, the sureties in the prior bond shall nevertheless be liable for all breaches of the conditions set forth in such bond which are committed before the new bond is approved by the court.

A fiduciary who fails within the time fixed by the court to furnish new or additional bond or sureties shall be removed and some other person appointed in his stead, as the circumstances of the case require.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. A new bond given, on the old sureties becoming nonresident, is not invalid for want of consideration, and the sureties are liable: King v. Bell, 36 OS 460.

2. The sureties on the new bond are liable for assets embezzled by the executor while the old bond was subsisting: Foster v. Wise, 46 OS 20, 16 NE 687, 15 AmSt 542.

3. The liability of the sureties on the subsequent bond is secondary to that of the sureties on the bond in force at the time the estate was wasted, and if the former have made good the loss, they may recover against the latter the full amount paid by them on account thereof: Corrigan v. Foster, 51 OS 225, 37 NE 263.

4. Sureties on the second bond of a testamentary trustee are liable for default on the part of the trustee in not accounting for funds, which were misappropriated before the execution of the bond, where the account was filed, and the judgment finding the amount due from the trustee was rendered, after the execution of the second bond: Smith v. Worley, 12 App 367.

5. The journal entry showing nothing further than a new bond given by order of court, and upon motion of the guardian, the new bond containing only one of the former sureties. Held: To be a new bond and not an additional bond, and where defalcation discovered on final settlement, the presumption is that it occurred during the term of the last bond: Pummill v. Baumgartner, 3 NP 40, 4 OD 69.

§ 2109.07 Bond conditions, administrative; exception.

The bond required of an administrator by section 2109.04 of the Revised Code shall not be required of a surviving spouse to administer his deceased spouse's estate, where the surviving spouse is entitled to the entire net proceeds of the estate. The bond otherwise required by section 2109.04 of the Revised Code of an administrator shall be conditioned as follows:

(A) To make and return to the probate court on oath, within the time required by section 2115.02 of the Revised Code, a true inventory of all moneys, chattels, rights, and credits of the deceased that are to be administered, and that come to the administrator's possession or knowledge, and an inventory of the real estate of the deceased;

(B) To administer and distribute according to law all the moneys, chattels, rights, and credits of the deceased, the proceeds of any action for wrongful death or of any settlement, with or without suit, of a wrongful death claim, and the proceeds of all his real estate sold that come to the possession of the administrator, or to the possession of any person for him;

(C) To render upon oath a just and true account of his administration at the times required by section 2109.30 of the Revised Code;

(D) To deliver the letters of administration into court in case a will of the deceased is proved and allowed.

§ 2109.10 Bond when executor or administrator is sole residuary legatee or distributee. (GC § 10506-18)

If an executor or administrator is sole residuary legatee or distributee, instead of giving the bond prescribed by section 2109.04 of the Revised Code, he may give a bond to the satisfaction of the probate court conditioned as follows:

(A) To pay the costs of administration and all the debts and legacies of the decedent to the extent of the assets of the estate;

(B) If executor, to pay over such testator's estate to the person entitled thereto in case the will is set aside;

(C) If administrator, to pay over such testator's estate to the person entitled thereto in case a will is probated after his appointment.

2. Where the executor is residuary legatee, this section provides a method whereby the probate court

3. The bond of a residuary legatee is a lien as against the legatee upon realty conveyed in trust for protection of the surety on the bond: Tidd v. Bloch, 4 CC(NS) 216, 16 CD 113.

4. The bond for which provision is made in this section is not a bond given by executors of an estate to secure a legacy which is payable in installments, and for the payment of which such executors have set aside certain realty, the rents of which are sufficient to pay such installments of the legacy, and to secure the payments of such rent, such bond is given: *Shields v. Appointment

1. A guardian derives his power to act from the appointment and bond. Letters of guardianship need not in fact issue: Maxom v. Sawyer, 12 O 195.

2. A guardian appointed by the probate court has no power to act or control the property of his ward until he has given bond with surety approved by court. Otherwise he has no power whatever: State v. Sloane, 20 O 327.

3. In a suit on a guardian's bond containing a recital of the appointment of such guardian by the proper authority, the obligors are estopped to deny the fact thus recited, or question the validity of the appointment: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455.

Bond

6. Substituted sureties are liable for the unpaid residue, whether or not the same is partly or entirely the proceeds of sale of real estate: Tuttle v. Northrup, 44 OS 178, 5 NE 659.

7. Where a guardian gave a bond with three sureties, under this section, and afterward gave a special bond with two sureties for the sale of land and died insolvent and a defaulter, the sureties on both bonds were co-sureties only to the amount of the proceeds of the sale of realty: Swesten v. McWhinney, 64 OS 343, 60 NE 565.

Liability on bond

9. The refusal of guardian to pay over to his ward or attorney money in his hands belonging to such minor, is not a breach of his bond, and such refusal will not give the minor, by his next friend, a right to institute suit on the bond: Favorite v. Booher, 17 OS 548.

10. In a settlement of a guardian's account, he was credited with the payment of moneys for his ward, which in fact had not been paid. The account was subsequently corrected during the minority of the ward. Held: Liability of surety in the guardian's bond is not affected. Sureties are liable for all money received: Scobey v. Gano, 35 OS 550.

11. A right of action on a guardian's bond, to recover from the sureties the amount remaining in the hands of the guardian, first accrues to the ward when such amount is ascertained by the probate court on the settlement of the guardian's final account: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430 [see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656]; McClelland v. State ex rel Clark, 101 OS 42, 127 NE 409 [affirming State ex rel Clark v. McClelland, 30 OCA 522, 35 CD 422].

12. Delay of ward, on arriving of age, to compel guardian to settle his accounts does not discharge surety: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430 [approved, Gorman v. Taylor, 43 OS 86]; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1139.

13. Where a guardian, after giving bond, embezzles money of his ward's, the subsequent discharge of the surety in the bond, and acceptance by the court of a bond with other surety, will not exonerate the surety in the first bond with respect to the money so embezzled: Eichelberger v. Gross, 42 OS 549.

14. Approval of a partial account, not showing that the guardian had received certain money which he had embezzled, and which he charged himself with in a later account, is not a res adjudicata in an action for them on the bond which was in force before the first account was filed: Eichelberger v. Gross, 42 OS 549.

15. In suit on a guardian's bond in the common pleas court to recover the amount of a judgment rendered against the guardian upon the settlement of his account, the defendant surety interposed an answer and cross-petition averring that the judgment was for a greater amount than was actually due, and was obtained by the fraud of the guardian. Held: The fact that the pleading fails to deny the amount so adjudged due in its entirety does not deprive the court of power to grant relief if the facts are found to be true: Gantz v. Gease, 82 OS 34, 91 NE 872.

16. A guardian of the person and estate having received, after giving bond, money of the ward and converted to his own use, the subsequent resignation and removal to and reappointment and qualification in another state, at desire of ward, and filing an account there, in which he charged himself with the amount found by the former court at time of resignation will not exonerate the sureties on the first bond for the money converted, but they will be liable on the ground of failing to perform the duties of guardian: Penn v. McBride, 1 CC 285, 1 CD 157.

17. No cause of action on the bond of a guardian accrues in favor of his ward until the filing of the guardianship account and the settlement of the estate in the probate court: Wegner v. Wiltzie, 3 CC(NS) 410, 13 CD 302.

18. Where defalcation is discovered on final settlement, the presumption is that it occurred during the term of the last bond, there being two bonds: Pummill v. Baumgartner, 3 NP 40, 4 OD 69.

19. After the ward becomes of age, further dealings of guardian are not covered by bond: In re Streit, 12 OD(NP) 158.

20. To maintain an action on a guardian's bond against the sureties for money of the ward not paid over by the guardian, the amount must first be ascertained by the probate court upon settlement of his accounts: Schwab v. Rappold, 12 Bull 197.

Jurisdiction

21. The common pleas court obtains no jurisdiction of an action on a bond of a guardian, to compel an accounting and payment of funds belonging to his ward, from the fact that the guardian died without filing his account, and left no books of account or memoranda from which his indebtedness could be ascertained: Wegner v. Wiltzie, 3 CC(NS) 410, 13 CD 302.

22. A suit in equity on a guardian's bond to compel an accounting cannot be maintained without a showing that the powers and jurisdiction of the probate court are ineffectual to secure such accounting: Newman v. Hammond, 38 OS 430 [approved, Gorman v. Taylor, 43 OS 86].

Rights of sureties against guardian

23. An indebtedness paid by reason of suretyship on the bond of a guardian relates back to the date of the bond so as to give sureties the rights of creditors in reference to fraudulent conveyances: Boise v. Johnson, 1 CC(NS) 451, 15 CD 331.

Limitations

24. The four years' limitation prescribed by the act for the settlement of estates within which suits are to be commenced against executors and administrators applies to an action on a guardian's bond; and the disability of infancy will not save the plaintiff from the operation of the statute: Favorite v. Booher, 17 OS 548.

25. Limitations begin to run on the bond from the time of liquidation or final settlement in the probate court: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430 [approved, Gorman v. Taylor, 43 OS 86]; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1139. Contra: Under a prior statute: State v. Humphreys, 7 O (pt1) 223.

26. Where sureties were compelled to make good a fraudulent deficiency of a guardian, their right of action as to the fraudulent transfer accrued at the time of the transfer or at the time of their discovery of the fraud, and the statute runs from these dates and not the date of payment made under bond: Boise v. Johnson, 1 CC(NS) 451, 15 CD 331.

§ 2109.13 Deposit of securities in lieu of bond.

In any case where a bond is required by the probate court from a fiduciary and the value of the estate or fund is such that the court deems it inexpedient to require security in the full amount prescribed by section 2109.04 of the Revised Code[,] said court may direct the deposit of any suitable personal property belonging to the estate or fund with a savings bank, national bank, or trust company incorporated under the laws of this state or of the United States, as may be designated by order of the court.

Such deposit shall be made in the name of the fiduciary and the personal property deposited shall not be withdrawn from the custody of such bank or trust company except upon the special order of the court. No fiduciary shall receive or collect the whole or any part of the principal represented by such personal property without the special order of such court. Such an order can be made in favor of the fiduciary only when the court within its discretion, having regard for the purpose for which such order is requested, the disposition to be made of such assets as may be released, the value of such assets as related to the total value of the estate, and the period of time such assets will remain in the possession of the fiduciary, finds that the original bond previously given and then in force will be sufficient to protect the estate; otherwise, the court, as a condition to the release of such personal property so deposited, shall require the fiduciary to execute an additional bond in such amount as the court may determine.

After such deposit has been made and after the filing with the court of a receipt for such personal property executed by the designated bank, which receipt shall acknowledge that such personal property is held by said bank subject to the order of the court, such court may fix or reduce the amount of the bond so that the amount of the penalty thereof is determined with respect to the value of the remainder only of the estate or fund, without including the value of the personal property so deposited. Neither the fiduciary nor his sureties shall be liable for any loss to the trust estate resulting from such deposit as is authorized and directed by the court pursuant to this section, provided such fiduciary has acted in good faith.

This section may be invoked simultaneously with the initial application for appointment of the fiduciary provided that an interim receipt of the bank or trust company for which the application for appointment as depository is being made, acknowledging that it already has received temporary deposit of the personal property described in the application for appointment as depository, accompanies the simultaneous applications for appointment of fiduciary and for appointment of the depository.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The provisions of GC § 10506-23 (RC § 2109.13), relative to the furnishing of bonds by fiduciaries, are properly invoked by the filing of two related applications, one for the appointment of an administrator de bonis non and the other for the designation of a depository: In re Langenbach, 70 App 132, 24 OO 447, 45 NE(2d) 129.

2. Where certificates of stocks, bonds, notes, or other securities belonging to an estate have been deposited and all provisions of the statutes have been complied with, and a fiduciary has filed an approved bond with penal sum in not less than double the value of the remainder only of the estate or fund, under GC § 9572 (RC § 3929.15), the maximum amount a probate court shall allow to be paid a surety company for becoming surety on the bond of such fiduciary must not exceed a fourth of one per cent per annum on the amount of such bond: In re Brown, 41 OO 354, 79 NE(2d) 340 (PC).

§ 2109.14 Deposit of works of art in museum authorized; reduction of bond. (GC § 10506-25a)

If the estate held by a fiduciary consists in whole or in part of works of nature or of art which are suitable for preservation and exhibition in a museum or other similar institution, the probate court may authorize and direct that any or all of such works be deposited with a corporation conducting such a museum or other similar institution; provided that no such deposit shall be authorized or directed except with a corporation having a net worth of at least ten times the value of the works to be deposited. Such deposit shall be made in the name of the fiduciary and the property deposited shall not be withdrawn from the custody of such depository or otherwise deposited except upon the special order of the court. The probate judge may impose such conditions relative to insurance and the care and protection of the property deposited as the court thinks best for the interests of the estate and the beneficiaries thereof. After such deposit has been made, a receipt for said property executed by said corporation shall be filed with the court, which receipt shall acknowledge that said property is held by said corporation subject to the order of the court. When such receipt is filed, the court may fix or reduce the amount of the bond so that the amount of the penalty thereof is determined with respect to the value of the remainder only of the estate or fund, without including the value of the property deposited. Neither the fiduciary nor his sureties shall be liable for any loss to the trust estate resulting from a deposit authorized and directed by the court pursuant to this section, provided such fiduciary has acted in good faith.

If the bond of a fiduciary is executed by personal sureties, one or more of such sureties shall be a resident of the county in which such fiduciary applies for appointment. Such sureties shall qualify under oath and may be required to exhibit to the probate court satisfactory evidence of the ownership of such real property.

No corporate surety shall be acceptable on a fiduciary's bond in such court unless such surety is acceptable to the United States government on surety bonds in like amount, as shown by the regulations issued by the secretary of the treasury of the United States, or in any other manner, to the satisfaction of the court. Such surety shall also be qualified to do business in this state.

§ 2109.18 Release of a fiduciary's sureties.

A surety of a fiduciary or the executor or administrator of a surety may make application at any time to the probate court to be released from the bond of such fiduciary. Such surety shall file his written request therefor with the probate judge of such court and give at least five days' notice in writing to such fiduciary. If, upon the hearing, the court is of the opinion that there is good reason therefor, it shall release such surety. The death of a surety shall always be good cause.

A fiduciary may make application at any time to the court for the release of his sureties. Such fiduciary shall file his written request therefor with the judge of such court and give at least five days' notice in writing to such sureties. If, upon the hearing, the court is of the opinion that there is good reason to release such sureties, it shall order the fiduciary to file an account, as provided by section 2109.30 of the Revised Code, and such sureties shall be released after the fiduciary files a new bond which is approved by the court.

If such fiduciary fails to give new bond as directed, he shall be removed and his letters of appointment superseded. Such original sureties shall not be released until the fiduciary gives a bond, but shall be liable for such fiduciary's acts only from the time of executing the original bond to the filing and approval by the court of the new bond.

The costs of such proceeding shall be paid by the surety applying to be released, unless it appears to the court that the fiduciary is insolvent, incompetent, or is wasting the assets of the estate.

1. Release of the surety on a guardian's bond and acceptance of a new bond with other surety, will not exonerate the surety in the first bond as to money embezzled by the guardian previous to his release: Eichelberger v. Gross, 42 OS 549.

2. Where, after a guardian has sold certain real estate of the ward and received the proceeds, one of the sureties on his general bond was released and he gave a new bond, with the other old and one new surety, and later defaulted. Held: The sureties on the last general bond are liable for the amount due the estate, whether or not the same is partly or entirely the proceeds of the sale of such real estate: Tuttle v. Northrup, 44 OS 178, 5 NE 659.

3. The sureties on the new bond are liable for assets embezzled by the executor while the old bond was subsisting: Foster v. Wise, 46 OS 20, 16 NE 687, 15 AmSt 542.

5.1 Under GC §§ 10506-26 to 10506-29, inclusive, (RC § 2109.18), a succeeding fiduciary is not authorized to file an application in the probate court for the release of the sureties on the bond of a predecessor deceased fiduciary, and such sureties may not be finally released prior to the approval of the final accounting of the representative of the deceased fiduciary: In re Gray, 162 OS 384, 55 OO 224, 123 NE(2d) 408.

Nor will the fact that before such second appointment he was selected by his ward as her guardian operate to release such sureties: Penn & Collins v. McBride, 1 CC 285, 1 CD 157.

7. Sureties not discharged by insolvency of administrator: Perkins v. Scott, 9 CC 207, 6 CD 226.

8. The order for release, herein provided for, is not effectual until a new, valid, lawful bond is given: Howenstine v. Sweet, 13 CC 239, 7 CD 498.

9. Where defalcation is discovered on final settlement, the presumption is that it occurred during the term of the last bond: Pummill v. Baumgartner, 3 NP 40, 4 OD 69.

11. Where it appears that the administrator was given proper notice of the hearing on application of his sureties to be released from their bond, and an order was made releasing such sureties and ordering a new bond, the probate court could, without further notice, under the provisions of former GC § 10862 (see now RC § 2109.18), order the removal of said administrator, as such action is not governed by the provisions of GC § 10629 (now GC § 10509-19 [RC § 2113.18]): Swartz v. Swartz, 12 OLA 158.

12. Release of one surety releases all: Dowell v. Guion, 3 Bull 735.

13. The sureties are not released by the ward's receipt in full to the guardian, after majority, without payment in fact: Meier v. Herancourt, 8 Bull 29.

14. This section gives full and ample protection to a surety whose confidence may be abused by his principal: Souhrada v. David, 15 NP(NS) 257, 29 OD 496.

16. Where the probate court released sureties on an administrator's bond, being induced to do so by a fraudulent presenting of a forged new bond, an original action in the common pleas court will lie to annul such judgment: Howenstine v. Sweet, 13 CC 239, 7 CD 498.

17. When debtor was executor of creditor, and he was removed as executor and his sureties released, and was then appointed administrator de bonis non, and new bond was approved, the sureties on bond as executor are liable for any shortage at time of removal, but not for the debt of executor to testator: United States Fidelity & Co. v. Jones, 22 App 345, 153 NE 281.

§ 2109.19 Bond of indemnity to surety.

If a fiduciary wastes or unfaithfully administers an estate, on the application of a surety on the fiduciary's bond the probate court granting letters of appointment to such fiduciary may order him to render an account and to execute to such surety a bond of indemnity with sureties approved by the court. Upon neglect or refusal to execute such bond within the time ordered, the court may remove such fiduciary, revoke his letters of appointment, and appoint another fiduciary in his place.

§ 2109.20 Guardian may give real estate mortgage to secure bond. (GC § 10506-31)

Instead of the sureties required on his bond by section 2109.04 of the Revised Code, a guardian, of the person and estate or of the estate

Executor

1. A nonresident of the state who has been named in a will as one of several co-executors is entitled to appointment if he be of age and of sound mind and untainted by conviction of crime, in spite of a rule of court to the contrary: *Seasongood v. Administrator

6. The appointment of an administratrix, who thereafter abandoned her residence in the state of Ohio, is voidable at the instance of a proper party, but such appointment is not subject to attack by a party who has no real interest in the administration of the assets of the estate: In re Fannin, 24 OApp (2d) 1, 53 OO(2d) 28, 262 NE(2d) 883.

9. Where an heir of the decedent is eligible to appointment as administrator of the estate of a deceased Italian, his claim thereto is superior to that of the Italian consul, and letters must of necessity be issued to him: In re Costanzo, 15 NP(NS) 225, 60 Bull 413.

10. A consular agent of the kingdom of Italy has neither an exclusive nor a naked right, under treaty stipulations or within the class designated in this section, to appointment as administrator of the estate of an Italian subject dying intestate in this state, where one of the next of kin is a resident of the state; nor is he entitled to notice of the death of a subject of the king of Italy, unless there are no known heirs in this country and he is himself a resident of the county in which the appointment is to be made or has a representative in such county who has been duly certified to the court: In re Todarello, 15 NP(NS) 593, 62 Bull 201.

11. The procuring of an alien consul to act as the administrator of a deceased resident of Ohio does not, in an action against other residents of Ohio, present such a case of diverse citizenship as to give jurisdiction to a federal court. The appointment of such alien consul will be regarded as having been procured collusively and fraudulently if the testimony discloses that the sole purpose in having the said consul named as administrator was to give the federal court jurisdiction of the action for wrongful death thereafter brought by him: Cerri v. Akron-Peoples Tel. Co., 219 Fed 285, 13 OLR 425.

Guardian

21. Appointment by the probate court is necessary even in case of a guardian appointed by the last will of a parent under former GC § 10930 (see now RC § 2111.12), in order to prevent the appointment of any unsuitable person as guardian for an infant of tender years, since former GC § 10492 (see now RC § 2101.24) (paragraph [D]) confers upon the probate court the authority to appoint and remove guardians, and to direct and control their conduct and settle their accounts: Henicle v. Flack, 3 App 444, 23 CC (NS) 447.

22. The provisions of this section are mandatory in requiring the removal of a guardian, other than a guardian named in a will by a parent of a minor, on proof that he is no longer a resident of the state: In re Lloyd, 8 OApp(2d) 223, 32 OO(2d) 128, 197 NE(2d) 377.

23. Former GC § 10936 (see now RC §§ 2109.21, 2109.24) provided that the removal from the state of a person appointed guardian, of itself should determine the guardianship of such person, and this provision was construed to mean that the powers of a guardian appointed in this state ceased ipso facto by the removal of the guardian from the state: Merchants &c. Sav. Bank v. Schirk, 5 CC 569, 7 CD 125.

24: Where a court at the time of the appointment of a guardian elected to exercise its statutory discretion under this section, by appointing one a guardian even though such person was not a resident of the county of the court, such court would not be justified, upon being confronted at some future date with an objection to its original appointment based upon nonresidence alone, in removing such guardian: In re Price, 83 OLA 149, 162 NE(2d) 494 (PC).

§ 2109.22 Marriage no disqualification for fiduciary.

The marriage of any person does not disqualify him from acting as fiduciary, whether the marriage occurs before or after his appointment and qualification, and all his acts in such capacity shall have the same validity as though he were unmarried.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-66; 114 v 320 (378); 136 v S 145. Eff 1-1-76.

Analogous to former GC §§ 10636, 10958.

The effective date of S 145 is set by section 3 of the act.

See provisions, § 3 of SB 145 (136 v —) following RC § 2101.01.

§ 2109.23 Allowance of compensation. (GC § 10506-52)

When compensation is not fixed by law, the probate court shall make allowance to fiduciaries for their services and expenses in executing their trusts. Such compensation shall be charged to income or principal, or part to each, as the court may allow. The court shall have the same fees as in the settlements of administrators and executors.

1. A claim of a guardian for services to an imbecile is to be determined by the court settling the guardian's account and, it not being a personal claim against the ward, it need not in case of his decease be presented to his personal representatives: Scattergood v. Ingram, 86 OS 76, 98 NE 923 [for a later report in same case, see 89 OS 460, which reversed, in memorandum opinion, Ingram v. Scattergood, 15 CC(NS) 93, 23 CD 269].

1.1 By virtue of this section a probate court is authorized to make an allowance to a trustee for personal services rendered by him to his beneficiary, if the terms and conditions of the trust are such as to justify the invoking of this section: In re Riddle, 69 App 136, 23 OO 559, 43 NE(2d) 362.

1.2 A reviewing court will not reverse a judgment of the probate court allowing compensation to a trustee for a missing person and for legal services rendered unless the compensation is so excessive as to show an abuse of discretion: In re Parrett, 86 App 162, 41 OO 20, 90 NE(2d) 425.

1.3 Where a nominated trustee under a will undertakes and performs a duty ordinarily performed by the named executrix in the will, but which duty the named executrix fails and refuses to perform, such nominated trustee is entitled to reasonable compensation for the services rendered: In re Allison, 9 OApp(2d) 333, 38 OO(2d) 388, 224 NE(2d) 386.

2. The probate court may in its discretion allow compensation where the services are beneficial to the estate, even though there may be some irregularities: In re Chambers, 16 OO 519 (App) [appeal dismissed, 136 OS 202].

3. Whenever a fiduciary converts to his own use funds belonging to his trust, he is not administering the same for the interest of the beneficiaries, and he is not entitled to any compensation where the amount of such misappropriation is large and must necessarily have been intentional with knowledge of wrongdoing: In re Chambers, 16 OO 519 (App) [appeal dismissed, 136 OS 202].

4. This section and GC §§ 10509-192, 10509-193, 10510-45 and 10510-46 (RC §§ 2113.35, 2113.36, 2127.37 and 2127.38) are in pari materia and should be construed together to give legal effect to the provisions of each and every section: In re Ohmer, 22 OO 147 (PC).

5. When a guardian and his attorney perform services and incur expenses for a ward, this section specifically confers jurisdiction on the probate court appointing such guardian and his attorney to determine the value of such services and expenses rendered during the lifetime of the ward, whether the application to determine the reasonable value of said services and expenses is made before or after the death of the ward: In re Schueneman, 36 OO 513, 78 NE (2d) 688 (PC).

5.1 Since a guardian is entitled to no compensation for services as such until it is approved by the court, failure to apply for any such payment during several accounting periods does not result in a bar to its later payment, upon proper application, either by virtue of a waiver or by operation of a statute of limitations: In re Webb, 11 OMisc 21, 40 OO(2d) 97, 225 NE(2d) 868.

5.2 Fees for legal services performed for the purpose of obtaining payment to the person serving as guardian of the compensation due for services performed in that capacity may not be charged to the guardianship funds, since it is beneficial to neither the ward nor his trust estate: In re Webb, 11 OMisc 21, 40 OO(2d) 97, 225 NE(2d) 868.

6. Former GC § 10953 (see now RC § 2109.23) invests the probate court with sole power of allowing compensation, but the same is subject to review: In re Jaymes, 18 OLA 613.

7. Total compensation to a defaulting trustee of approximately ten per cent of the money handled for the benefit of the trust is not excessive in the absence of proof of a rule of the court to the contrary, and is not an abuse of the discretion vested in the court by this section to fix allowances to fiduciaries for their services and expenses in executing trusts: Schieble v. Phalen, 32 OLA 252.

9. Incorrect accounts of a guardian will not necessarily deprive him of compensation: In re Strickland, 7 NP 233, 1 OD 702.

10. Where the record shows affirmatively that the minor was without estate, the appointment of a guardian is void, and there can be no compensation: In re Baier, 8 NP 107, 11 OD 47.

11. Where an attorney rendered services to a guardianship, in getting one guardian removed and having a successor appointed and in securing the release of the ward from the state hospital, then fees should be allowed not only to the amount the estate was benefited but also for the services which were beneficial to the ward by reason of the removal proceedings: In re Miller, 62 OLA 505, 107 NE(2d) 626 (App).

12. Compensation for extraordinary services and for payment of attorney's fees employed by cotrustee allowed: In re Haggerty, 70 OLA 463, 128 NE(2d) 680.

§ 2109.24 Resignation or removal of fiduciary. (GC § 10506-53)

The probate court at any time may accept the resignation of any fiduciary upon his proper accounting, if such fiduciary was appointed by, is under the control of, or is accountable to such court.

If a fiduciary fails to make and file an inventory as required by sections 2109.58, 2111.14, and 2115.02 of the Revised Code, or to render upon oath a just and true account of his administration at the times required by section 2109.30 of the Revised Code, and if such failure continues for thirty days after such fiduciary has been notified by the court of the expiration of such time, the fiduciary may forthwith be removed by the court and shall receive no allowance for his services unless the court enters upon its journal that such delay was necessary and reasonable.

The court may remove any such fiduciary, after giving such fiduciary not less than ten days' notice, for habitual drunkenness, neglect of duty, incompetency, fraudulent conduct, because the interest of the trust demands it, or for any other cause authorized by law.

The court may remove a trustee upon the written application of more than one half of the persons having an interest in the estate controlled by such trustee, but the trustee himself is not to be considered as a person having an interest in such estate under such proceedings; except that no trustee appointed under a will shall be removed upon such written application unless for a good cause.

Removal of executor or administrator

1. One claiming the estate of a decedent is among the class of "persons interested" within the meaning of former GC § 10629 (see now RC §§ 2109.24, 2113.18), who are entitled to attack the appointment of an administrator: In re Gingery, 103 OS 559, 134 NE 449.

2. A motion to revoke the appointment under GC § 10629 (see now RC §§ 2109.24, 2113.18), is not a collateral but a direct attack upon the appointment of an administrator when such motion is filed under that section and in the same court wherein letters of administration were granted: In re Gingery, 103 OS 559, 134 NE 449.

2.1 The probate court has proven, due opportunity for a hearing having been given, to revoke letters of administration de bonis non where such appointment was obtained by fraud practiced upon the court, or for refusal of such administrator to obey the orders of the court duly and lawfully made; and where such fraud and refusal to obey orders injuriously affect a creditor of an heir of the estate, and such heir was an active participant in the fraud, and he and the administrator are benefited thereby, to the detriment of the creditor, the creditor has such an interest in the administration of the estate as entitles him to invoke the exercise of said power by motion: In re Adams, 71 App 113, 25 OO 477, 48 NE(2d) 127.

3. A broad discretion is given the probate court in the removal of a fiduciary under the provisions of this section, which, after enumerating certain specific causes, provides that a fiduciary may be removed "because the interest of the trust demands it": In re Marshall, 78 App 1, 33 OO 375, 65 NE(2d) 523.

5. Under this section notice of a removal proceeding is required to be given to the fiduciary, but the persons interested in the trust are not considered necessary parties to the determination of the issue, and notice to them is not required: In re Marshall, 78 App 1, 33 OO 375, 65 NE(2d) 523.

6. A sister, heir at law and next of kin of the deceased, has such an interest in the estate as would authorize her to file an application for removal of an administrator: Hopkins v. Barger, 21 OLA 386.

8. There is no irreconcilable inconsistency between GC § 10605 (see now RC §§ 2109.21, 2113.05), which makes the appointment of the executor named in the will mandatory, and this section, which confers a discretion upon the probate court to remove for non-residence: Seasongood v. Seasongood, 23 CC(NS) 369, 27 CD 200.

10. This section defines, perhaps, what is meant by "unsuitable" in the third clause of GC § 10617 (see now RC §§ 2109.21, 2113.06, 2113.07), providing as to who shall be appointed administrator: Long v. Bowersox, 8 NP(NS) 249, 19 OD 494.

Power to remove

15. The probate court, for good cause, may remove an executor or administrator: Weyer v. Watt, 48 OS 545, 28 NE 670.

16. The authority of the probate court to remove an executor is complete and exclusive; and if the court exercises its discretion, its action cannot be questioned by any appellate proceeding: Stafford v. American Missionary Assn., 22 CC 399, 12 CD 442.

17. This section does not require the court to remove an executor or administrator because he has become a nonresident of the state after appointment, but it leaves it within the discretion of the court whether to remove him or not: Seasongood v. Seasongood, 23 CC(NS) 369, 27 CD 200.

18. The court has broad discretion as to removal of an executor, but narrow as to appointment thereof: In re Sultzbach, 5 NP 218, 5 OD 524; same rule, Estate of Sells, 5 NP(NS) 629, 52 Bull 610 [for opinion on right of appeal, see In re Sells, 8 NP(NS) 175, 19 OD 567].

19. The determination by the probate court that a trust company is legally competent to act as executor cannot be collaterally attacked: Smith v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 7 NP(NS) 609, 19 OD 537.

Notice and hearing

20. Where an application is filed by the probate court for the removal of a fiduciary upon any one or more of the specific grounds set forth in GC § 10506-53 (as amended Aug. 22, 1941) (RC § 2109.24) other than for failure to make and file an inventory in the manner and within the time required by law, the fiduciary is entitled to receive not less than ten days' notice thereof, and is further entitled to a hearing upon the charges made therein. In such case, it is the duty of the court to receive and hear all relevant and proper evidence proffered upon the issues made by the claims and denials of the respective parties: In re Paull, 90 App 403, 46 OO 52, 101 NE(2d) 209.

Grounds for removal

26. The filing of an account in the probate court by an executor or administrator, denominated "Final Account," does not operate to terminate the trust, as long as there remain assets under his jurisdiction subject to the payment of valid debts of the decedent, and the failure of the fiduciary to proceed with the administration of the trust, while under some circumstances may justify a removal of the officer, does not constitute, ipso facto, an abandonment of the trust: Johnson v. Schwenck, 99 OS 59, 124 NE 61, 8 ALR 170.

26.1 Where trustees appealed judgments construing will and in so doing assumed a position contrary to the best interests of their beneficiary, such conduct violated the first precept of a trustee—loyalty to the cestuis que trustent, and such conduct demands they be removed from office. In re Yost, 102 App 62, 2 OO(2d) 44, 141 NE(2d) 176.

26.2 An administratrix may not be deprived of the compensation due to her under the provisions of RC § 2113.35 for her services for mere delay in making and returning the inventory of the estate, when she has not been given an order requiring her, at an early date therein named, to return same, as prescribed by RC § 2115.03, or has not been notified by the court of the expiration of the time to file such inventory, as prescribed by this section: In re Burchett, 16 OApp(2d) 45, 45 OO(2d) 133, 241 NE(2d) 787.

27. The fact that a number of beneficiaries from the proceeds of a farm operated by the administratrix do not maintain friendly relationships to the administratrix and are of opinion that the best interests of all beneficiaries would be conserved by the administratrix's removal, is not decisive but may properly be considered with other facts and circumstances in a proceeding to remove the administratrix: Boedecker v. Herr, 30 OLA 374.

27.1 That the wife and brother of the incompetent are willing to serve without compensation as guardian and counsel, respectively, is sufficient cause to remove a paid guardian: In re Marshall, 67 OLA 314.

28. Where, upon motion for the removal of an executor, the gist of the charge is fraud, it is error to grant an order of removal where no attempt has been made to show fraud: Estate of Breckinridge, 7 CC (NS) 86, 17 CD 688.

29. Failure to return inventory within three months, upon the order of the court, is ground for removal: In re Estate of Pickards, 5 NP 493, 7 OD 476.

30. An application for the removal of an executor or administrator must state the facts which constitute the alleged causes of removal, specifically. Purchase of property, by an executor, at his own sale, although forbidden, is not in itself ground for his removal, if nothing else be shown; nor is the fact alone that he is indebted to the estate: Fox v. Keister, 6 NP 327, 9 OD 316.

31. The fact that the personal claim of an executor against the estate was unsettled at testator's death is no ground for removal if all the parties in interest have entered into a contract for the liquidation of such debt and the settlement of the estate: In re Worthington's Estate, 5 NP 63, 5 OD 524.

32. If a person who is named as executor in a will is not of sufficient business ability to manage the estate to the best interest of the parties, such lack of ability may be ground for removing such executor, after he is appointed; but it does not authorize the court to refuse to appoint him: In re March, 60 Bull 5.

32.1 The court is vested with a broad discretion under this section in determining when a guardian's adverse interest is of such consequence as to authorize removal "because the interest of the trust demands it" and in the absence of proof that a fiduciary is actually exercising her authority in a manner adverse to the interests of her trust, such fiduciary will not be removed unless such adverse interest is of such a nature that potentially irreparable damage to the trust might ensue: In re Price, 83 OLA 149, 162 NE(2d) 494 (PC).

32.2 Removal of a guardian requires substantial evidence that will clearly convince the court that the interests of the ward cannot otherwise be preserved, in order to establish that the interest of the trust demands it, as required by this section: In re Conley, 39 OO(2d) 292, 10 OMisc 197, 224 NE(2d) 183 (PC).

Effect of removal

33. The acts of an executor or administrator, who is afterwards superseded by removal or otherwise, are as valid as if he had continued to perform the trust until the final settlement of the estate: Bigelow v. Bigelow, 4 O 138.

34. All parties in interest are bound to take notice of the removal of one, and the appointment of a second administrator, and when a removed executor or administrator has settled with the court, and the balance in his hands is ascertained, suit may be sustained against his sureties without first obtaining a personal and separate judgment against him; and in such suit it is not necessary to aver that the removed administrator has had notice of his successor's appointment: Treasurer v. McIlvain, 5 O 200.

36. The removal of the executor or administrator terminates his authority over the assets received, as well as over those not received: Weaver v. Reese, 6 O 418.

37. Where the appointment of an administrator is revoked by the probate court, but on appeal the administrator is restored to his office and duties, the period during which he was suspended from his office is to be deducted in fixing the two years' limitation for the bringing of an action against him as such administrator: Badger v. Orr, 1 App 293, 17 CC(NS) 312, 24 CD 328.

Appeal from order removing

42. An appeal will not lie to the court of common pleas from an order of the probate court removing an executor or administrator: Estate of Still, 15 OS 484; but see note to Estate of Sells, 8 NP(NS) 175, 19 OD 567 [for opinion on merits, see In re Sells, 5 NP(NS) 629, 52 Bull 610].

43. There is no right of appeal to the court of common pleas, from an order of the probate court refusing to remove an administrator: Ebersole v. Schiller, 50 OS 701, 35 NE 793.

44. A proceeding filed in the probate court to remove an administrator de bonis non for the reason that his predecessor was still rightfully in office is appealable under GC § 11206 (see now RC § 2101.42): Johnson v. Schwenck, 99 OS 59, 124 NE 61, 8 ALR 170.

45. An order of the probate court removing an executor is not the subject of review on petition in error in the court of common pleas: Monger v. Jeffries, 62 OS 149, 56 NE 654 [affirming Munger v. Jeffries, 7 NP 55, 10 OD 12]; see also Campbell v. Miner, 62 OS 659, 58 NE 1097 [affirming judgment of circuit court which affirmed 3 NP 138, 4 OD 96], and Martin v. Dershem, 65 OS 556, 63 NE 1130, 46 Bull 172.

45.1 An action in the court of probate for the removal of a testamentary trustee is one in chancery and therefore appealable to the court of appeals on questions of law and fact: In re Yost, 163 OS 593, 57 OO 24, 128 NE(2d) 12.

46. The procedure to remove a fiduciary under this section is statutory and is not appealable as a chancery case: In re Thomas, 58 OLA 477 (App).

47. Error cannot be prosecuted to an order removing an administrator under this section: Ferguson v. Ferguson, 3 NP(NS) 549, 16 OD 486.

48. When an order is made by the probate court removing an executor, it is directed against him and he is affected by it, and he has the right of appeal therefrom, notwithstanding he is not an heir, devisee, or other interested person under the will: In re Estate of Sells, 8 NP(NS) 175, 19 OD 567 [for opinion on merits, see In re Sells, 5 NP(NS) 629, 52 Bull 610].

49. The judgment entry of the probate court, in a proceeding for the removal of an administrator, will be accepted by the reviewing court where the record discloses that the application was heard on the evidence, in the absence of a bill of exceptions disclosing an abuse of discretion: Speer v. McKee, 21 OLA 77.

Resignation of executor or administrator

50. A resignation in Mississippi of an executor of an estate in Ohio, accepted by the orphans' court of the former state, is void, because of want of authority in the state of Mississippi to accept such resignation: Veazie v. McGugin, 40 OS 365.

51. The probate court, for good cause shown, may accept the resignation of an executor or administrator: Weyer v. Watt, 48 OS 545, 28 NE 670.

52. Acceptance is necessary to give validity to the resignation: Reiter v. State, 51 OS 74, 36 NE 943.

53. The receiving of the resignation of an executor or administrator by the probate court appointing such officer, and the filing of the document by the judge thereof, followed by the appointment of a successor, is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of former GC § 10627 (see now RC §§ 2109.24, 2109.25), and the new appointment so made is in all respects a valid one: Johnson v. Schwenck, 99 OS 59, 124 NE 61, 8 ALR 170.

54. The language used in this section, that the court "may accept the resignation of any fiduciary upon his proper accounting," gives the appointing court a discretion to determine what is a proper accounting: Thrasher v. Kelly, 25 OO 101 (CP).

Resignation or removal of guardian

60. When a guardian is superseded and another appointed in his stead, proceedings in an action against the former, as such, after he has been superseded, will not operate against or bind the ward or the succeeding guardian: Este v. Strong, 2 O 401.

62. Where joint guardians are unable to agree, one being friendly with one set of next of kin of the ward, and the other friendly with another set, and frequently appear before the court for advice, it is within the discretion of the probate court, given by this section, to remove such guardians: Gorsuch v. Stabler, 16 OLA 250.

Resignation or removal of trustee

67. When one of the trustees named in the will died, and another removed to a place unknown, the probate court had power to fill such vacancies, although there was a surviving trustee capable of executing the trust: Sowers v. Cyrenius, 39 OS 27.

68. Where it is manifest that testator did not intend that trust (to run fifty years or more) should be controlled by present beneficiaries, and that property might be dissipated and lost, a court will refuse an application by heirs, next of kin and legatees for removal of a bank, as trustee, where the legality of its appointment is not questioned and no ground for removal is stated: In re Hartman's Will, 28 NP (NS) 75.

69. The court under former GC § 11035 (see now RC § 2109.24) has power to remove and appoint a successor for a trustee created by a deed for certain lands to "a trustee, his successors, heirs and assigns, forever," to manage and control the land conveyed for a certain named beneficiary; for the grant was not intended to create a personal interest in the trustee, but only to facilitate the execution of the trust: Pheron v. Mitchell, 12 App 336, 31 OCA 333.

71. A proceeding on a motion to dismiss a trustee, pursuant to this section, is not a chancery case: In re Marshall, 78 App 45, 33 OO 399, 65 NE(2d) 95.

72. Paragraph 4 of this section has reference only to a trustee as distinguished from an administrator or executor notwithstanding the use of the broader term "fiduciary" in other parts of that section in dealing with the probate court's power of removal: In re Stauffer, 40 OLA 254 (App).

73. The jurisdiction of the probate court over the guardianship, having once attached, cannot be ousted by the removal of the guardian from the state in which the appointment was made, or by the removal of the trust property: Netting v. Strickland, 18 CC 136, 9 CD 841.

74. This section vests the probate court with complete and exclusive jurisdiction to remove a trustee appointed by it under a will, and an order of such court removing such trustee is not subject to review on petition in error: Stafford v. American Missionary Assn., 22 CC 339, 12 CD 442; see Gilbert v. Gilbert, 13 CC 29, 7 CD 58.

75. Probate court has power to compel a settlement by a nonresident guardian, or on his default to ascertain the amount upon evidence: Schwab v. Rappold, 9 DecRep 340, 12 Bull 197.

§ 2109.25 Fiduciary in military service; removal and reinstatement. (GC § 10506-54)

Whenever it appears to the satisfaction of the probate court that a fiduciary is unable to perform his duties because he is engaged or is about to engage in military service as defined by this section, the court may remove such fiduciary and appoint a substitute or authorize the remaining fiduciaries to execute the trust. Such action may be taken on the court's own motion or on the application of any party in interest, including the fiduciary or cofiduciary, either without notice or upon notice to such persons and in such manner as the court shall direct.

If any of the duties of such office remain unexecuted when a fiduciary who has resigned or been removed on account of his military service ceases to be in such military service, he shall be reappointed as fiduciary upon his application to the court and upon such notice as the court may direct, provided he is at the time a suitable and competent person and has the qualifications as to residence required by section 2109.21 of the Revised Code. If such person is reappointed, the court shall remove the substitute fiduciary and revoke his letters of appointment, and make such further order or decree as justice requires.

"Military service," as used in this section, means any service, work, or occupation which in the opinion of the court is directly or indirectly in furtherance of any military effort of the United States. Such definition includes internment in an enemy country, residence in any foreign country, or residence in any possession or dependency of the United States, if by reason thereof the fiduciary is unable to return to this state.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-54; 120 v 649 (654), § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Not analogous to former GC § 10506-54 [114 v 320 (375)], repealed in 119 v 394 (425), § 11. For a present analogous section, see RC § 1339.14.

§ 2109.26 Vacancy before termination of the trust; accounting; successor fiduciary. (GC § 10506-55)

If a sole fiduciary dies, is dissolved, declines to accept, resigns, is removed, or becomes incapacitated prior to the termination of the trust, the probate court shall require a final account of all dealings of such trust to be filed forthwith by such fiduciary if a living person and able to act. If such fiduciary is a living person but unable to act, such final account shall be filed by his guardian, or if there is no guardian by some other suitable person in his behalf, appointed or approved by the court. If such fiduciary is a deceased person, such account shall be filed by his executor or administrator. If such fiduciary is a dissolved corporation, such account shall be filed by such persons as are charged by law with winding up the affairs of such corporation. Thereupon the court shall cause such proceedings to be had as are provided by sections 2109.30 to 2109.36, inclusive, of the Revised Code.

Whenever such a vacancy occurs and such contingency is not otherwise provided for by law or by the instrument creating the trust, or whenever such instrument names no fiduciary, the court shall, on its own motion or on the application of any person beneficially interested, issue letters of appointment as fiduciary to some competent person or persons who shall qualify according to law and execute the trust to its proper termination. Such vacancy and the appointment of a successor fiduciary shall not affect the liability of the former fiduciary or his sureties which was previously incurred.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The surety is liable for the payment of all sums adjudicated to be due from its principal and it is immaterial, under this section, that the probate court's determination of liability was made subsequent to the death of the administrator: Massachusetts Bonding &c. Co. v. Winters Nat. Bank &c. Co., 130 F(2d) 5, 24 OO 225.

2. Where the executor and trustee named in a will dies during the administration of the estate and trust, no application for the appointment of a trustee is filed by a person beneficially interested and the court, on its own motion, does not appoint a trustee but an administrator de bonis non with the will annexed is appointed but not as trustee, the duty devolves such administrator to act also as trustee and administer the trust until a trustee is appointed: In re Rothstein, 108 App 487, 9 OO(2d) 469, 162 NE(2d) 547.

3. Court will not permit trust estate to fail for want of trustee: Francis v. Anthony, 46 App 121, 187 NE 782, 38 OLR 69.

4. For historical background of this statute, see Clark v. Neil, 24 NP(NS) 589.

5. The commissions fixed by statute for executors and administrators are, in contemplation of law, in full payment for all ordinary services rendered; and where it becomes necessary that an administrator de bonis non should be appointed to complete the settlement of the estate, the commissions should be equitably apportioned between the original and succeeding representatives of the estate in proportion to the value of the services rendered by them respectively: Bates v. Creed, 2 App 59, 15 CC(NS) 433.

6. Where an administrator died before filing a final account, the probate court properly appointed an administrator for the deceased administrator for the sole purpose of filing a final account in the original estate: In re Chambers, 30 OLA 420.

DECISIONS CONSTRUING FORMER GC § 10596

1. An executor derives his power over testator's real estate from the will, and acts as the trustee of the testator to fulfill a personal trust, while the authority of an administrator with the will annexed emanates from and is dependent on legislative enactments: Wills v. Cowper, 2 O 124 [adhered to on rehearing, sub nomine, Wills v. Cooper, 3 O 386]; Henry v. Doctor, 9 O 49.

2. Neither the negligence nor death of the trustee, nor other circumstances, will be permitted to defeat the interest of those for whose benefit the trust was created: Wills v. Cowper, 2 O 124 [adhered to on rehearing, sub nomine, Wills v. Cooper, 3 O 486]; Henry v. Doctor, 9 O 49; see also Taylor v. Galloway, 1 O 232; Dabney v. Manning, 3 O 321; Steele v. Worthington, 2 O 182; Hunt v. Freeman, 1 O 490.

3. Where one of the trustees named in a will died, and another removed to a place unknown, the probate court had power to fill such vacancies, although there was a surviving trustee capable of executing the trust: Sowers v. Cyrenius, 39 OS 29.

4. Former GC § 10596 (see now RC § 2109.26) does not apply where the will has conferred personal discretion upon the individual who is named as trustee.

tee: Rogers v. Rea, 98 OS 315, 120 NE 828 [reversing court of appeals, which was on appeal from Rea v. Griffin, 21 NP(NS) 129, 29 OD 174].

6. Jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon the probate court by will or any other private appointment, or by consent, empowering it to act as a court in supervising the administration of a testamentary trust: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453.

7. Former GC §§ 10492, 10493, 10857 and 11031 (see now RC §§ 2101.24, 2107.45 and 2109.32) do not confer upon the probate court jurisdiction to supervise or control the administration of a testamentary trust: Pike v. White, 22 CC(NS) 61, 33 CD 453 [affirmed, without opinion, May 4, 1915].

10. Where a will named an executor and trustee, giving him power to sell certain real estate, and he died, the administrator with the will annexed has authority, under the will, to sell said real estate without an order of court: Avery v. Howard, 7 NP(NS) 97, 19 OD 71.

13. If testator names two executors in his will, and one of them dies before testator, the court should appoint the survivor as sole executor of the will, if he is legally competent: In re March, 60 Bull 5.

DECISIONS CONSTRUING FORMER GC § 10627

1. A resignation in Mississippi of an executor of an estate in Ohio, accepted by the orphans' court of the former state, is void, because of want of authority in the state of Mississippi to accept such resignation: Veazie v. McGugin, 40 OS 365.

3. Acceptance is necessary to give validity to the resignation: Reiter v. State, 51 OS 74, 36 NE 943, 23 LRA 681.

4. The receiving of the resignation of an executor or administrator by the probate court appointing such officer, and the filing of the document by the judge thereof, followed by the appointment of a successor, is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of GC § 10627 (see now RC § 2109.26), and the new appointment so made is in all respects a valid one: Johnson v. Schwenck, 99 OS 59, 124 NE 61, 8 ALR 170.

DECISIONS CONSTRUING FORMER GC § 10628

1. By accepting the resignation of an administrator pending the settlement of his accounts, the probate court does not thereby lose its jurisdiction over his person or the settlement of his accounts, and may proceed to hear and determine exceptions thereto, and ascertain the amount due from him to the estate in like manner as if he had continued in the execution of his trust: Slagle v. Entekin, 44 OS 637, 10 NE 675.

2. But where the court accepts the resignation and discharges the administrator, he will not be liable for maladministration in failing to answer a summons served on him thereafter in a proceeding involving the estate: State v. Moffitt, 13 CC(NS) 152, 23 CD 238.

§ 2109.27 Surviving fiduciaries. (GC § 10506-56)

When two or more fiduciaries have been appointed jointly to execute a trust and one or more of them dies, declines, resigns, or is removed, the title shall pass to the remaining fiduciaries who shall execute the trust, unless the creating instrument expresses a contrary intention or unless the probate court on the application of persons interested in the trust determines otherwise. The remaining fiduciaries shall within ninety days after the death, resignation, or removal of a co-fiduciary, file in the court a complete account covering all matters to the time of such death, resignation, or removal.

§ 2109.30 Accounts of fiduciaries.

(A) Within seven months after his appointment, every executor and administrator shall render an account of his administration, and shall render further accounts at least once each year thereafter. Every other fiduciary shall render an account of the administration of his estate or trust at least once in each two years. An account shall be rendered by any fiduciary at any time other than that mentioned in this section upon the order of the court either at its own instance, or upon the motion of any person interested in the estate or trust, for good cause shown. Every fiduciary shall render a final account within thirty days after completing the administration of the estate or the termination of his trust, or within such other period of time as the court may order.

Every account shall include an itemized statement of all receipts of the fiduciary during the accounting period and of all disbursements and distributions made by him during the accounting period, verified by vouchers or proof. In addition, the account shall include an itemized statement of all funds, assets, and investments of the estate or trust known to or in the possession of the fiduciary at the end of the accounting period, and shall show any changes in investments since the last previous account. The accounts of testamentary trustees shall, and the accounts of other fiduciaries may, show receipts and disbursements separately identified as to principal and income.

Every account shall be upon the signature and oath of the fiduciary. When an account is rendered by two or more joint fiduciaries, the court may allow the account upon the signature and oath of one of them.

Upon the filing of every account the fiduciary, except corporate fiduciaries subject to section 1109.16 of the Revised Code, shall exhibit to the court, for its examination, the securities shown in the account as being in the hands of the fiduciary, or the certificate of the person in possession of the securities, if held as collateral or pursuant to section 2109.13 or 2131.21 of the Revised Code, and a passbook or certified bank statement showing as to each depository the fund deposited to the credit of the trust. The court may designate a deputy clerk, an agent of a corporate surety on the bond of the fiduciary, or another suitable person whom the court appoints as commissioner to make such examination and report his findings to the court. When securities are located outside the county, the court may appoint a commissioner or request another probate court to make the examination and report its findings to the court. The court may examine the fiduciary under oath touching the account.

When a fiduciary is authorized by law or by the instrument governing distribution to distribute the assets of the estate or trust, in whole or in part, he may do so and include a report of the distribution in his succeeding account.

An account showing complete administration before distribution of assets shall be designated "final account." An account filed subsequent to the final account and showing distribution of assets shall be designated "account of distribution." An account showing complete administration and distribution of assets shall be designated "final and distributive account."

(B) In estates of decedents where the sole legatee or heir is also the executor or administrator, no partial accountings are required.

In estates of decedents where none of the legatees or heirs is under a legal disability, each partial accounting of the executor or administrator may be waived by the written consent of all the legatees or heirs filed in lieu of a partial accounting otherwise required.

1. General Code § 10509-176 (see now RC § 2109.30) does not require that a certificate should be filed with the account showing that real estate taxes have been paid: In re Kastelic, 3 OO 164.

2. A guardian may, in his account filed for settlement in the probate court, charge all proper debts due from his ward, although accruing prior to guardianship, for he cannot bring an action against himself or his ward while the relationship continues. The probate court has no discretion to refuse to settle them, though it should disallow items which are improper charges: Davis v. Ford, 7 O (pt.2), 104.

3. When a guardian closes his account with his ward by filing a final account in the probate court, an amount being due his ward, for which he induces her to sign a receipt as for money paid, he agreeing to be responsible to her for the amount, with interest, an action may be maintained upon such agreement by the ward, and the sum actually due recovered from the guardian without in any way opening or reviewing the accounts which had been settled in the probate court: Lindsay v. Lindsay, 28 OS 157.

4. No limitation of time exists which will bar the issuing of a citation requiring a guardian to file an account of his trust: McClelland v. State ex rel Clark, 101 OS 42, 127 NE 409 [affirming State ex rel Clark v. McClelland, 30 OCA 522, 35 CD 422; Philips v. State ex rel Harter, 5 OS 122, disapproved and overruled].

4.1 A clause in the deed that the trustee "shall not be required to render any account of his trusteeship to any court but a settlement between the parties shall be final and conclusive" does not supersede the jurisdiction of the probate court over the accounting in case no settlement has been made between the parties: Pherson v. Mitchell, 12 App 336, 31 OCA 333.

5. A mere sworn statement without vouchers, filed by a guardian in lieu of an itemized final account as provided for in this section, is sufficient to authorize the probate court to hear proof of the matters therein set forth, permit exceptions to be filed thereto and fully dispose of the matter in accordance with the provisions of GC §§ 10501-53 and 10506-39 (RC §§ 2101.24 and 2109.32): Marks v. Marks, 58 App 266, 12 OO 158, 16 NE(2d) 509.

5.1 Where, in the reporting of sales of personal property and in making an accounting thereof to the probate court by an administrator, an objection is raised and an issue presented, such administrator is required to comply with the provisions of RC § 2109.30, that, "every account shall include an itemized statement of all receipts of the fiduciary during the accounting period and of all disbursements and distributions made by him during such period, verified by vouchers or proof": In re Brown, 98 App 297, 57 OO 342, 129 NE(2d) 509.

6. Where the court on its own motion does not order a formal hearing on the final account of an administrator as authorized by GC §§ 10506-34 to 10506-40 (RC §§ 2109.30 to 2109.35), within the period after publication of the notice of the filing of said account as fixed by a rule of the court, or the fiduciary or an interested party does not request such a hearing within such time, the probate court has full power under Const., Art. IV, § 8 to approve the final account of an administrator and order his discharge: In re Johnson, 27 OO 131, 12 OSupp 148 (PC).

7. Where a former ward, many years after he became of age, asks for an accounting by his former guardian, some legal notice must be given the guardian before the accounting may be had, and where upon an action on the bond the surety alone defends, the surety cannot be met with the objections that there had been an accounting in the probate court without notice to the former guardian or surety, and almost twenty years after the bond had been given: Gilbert v. Gilbert, 13 CC 29, 7 CD 58.

8. Approval by the probate court on exceptions by guardian to the allowance and payment by a former guardian of a claim against the ward in favor of an estate in which he was executor is conclusive against the present guardian suing such executor to get back the money, although the court believes such claim was unfounded: Lynch v. Cogswell, 18 CC 641, 7 CD 12.

9. The administrator of a deceased guardian should file the account of the deceased guardian and turn over the money in his hands to the newly appointed guardian, immediately after his appointment: In re Estate of Bruckmann, 1 NP(NS) 7, 48 Bull 637.

10. A long delay in filing exceptions to his guardian's account, there being no excuse for such delay, is laches, especially where the filing is delayed until after the death of the guardian, thus depriving the sureties of their main witness: In re Streit, 12 OD (NP) 158.

11. Money which the guardian had no right to receive, being paid him by an executor under an order of court without jurisdiction, and belonging in fact to other persons, must be accounted for as assets by him and his sureties, and they are estopped to set up the illegality or the title of others: In re Cloud, 20 Bull 455.

12. The duty of guardian to pay over funds to ward arises expressly by reason of this section, without any order of distribution: Lamkin v. Robinson, 10 NP (NS) 1, 21 OD 13 [appealed, 15 CC(NS) 126, 24 CD 91, which was affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 603, 106 NE 1065, and Stevens v. Robinson, 88 OS 603, 106 NE 1081]. For a later opinion, see Lamkin v. Robinson, 16 App 440, 32 OCA 401, 35 CD 767 [motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 367].

13. A failure to account under this section is a violation of the Canons of Professional Ethics and grounds for an indefinite suspension from the practice of law: Columbus Bar Assn. v. Margulis, 174 OS 263, 22 OO(2d) 328, 189 NE(2d) 88.

14. A hearing by a probate court for the purpose of settling the "final and distributive account" of a receiver is not one of the equitable actions encompassed by RC § 2501.02: In re Wissner & Gabler, 5 OS(2d) 89, 34 OO(2d) 217, 214 NE(2d) 92.

15. Executors are not required to show receipts and disbursements separately identified as to principal and income: In re Gamble, 36 OO(2d) 388, 8 OMisc 314, 220 NE(2d) 621.

16. Under the provisions of RC § 2109.30 every executor must render an account of his administration within nine months after his appointment, and must render further accounts at least once each year thereafter: Starr v. Rupp, 53 OO(2d) 169, 25 OMisc 224, 421 F(2d) 999.

Account, 11 et seq

Effect, 21 et seq

Jurisdiction, 1 et seq

Jurisdiction

1. The settlement of estates is within the probate court, and a creditor cannot, at his option, transfer such settlement to another court: McDonald v. Aten, 1 OS 293.

2. The court has power to order final settlement, and there is no constitutional impediment to conferring such jurisdiction. Under such jurisdiction, the court can determine all disputes or submit them to a jury. Order of distribution may be enforced by execution. The power of the court is exhausted when it orders distribution and it cannot entertain a petition to enforce collection of amounts distributed: McLaughlin v. McLaughlin, 4 OS 508.

3. Upon final settlement of an administrator's accounts, the probate court has no jurisdiction to determine the state of accounts between the administrator and the several distributees to whom any balance found in his hands may be payable. The court can only order distribution of such balance according to law, leaving the state of accounts between the parties to be inquired into when such order of distribution is sought to be enforced by the respective distributees: Cox v. John, 32 OS 532.

4. If a trust is terminated by a mutual agreement, by which the former trustee obtains control of the property, he is an agent who can be compelled to account in the court of common pleas; and not an executor or a trustee under the will who can be compelled to account in the probate court: Culver v.

Culver, 58 OS 172, 50 NE 505.

5. An Ohio probate court, although it has admitted to probate an Ohio will, and has issued letters to the executor, has not power to review the accounts of such executor respecting property situate in the state of Michigan, and for which he has duly accounted to the proper court in that state under the ancillary administration granted him by the laws of that state: In re Crawford, 68 OS 58, 65 NE 156, 96 AmSt 648 [affirming 21 CC 554, 11 CD 605].

6. The probate court has jurisdiction of the person of the administrator until his accounts are settled. And that jurisdiction is not ousted by the fact that the court orders his removal and appoints a successor: In re Morrison, 68 OS 252, 67 NE 567.

Account

11. Where the widow and minor children were assigned a homestead out of intestate's lands, and the balance of the estate was sold to pay debts, leaving a balance of such debts unpaid, and twenty years thereafter the lands embraced in the homestead were sold for the payment of the residue of the debts, the personal representative must account according to law: Taylor v. Thorn, 29 OS 569.

12. Personal estate was devised to a wife for life and then so much "as was unconsumed" was to be divided among certain heirs, with no requirement that the executor should collect and distribute that which was unconsumed at the death of the widow. Held: The widow had a right to consume and dispose of the whole estate, and it was the duty of the executor to deliver possession thereof to her, and he is not responsible for the disposition of it by the widow, nor is he required to account therefor: Posegate v. South, 46 OS 391, 21 NE 641.

13. The allowance to an administrator for extraordinary services is part of the statement of his account: McMahon v. Ambach & Co., 79 OS 103, 86 NE 512.

14. The amount of fees for services rendered by attorneys employed by an executor or administrator in the settlement of the estate in his hands, may be included as an item in the settlement account of the executor or administrator; or an application upon due and legal notice to all parties in interest may be made to the probate court to allow the claim and fix the amount thereof: Trumpler v. Royer, 95 OS 194, 115 NE 1018 [affirming Royer v. Trumpler, 7 App 312, 27 OCA 117, 28 CD 186; for a later report, overruling motion to certify record, see Trumpler v. Royer, 16 OLR 108, 63 Bull 223].

15. When an administrator by virtue of his office takes the unexpired term of his decedent's lease for years and sells the same, the proceeds of such sale are by law appropriated to the original lessor to the extent of the unpaid rents of the original lease, and such administrator will be required to account to his decedent's estate only for the excess beyond the sum required to pay the rents reserved in the original lease: Steward v. Barry, 102 OS 129, 131 NE 492.

16. An account of an administrator is settled to perpetuate evidence of payments. It is not an adjudication of the right to receive payments: Burton v. Greif, 11 App 102, 30 OCA 577 [motion to certify record overruled, Greif v. Burton, 17 OLR 94, 64 Bull 218].

Effect

21. The settlement of an account of an executor or administrator by the probate court is conclusive, as against parties with actual notice of the settlement of all matters specified therein, and as to such matters the party cannot be required to account a second time, unless the same be impeached for fraud or manifest error. But such account is not final, as to bar further inquiry, in regard to other assets in the hands of the executor or administrator, not accounted for or passed on. And for such matters the court may, at any time within the limits of the statute, compel a further settlement by the process indicated: McAfee v. Phillips, 25 OS 374.

22. As to what extent partial and final accounts are conclusive, see Piatt v. Longworth, 27 OS 159.

23. Upon the settlement of the final account of an administrator, it is not the duty of the probate judge to provide for the payment of claims against the estate which no creditor is asserting: Cox v. John, 32 OS 532.

24. An order approving a partial account is conclusive unless attacked in the mode provided by statute, but this is only in respect to matters adjudicated therein: Eichelberger v. Gross, 42 OS 549.

25. As long as there are assets in the administrator's hands, his authority to administer the same is not extinguished by an order, made upon what purports to be the settlement of his final account, directing that he be discharged from his trust: Weyer v. Watt, 48 OS 545, 28 NE 670.

26. The settlement of a final account showing payment of money to a person not entitled thereto (as to the child of a deceased legatee instead of to the legatee's administrator) is no bar to a subsequent action against him for the recovery of the money by one who is legally entitled to the same: Banning v. Gotshall, 62 OS 210, 56 NE 1030.

27. The filing of an account in the probate court by an executor or administrator, denominated "Final Account," does not operate to terminate the trust, as long as there remain assets under his jurisdiction subject to the payment of valid debts of the decedent, and the failure of the fiduciary to proceed with the administration of the trust, while under some circumstances justifying a removal of the officer, does not constitute, ipso facto, an abandonment of the trust: Johnson v. Schwenck, 99 OS 59, 124 NE 61, 8 ALR 170.

DECISIONS CONSTRUING FORMER

GC § 10509-176 (116 v 385 [401])

1. As this section existed from January 1, 1932, until September 2, 1935, there was considerable difference of opinion as to whether or not it was necessary to file with the account certificates showing that taxes which had accrued on real property of the decedent at the time of his death had been paid. Many probate courts held that it was necessary to file such certificates regarding real estate taxes with the account. However, the common pleas court of Cuyahoga county held that the provisions of GC § 10509-176 (see now RC § 2109.30) and related sections did not require that a certificate of the county auditor and county treasurer be filed showing that the real estate taxes charged against the estate had been paid, before the final account may be approved: In re Kastelic, 3 OO 164.

3. Under this section as it existed between January 1, 1932, and September 2, 1935, the attorney general rendered an opinion that by virtue of this section, it was not mandatory that the certificates of the county treasurer and county auditor that all taxes charged against the estate of the decedent had been paid, be filed by the administrator or executor at the time of the filing of a "partial account" but such certificates must be filed at or before the time of the filing of the final account: 1933 OAG 546.

4. The attorney general had also rendered another opinion in which he had held that the certificates of the county auditor and county treasurer filed with the probate court pursuant to this section, must certify that all taxes, including real estate taxes charged against property coming into the control of the executor, charged against the estate of the decedent, had been paid: 1933 OAG 546.

5. Under GC § 10509-176 (116 v 401) (see now RC § 2109.30), the probate court may not legally require that executors or administrators, in filing their final account, produce a certificate from the county treasurer and county auditor showing that all returns for personal property taxation have been made and that all personal property taxes charged against the estate have been paid: 1935 OAG No.5022.

§ 2109.31 Citation to file account. (GC § 10506-35)

If a fiduciary neglects or refuses to file an account when due according to section 2109.30 of the Revised Code or when ordered by the probate court, the court at its own instance may, and on the application of any interested party or of any of the next of kin of any ward shall, issue a citation to such fiduciary, by publication or otherwise, to compel the filing of the overdue account. In case the fiduciary fails to file such account within thirty days after he has been served with such citation, no allowance shall be made for his services if the court finds that such delay was unreasonable.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-35; 114 v 320 (371); 120 v 649 (651); 121 v 270 (274), § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10506-36 (114 v 320).

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. No limitation of time exists which will bar the issuing of a citation requiring a guardian to file an account of his trust: McClelland v. State, 101 OS 42, 127 NE 409.

2. An administratrix may not be deprived of the compensation due to her under RC § 2113.35 for her services for mere delay in making and returning the inventory of the estate, when she has not been given an order requiring her, at an early date therein named, to return same, as prescribed by RC § 2115.03, or has not been notified by the court of the expiration of the time to file such inventory, as prescribed by RC § 2109.24: In re Burchett, 16 OApp(2d) 45, 45 OO(2d) 133, 241 NE(2d) 787.

3. This section, providing that a guardian who fails to file his account within thirty days after he has been served with a citation to file the same is not entitled to compensation if the court finds that the delay is unreasonable, has application only after a citation is served on the guardian, and compensation cannot be denied under this section merely because the guardian failed to comply with the verbal request of the court: In re O'Brien, 74 OLA 366, 140 NE (2d) 806 (App).

§ 2109.32 Hearing on account; notice.

Every fiduciary's account required by section 2109.30 of the Revised Code shall be set for hearing before the probate court. Within one month after an account is filed, the court shall cause notice of the filing of the account and the time and place of the hearing thereon to be published once in some newspaper of general circulation in the county. The hearing on the account shall be set not earlier than thirty days after the publication of the notice. The costs of the notice, if more than one account is specified in the same notice, shall be paid in equal proportions by the fiduciaries.

At the hearing upon an account, the court shall inquire into, consider, and determine all matters relative to the account and the manner in which the fiduciary has executed his trust, including the investment of trust funds, and may order the account approved and settled or make any other order as the court deems proper. If, at the hearing upon an account, the court finds that the fiduciary has fully and lawfully administered the estate or trust and has distributed the assets thereof in accordance with the law or the instrument governing distribution, as shown in the account, the court shall order the account approved and settled and may order the fiduciary discharged.

The probate court shall not approve the final account of any executor or administrator until the following events have occurred:

(A) Four months have passed since the appointment of the executor or administrator;

(B) The surviving spouse has filed an election to take under or against the will, or the time for making the election has expired.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. Under Const., Art. IV, § 8 and GC §§ 10501-53 and 10506-39 (RC §§ 2101.24 and 2109.32), the probate court has plenary power at law and in equity to hear, determine and finally dispose of all matters relative to the manner in which a guardian has executed his trust and to require such guardian to account not only for all of the estate of his ward which came into the guardian's hands, but as well for all the estate of his ward which should have come into his hands through the exercise of reasonable diligence and that care of his ward's estate which a reasonable man would have used in the account of his own affairs: In re Zimmerman, 141 OS 207, 25 OO 326, 47 NE (2d) 782.

2. There are no provisions in GC § 10506-39 (RC § 2109.32), or any other statute, specifically making the matter of the allowance of a claim against an estate the subject of exceptions to an account: In re Blue, 67 App 37, 14 OO 447, 32 NE(2d) 499.

3. Where the final and distributive account of the administrators of an estate has been approved and settled and they have been discharged from their trust pursuant to this section, and that order of approval, settlement and discharge has not been vacated pursuant to RC § 2109.35, where some asset remains upon which administration has not been exhausted and for some lawful purpose relating to that asset administration is required, an administrator may be appointed to complete such administration only in a manner similar to, and with the same formalities as, the original appointment of an administrator: In re George, 20 OApp(2d) 87, 49 OO(2d) 110, 252 NE(2d) 176 [reversed 24 OS(2d) 18, 53 OO(2d) 10, 262 NE(2d) 872].

4. Items which were included in a first account which was approved by the court and not appealed are res judicata though* included also in a second account: In re Norris, 84 OLA 92, 169 NE(2d) 639 (App).

3. A court is without jurisdiction to hear and determine a motion to fix the compensation due an executor and trustee for extraordinary services in such capacity, where no notice of the pendency of such motion was given to the beneficiaries under the will: Ballard v. Mack, 3 OLR 249, 17 CD 839.

§ 2109.33 Service of additional notice; exceptions to account. (GC §§ 10506-37, 10506-38)

In addition to the notice required by section 2109.32 of the Revised Code, a fiduciary may serve notice of the hearing upon his account, or may cause such notice to be served, upon any person who is interested in the estate or trust. The probate court, after notice to the fiduciary, either upon the motion of any interested person for good cause shown or at its own instance, may order that such additional notice be served upon such persons as the court designates.

Such notice shall set forth the time and place of the hearing and shall specify the account to be considered and acted upon by the court at the hearing and the period of time covered by such account. It shall contain a statement to the effect that the person notified is required to examine such account, to inquire into the contents thereof and into all matters that may come before the court at the hearing thereon, and to file any exceptions which such person may have to such account at least five days prior to the hearing on the account, and that upon his failure to file exceptions thereto, the account may be approved without further notice. If the person to be notified was not a party to the proceeding wherein any prior account was settled, such notice, for the purpose of barring any rights possessed by such person, may include and specify such prior accounts and the periods of time covered thereby. In such event, the notice shall inform the person notified that the approval of the account filed most recently will terminate any rights possessed by him to vacate the order settling each prior account so specified, except as provided in section 2109.35 of the Revised Code, and shall further inform such person that, under penalty of losing such rights, he forthwith shall examine each prior account so specified, shall inquire into the contents thereof, and, if he deems it necessary to protect his rights, shall take such action with respect thereto as is permitted by law.

Such notice of the hearing upon an account shall be served at least fifteen days prior to the hearing thereon. Prior to the hearing, an affidavit proving service of such notice shall be filed by the fiduciary or by the person who was ordered by the court to serve the notice. Any competent person may waive service of notice and consent to the approval of any account by the court. Waivers of service, consents to approval, and affidavits proving service of notice shall be recorded with the account.

Any person interested in an estate or trust may file exceptions to an account or to matters pertaining to the execution of the trust. All exceptions shall be specific and written. Exceptions shall be filed and a copy thereof furnished to the fiduciary by the exceptor, not less than five days prior to the hearing on the account. The court for cause may allow further time to file exceptions. If exceptions are filed to an account the court may allow further time for serving notice of the hearing upon any person who may be affected by an order disposing of such exceptions and who has not already been served with notice of the hearing in accordance with this section.

1. The First National Bank, as trustee, was under an unqualified duty, upon acceptance of the trust property from itself, as executor, to take action to recover for the benefit of the beneficiaries that portion of the trust property which had been wrongfully disbursed by the bank while acting as executor. Inasmuch as appellee's liability is based upon its failure to discharge its responsibilities as trustee, the failure of appellant to file exceptions to the final account of the executor does not preclude her from filing exceptions to appellee's account in its capacity as trustee: In re First National Bank of Mansfield, 37 OS(2d) 60, 66 OO(2d) 162, 307 NE(2d) 23 (1974).

2. A bonding company, surety on the bond of joint guardians as to whose accounts exceptions have been sustained and findings made that large sums of money were due from said guardians to the wards, is an interested party under the provisions of GC § 10506-37 (RC § 2109.33): In re Zimmerman, 78 App 297, 34 OO 17, 70 NE(2d) 153.

3. Where a guardian of an estate is appointed solely on the ground of the ward's physical incapacity, the ward's mental capacity is not impaired, and such appointment is made with the consent of the ward, a daughter of such ward may, under this section which provides that any person interested in an estate may file exceptions to an account, file exceptions to such guardian's account: In re Tillman, 100 App 291, 60 OO 254, 136 NE(2d) 291.

4. A surviving spouse who has entered into an antenuptial agreement whereby she relinquishes all claims which she might or could have in or to her deceased husband's estate is not an "interested person" within the scope of this section: In re Matusoff, 10 OApp(2d) 113, 39 OO(2d) 187, 226 NE(2d) 140.

5. Where specific written exceptions to a final account of an executor have been timely filed, it is within the power of the probate court to sustain such exceptions to the account and modify an allowance of fees made at a prior term of court, where such an allowance was made without notice to the interested party and no objections were made by such party at the time of the determination of the amount of the fees: In re Alexander, 103 App 514, 4 OO(2d) 19, 146 NE(2d) 315.

6. An executor has no right of appeal from an order of the probate court fixing the amount of attorney fees, on the ground that the amount of the fees fixed is excessive: In re Verbeck, 114 App 155, 18 OO(2d) 465, 180 NE(2d) 599.

7. The overruling of exceptions to the inventory and final account of an administrator filed after approval and confirmation of such account is proper where the record discloses a strict compliance with the provisions of GC § 10506-37 (RC § 2109.33) on the subject of notice, and the bill of exceptions fails to reveal that the exceptors did not have actual notice of the filing and time set for hearing, thereby placing the exceptors outside the scope of the saving provision of GC § 10506-40 (RC § 2109.35): In re Kopczynski, 38 OLA 306, 49 NE(2d) 960 (App).

8. When a trust is created under a will and the trustee is given the power to nominate beneficiaries of the remainder of the trust, anyone so nominated by the will of said trustee is a beneficiary of the trust, takes under the trust and not under the trustee's will, and as such beneficiary is entitled to file exceptions to the trustee's final account (filed after death of trustee when rights of beneficiaries fixed): In re Post, 56 OLA 240, 91 NE(2d) 698 (App).

9. Exception to account will be sustained where all transactions are not fully set forth: In re Brown, 67 OLA 291, [affirmed 75 OLA 282].

10. A court is without jurisdiction to hear and determine a motion to fix the compensation due an executor and trustee for extraordinary services in such capacity, where no notice of the pendency of such motion was given to the beneficiaries under the will: Ballard v. Mack, 3 OLR 249, 17 CD 839.

§ 2109.34 Representation in account proceeding. (GC § 10506-38a)

If an interest in an estate or trust is or may be possessed by persons who will compose a certain class upon the happening of any future event, the unborn members of such class shall be deemed to be represented in any hearing upon a fiduciary's account required by section 2109.32 of the Revised Code, if any living member of the class is made a party to such proceeding or if a trustee for the proceeding is appointed by the probate court. The unborn members of such class need not be served by publication. An order made in such proceeding shall be binding upon all members of such class, except that such order may be vacated for fraud as provided in section 2109.35 of the Revised Code.

If the beneficiaries, both present and future, of a charitable trust are not represented by a trustee or an existing corporation or other organization they shall be represented in any such proceeding by the attorney general if he is made a party thereto. Any order made in the proceeding shall be binding upon such beneficiaries, except for fraud.

§ 2109.35 Effect of order settling account. (GC § 10506-40)

The order of the probate court upon the settlement of a fiduciary's account shall have the effect of a judgment and may be vacated only as follows:

(A) Such order may be vacated for fraud, upon motion of any person affected thereby or upon the court's own order, if such motion is filed or order is made within one year after discovery of the existence of the fraud. Any person who is subject to any legal disability may file such motion at any time within one year after the removal of such disability or within one year after he discovers the existence of the fraud, whichever is later, or his guardian or a successor guardian may do so during the period of such disability. If the death of any person occurs during the period within which he could have filed such motion, his administrator or executor may file such motion within one year after death.

(B) Such order may be vacated for good cause shown, other than fraud, upon motion of any person affected thereby who was not a party to the proceeding wherein such order was made and who had no knowledge of such proceeding in time to appear therein; provided that if the account settled by such order is included and specified in the notice to such person of the proceeding wherein a subsequent account is settled, the right of such person to vacate such order shall terminate upon the settlement of the subsequent account. A person affected by an order settling an account shall be deemed to have been a party to the proceeding wherein such order was made if such person was served with notice of the hearing thereon in accordance with section 2109.33 of the Revised Code, waived such notice, consented to the approval of the account, filed exceptions thereto, or is bound by section 2109.34 of the Revised Code; but no person in being who is under legal disability at the time of such proceeding shall be deemed to have been a party thereto unless he was represented therein as provided in section 2111.23 of the Revised Code. Neither the fiduciary nor his surety shall incur any liability as a result of the vacation of an order settling an account in accordance with division (B) of this section, if the motion to vacate such order is filed more than three years following the settlement of the fiduciary's account showing complete distribution of assets; but the limitation prescribed shall not affect the liability of any heir, devisee, or distributee either before or after the expiration of such period.

(C) Such order may be vacated for good cause shown, other than fraud, upon motion of any person affected thereby who was a party to the proceeding wherein such order was made solely by reason of his having been served by publication in a newspaper in accordance with section 2109.33 of the Revised Code, if such motion is filed within one year after such person acquires knowledge of such proceeding and in any event within three years after such order is made. Such person must establish to the satisfaction of the court that he had no knowledge of the proceeding in time to appear therein.

(D) Such order may be vacated for good cause shown upon motion of the fiduciary, if such motion is filed prior to the settlement of the account showing that the fiduciary has fully discharged his trust.

A motion to vacate an order settling an account shall set forth the items of the account with respect to which complaint is made and the reasons for complaining thereof, verified by affidavit.

The person filing a motion to vacate an order settling an account, or such other person as the court may designate, shall cause notice of the hearing thereon to be served upon all interested parties who may be adversely affected by the order of the court granting such motion.

An order settling an account shall not be vacated unless the court determines that there is good cause for doing so and the burden of proving good cause shall be upon the complaining party.

The vacation of an order settling an account, made after notice given in the manner provided in section 2109.32 or 2109.33 of the Revised Code, shall not affect the rights of a purchaser for value in good faith, a lessee for value in good faith, or an encumbrancer for value in good faith; provided that if the fiduciary has effected any such sale, lease, or encumbrance, any person prejudiced thereby may, after vacation of such order, proceed against any distributee benefiting therefrom to the extent of the amount received by such distributee on distribution of the estate or trust, or if any heir, devisee, or distributee has effected any such sale, lease, or encumbrance, any person prejudiced thereby may, after the vacation of such order, proceed against such heir, devisee, or distributee, to the extent of the value at the time of alienation of the property aliened by him, with legal interest.

1. In a proceeding arising under this section, prior to its amendment in 120 v 653, where fraud or collusion or a violation of rights which are saved by statute to persons under disability is shown to have been practiced in the administration of an executor's trust, the determination of the probate court approving the final account is thereby vacated: In re Stafford, 146 OS 253, 32 OO 262, 65 NE(2d) 701.

2. Prior to the amendment of this section (120 v 653), effective September 20, 1943, the statutory law of this state prescribed no limitation of time within which the approval of the final account of an executor could be challenged and vacated on the ground: (a) that fraud or collusion had been practiced in connection with such final account; or (b) that such approval was against rights which are saved by statute to persons under disability: In re Stafford, 146 OS 253, 32 OO 262, 65 NE(2d) 701.

2.1 Where the assets of an estate have (in accordance with the terms of a will) been distributed to life tenants, the estate has been closed and the final account has been settled and determined, and the life tenants die, in the absence of a motion, filed in accordance with this section to vacate the order of the probate court, such court lacks jurisdiction to entertain an application by the remaindermen to commit securities formerly in the estate to a trustee: State ex rel Beedle v. Kiracofe, 176 OS 149, 27 OO (2d) 25, 198 NE(2d) 61.

3. Probate court could open up and reconsider accounts of executor previously adjudicated in partial account: United States Fidelity & Co. v. Wood, 35 App 224, 172 NE 383.

4. This section does not specifically provide as to whether or not the probate court would have jurisdiction to set aside its judgment of settlement of the final account on the ground of fraud after the lapse of some two and one-half years: Abicht v. O'Donnell, 52 App 513, 6 OO 462, 3 NE(2d) 993.

5. Under Art. IV, § 8, of the constitution and this section, and related sections of the probate code, the probate court has jurisdiction to reopen a final account on application of a creditor on grounds of fraud and manifest error, though such application is filed after confirmation of the final account. In any event the common pleas court has jurisdiction to pass upon such questions on appeal from the probate court: In re Steltenpohl, 53 App 541, 7 OO 120, 5 NE(2d) 954.

6. Where no exceptions are filed to an executor's first partial account, its settlement by the probate court is not of an adversary character but ex parte only: In re Russell, 60 App 385, 13 OO 239, 21 NE (2d) 604.

7. Where a widow elects to take under the will of her deceased husband, the appraisers of the personal property of her husband's estate fail to make an allowance to her for a year's support and to set off exempted property pursuant to the provisions of GC § 10509-54 (RC § 2115.13), and the omission of the executrix to have the same done by the appraisers or the court is not occasioned by fraud, the rights of the widow are governed by subdivision (B) of this section, and the failure of the widow or her representatives to file exceptions to the final account of the executrix of the husband's estate in accordance therewith within the prescribed time limit will bar any recovery thereafter: Eckhart v. Wiles, 61 App 32, 15 OO 61, 22 NE(2d) 289 [appeal dismissed, 134 OS 491].

8. By virtue of this section, an order of the probate court settling the first and final account of the executrix of an estate of a husband from which account it appears that no allowance has been made to the widow for her year's support and no property set off to her as exempt, and there is no balance in the hands of the executrix and that said estate has been fully administered, operates as a judgment at law or decree in equity adjudicating that the widow had no right to any distributive share, allowance for year's support, or to exempt property in the estate: Eckhart v. Wiles, 61 App 32, 15 OO 61, 22 NE(2d) 289 [appeal dismissed, 134 OS 491].

9. An administrator of the estate of a surviving spouse who died subsequent to her husband and before receiving her statutory widow's exemption and allowance is entitled under this section, in case of fraud or collusion, to have the husband's estate reopened more than eight months after the filing of the final account in his estate, have an administrator de bonis non appointed therefor, and obtain the widow's exemption and allowance as a part of her estate: In re Shive, 65 App 166, 18 OO 358, 29 NE (2d) 565.

10. A representation by an administrator that decedent left no surviving spouse, when in fact the surviving spouse lived for seven months after her husband's death, is a misstatement of fact sufficient to constitute a fraud on the probate court within this section, authorizing that court to reopen a decedent's estate: In re Shive, 65 App 166, 18 OO 358, 29 NE (2d) 565.

11. Revised Code § 2315.22 (separate findings) has no application to proceedings under this section (vacation of order settling accounts): In re Sloane, 109 App 110, 112, 10 OO(2d) 269, 163 NE(2d) 915.

12. Although prior accounts have been formally approved by the court, without exceptions being filed thereto, the exceptors in filing exceptions to a second and final account can open up previous accounts for the purpose of having the court determine matters with reference to the investment of trust funds: In re Conover, 10 OO 481 (PC).

13. An allegation of constructive fraud is insufficient under this section to permit the probate court to say that its determination on the settlement of the final account is of no effect as against a claimant who seeks to have the confirmation of the final account set aside: Pangelly v. Thomas, 15 OO 216 (PC).

14. Beneficiaries may invoke their remedy through exceptions to an account, with a request that former accounts be opened up for correction of errors or mistakes and fraud on the part of the administrator, in concealing from the court the fact that he did not have the funds on hand as set out in his accounts: In re Chambers, 16 OO 519 (App) [appeal dismissed, 136 OS 202].

15. Orders of the probate court approving and confirming an executor's accounts did not, under this section or otherwise, bind or conclude the state with respect to an assessment of shares of stock which were a part of the estate: Gamble v. Evatt, 23 OO 392, 8 OSupp 1 (BTA).

15.1 A judgment of the probate court settling the accounts of a fiduciary may be vacated by the probate court during the time specified and for the reasons set forth in RC § 2109.35: Border v. Ohio Sav. & Trust Co., 55 OO(2d) 410, 26 OMisc 273, 267 NE(2d) 120 (CP).

15.2 A declaratory judgment proceeding is not one of the methods provided in RC § 2109.35 for vacating an order of the probate court upon the settlement of a fiduciary's account: Third Nat. Bank v. Gardner, 53 OO(2d) 261, 24 OMisc 223, 262 NE(2d) 430 (CP).

16. This section, relative to opening up an account, is not applicable to a case arising before it became effective: In re Jaymes, 18 OLA 613.

17. The pro forma approval by probate court of partial accounts of the guardian of an incompetent, not excepted to, is not final under this section "in case of fraud," and may be inquired into on exceptions filed to a later account: In re Lodge, 19 OLA 316.

18. Claimants who filed their exceptions to final accounts in the probate court had the right to rely upon the provisions of this section and to assume that the settlement of the final account by the probate court would be res judicata unless the judgment of that court was appealed: In re Binder, 25 OLA 472 (CP).

19. Under this section the general rule that in cases where trial has been had upon issues of fact drawn between the parties, such factual question may not be reviewed on appeal until the trial court has been given an opportunity to reconsider the weight of the evidence, is not applicable to an appeal from an order of the probate court overruling exceptions to a guardian's final account, and consequently the bill of exceptions to such an order will not be stricken because no motion for a new trial was filed after the action by the trial court in overruling the exceptions to the account: In re Bireley, 41 OLA 601, 59 NE (2d) 71 (App).

20. A holding that for "good cause" or "suspicion of fraud" the settlement entry of judgment is vacated, does not comply with the requirements of this section and a vacation of the settlement of the account of the administrator of an estate for such reasons, without a finding by clear and convincing evidence that fraud has been established, must be reversed as contrary to law: In re Nyhuis, 65 OLA 65, 113 NE (2d) 700 (App).

21. Under the provisions of this section, providing for the settlement of accounts by an executor, the knowledge of the proceeding on the part of the party affected means actual knowledge of the filing of such accounts, either by the party or his duly authorized agent: In re Bentley, 66 OLA 363, 116 NE(2d) 738 (App).

22. Failure of executor to set aside assets to meet a contingent claim is not ground for vacation of an order of approval of an account: In re Robbins, 28 OO(2d) 399, 94 OLA 561, 200 NE(2d) 735.

23. Under this section the probate court has jurisdiction upon settlement of the tenth account to open all former accounts for the purpose of correcting errors therein on condition that such errors did not constitute "matter in dispute" previously determined by the court, and also has jurisdiction to reopen such accounts "in case of fraud": Massachusetts Bonding & Co. v. Winters Nat. Bank & Co., 130 F(2d) 5, 24 OO 225.

24. For history of this section, see In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

25. The lack of an adverse party of sufficient mental capacity to challenge the items of a partial account, relating to character of investments there shown, was a good cause for leave to open a former disputed account: In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

26. The language of this section must be construed to include not merely clerical errors contained in former accounts, but matters of substance as well, such as the question of the lawfulness of an investment shown in such previous accounts: In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

27. The filing of a partial account by the guardian of the estate of an incompetent is an ex parte proceeding which becomes adversary only upon the filing of exceptions: In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

28. Exceptions filed to a subsequent account will reach all former accounts which were ex parte and not made adversary by the filing of exceptions thereto: In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

Jurisdiction

1. On exceptions to an account, where it is charged that an executor or administrator has failed to charge himself with a debt of his own to the deceased, the court may hear evidence and determine the validity of the claim: Raab's Estate, 16 OS 273.

2. The probate court has power, upon hearing exceptions, to determine as to fraud of the executor, and to charge him in his account accordingly: Reed v. Brown, 10 CC 44, 6 CD 15.

3. Fraud by one standing in a fiduciary relation will avoid the settlement of the account induced thereby, and such final settlement may be attacked in a court of equity in an independent action upon a complaint that the final settlement was obtained by fraud; and the common pleas has jurisdiction in such action: Rote v. Stratton, 2 NP 27, 3 OD 156.

4. There is no authority in the probate court to set aside the final account of an administrator and reopen the estate, where no exception was filed by a party in interest within eight months of the settlement of said account, which is conclusive unless attacked for fraud or corrected by the court upon the filing of a subsequent and correct account. But where a mistake has been made in the former and final account as to the existence of debts against the estate and credits due the administrator, said former and final account may be opened up by the probate court upon the filing of a subsequent account showing the existence of such debts and credits: Hunter v. Yocum, 18 NP(NS) 14, 27 OD 31.

Opening account

5. The settlement of an account is conclusive as to all matters set out and specified therein, and the party rendering same cannot be required to account a second time unless the account be impeached for fraud or manifest error: McAfee v. Phillips, 25 OS 374.

6. A settlement by agreement with the heirs is final except as to minors, who may, on coming of age, disaffirm same and compel a final settlement to be made in a proper court: Piatt v. Longworth, 27 OS 159.

7. After the expiration of the eight months allowed by this section for filing exceptions when the account is settled in the absence of a person interested and without actual notice to him, the judgment of a probate court settling the final account of an executor or an administrator becomes absolute and conclusive and cannot be attacked except for fraud of the prevailing party: Crawford v. Zeigler, 84 OS 224, 95 NE 743.

8. An account containing items of credit for statutory commissions, extra services and attorney's fees, which was duly allowed and confirmed by the probate court, cannot, on the filing of a second account more than one year thereafter, be reopened for hearing, and such items be disallowed, on exceptions filed thereto, when it is not claimed or found that there was any error or mistake therein, or in their allowance: Campbell v. McCormick, 1 CC 504, 1 CD 281.

9. One cannot maintain a suit in equity to open an executor's account unless the judgment of the probate court was obtained by fraud. Where the objection to the accounts is not that the executor omitted items but that payments by him were not authorized by the will, this raised no question of fraud, and it will be presumed that the probate court passed on this question: Woodward v. Curtis, 19 CC 15, 10 CD 400 [affirmed, without opinion, 63 OS 575].

10. The settlement of the final account of an executor or administrator, which shows a false payment of a debt against the estate, no such debt having existed, is not a bar to a subsequent action against such executor or administrator for the recovery of such money by one who is legally entitled thereto: Burton v. Greif, 11 App 102, 30 OCA 577 [motion to certify record overruled, Greif v. Burton, 17 OLR 94, 64 Bull 218].

11. Allowances to a widow made in a proceeding to sell real estate belonging to her deceased husband to pay debts, to which no error was prosecuted or appeal taken, cannot be attacked collaterally by exception to her account as administratrix of the said estate: In re Hess, 14 CC(NS) 463, 23 CD 449.

12. An administrator de bonis non procured a reopening of his predecessor's account and a finding of an amount due the predecessor. After appeal and the death of the administrator de bonis non, held, the proceedings were not ended by his death and may be revived: In re Ziegler, 4 NP 182, 6 OD 244 [for opinion on motion to dismiss appeal, see 3 NP 307, 6 OD 54].

13. Where an administrator died pending exceptions to his account and his executrix filed a final account for him as administrator, to which similar exceptions were taken, the executor was incompetent to testify in support of his exceptions: Estate of Runyan, 4 NP 335, 7 OD 236.

14. The finding made upon a final account cannot be attacked in a collateral action. An unpaid creditor of the settled estate cannot intervene in a suit by the administrator of an heir to sell the real estate inherited from the ancestor to pay debts: Smith v. Hayward, 5 NP 501, 5 OD 462.

15. The settled accounts of an administrator are conclusive between him and the estate, except as provided by the statutes: Lamkin v. Robinson, 10 NP(NS) 1, 21 OD 13 [appealed, 15 CC(NS) 126, 24 CD 91, which was affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 603, and Stevens v. Robinson, 88 OS 603; for a later opinion, see Lamkin v. Robinson, 16 App 440, 32 OCA 401, 35 CD 767; motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 367].

16. If the facts prescribed in this section for opening an account do not exist, an account can be corrected only under former GC § 10835 (see now RC § 2109.35), and mistakes or errors must be shown. An intentional payment of claims which it is now claimed should not have been allowed or paid is not an error or mistake: In re Campbell, 13 NP(NS) 386, 22 OD 578, 57 Bull 353 (Ed) [judgment of circuit court affirmed, without opinion, 90 OS 406].

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10835

1. This section does not authorize the probate court to open up or vacate, at the instance of either party, a former order by the court of common pleas on appeal, in the settlement of a former account: In Matter of Stayner, 33 OS 481.

2. Upon every settlement of an account by an executor or administrator, all his former accounts may be so far opened as to correct any mistake or error therein, except as to matters in dispute between two parties which had been previously heard and determined by the court: Watts v. Watts, 38 OS 480.

3. This includes the power to correct all errors or mistakes of the court, as well as of the executor or administrator, found in former settlements, whether as to items embraced in or omitted from such former accounts: Watts v. Watts, 38 OS 480.

4. An Ohio probate court, although it has admitted to probate an Ohio will, and has issued letters testamentary to the executor named therein, has not power to review the accounts of such executor respecting property situate in the state of Michigan, and for which he has duly accounted to the proper court of that state: Estate of Crawford, 68 OS 58, 67 NE 156, 96 AmSt 648 [affirming 21 CC 554, 11 CD 605].

5. Upon settlement of an account, all former accounts may be opened to correct mistake or error, even though no exception was filed to the original account: Lambright v. Lambright, 74 OS 198, 78

6. The probate court will not go back of a settlement made in the common pleas court, which involves the same matters of dispute, but will look to the entry of the upper court for its limitation: In Matter of Seeger, 7 NP 207, 1 OD 113.

7. This section is remedial and should receive a reasonable construction, so as to suppress the mischief and advance the remedy. Uncontested partial settlement accounts may, upon proper exceptions at final hearing, be opened up for fraud, mistake or error under favor of this section, and where such accounts have been contested and adjudicated, they may be opened up by leave of court: In re Leidigh, 15 OD (NP) 193.

8. The administrator's settlement will not be opened up forty years after the estate was closed in order to let in the claim of the widow for her first year's support, where no such claim was asserted at the time the estate was being settled: Evans v. Evans, 13 CC(NS) 62, 21 CD 635.

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 11033

1. Under this section accounts of a trustee, previously filed, can be opened up so far as to correct any mistakes or errors, none of which had been previously subjected to any special hearing or determination by the probate court: Watts v. Watts, 38 OS 480; Lambright v. Lambright, 74 OS 198, 78 NE 265; In re Couden, 9 App 207.

2. A judgment in a former proceeding, determining the amount due from the trustee, may be treated as res judicata: Smith v. Worley, 12 App 367.

3. The sureties of a guardian may on their own motion become parties to the settlement of final account for the purpose of correcting errors in that of a former account: Porter v. Brown, 9 DecRep 646, 16 Bull 69.

4. Jurisdiction in common pleas court is auxiliary to that conferred on the probate court, only to be exercised in exceptional cases where the probate jurisdiction is inadequate: Rato v. Stratton, 2 NP 27, 3 OD 156.

§ 2109.36 Order of distribution. (GC § 10506-40a)

An application for an order of distribution of the assets of an estate or trust held by a fiduciary may be set for hearing before the probate court at such time as the court shall designate. The fiduciary may serve notice of the hearing upon such application, or cause such notice to be served, upon any person who may be affected by an order disposing thereof; or the court, upon motion of any interested person for good cause shown or at its own instance, may order such notice to be served upon any such person. Such notice shall set forth the time and place of the hearing and shall be accompanied by a statement of the proposed distribution. At the hearing upon the application the court shall inquire into, consider, and determine all matters relative thereto, and make such order as the court deems proper. If the court makes an order of distribution, the fiduciary shall comply therewith and shall account to the court for his distribution, verified by vouchers or proof. An order of distribution shall have the effect of a judgment. Such order may be reviewed upon appeal and may be vacated as provided in section 2109.35 of the Revised Code.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-40a; 120 v 649 (653); 121 v 270 (277), § 1. Eff 10-1-53.

Comment

The purpose of this section is to enable the fiduciary to protect himself, by obtaining an order of distribution which will be binding upon persons interested in the estate or trust, before he parts with possession of the assets.

The procedure is substantially the same as that provided for the settlement of an account. After filing an application for an order of distribution, the fiduciary may, at his option, serve notice of the hearing on the application, or cause notice to be served, upon any person who may be affected thereby. If the fiduciary does not elect to do so, the court may order such notice to be served. Such notice shall set forth the time and place of hearing and shall be accompanied by a statement of the proposed distribution. Compare RC § 2109.33, which contains similar provisions relative to notice of the hearing on an account.

The order of distribution shall have the force and effect of a judgment, except that it may be vacated as provided in RC § 2109.35 for vacation of an order settling an account. As in the case of an account, this section does not require that notice of the hearing be served on anyone. A person who is served with notice will not be entitled to vacate the order under RC § 2109.35, paragraph (B). A person who is not served may avail himself of RC § 2109.35. Until the order is vacated, however, it has the same effect, regardless of whether or not notice is served on the parties in interest.

It should be noted that the order of distribution does not relieve the fiduciary of the duty to account for the distribution when it is made.

1. Where a testator, in leaving the residue of his estate in trust, provides for no specific amount of income to be paid to charitable beneficiaries and provides for no specific amount of the corpus of the trust to be distributed to the charitable beneficiaries but does provide "that all investments or capital . . . shall be in interest bearing securities issued by the United States of America or by any state of the United States of America or by any governmental subdivision of the state of Ohio," a court is not justified in the absence of an existing emergency in permitting the trustee to deviate from this restrictive investment provision because of general inflationary factors and changing economic conditions covering a twenty-year period: Toledo Trust Co. v. Toledo Hospital, 174 OS 124, 21 OO(2d) 386, 187 NE(2d) 36 [affirming 117 App 425, 24 OO(2d) 237, 192 NE(2d) 674].

1.1 In the absence of fraud or bad faith, an executor of an estate may not be called to account for not selling stocks belonging to the estate: In re Bentley, 163 OS 568, 57 OO 5, 127 NE(2d) 749.

1.2 The investment of guardianship funds in land trust certificates, when GC § 11214 (see now RC § 2109.37) was in effect and authorized guardians to invest in securities approved by the probate court, may be approved by that court in an adversary proceeding after the repeal of that section and the enactment of this section, which omitted the authorization as to investing in securities approved by that court: In re Baker, 65 App 550, 19 OO 252, 31 NE(2d) 869.

1.3 Under the provisions of this section a trustee had no authority to use income from trust to purchase life insurance contract on his life, such income not being funds in the hands of the trustee which he is authorized to invest, rather such income is payable only to the life tenant. Holmes v. Hrobon, 93 App 1, 50 OO 178, 103 NE(2d) 845.

1.4 In an action brought in the probate court by a testamentary trustee pursuant to request of the beneficiaries thereof seeking authority to deviate from the administrative provisions of the will with respect to permissible investments and permission to invest in those investments authorized under RC §§ 2109.37 and 2109.37.1, the court is without authority to permit a trustee to deviate from the terms of such trust unless it clearly appears that compliance would be illegal, impossible, or would defeat or substantially impair the accomplishment of the purpose of such trust: Toledo Trust Co. v. Toledo Hosp., 117 App 425, 24 OO(2d) 237, 192 NE(2d) 674 [affirmed case note 1, supra].

1.5 An executor is entitled to credits for losses on investments of funds of the estate only when he acted in good faith and exercised the care men of ordinary prudence would exercise in the management of their own affairs. The burden of establishing the validity of such credits is upon the executor: In re Howison, 49 App 421, 3 OO 301, 197 NE 333.

1.6 A guardian who invests the funds of his ward by depositing them in a bank, such investment not being authorized by GC § 10506-41, or by the probate court, is liable for any loss that may be occasioned thereby, regardless of the question of due care on the part of the guardian: In re Flavin, 59 App 443, 12 OO 262, 18 NE(2d) 514.

2. An action for a declaratory judgment, brought by the beneficiaries of a testamentary trust estate, to determine the right of the corporate fiduciary to invest in certain securities not specified in this section, is authorized by the provisions of GC § 12102-4 (RC § 2721.05), subsecs. (B) and (C): Neff v. Cleveland Trust Co., 21 OO 461 (CP).

3. The policy of detailed and explicit statement further defining the investment authority of corporate fiduciaries, as evidenced by the language used in this section, subsec. (N), and GC §§ 10506-45, 10506-49 (RC §§ 2109.41, 2109.44), negatives the inference that by the general terms of the proviso "except as may be otherwise provided by law," in the opening sentence of this section, the legislature intended to grant to corporate fiduciaries the additional investment authority set forth in the applicable sections of the banking act: Neff v. Cleveland Trust Co., 21 OO 461 (CP).

4. A corporate fiduciary is limited in its investment authority to those securities specifically designated in this section: Neff v. Cleveland Trust Co., 21 OO 461 (CP).

5. This section, as to the character of investments by a fiduciary, applies only to a fiduciary appointed by and accountable to an Ohio probate court: Girard Trust Co. v. Dunham, 29 OO 324, 15 OSupp 5 (CP).

5.1 Where the trustee has substantial funds which are not needed for refunding the original bonds for some considerable length of time, it has the inherent power to invest said funds so long as said investment complies with the terms of this section which sets out the investments in which fiduciaries may invest funds in their hands and the terms of the trust agreement: State ex rel Edwards v. County Commrs., 33 OO(2d) 322, 4 OMisc 221, 212 NE(2d) 196 (CP).

5.2 Where testatrix in her will gives the testamentary trustee full power to sell any trust property and to reinvest the proceeds thereof, the trustee has authority to invest any funds of the trust estate without regard to the limitations in kind, class, category, or amount contained in RC §§ 2109.37 and 2109.37.1: Vacha v. Vacha, 19 OO(2d) 35 (PC).

5.3 Pooling of funds of various trusts was not approved in this case: In re Wright, 26 OLA 285.

5.4 Investments in land trust certificates and bank stock were disapproved: In re Dimond, 37 OLA 248, 46 NE(2d) 788 (App).

5.5 A corporate trustee has, under the provisions of this section, the capacity and power to be a limited partner insofar as the trust estate is concerned, and to accept and hold as part of the trust estate the interest in a limited partnership assigned to it by the executors of the estate. Cleveland Trust Co. v. Ingalls, 91 OLA 70, 23 OO(2d) 124 (PC).

6. A confirmation of an investment by the court may be made after the effective date of this section, and the approval of the guardian's account setting forth such investment is an approval of the investment: Warner v. Hoffman, 18 OLA 403.

7. A guardian may not legally invest the funds of his ward in federal home loan bonds, since his investments are specifically limited to those mentioned in this section: 1933 OAG No.1830.

8. This section, as amended (115 v 396), requires all fiduciaries, including trust companies administering estates with funds to be invested, to obtain the approval of the probate court for investing in the classes of investments authorized: 1934 OAG No. 2780.

9. Under the terms of this section, subdiv. (E) [now (L) et seq], a fiduciary may invest such funds belonging to his trust, as are to be invested, in shares and certificates or other evidences of deposit issued by a state chartered building and loan association, but where such building and loan association has no insurance of accounts, the fiduciary may invest such funds in shares or certificates of such association, provided he secure the approval of the probate court; the amount of such investment shall not exceed five thousand dollars: 1939 OAG No.1037.

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10933

1. A guardian is bound to employ money of an infant so as to make interest if practicable, and he is chargeable with interest if he fails to do so: Armstrong v. Miller, 6 O 118.

2. If a guardian convert land scrip, receivable at the land office in the purchase of public lands, into money, by investing it in land for himself and others, and accounting with his wards for the scrip, with interest from the time of its investment, he cannot, if he acted in good faith, be charged as a trustee of the land purchased, or compelled to account for the profits growing out of the purchase: Davies v. Lowrey, 15 O 655.

3. One who buys notes bearing on their face the marks of a trust fund, is put upon inquiry: Strong v. Strauss, 40 OS 87.

4. Where a guardian has had the opportunity to show, by his own oath or otherwise, his inability to invest, and does not, inability to invest will not be presumed to excuse him from interest: Armstrong v. Miller, W 562.

5. The use by a guardian of ward's money in his own business and its loss thereby, to constitute embezzlement must be with fraudulent purpose, although the statute is silent as to intent: State v. Meyer, 23 Bull 251.

6. Where a guardian holding purchase money, notes and a mortgage received on sale of the vendor's land, sold them before maturity by representing that the proceeds were to be used to pay debts of the ward, but he appropriated part of the proceeds. Held: As to such part, the buyers could not recover on foreclosure: McFarland v. Harper, 33 Bull 87.

7. Where a guardian-bank became insolvent after making unlawful investment of ward's funds by exchanging mortgages for participating trust certificates, the successor-guardian is entitled to an equitable lien on the certificates to secure repayment of the amounts invested in certificates, with interest at six per cent: In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

8. A transaction within the trust department of guardian-bank, by which the ward's mortgages were sold to trust department and became a part of the mortgages against which certificates were issued in exchange therefor, was invalid, being contrary to the principle that a fiduciary cannot deal with himself: In re Lodge, 32 NP(NS) 40.

2. This section is permissive, not mandatory. Willis v. Braucher, 79 OS 290, 87 NE 185, 44 LRA(NS) 873.

3. The provisions of former GC § 11214 (see now RC § 2109.37) do not authorize the investment of trust funds in the stock of a building and loan association, and such authority is not conferred by the direction of the testator that such funds "shall be held in trust and invested or placed at interest": Home Sav. &c. Co. v. Strain, 130 OS 53, 3 OO 104, 196 NE 770.

4. Co. v. Strain*, 130 OS 53, 3 OO 104, 196 NE 770.

5. The purchase of stock in a corporation, upon which dividends may possibly be paid, is contrary to GC § 11214 (see now RC § 2109.37), which authorizes

6. Probate court's approval of earlier account listing securities purchased without authority does not relieve guardian from liability for unauthorized investment (GC § 11214 [see now RC § 2109.37]): Soliday v. Ash, 40 App 498, 179 NE 150.

7. Where will directed trustee to invest fund in safe securities of trustee's own choosing with approval of probate court, and trustee invested only in securities authorized by statute, and court subsequently approved trustee's reports, trustee's failure to obtain court's express approval prior to investment held not to render trustee liable for depreciation, but placed burden on trustee, on exceptions to final account, to show legality of investment and absence of injudicious conduct: In re Tischer's Trusteeship, 46 App 405, 188 NE 876, 39 OLR 451 [affirming 30 NP(NS) 419].

10. A guardian is protected in depositing funds of the ward in a designated depository, under GC § 10506-45 (RC § 2109.41), only so long as no investment of the type designated in this section is available: In re Michael, 18 OLA 629.

11. After investment is made by the guardian and reports in the form of accounts are filed with the probate court setting forth the type of investment, the amount thereof and where carried, the action of the court in settling and approving the accounts is equivalent to an approval of the investment under GC § 11214 (repealed, 114 v 320; see GC § 10506-41 [RC § 2109.37]): Warner v. Hoffman, 21 OLA 225 [appeal dismissed, 132 OS 136].

12. The investment by a guardian of his ward's funds with a building and loan association is proper, under GC § 11214 (repealed, 114 v 320; see GC § 10506-41 [RC § 2109.37]), if approved by the probate court: Schick v. Kroeger, 22 OLA 389.

14. The probate court's order for distribution of stock described as having distributive value is an approval of trustee's investment in such stock even though not listed in GC § 11214 (repealed, 114 v 320; see GC § 10506-41 [RC § 2109.37]) as an authorized investment: Witmeier v. Sheets, 24 OLA 59.

[§ 2109.37.1] § 2109.371 Additional investment authority.

In addition to those investments made eligible by section 2109.37 of the Revised Code, investments may be made by a fiduciary, including a guardian, other than a guardian under sections 5905.01 to 5905.19, inclusive, of the Revised Code, and subject to the restriction placed on an administrator or executor by section 2109.37 of the Revised Code, in the following kinds and classes of securities, provided the same may be lawfully sold in Ohio and investment is made only in such securities as would be acquired by prudent men of discretion and intelligence in such matters who are seeking a reasonable income and the preservation of their capital:

(A) Securities of corporations organized and existing under the laws of the United States or of the District of Columbia or of any state of the United States including, but not by way of limitation, bonds, debentures, notes, equipment trust obligations, or other evidences of indebtedness, and shares of common and preferred stocks of such corporations;

(B) Securities of any open-end or closed-end management type investment company or investment trust;

(C) Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of any state or territory of the United States, or of any county, city, village, school district, or other legally constituted political taxing subdivision of any state or territory of the United States, not otherwise eligible under divisions [division] (B) or (C) of section 2109.37 of the Revised Code.

No investment shall be made pursuant to this section which, at the time such investment is made, causes the aggregate market value of the investments, not made eligible by section 2109.37 of the Revised Code, to exceed sixty per cent of the aggregate market value at that time of all of the property of the fund held by such fiduciary. No sale or other liquidation of any investment shall be required solely because of any change in the relative market value of those investments made eligible by this section and those made eligible by section 2109.37 of the Revised Code; provided, that in the event of a sale of investments authorized by this section, the proceeds therefrom may be reinvested in the kinds and classes of securities authorized by this section without regard to the percentage limitation provided in this section. In determining the aggregate market value of the property of a fund and the percentage of a fund to be invested under this section, a fiduciary may rely upon published market quotations as to those investments for which such quotations are available and upon such valuations of other investments as in his best judgment seem fair and reasonable according to available information.

This section shall govern fiduciaries acting on its effective date, or appointed subsequent thereto.

Comment

Ohio's limited or modified "Prudent Man Rule" is patterned after the New York law. See New York Consolidated Laws, Personal Property, § 21.

Revised Code § 2109.37.1 provides that investments may be made by a fiduciary in certain kinds and classes of securities which may be lawfully sold in Ohio, but has stipulated that such investments can be made only in such securities as would be acquired by prudent men of discretion and intelligence in such matters who are seeking a reasonable income and the preservation of THEIR capital.

No administrator or executor, under RC § 2109.37, may invest funds belonging to an estate except with the approval of the court or with the permission of the instrument creating the trust, and hence no administrator or executor may invest funds under RC § 2109.37.1 except with the approval of the court unless the instrument creating the trust permits such investments. Guardians and testamentary trustees may make investments under the provision of RC § 2109.37.1 without court authority. A guardian appointed under the Veterans' Guardianship Law may not invest moneys received from the Veterans' Administration under RC § 2109.37.1. CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. In determining whether a trustee has acted with reasonable prudence and diligence, the facts must be taken as they existed at the time of their occurrence, not aided or enlightened by those that subsequently took place: In re City Bank Farmers Trust Co., 68 NYSupp(2d) 43.

2. A provision in a will giving a fiduciary discretion to invest, free from statutory restriction, does not deprive the court of the power to review the exercise of such discretion, nor does it relieve the trustee of the duty to employ such diligence in management as prudent men of discretion employ in like matters of their own: In re Whitmore's Estate, 15 NYSupp(2d) 379.

3. When the fiduciary is a corporate executor and trustee, with greater skill and facilities for handling trust estates than those possessed by the "ordinary prudent man," such fiduciary is held to a higher degree of care, consonant with his greater skill and facilities: Union Commerce Bank v. Kusse, 49 OO(2d) 413, 21 OMisc 217, 251 NE(2d) 884 (PC 1969).

§ 2109.38 Retention of unauthorized investments.

Sections 2109.37 and 2109.371 [2109.37.1] of the Revised Code do not prohibit a fiduciary from retaining any part of a trust estate as received by him, even though such part is not of the class or percentage permitted to fiduciaries or from retaining any investment made by him after such investment ceases to be of a class or exceeds the percentage permitted by law, provided the circumstances are not such as to require the fiduciary to dispose of such investment in the performance of his duties.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. This section and GC § 10506-43 (RC § 2109.39) permit fiduciaries to retain securities received by them even though not of the approved class designated in GC § 10506-41 (RC § 2109.37), and to retain any securities received as part of a distribution in kind: Neff v. Cleveland Trust Co., 21 OO 461 (CP).

2. Provisions in wills or trust instruments authorizing the fiduciary to retain any property coming to him do not relieve him of his duty to exercise due care and prudence with reference to the retention or disposal of such property: Union Commerce Bank v. Kusse, 49 OO(2d) 413, 21 OMisc 217, 251 NE(2d) 884 (PC 1969).

§ 2109.39 Receiving distribution in kind. (GC § 10506-43)

right as other beneficiaries to accept or demand distribution in kind and may retain any security or investment so distributed to him as though it were a part of the original estate received by him.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The authority contained in this section authorizing fiduciaries in cases of reorganization, sale or merger and with the approval of the court to invest additional funds "where required of all shareholders," constitutes an exception to the mandatory requirements of GC § 10506-41 (RC § 2109.37), and would seem to come squarely within the terms of the proviso in the opening sentence of that section: Neff v. Cleveland Trust Co., 21 OO 461 (CP).

2. By virtue of this section, an administrator or an executor has the authority, when in the use of his discretion it is advisable, to participate in the merger or reorganization of a corporation, to exchange shares of stock, which are part of the assets of the estate, for shares of stock in the new corporation, and it is not necessary, although probably advisable, to obtain the consent of the probate court to such transaction, unless it is necessary to invest additional funds from the estate in order to effect such merger: 1932 OAG No.4108.

§ 2109.41 Deposit of funds.

Immediately after his appointment and throughout the administration of a trust every fiduciary, pending payment of current obligations of his trust, distribution, or investment pursuant to law, shall deposit all funds received by him in his name as such fiduciary in one or more depositories. Each depository must be a national bank located in the state, or a bank organized under the laws of the state, or a federal or insured savings and loan association located in the state, or a building and loan association operating under the laws of the state which is a member of a deposit guarantee association organized under the provisions of sections 1151.80 to 1151.92, inclusive, of the Revised Code, or, if first approved by the probate court, any other building and loan association operating under the laws of the state. A corporate fiduciary, authorized to receive deposits of fiduciaries, may be the depository of funds held by it as such fiduciary. All deposits made pursuant to this section shall be in such class of account as will be most advantageous to the trust and each depository shall pay interest at the highest rate customarily paid to its patrons on deposits in accounts of the same class.

The placing of such funds in such depositories under the joint control of the fiduciary and a surety on the bond of the fiduciary shall not increase the liability of the fiduciary.

Comment

It has been held that a deposit made by a corporate fiduciary in its banking department is not a preferred claim as against general creditors in the event of the insolvency of the bank: McDonald v. Fulton, 125 OS 507, 510, 182 NE 504. But the rule in that case was abrogated by the legislature by amending GC § 710-165 (RC § 1107.12), effective June 14, 1933, so that such a deposit is now preferred. However, where an ordinary fiduciary makes a deposit in a bank and the bank becomes insolvent, then the claim of the fiduciary is still not a preferred one as against general creditors of the bank: Lamb v. Fulton, 44 App 366, 185 NE 888.

2. By the clear and plain wording of this section, a deposit in a bank is permissible only pending distribution or investment according to law, and it is not permissible to make such a deposit as a permanent investment: In re Flavin, 59 App 443, 12 OO 262, 18 NE(2d) 514.

3. A guardian who leaves money in a bank as an investment, rather than as a deposit pending investment or distribution according to law, is liable for loss to his ward, regardless of any question of good faith or due care: In re Flavin, 59 App 443, 12 OO 262, 18 NE(2d) 514.

4. Violation of this statute justified permanent disbarment: Toledo Bar Assn. v. Bartlett, 39 OS(2d) 100, 68 OO(2d) 59, 313 NE(2d) 834 (1974).

5. A guardian, exercising the same measure of care and diligence as would be exercised by a man of ordinary prudence and skill in the management of his own business, is not liable for the loss of his ward's fund through the failure of the bank in which he temporarily deposited such funds, before the enactment of this section, earmarked to show their trust character, in good faith, for safe-keeping, in a generally regarded financially sound and solvent incorporated bank situated in the state of residence of himself and his ward, with the approval of the probate court, pending distribution, investment, or payment of current bills of the ward, for a reasonable time and without interest, but not as a permanent investment: In re McIntire, 65 App 143, 18 OO 349, 29 NE(2d) 568.

6. A guardian is protected in depositing funds of the ward in a designated depository, under this section, only so long as no investment of the type designated in GC § 10506-41 (RC § 2109.37) is available: In re Michael, 18 OLA 629.

7. An administrator holding funds awaiting distribution may deposit such money in a building association and such deposit does not constitute an investment: In re Smith, 32 NP(NS) 260.

On failure to do so, such fiduciary shall account to the trust for such loss of interest as is found by the court to be due to his negligence.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Under the provisions of this section, a fiduciary who has funds belonging to a trust which are not required for current expenditures shall, unless otherwise ordered by the probate court, invest or deposit such funds within a reasonable time according to RC § 2109.37, and, on failure to do so, such fiduciary shall account to the trust for such loss of interest as is found by the court to be due to his negligence: In re Sachs, 173 OS 270, 19 OO(2d) 122, 181 NE (2d) 464.

1.1 Where a testator provides that the amount of a legacy shall be invested in government bonds at all times and the maximum rate of interest paid on such bonds is 2½% per year, it is not error to require the executor to pay interest at that rate instead of the statutory rate during delay in paying the legacy beginning nine months after the notice of the executor's appointment: In re Shanafelt, 164 OS 258, 58 OO 7, 129 NE(2d) 816.

1.2 A judgment predicated upon a finding of an amount due from a guardian to its ward comes within the provisions of this section, and is one upon which interest should be included; and where entry does not include interest, the court may provide for it: Union Trust Co. v. Repine, 18 OLA 206.

2. Where an administrator is put on notice at all times that a settlement of the estate could not be concluded for such a period of time as that he would have opportunity safely to invest the funds in his possession, so as to return interest, he is charged with the duty of investing such funds and liable for interest for failure to perform such duty: In re Marker, 24 OLA 400.

3. Where executors of an estate have resigned and funds in their possession are to be turned over to their successor, after deducting an allowance for extraordinary compensation for services rendered, interest is not chargeable against such executors on and after the date of judgment entry, allowing such compensation, as to the balance of such funds: Chapman v. Menke, 45 OLA 625, 68 NE(2d) 361 (App).

§ 2109.43 Personal use of trust property prohibited. (GC §§ 10506-47, 10506-48)

No fiduciary shall make any personal use of the funds or property belonging to a trust. For violation of this section, such fiduciary and his bond shall be liable in an action for any loss occasioned by such use and for such additional amount by way of forfeiture, not exceeding the amount of the loss occasioned by such use, as may be fixed by the probate court hearing such cause. Such amounts shall be payable for the benefit of the beneficiary, if living, and to his estate if he is deceased.

Any action under this section shall be brought not later than one year after the termination of the trust or the discovery of such loss.

1.1 Where a court of probate issues an order for the private sale of realty by the administratrix of an estate and she then makes such a sale to her spouse, the sale is voidable at the election of the heirs: Magee v. Troutwine, 166 OS 466, 2 OO(2d) 471, 143 NE(2d) 581.

2. A sale of estate property by an administrator to his spouse is voidable at the election of the heirs: Christman v. Christman, 171 OS 152, 12 OO(2d) 172, 168 NE(2d) 153.

3. As to any fiduciary relationship created on and after January 1, 1968, RC § 1109.10 specifies whether and how a trust company may vote its own shares held by it in such fiduciary capacity: Cleveland Trust Co. v. Eaton, 21 OS(2d) 129, 50 OO(2d) 354, 256 NE(2d) 198 (1970) [reversing 11 OMisc 151, 40 OO(2d) 460].

4. Violation of this statute justified permanent disbarment: Toledo Bar Assn. v. Bartlett, 39 OS(2d) 100, 68 OO(2d) 59, 313 NE(2d) 834 (1974).

5. A fiduciary acting as a trustee may not loan money to himself; further any loaning of money to the wife of such trustee under a proper showing may be voidable but it is not necessarily void: In re Chambers, 30 OLA 420 [appeal dismissed 136 OS 202, 16 OO 535, 24 NE(2d) 601].

6. An executor who is the beneficiary of an option to purchase real estate of the testator must, in order to purchase and obtain clear title to such property, not only exercise his option to purchase such property, but also make application to and obtain the approval of the probate court for such sale. The probate court abuses its discretion in approving any such sale, where it determines that the purchase price was not full and fair: Walters v. Wannemacher, 6 OApp(2d) 226, 35 OO(2d) 385, 217 NE(2d) 695.

7. Under this section, which permits a fiduciary to make an advancement to the estate when such advancement either has been expressly authorized by the trust instrument or approved by the probate court, and under the provisions of a will authorizing the executors and trustees to borrow funds necessary to pay taxes, the corporate trustee has authority to loan money to the estate for the purpose of paying federal estate tax: Kirkbride v. Hickok, 41 OO 265, 89 NE(2d) 91 (PC).

8. In the absence of specific authority in the will or by the court to the contrary, a widow who is appointed executrix of her deceased husband's estate is either a legal or equitable assignee of the testator's note and the collateral securing the same, and as such assignee, she may be reimbursed for an advancement out of her own funds to pay the note only to the value of the security: In re Outhwaite, 42 OO 445 (App) [affirming 42 OO 442 (PC)].

9. This section prohibits an advancement by an executrix out of her own funds unless it has been expressly authorized by the will or has been approved by the probate court. This requirement is met when the probate court approves the final account: In re Outhwaite, 42 OO 445 (App) [affirming 42 OO 442 (PC)].

10. This section which provides in part that no corporate fiduciary shall be permitted to deal with the estate, notwithstanding any power in the instrument creating the trust to the contrary, is not applicable to the trustee of an inter vivos trust: Central Nat. Bank v. Brewer, 37 OO(2d) 323, 8 OMisc 409, 220 NE(2d) 846 (CP).

§ 2109.45 Affidavit before private sale confirmed. (GC § 10506-51)

Before the probate court confirms a sale by an executor, administrator, guardian, assignee, or trustee made under an order allowing such officer to make a private sale, such court shall require such officer to file an affidavit that such private sale was made after diligent endeavor to obtain the best price for the property and that the sale reported is the highest price he could get for such property.

[MORTGAGE OF REAL ESTATE]

§ 2109.46 Mortgage by fiduciary. (GC §§ 10506-59, 10506-60, 10506-62)

When it appears to be for the best interests of the trust, a fiduciary other than an executor or administrator may, with the approval of the probate court, borrow money and mortgage real estate belonging to the trust, whether such real estate was acquired by purchase or by descent and distribution.

The fiduciary proposing so to borrow money must file in the probate court which appointed him a petition describing all of the real estate in the trust and stating the nature and amount of the encumbrances thereon, the date such encumbrances became or will become due, and the rate of interest thereon. The petition shall also contain a statement of the personal property in the trust, the income from such personal property, and the income from the real estate in such trust. Such petition if filed by a guardian shall state the names, ages, and residences of the ward and next of kin known to be resident in the state, including the spouse of such ward and persons holding liens on such real estate, all of whom must be made defendants and be notified of the pendency and prayer of the petition in such manner as the court directs. In addition such petition shall contain a statement of the nature of the imbecility or insanity, if any, of such ward, whether temporary or confirmed and its duration. Except as provided in this section, the defendants and notice thereto shall be the same as though the real estate proposed to be mortgaged were being sold by the fiduciary. The petition shall set forth the purpose of the loan, the amount required therefor, and such other facts as may be pertinent to the question whether such money should be borrowed and shall contain a prayer that the fiduciary be authorized to mortgage so much of the ward's lands as may be necessary to secure such loan.

Upon the filing of such petition, the proceedings as to pleadings and proof shall be the same as on petition to sell real estate belonging to the trust.

If such report and the terms proposed are satisfactory to the court, they may be accepted and confirmed and the fiduciary ordered, as fiduciary, to execute a note for such amount and a mortgage on the lands so designated, which shall be a valid lien thereon. The fiduciary in no way shall be personally liable for the payment of any part of the sum borrowed, but such mortgaged lands alone shall be bound therefor. [CONCEALED OR EMBEZZLED ASSETS]

§ 2109.50 Proceedings when assets concealed or embezzled.

Upon complaint made to the probate court of the county having jurisdiction of the administration of a trust estate or of the county wherein a person resides against whom the complaint is made, by a person interested in such trust estate or by the creditor of a person interested in such trust estate against any person suspected of having concealed, embezzled, or conveyed away or of being or having been in the possession of any moneys, chattels, or choses in action of such estate, said court shall by citation, attachment or warrant, or, if circumstances require it, by warrant or attachment in the first instance, compel the person or persons so suspected to forthwith appear before it to be examined, on oath, touching the matter of the complaint. Where necessary such citation, attachment or warrant may be issued into any county in the state and shall be served and returned by the officer to whom it is delivered. The officer to whom such process is delivered shall be liable for negligence in its service or return in like manner as sheriffs are liable for negligence in not serving or returning a capias issued upon an indictment. Before issuing an extra-county citation, attachment or warrant, the probate judge may require the complainant to post security with the probate court in such amount and in such form as the probate judge shall find acceptable in order to cover the costs of the proceeding under this section, including in such costs a reasonable allowance for the travelling expenses of the person or persons against whom an extra-county citation, attachment or warrant is to be issued. Such security may be in the form of a bond, the amount, terms, conditions and sureties of which shall be subject to the approval of the probate judge.

The probate court may initiate proceedings on its own motion.

The probate court shall forthwith proceed to hear and determine the matter.

The examinations, including questions and answers, shall be reduced to writing, signed by the party examined, and filed in the probate court.

If required by either party, the probate court shall swear such witnesses as may be offered by either party touching the matter of such complaint and cause the examination of every such witness, including questions and answers, to be reduced to writing, signed by the witness, and filed in the probate court.

All costs of such proceedings, including the reasonable travelling expenses of a person against whom an extra-county citation, attachment or warrant is issued, shall be assessed against and paid by the party making the complaint, except as provided by section 2109.52 of the Revised Code.

1. The purpose of GC §§ 10506-67 to 10506-77 (RC §§ 2109.50 to 2109.56), relating to proceedings to discover concealed or embezzled assets of an estate, is not to furnish a substitute for a civil action to recover judgment for money owing to an administrator or executor but rather to provide a speedy and effective method for discovering assets belonging to the estate and to secure possession of them for the purpose of administration: Goodrich v. Anderson, 136 OS 509, 17 OO 152, 26 NE(2d) 1016, discussed in 14 OBar 371.

2. Where the defendant is found not guilty of concealing or embezzling assets of the estate of the decedent, the court may not proceed to determine other issues, but has no alternative except to dismiss the complaint: Goodrich v. Anderson, 136 OS 509, 17 OO 152, 26 NE(2d) 1016, discussed in 14 OBar 371.

3. A judgment rendered by a probate court in a proceeding properly brought under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), in which proceeding it was charged that the fiduciary of a trust estate had concealed assets of such estate, was appealable to the common pleas court on questions of law and fact under GC § 10501-56 (114 v 320, 336 [RC § 2101.42]): Sheets v. Hodes, 142 OS 559, 27 OO 498, 53 NE(2d) 804 [affirming 39 OLA 492].

4. Under the broad authority conferred on the probate court in matters relating to the administration of estates and in the control of fiduciaries, including plenary power to dispose of any matter properly before it, a proceeding in such court based on GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) does not abate with the death of a fiduciary charged with the concealment of assets of an estate and may be revived in the name of his executor: Sheets v. Hodes, 142 OS 559, 27 OO 498, 53 NE(2d) 804 [affirming 39 OLA 492].

5. The provisions of GC §§ 10506-70 and 10506-71 (RC § 2109.50) requiring that the questions and answers of the party examined and of the witnesses called to testify in a proceeding instituted under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), shall be reduced to writing and signed by those who have testified, are directory: Sheets v. Hodes, 142 OS 559, 27 OO 498, 53 NE(2d) 804 [affirming 39 OLA 492].

6. General Code §§ 10506-67 and 10506-73 (RC §§ 2109.50 and 2109.52) provide a summary means, inquisitorial in nature, to recover specific property or the proceeds or value thereof belonging to a trust estate, title to which was in a decedent at his death or in a ward when his guardian was appointed; or to recover property, belonging to a trust estate, concealed, taken or disposed of after the appointment of the fiduciary: In re Black, 145 OS 405, 31 OO 31, 62 NE(2d) 90 [affirming 75 App 294].

7. A complaint filed under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) involves a charge of wrongful or criminal conduct on the part of the person accused: In re Black, 145 OS 405, 31 OO 31, 62 NE(2d) 90 [affirming 75 App 294].

8. A court may, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, compel an attorney appearing before it to pay over or account for moneys or to deliver papers which he has received in his official capacity and wrongfully withholds from his client; but such attorney must be given an opportunity to answer and defend, and if the attorney in good faith claims title to the funds or papers in question, the client is not entitled to a summary order against him: In re Butler, 137 OS 115, 17 OO 440, 28 NE(2d) 196.

10. Resort may not be had to GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) et seq to collect a debt, obtain an accounting or adjudicate rights under a contract: In re Black, 145 OS 405, 31 OO 31, 62 NE(2d) 90 [affirming 75 App 294].

12. A summary proceeding under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) et seq, was instituted to recover proceeds of "pay roll" checks, payable to the decedent and signed and indorsed by him, cashed by an employee who distributed the proceeds thereof partly in payment of wages to decedent's employees and partly to the decedent. Such transactions occurred each week for a period of over five years prior to the death of the decedent. The employee claimed to have paid to the decedent all such cash remaining after the payment of wages, whereas the administrator claimed a lesser sum was paid to the decedent. The relief sought by the administrator was in fact an adjustment of the accounts of the parties, was a judgment for the balance claimed to be due, with the statutory penalty, and is not within the purview of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) et seq: In re Leiby, 157 OS 374, 47 OO 265, 105 NE(2d) 583.

12.1 No relief for a probate court estate, upon a complaint to the probate court pursuant to GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), can be given except with respect to property of such estate: In re Sexton, 163 OS 124, 56 OO 178, 126 NE(2d) 129.

12.2 Such suspected person is the court's witness, and neither the complainant nor any other person interested in the trust estate and opposed to the claims of the suspected person is bound by the suspected person's testimony: In re Fife, 164 OS 449, 58 OO 293, 132 NE(2d) 185.

12.3 In a proceeding to discover concealed assets, where the complaint is that the suspected person is in possession of certificates of corporate stock belonging to decedent's estate and it is shown that such certificates were issued to the decedent during his lifetime and stood in his name on the books of the corporation at the time of his death, a prima facie case is made for the inclusion of such certificates as assets of the estate. Such prima facie case, however, may be rebutted and overcome by clear and convincing evidence that such certificates were assigned and delivered by way of gift to the suspected person by the decedent during his lifetime: In re Fife, 164 OS 449, 58 OO 293, 132 NE(2d) 185.

12.4 Such suspected person is in reality the witness of the court, and the character and extent of his examination rest largely in the court's discretion, and, where it is apparent from the record that such discretion has not been abused, there is no basis for reversal in this respect by a reviewing court: In re Fife, 164 OS 449, 58 OO 293, 132 NE(2d) 185.

12.5 In such a proceeding it is the court which cites the person suspected of having concealed or embezzled assets to appear before it to be examined on oath touching the subject matter of the complaint, and it is the court which is in control of the examination, notwithstanding such examination may be delegated to and conducted by attorneys: In re Fife, 164 OS 449, 58 OO 293, 132 NE(2d) 185.

13. A petition and complaint comes within the provisions of this section (recodification act of 1953), where it alleges facts showing that the person filing it is a person interested in the estate of a decedent, and where it contains the further allegations that moneys deposited in a bank during the lifetime of the decedent in the joint names of the decedent and another with right of survivorship were so deposited for convenience only and in reality were the sole property of the decedent and belong in his estate, and that such other unauthorizedly withdrew the moneys from the account during the lifetime of the decedent and deposited the same in an account in such other's name where such moneys remain: Fec-teau v. Cleveland Trust Co., 171 OS 121, 12 OO(2d) 139, 167 NE(2d) 890.

14. A complaint filed in the probate court under the provisions of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) is quasi criminal in character, but the laws governing civil proceedings in the probate court are applicable to such a proceeding: In re Howard, 79 App 203, 34 OO 537, 72 NE(2d) 502 [modifying 33 OO 510, 68 NE(2d) 820].

15. The filing of exceptions to an executor's account, the executor alleging that the executor has failed to charge himself with all the assets of the estate, is not the proper procedure to obtain a determination as to the validity of a gift and transfer of possession during the lifetime of the decedent: In re Trent, 98 App 238, 57 OO 266, 128 NE(2d) 839.

16. In an action for a declaratory judgment brought by a person in possession of personal property claimed by the executor of decedent's estate and which the party in possession claims by virtue of a gift inter vivos, a probate court has jurisdiction to determine the title to such personal property: Renee v. Sanders, 102 App 21, 2 OO(2d) 7, 131 NE(2d) 346.

17. If an executor, administrator, or other interested party discovers that an asset was not included in the inventory or supplemental inventory of a decedent, and that the asset may belong to the estate, such party may bring an action in declaratory judgment under RC § 2721.05, or use the special proceedings of RC § 2109.50 to determine whether such asset belongs in the estate of the decedent: Eger v. Eger, 39 OApp(2d) 14, 68 OO(2d) 150, 314 NE(2d) 394 (1974).

18. General Code § 11495 (RC § 2317.03) prohibiting a party to an action from testifying in certain instances, has no application to proceedings had upon a citation made upon complaint of an executor under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), relative to discovery of concealed or embezzled assets, and does not prohibit the party so cited from testifying as to transactions with the executor's decedent: Robertson v. Polter, 58 App 204, 12 OO 107, 16 NE(2d) 485.

19. This statute was enacted in 1932, and by its terms changed the existing law so as to include guardians of incompetent persons as well as executors and administrators. It was also changed so as to permit the probate court to institute such proceedings on its own motion: In re Sanderson, 64 App 177, 17 OO 562, 28 NE(2d) 565.

20. In a special proceeding under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) et seq to discover assets of an estate, a defense that the articles in question were given to the defendant by the decedent is good if proved: In re Raymond, 66 App 428, 20 OO 385, 34 NE(2d) 821.

21. In the trial of such matter, evidence that the decedent was insolvent at the time of the alleged gift should be rejected: In re Raymond, 66 App 428, 20 OO 385, 34 NE(2d) 821.

22. In an action by an executrix to recover personal property held by another upon a claim of a valid gift by the decedent, brought pursuant to GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), authorizing the probate court upon complaint made to it by a person interested in a trust estate to cite any person suspected of "having concealed" or of possessing "effects of such estate," to appear before it for examination under oath, it is error for the court to exclude testimony of witnesses as to statements made by the decedent to the effect that the property in question was placed in the hands of the one claiming title thereto for safe-keeping only, and contradicting such person's testimony that a valid gift was intended: In re Evans, 71 App 127, 25 OO 499, 41 NE(2d) 410.

23. General Code § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) gives the probate court power to issue a citation to any person to appear before it when complaint is made that such person is concealing assets properly included in an estate in process of administration before it: In re Chance, 88 App 416, 45 OO 201, 100 NE(2d) 92.

24. Neither such section nor any other provision of law gives such court power to issue extracounty process in the service of such citation: In re Chance, 88 App 416, 45 OO 201, 100 NE(2d) 92.

25. A proceeding by the administrator of a decedent's estate for the recovery of concealed or embezzled assets, instituted under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), is not a civil action and such proceeding does not require the invocation of the provisions of GC § 11252 (RC § 2307.16), so as to necessitate the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant: Hiple v. Skolmutch, 88 App 529, 45 OO 281, 100 NE(2d) 642.

25.1 A proceeding under this section to recover concealed or embezzled assets of an estate is inquisitorial, the witnesses testifying therein are the court's, and the rule of evidence against impeachment of a party's own witness does not apply: Jones v. Neu, 106 App 161, 6 OO(2d) 428, 150 NE(2d) 858.

25.2 A probate court has no jurisdiction, in a proceeding for the discovery of concealed or embezzled assets brought under the provisions of this section, to determine the right to possession of stock certificates, where the right to the possession of such certificates depends upon the interpretation, application and validity of various contracts: Smith v. Simpson, 111 App 36, 13 OO(2d) 388, 170 NE(2d) 433.

25.3 The title of the executor of a ward's estate relates back only to the moment of such ward's decease, and such executor cannot be a person interested in the trust estate of the guardianship existing only theretofore. Such executor's right to make complaint, or cause of action, concerning concealment of assets is not as successor to or transferee of the guardian's right to make complaint, or cause of action, but is separate from and independent thereof (the executor's right is as respects assets of his decedent's estate, that of the guardian is as respects assets of the ward): Kelly v. Smith, 7 OApp(2d) 142, 36 OO(2d) 293, 219 NE(2d) 231.

25.4 A probate court has jurisdiction to inquire into an incompetent's contractual affairs entered into prior to the appointment of a guardian where such person's mental capacity at the time of such dealings is questioned by the guardian: Grannen v. Ey, 44 OApp(2d) 55, 73 OO(2d) 52, 335 NE(2d) 735 (1974).

25.5 An agreement entered into by a person subsequently declared incompetent may be declared void when the benefiting party was aware of the person's deteriorating mental condition and took advantage of such to gain control of his property: Grannen v. Ey, 44 OApp(2d) 55, 73 OO(2d) 52, 335 NE(2d) 735 (1974).

25.6 If upon the trial of a statutory proceeding for concealment of assets, the evidence discloses that the subject matter of the complaint is not within the contemplation of the provisions of the statute, such as, for example, an effort to collect a debt, obtain an accounting or adjudicate rights arising under a contract, the complainant may not resort to the summary provisions of the statute but is relegated to a civil action with appropriate pleadings to define the issues: Stone v. Woods, 11 OApp 277, 11 OO(2d) 302, 167 NE(2d) 122.

25.7 General Code § 11495 (RC § 2317.03), prohibiting a party to an action from testifying in certain instances, has no application to proceedings had upon a citation made upon the complaint of an executor under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), relative to the discovery of concealed or embezzled assets and does not prohibit the party so cited from testifying as to transactions with the executor's decedent: In re Jones, 68 OLA 282, 122 NE(2d) 111 (App).

25.8 Where after a hearing and a finding of not guilty on a complaint against an executor for concealing assets, which assets were the proceeds of a certain bank account which had been withdrawn on October 8th, by means of a deposit slip allegedly signed on that day by decedent, in which hearing it appeared that decedent died on October 8th, it is discovered that decedent had died on October 7th, the trial court committed an abuse of discretion in refusing to grant a rehearing on such complaint on the grounds of newly discovered evidence: In re Warga, 69 OLA 1, 113 NE(2d) 39 (App).

25.9 In an action for the concealment of assets belonging to the estate of an incompetent a statement signed by the incompetent that such assets were obtained from her by duress is admissible in evidence: In re Rost, 72 OLA 261 (App).

26. A party is guilty of concealing assets from an administrator where bonds which were left with said party for "safe-keeping" by the deceased prior to death were not turned over to the administrator, even though there was no fraudulent or criminal intent: State ex rel Sneider v. Packer, 4 OO 347 (PC).

27. Where plaintiff exercised the jurisdiction of the probate court under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) and proceeded to final judgment, the dismissal of his action without prejudice after an appeal had been perfected to the common pleas court left the judgment announced by the probate court in full force and effect: Jones v. Whaley, 10 OO 87 (CP).

32. In a proceeding against an administrator or executor, under favor of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), to discover concealed or embezzled assets of estate, the complaint is the only pleading required; proof is not limited to the items particularized in the complaint: Hendrickson v. Hendrickson, 17 OLA 39.

33. Under the provisions of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) and cognate sections, a legatee, heir or other person interested in an estate is authorized to bring action against a person suspected of having concealed, embezzled, or conveyed away or of being or having been in possession of any moneys, goods, chattels, things in action or effects of such estate; but said section does not authorize the bringing of any action by any of the persons mentioned for property transferred by the decedent prior to his death whether such transfer was procured through coercion, duress, undue influence or other unlawful restraint: McMahon v. Jones, 17 OLA 488.

34. The common pleas court has no jurisdiction under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) to hear and determine an action by an executor of a cestui que trust's estate to recover from the trustee of her deceased's father's trust estate money and other personality in his possession alleged to belong to the deceased cestui's estate, where the evidence shows no wrongdoing on the part of the trustee: Gregg v. Kent, 27 OLA 628.

35. Where adult children, without the knowledge or consent of grandchildren, agreed to settle and divide an estate out of court, and one of the adults who took the lead therein assumed the responsibility of paying the grandchildren their respective amounts as they became of age, but failed to do so, an administrator appointed on the application of such grandchildren may bring an action under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) to recover concealed or conveyed-away moneys belonging to the estate, in fraud of the rights of the administrator and others interested in the estate, against the adult who failed to pay the grandchildren, without joining the other heirs: In re Christian, 33 OLA 367.

36. In a proceeding in a probate court upon a complaint filed under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) et seq, charging the administrator of a decedent's estate with having fraudulently concealed, embezzled or conveyed away certain assets of the estate, evidence that in the disposition of the articles in question he acted with the consent of one whom he believed, under the advice of counsel, to be the sole beneficiary of the estate, that such articles were of comparatively little value, and the absence of evidence of concealment or other circumstances indicative of a fraudulent intent, justifies a finding of "not guilty": In re Johnson, 38 OLA 372, 50 NE(2d) 273 (App).

38. Where personal property of a decedent is in the possession of the executrix in her fiduciary capacity and her conduct consists of conversations with beneficiaries in a manner calculated to obtain consent to the division of such property outside the estate and contrary to the express provisions of the will and of a failure to list such property in the original inventory, it being subsequently reported in a supplemental inventory in consequence of a demand by complainants, the conduct of the executrix does not justify a finding of guilty under the provisions of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) on the theory that she wrongfully withholds assets which are lawfully in her possession: In re Meyer, 53 OLA 97, 82 NE(2d) 856 (PC).

39. By virtue of GC §§ 10506-67 and 10506-73 (RC §§ 2109.50 and 2109.52) a probate court upon complaint duly made may cite a person suspected of having concealed, embezzled or conveyed away, or of having been in possession of any estate property, to appear before said court and be examined. Said court may also determine title to such property and in its discretion order its return: In re Brooks, 56 OLA 15 (App).

40. The proceedings provided for by GC §§ 10506-67 to 10506-77 (RC §§ 2109.50 to 2109.56) are purely statutory, and an appeal from the court of appeals does not lie, since the appellate court has jurisdiction on appeal only in chancery cases: Holbrook v. Frey, 58 OLA 481 (App).

40.1 Where affiant, being trustee, in his affidavit charged a tenant upon the farm of which affiant is trustee, with being in contempt of court on grounds relating to the mismanagement of the farm by the tenant, there are no facts alleged in the affidavit which would support a proceeding under the provisions of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50): In re Schroder, 62 OLA 239, 107 NE(2d) 143 (App).

41. Revised Code §§ 2109.50 and 2109.52 relate to "money, chattels or choses in action" concealed, embezzled or conveyed away from the estate and authorize in such case a judgment in favor of the fiduciary, or, if he be guilty, in favor of the state, and an action brought thereunder in an estate where the final account has been filed and approved, on the grounds of an alleged fraudulent withholding of complainant's distributive share of such estate by the administrator thereof and her mother, will be dismissed since no judgment can be rendered in favor of the complainant herself, and no judgment in favor of the estate so long as the order of settlement of the final account stands: In re Reitler, 73 OLA 328, 137 NE(2d) 791 (PC).

43. Where the evidence reveals that defendant entered into a contract with her daughter with incident of joint and survivorship terms relative to a savings account and prior to the daughter's death withdrew the funds from such account, which fact defendant openly and notoriously admitted at all times under claim of right of contract, an action for the concealment of assets brought under authority of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50), will not lie and the complaint will upon motion be dismissed: In re Stoltz, 75 OLA 583, 143 NE(2d) 192 (PC).

45. Revised Code § 2317.03, prohibiting a party to an action from testifying in certain instances, has no application to proceedings had and upon a complaint filed under RC § 2109.50, relating to concealed assets, and does not prohibit the party so cited from testifying as to transactions with the decedent: In re Brandt, 30 OO(2d) 615, 1 OMisc 37, 204 NE(2d) 270 (PC).

INDEX

Against whom asserted, 6 et seq

By whom asserted, 8 et seq

Constitutionality, 1

Procedure, 11 et seq

Purpose, 2 et seq

Statute of limitations, 19

Constitutionality

1. To the extent that this statute professes to authorize the court to render judgment for the value of the property where there is a controversy between the parties, it is unconstitutional. In such case, defendant has a right to a jury trial: Howell v. Fry, 19 OS 556.

Purpose

2. The purpose of this section, making provision for proceedings when property belonging to the estate of a decedent has been concealed or embezzled, is not to furnish a substitute either for criminal proceedings for embezzlement or for a civil action to recover judgment for money owing to the executor, but rather to provide a speedy and effective method for discovery of assets belonging to the estate and secure possession of them for the purpose of administration: Leonard v. State ex rel Scott, 3 App 313, 20 CC(NS) 340.

3. The proceeding under GC § 10673 (RC § 2109.50) is for judgment and penalty and not for the specific money concealed; and questions as to form and disposition of money by defendant are irrelevant, and he cannot be held for contempt for refusing to answer (GC § 10675 [see now RC § 2109.51]): Lindquist v. Hayes, 22 App 141, 153 NE 297.

4. In a proceeding under GC § 10673 (RC § 2109.50), defendant admitted the withdrawal and retention of the money, and all that is required is to show by a preponderance of evidence that the money belonged to the decedent; it is not necessary to establish a fraudulent or criminal intent: Lindquist v. Hayes, 22 App 141, 153 NE 297.

5. In an action by an administrator alleging that defendant had appropriated property of decedent (GC § 10673 [RC § 2109.50]), GC § 10678 (RC § 2109.52) does not apply, proof of criminality is unnecessary, and evidence of withholding of property and of incapacity of decedent is admissible: Losee v. Krieger, 22 App 395, 153 NE 857.

Against whom asserted

6. The provisions of GC §§ 10673 to 10681 (RC §§ 2109.50 to 2109.55) do not authorize such proceedings against the executor or administrator of such estate: Meinzer v. Bevington, 42 OS 325.

7. Where a stepfather mingles the inheritance of his stepchildren with his own means innocently, under the impression that his promise to support the children was a valid consideration therefor, a complaint by the children for having concealed or embezzled their inheritance, made after they have attained their majority, will not lie: Estate of Ledig, 9 NP(NS) 169.

By whom asserted

8. All personal property of a deceased person vests in the administrator by relation from time of death, and he is empowered under this section to proceed against any person who is suspected of having in his possession personal property belonging to the decedent. A petition for injunction brought by one of the heirs of the estate against another heir for the purpose of preventing the withdrawal from the bank of certain funds alleged to belong to the decedent will therefore be dismissed, when it appears that an administrator has been appointed: Sullivan v. Sullivan, 12 OLR 224.

10. Right of action to set aside gifts of personal property by decedent passed only to personal representative who is real party in interest: Skehan v. Larkin, 41 App 85, 179 NE 425.

Procedure

11. Proceeding to recover concealed assets and for removal of administrator can be joined: Harris v. Westervelt, 15 CC 534, 8 CD 367.

12. In a proceeding under this section, to recover assets belonging to the estate, the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff to prove that defendant received the property and concealed it, embezzled it, or conveyed it away. Accordingly, it is error for the court to charge the jury that if they find that defendant received the property, the burden of proof is upon the defendant to show the return thereof: Leonard v. State ex rel Scott, 3 App 313, 20 CC(NS) 340.

13. In a proceeding under this section to recover property belonging to the estate of a decedent, which has been concealed or embezzled, the judgment, if any is rendered against the defendant, should be in favor of the executor and not in favor of the state: Leonard v. State ex rel Scott, 3 App 313, 20 CC(NS) 340.

14. In a proceeding under this section to recover property belonging to the estate of a decedent, which has been concealed or embezzled, it is error to treat the defendant as a party to a civil action, and therefore incompetent as a witness: Leonard v. State ex rel Scott, 3 App 313, 20 CC(NS) 340.

15. A defendant, against whom action in replevin has been brought by a person claiming to be the absolute owner and entitled to possession of goods that came into defendant's hands as administrator, may, under GC § 11265 (RC § 2307.29), interplead executors of said estate, appointed under will probated after defendant had been appointed administrator: Lorain County Sav. &c. Co. v. Haynes, 26 App 552, 160 NE 516.

16. A complaint, filed in the probate court by an administrator of a decedent's estate under GC § 10673 (RC § 2109.50) asking that the defendant be required to answer under oath concerning the alleged concealment of certain property claimed to be a part of the estate, is a special proceeding and cannot, in reversing the case to the court of common pleas for hearing and determination, under authority of GC § 10674 (RC § 2109.50), be transmitted into a suit in equity to receive evidence or determine issues involving the mental incapacity of the decedent as pertaining to his intention regarding inter vivos gifts: Halloran v. Merritt, 48 App 135, 1 OO 85, 192 NE 542.

17. The proceedings provided for by GC §§ 10673 to 10684 (now GC § 10506-67 et seq [RC §§ 2109.50 et seq, 2113.25]) are purely statutory, and an appeal from the court of common pleas to the court of appeals does not lie, since the appellate court has jurisdiction on appeal only in chancery cases: Stevens v. Reichelt, 10 OLA 553.

18. Action by executrix to recover money which she claimed was the value of bonds which were the property of her decedent, and which she charged defendant had converted to his own use, was not an action under favor of GC § 10673 (now GC § 10506-67 [RC § 2109.50]), but merely one at common law for money as damages, and the court properly confined the testimony of defendant as a witness to matters that had occurred subsequent to the death of the testatrix: Hodge v. Weed, 12 OLA 591.

Statute of limitations

19. A suit for the recovery of the assets of a decedent's estate, under former GC § 10673 (RC § 2109.50) et seq, is a special proceeding and not barred in four years (GC § 11224 [RC § 2305.09]): State ex rel Board of Education v. Steeley, 21 App 396, 153 NE 285.

§ 2109.51 Imprisonment for disobeying citation.

If a person compelled under section 2109.50 of the Revised Code to appear for examination refuses to answer interrogatories propounded, the probate court shall commit such person to the county jail and such person shall remain in close custody until he submits to the court's order.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-69; 114 v 320 (379); 128 v 76 (77), § 1. Eff 11-9-59.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. In a summary proceeding to recover judgment of money of decedent claimed to be concealed, embezzled or conveyed away, questions as to form and disposition of money withdrawn from bank were immaterial and irrelevant; and hence defendant could not be held for contempt under former GC § 10675 (RC § 2109.51) for refusing to answer them: Lindquist v. Hayes, 22 App 141, 153 NE 297.

§ 2109.52 Judgment on the complaint.

When passing on a complaint made under section 2109.50 of the Revised Code, the probate court shall determine, by the verdict of a jury if either party requires it or without if not required, whether the person accused is guilty of having concealed, embezzled, conveyed away, or been in the possession of moneys, chattels, or choses in action of the trust estate. If such person is found guilty, the probate court shall assess the amount of damages to be recovered or the court may order the return of the specific thing concealed or embezzled or may order restoration in kind. The probate court may issue a citation into any county in this state, which citation shall be served and returned as provided in section 2109.50, requiring any person to appear before it who claims any interest in the assets alleged to have been concealed, embezzled, conveyed, or held in possession and at such hearing may hear and determine questions of title relating to such assets. In all cases, except when the person found guilty is the fiduciary, the probate court shall forthwith render judgment in favor of the fiduciary or if there is no fiduciary in this state, the probate court shall render judgment in favor of the state, against the person found guilty, for the amount of the moneys or the value of the chattels or choses in action concealed, embezzled, conveyed away, or held in possession, together with ten per cent penalty and all costs of such proceedings or complaint; except that such judgment shall be reduced to the extent of the value of any thing specifically restored or returned in kind as provided in this section.

If the person found guilty is the fiduciary, the probate court shall forthwith render judgment in favor of the state against him for such amount or value, together with penalty and costs as provided in this section.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Under this section, the probate court may assess damages, or order return of the specific thing or things concealed or embezzled, and has authority to hear and determine questions of title relating to such assets: Jones v. Whaley, 10 OO 87 (CP).

2. Where the guardian of an incompetent filed in the probate court, on July 7, 1938, a complaint against A seeking to recover assets allegedly belonging to the guardianship estate, and A claimed to hold the assets by virtue of a trust created by the ward before the guardian was appointed, and the guardian claimed that his ward was incompetent to create the trust, the probate court, under the provisions of this section, being the amendment of a former analogous section (114 v 320, 379), and a part of the probate code, had jurisdiction to try the issue as to the title of said assets: In re Sanderson, 64 App 177, 17 OO 562, 28 NE(2d) 565.

3. The probate court is authorized under this section to hear and determine the "questions of title": In re Evans, 71 App 127, 25 OO 499, 41 NE(2d) 410.

4. In a hearing on a complaint under GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) the probate court is given jurisdiction to determine questions of title as provided by this section, and if the defendant is found guilty under the complaint the court has complete authority to render a money judgment: In re Howard, 79 App 203, 34 OO 537, 72 NE(2d) 502.

5. Under this section, the probate court has authority to determine the title of assets in dispute: In re Sibert, 46 OO 44, 101 NE(2d) 153 (App).

6. When the court finds that an executor has improperly distributed assets of an estate to himself as legatee, judgment may be rendered against him in favor of the estate for the amount distributed, together with ten per cent penalty and costs of the proceedings, as provided in this section: In re Walden, 34 OO(2d) 149, 214 NE(2d) 271 (PC).

7. In an action for recovery of concealed assets brought by an administrator in common pleas court under the provisions of GC § 10506-67 (RC § 2109.50) the common pleas court, by virtue of this section, has authority to hear and determine questions of title relating to such assets, and equitable jurisdiction wherever necessary to be invoked in order to grant full relief in any matter properly before the court: Smith v. Ross, 29 OLA 553.

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10678

1. It has been held that former GC § 10678 (see now RC § 2109.52) is unconstitutional in so far as it professes to authorize a judgment without any provision for trial by jury, or a right of appeal in cases where the defendant does not admit the truth of the complaints, for the court has no constitutional power to try such a case: Howell v. Fry, 19 OS 556.

2. Money which has been deposited voluntarily by decedent with defendant and which has not been used by defendant will not bear interest unless in the absence of a specific agreement, and a verdict which includes interest is excessive: Leonard v. State ex rel Scott, 3 App 313, 20 CC(NS) 340.

3. Under GC § 10678 (now GC § 10506-73 [RC § 2109.52]) the authority of the court and jury ends with a determination by the jury of the alleged guilt of the accused, and, if found guilty, with a determination of the amount of damages on account thereof for which judgment must be given with a penalty of ten per cent: Wilson v. Wilson, 12 OLA 704.

4. Where evidence fails to establish a cause of action for concealing or embezzling assets of decedent, but established a cause of action under code of civil procedure, court is not authorized to add ten per cent penalty to the amount found due: Skehan v. Reed, 14 OLA 96.

§ 2109.53 Judgment against fiduciary; removal. (GC § 10506-74)

If a judgment is rendered against a fiduciary under section 2109.52 of the Revised Code, he shall forthwith be removed by the probate court and that part of the trust not already administered shall be committed to some other person. A fiduciary so removed shall not receive compensation for acting as fiduciary and must be charged in his account with the amount of such judgment. Such fiduciary's property also shall be liable for the satisfaction of the judgment on execution issued thereon by his successor.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-74; 114 v 320 (380); 116 v 273 (276), § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10679.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. A judgment of "not guilty," rendered by a probate court in a proceeding on a complaint filed under this section, charging an administrator with the fraudulent concealment, embezzlement or giving away of assets of the estate, is entitled, on appeal, to all the weight which would be given a verdict of "not guilty" by a jury: In re Johnson, 38 OLA 372, 50 NE(2d) 273 (App).

§ 2109.54 Certificate of judgment; delivery to clerk of the court of common pleas. (GC § 10506-75)

The fiduciary in whose favor a judgment has been rendered by the probate court under section 2109.52 of the Revised Code shall forthwith deliver to the clerk of the court of common pleas a certificate of such judgment in accordance with section 2329.04 of the Revised Code, which certificate the probate judge shall make out and deliver to such fiduciary on demand. The clerk shall forthwith issue an execution of the court of common pleas for the amount of the judgment and the costs that have accrued or that may accrue thereon. Thenceforth proceedings on execution shall be the same as if the judgment had been rendered in such court of common pleas.

[FUNDS BELONGING TO UNKNOWN OR NONRESIDENT]

§ 2109.57 [Appointment of trustee of funds of unknown or nonresident.] (GC §§ 10506-78, 10506-81, 10506-82, 10506-83, 10506-79, 10506-80)

In any action or proceeding pending in a court of record, if it is made to appear to the court that any person entitled to all or a part of the proceeds of property sold in such action or proceeding is unknown or is a nonresident and not represented in such action or proceeding or that the person entitled cannot, at the time, definitely be ascertained, the probate court may appoint a trustee to whom the notes and mortgages for the unpaid part shall be made, delivered, and paid and to receive, hold, and manage such proceeds or part thereof. Such trustee shall collect the unpaid part of the proceeds of the property sold, by action or otherwise, and shall pay over such fund only on the order of the probate court appointing him.

Payment to such trustee shall be a bar to any claim thereafter made by any person and the persons or corporations paying such money in no case shall be required to see to the application of the money paid.

If a person entitled to any portion of the money held by such trustee fails for seven or more years after such trustee's appointment to make claim to the money and to present the proof necessary to entitle such person to such money, the prosecuting attorney of the county in which such trustee was appointed shall collect it, with the interest accrued thereon, from such trustee and pay it into such county's treasury, to be placed to the credit of the general fund.

When the probate court which appointed such trustee is satisfied that a person who appears and claims the moneys paid into the county treasury has a right to receive them, in whole or part, less the costs of collection by the prosecuting attorney, such court shall order the payment thereof to the person shown to be entitled to such moneys. Such person, on the judge's certificate, shall be given a warrant therefor by the county auditor.

[PAYMENT OR DISTRIBUTION]

§ 2109.59 [Failure of fiduciary to make payment or distribution.] (GC §§ 10506-86, 10506-87, 10506-88, 10506-89)

If a fiduciary, upon demand, refuses or neglects to pay any creditor whose claim has been allowed by the fiduciary and not subsequently rejected or to pay any creditor or make distribution to any person interested in the estate whose claim or interest has been established by judgment, decree, or order of court, including an order of distribution, such creditor or other person may file a petition against the fiduciary in the probate court from which the fiduciary received his appointment to enforce such payment or distribution, briefly setting forth therein the amount and nature of his claim or interest. Such petition shall not be filed against an executor or administrator until the expiration of the period prescribed in section 2117.30 of the Revised Code.

When such petition is filed, the probate court shall issue a citation to the fiduciary setting forth the filing of the petition and the nature of the claim of the petitioner and commanding such fiduciary to appear before the court on the return day thereof to answer and show cause why a judgment should not be rendered or order entered against him. Such citation shall be returnable not less than twenty nor more than forty days from its date and shall be served and returned by an officer as in the case of summons. Such citation may issue to any county in the state.

On the return of the citation the cause shall be for hearing, unless for good cause shown it is continued. The probate court may hear and determine all questions necessary to ascertain and fix the amount due from the fiduciary to the petitioner and render such judgment or make such order as may be proper. If necessary, such court may hear, determine, and settle the rights and claims of all parties interested in the subject matter of the petition. For such purpose the probate court may cause all parties in interest to be made parties to such petition by amended, supplemental, or crosspetition. The court shall cause notice to be served on all such parties in the manner provided in this section for service of the citation upon the fiduciary.

In any such proceeding the sureties on the bond of the fiduciary, if made parties thereto, may make any defense that the fiduciary could make and the court may render such judgment or make such order with respect to the sureties as may be proper.

Year's allowance to widow, death of widow does not affect, 2
Enforcing payment, 1, 10 et seq
Jurisdiction, 11 et seq

1. If a fiduciary refuses to make payment to any creditor whose claim has been allowed by fiduciary and not subsequently rejected, or to make payment to any creditor or other interested person whose claim has been established, such creditor, under authority of GC § 10506-86 (RC § 2109.59), may file a petition to enforce payment, briefly setting forth the nature of his claim, only in the probate court from which the fiduciary received his appointment: Wilder-muth v. Liggett, 75 App 410, 31 OO 240, 62 NE (2d) 522.

2. A husband died in 1921, survived by a widow and child who were appointed coexecutors of his will. A year's allowance of six thousand dollars was set off to the widow, of which one thousand dollars was paid prior to her death in 1923. By statute, at the time of the husband's death the year's allowance was a preferred claim. An action was brought pursuant to GC § 10506-86 (RC § 2109.59) et seq, by the successor fiduciary of the widow's estate to recover the unpaid portion of the year's allowance with interest. Held: The widow's year's allowance constituted a debt against her husband's estate and a vested right which did not become divested by the widow's death or any other contingency occurring after the amount thereof was fixed and allowed: Monger v. Jones, 91 App 246, 48 OO 347, 108 NE(2d) 116.

3. A judgment creditor, during the administration of an estate in the probate court and before an order of distribution is made, may maintain an action in the nature of a creditor's bill in the common pleas court to reach an interest of the judgment debtor-legatee in funds or property in the hands of the executor of such estate: Union Properties, Inc. v. Patterson, 143 OS 192, 28 OO 111, 54 NE(2d) 668.

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10509-199

Enforcing payment

10. The probate court is without jurisdiction to entertain an ex parte application by an heir, which application states only that the administratrix has made cash distribution out of the corpus of the estate to the other heirs, but not to the applicant, and praying the court for an order requiring the administratrix to make an immediate cash distribution to the applicant: In re Turpen, 26 OLA 584.

Jurisdiction

11. The common pleas court has no jurisdiction to hear and determine an action by a legatee against an executrix of an estate for converting a legacy to her own use, unless there has been a settlement of estate accounts, an order of distribution by the probate court and the expiration of thirty days, as provided in former GC §§ 10509-199 and 10509-206 (see now RC § 2109.59). Until such conditions have been met the probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine such action, including any matters of fraud: Neidecker v. Neidecker, 63 App 416, 17 OO 135, 26 NE(2d) 929.

12. The probate court and common pleas court were given concurrent jurisdiction by former GC §§ 10509-199 and 10509-206 (114 v 320) (see now RC § 2109.59), to compel an administrator or executor to make distribution at the suit of a distributee. It was an essential element of such action that thirty days should have passed after the settlement of the administrator's or executor's account and an order of distribution made thereon before the action to compel distribution could be filed: Heater v. Mitten-dorf, 72 App 4, 26 OO 508, 50 NE(2d) 559.

13. The constitution and the legislature have conferred upon the probate court exclusive jurisdiction in testamentary matters except in certain matters where the common pleas court of the county has concurrent original jurisdiction, as provided in GC § 10509-206 (RC § 2109.59), and if that exclusive jurisdiction is sought to be invaded by an order made to enjoin an officer of that court from performing his duties, which are exclusive within the jurisdiction of the probate court, then, of course, the court so issuing such order has exceeded its jurisdiction: State ex rel Bridge v. Krehbiel, 26 OLA 108.

§ 2109.60 Probate court may send case to the court of common pleas. (GC § 10506-90)

When a proceeding set forth in section 2109.59 of the Revised Code is pending in the probate court, such court, on motion of any party thereto, may reserve and send such cause to the court of common pleas which shall hear, settle, and determine all issues as provided in such section. In case of such reservation, the probate court shall prepare a transcript of the proceedings in the cause, so far as it has progressed, which, with the petition and other papers therein, forthwith shall be filed with the clerk of the court of common pleas.

HISTORY: GC § 10506-90; 119 v 394 (422), § 5. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10509-205.

Comment

General Code § 10506-90 was similar to former GC § 10509-205. While the probate court may refer the proceedings to the court of common pleas, it should be noted that the court of common pleas does not have original jurisdiction. This being a disciplinary proceeding, the original jurisdiction was confined to the probate court, and consequently there is no provision comparable to former GC § 10509-206.

[ACTION ON BOND]

§ 2109.61 Bond; parties to suit. (GC §§ 10506-91, 10506-92)

An action may be prosecuted on the bond of a fiduciary against any one or more of the obligors thereof by any person who has been injured by reason of the breach of any condition of the bond. Such action shall be prosecuted for the benefit of all persons who are interested in the estate and who have been similarly injured. Any such person or any obligor on the bond who is not already a party to the action may intervene therein or be made a party thereto by supplemental, amended, or crosspetition.

If a surety on the bond of a fiduciary is not made a party to an action or proceeding against such fiduciary, the fact that a judgment was rendered or an order was entered against the fiduciary shall constitute only prima-facie evidence of the justice and validity of the claim in an action subsequently brought against the sureties on the bond of the fiduciary.

§ 2111.01 Definitions.

As used in Chapters 2101. to 2131., of the Revised Code:

(A) "Guardian," other than a guardian under sections 5905.01 to 5905.19, of the Revised Code, means any person, association, or corporation appointed by the probate court to have the care and management of the person, the estate, or both of an incompetent or minor, or the division of mental retardation and developmental disabilities, or an agency under contract with the division for the provision of protective service under sections 5119.85 to 5119.89, of the Revised Code, appointed by the probate court to have the care and management of the person of an incompetent.

(B) "Ward" means any person for whom a guardian as defined in this section is acting.

(C) "Resident guardian" means a guardian appointed by a probate court to have the care and management of property in Ohio belonging to a nonresident ward.

(D) "Incompetent" means any person who by reason of advanced age, improvidence, or mental or physical disability or infirmity, chronic alcoholism, mental retardation, or mental illness, is incapable of taking proper care of himself or his property or fails to provide for his family or other persons for whom he is charged by law to provide, or any person confined to a penal institution within this state.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. For history of this section, see State ex rel Connor v. Lamneck, 133 OS 257, 10 OO 342, 13 NE(2d) 127.

2. The general rule that a party is deemed to have waived the disqualification of a juror unless he is able to show upon hearing that with the exercise of reasonable diligence he could not have objected to the seating of such juror at his impaneling thereof, applies to a juror who is an incompetent person under this section, and by reason of advanced age and mental and physical disability and infirmity is incapable of caring for his person and estate: Cottman v. Federman Co., 71 App 89, 25 OO 435, 47 NE(2d) 1009.

3. A person adjudged incompetent because of mental infirmity brought about by advanced age is "insane" within the meaning of that term as defined by this section: In re Jacobs, 73 App 286, 28 OO 449, 43 NE(2d) 879.

4. This statute treats incompetency resulting from drunkenness in the same way that it treats incapacity resulting from mental disability: Murphy v. Murphy, 85 App 392, 40 OO 254, 87 NE(2d) 102.

5. The terms "insane and lunatic" as used in this section include every species of insanity or mental derangement: Jacobs v. Porter, 36 OLA 282, 43 NE(2d) 879 (App).

7. In view of the provision of GC § 10507-61 (RC § 2111.47) relating to the effect of the termination of a guardianship of an imbecile, it is apparent that the legislature in defining the word "imbecile" as it did in this section, did not intend that it should mean "a condition of permanent and hopeless incapacity": Potts v. First-Cent. Trust Co., 37 OLA 382 (App).

9. A member of the state teachers retirement system who has the requisite age and years of service to qualify for superannuation retirement is not disqualified for such form of retirement merely by reason of his mental incompetency, and the guardian of the estate of the member may apply for the retirement allowance which is payable throughout the life of the member: 1956 OAG No.6553.

10. A guardian merely by virtue of his office is without authority to select a superannuation retirement payment option for his ward under RC § 3307.50, which would provide a lesser allowance of equivalent actuarial value to the ward for his lifetime and payments after the ward's death to a beneficiary designated by the guardian. Before the state teachers retirement board honors the selection of such an option, it should require adequate proof that a probate court has ordered or authorized the guardian to select such option: 1956 OAG No.6553.

§ 2111.02 Appointment of a guardian.

When found necessary, the probate court on its own motion or an application by any interested party shall appoint a guardian of the person, the estate, or both, of a minor, or incompetent, provided the person for whom the guardian is to be appointed is a resident of the county or has a legal settlement therein and, except in the case of a minor, has had the opportunity to have the assistance of counsel in the proceeding for the appointment of such guardian.

If a person is incompetent due to physical disability, the consent of the incompetent must first be obtained before the appointment of a guardian for him, and such person may select a guardian who shall be appointed if a suitable person.

The guardian of an incompetent, by virtue of such appointment shall be the guardian of the minor children of his ward, unless the court appoints some other person as their guardian.

When the primary purpose of the appointment of a guardian is, or was, the collection, disbursement, or administration of moneys awarded by the veterans administration to the ward, or assets derived therefrom, no court costs shall be charged in the proceeding for the appointment or in any subsequent proceedings made in pursuance of the appointment, unless the value of the estate, including the moneys then due under the veterans administration award, exceeds one thousand five hundred dollars.

1. For history of this section, see State ex rel Connor v. Lamneck, 133 OS 257, 10 OO 340, 13 NE(2d) 127.

1.1 Where there is not existing award of custody of an orphaned minor resident of Ohio by a foreign court, the probate court of the county of such residence has jurisdiction, under this section, to appoint a guardian of the minor, irrespective of the fact that the domicile of such minor may be in another state: Fore v. Toth, 168 OS 363, 7 OO(2d) 127, 155 NE(2d) 194 [79 OLA 15, 151 NE(2d) 777].

2. The spirit and purpose of the provision of this section, "that if the incompetency" of an incompetent "be due to physical disability or infirmity the consent of the incompetent" to the appointment of a guardian "must first be obtained," require that "the consent" should be in writing or made in open court by the proposed ward who is mentally competent:

In re Irvine, 72 App 405, 27 OO 332, 52 NE(2d) 536.

2.1 The probate court is a court of limited jurisdiction; its power to appoint a guardian and powers of the guardian to act under the authority of the court are fixed by statute: Zuber v. Zuber, 93 App. 195, 50 OO 496, 112 NE(2d) 688.

2.2 The practical effect of paragraph two of this section, regarding consent of the ward, is to place in the hands of the ward the power to select a guardian, because at any time before the appointment the applicant can withdraw the consent. In re Luft, 91 App 409, 45 OO 333, 97 NE(2d) 561.

2.3 Once a probate court properly appoints a guardian for a minor, exclusive, continuing jurisdiction upon matters of custody remain in that court, even though the minor has his domicile in some other county or state: Weigel v. Grossnickle, 100 App 106, 60 OO 66, 135 NE(2d) 894.

2.4 Where a testator devised certain real estate to his wife, and subsequently a guardian was appointed for the testator on the ground of physical incompetency, to which the testator gave written consent, a sale of the real estate by such guardian, under authority of the probate court, will result in an ademption: Roderick v. Fisher, 97 App 95, 54 OO 264, 122 NE(2d) 475.

2.5 The appointment of a guardian for an alleged incompetent can be made, under the provisions of this section, only upon the basis of mental disability or infirmity when the incompetent does not consent but in fact opposes the appointment: Jacobs v. Porter, 36 OLA 282, 43 NE(2d) 879 (App).

2.6 In the absence of abuse of discretion, the appointment of a guardian for an incompetent will not be set aside by an appellate court: In re Harris, 73 OLA 97, 136 NE(2d) 328.

2.7 In a hearing for the removal of a guardian on the grounds that such guardian was appointed without notice to or the consent of the ward evidence presented to the presiding judge at the time of the original appointment, contrary to the facts found by the court in its journal entry, is inadmissible: In re Gerstenek, 76 OLA 280, 139 NE(2d) 64 (App).

2.8 The question of consent, as required by the statute, to the appointment of a guardian is an issue of fact to be established by the evidence and not one affecting the court's jurisdiction: In re Gerstenek, 76 OLA 280, 139 NE(2d) 64 (App).

2.9 Where the notice served upon the ward in a guardianship proceeding stated "for the appointment of himself or some other suitable person as guardian," and during the course of the trial the original applicant withdrew and another, whose application for appointment was also before the court, was substituted in his place, and entry of withdrawal as to the original applicant was not a dismissal of the proceedings but merely a withdrawal as to the applicant personally: In re Gerstenek, 76 OLA 280, 139 NE(2d) 64 (App).

3. The appointment of a guardian of an incompetent person by reason of physical disability alone, with his written consent or request as provided by this section is not an abridgment of the personal and property rights of such incompetent and is not in violation of Article I, § 1, of the Constitution: In re Faulder, 1 OO 63 (CP).

4. The probate court has the right to examine personally a person charged with being incompetent, and a right to appoint competent persons to examine such person: In re Joyce, 19 OO 506 (PC).

5. The probate court exceeded its authority in ordering an examination of a person charged with being incompetent to be made by doctors selected by the applicant: In re Joyce, 19 OO 506 (PC).

5.1 General Code § 10507-1 (RC § 2111.01) et seq provide for the appointment by the probate court, when necessary, of a guardian of the person, or of the estate of a minor, or of both, who will have the care and management of the person or the estate of such minor, or both: Chertoff v. Commissioners, 35 OO 339, 160 F(2d) 691.

5.2 The appointment by the probate court of a guardian of an incompetent's person and estate will not interfere with the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas in a pending divorce action over the "assets of the marriage": In re Stephens, 30 OO(2d) 325, 202 NE(2d) 458 (PC).

5.3 There is no legal distinction between a guardian for a mentally incompetent person and a person incompetent by reason of physical disability or infirmity, except that specified in this section, which requires that a person for whom a guardian is to be appointed for reason of physical disability or infirmity must consent to the appointment of a guardian: In re Tillman, 73 OLA 534, 137 NE(2d) 172 (PC). [See also 100 App 291, 60 OO 254, 136 NE(2d) 291.]

5.4 When one, due to physical disability, has voluntarily consented to the appointment of a guardian under the statutes providing for such appointment and the court has acted upon the matter and made the appointment, the ward cannot terminate the guardianship by merely withdrawing her consent: In re Barr, 80 OLA 488, 156 NE(2d) 357 (PC).

5.6 An attorney who was requested by the superintendent of a county home to take appropriate steps to secure a guardian for an inmate who was in need of such protection and who thereafter filed an application for the appointment of himself or some suitable person, is an interested party within the meaning of this section, even though he did not personally know or had never seen his prospective ward and the allegations of mental incapacity in the application did not constitute a fraud upon the court: In re Tittington, 82 OLA 563, 162 NE(2d) 628 (PC).

6. A guardian may be appointed in Ohio, even though the minor has his domicile in some other county or state, under this section: Langan v. Kesinger, 23 OLA 392.

7. Where a consideration of all the evidence shows that the consent to the appointment of a guardian was not voluntarily and freely given in accordance with the requirements of GC § 10507-2 (RC § 2111.02), then the appointment is contrary to law and the application to dismiss the guardian will be sustained: In re Luft, 62 OLA 157, 107 NE(2d) 259 (App).

8. This section cited and discussed in 1950 OAG No.1533.

11. The term "court costs" as used in this section, refers to those charges or fees, fixed by statute, for services rendered by officers of the court in the progress of the cause or judicial proceeding and, specifically, includes fees of a sheriff for service on the necessary parties in a proceeding for the appointment of a guardian and any subsequent proceedings, but does not include charges or publication costs made by a newspaper incident to the publication of notice of the appointment of a guardian: 1956 OAG No.6592.

12. Court costs paid by mistake in a guardianship proceeding, by reason of this section, are not refundable by the probate court where such costs have become a part of the general fund of the county as provided in RC § 325.27: 1956 OAG No.6592.

13. The executive secretary of the Lucas County child welfare board may be appointed legal guardian of a minor when said minor's funds, originally deposited under the provisions of RC § 2111.05, have increased to over one thousand dollars: 1968 OAG No. 68-013.

Scope and construction

1. The steps necessary for the appointment of a guardian are proceedings in rem, and not inter partes, or adversary in character; and the order of appointment made in the exercise of such jurisdiction binds the ward, and the ward's presence is not necessary, unless, by reason of his right to choose his guardian or for other cause, the statute so requires: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455.

2. A minor, himself, cannot change his domicile, and as the residence of a minor is determined by the domicile of a parent or some one in loco parentis, the word "resident," as used in this section means domicile: In re Murray, 8 CC(NS) 498, 18 CD 652 [affirming 4 NP(NS) 233, 16 OD 612].

3. Where the father, who is the last surviving parent of a minor, dies while domiciled with the father's parents, and the minor continues to live with the grandfather for a time, the minor is a resident of the county in which the grandfather is domiciled, within the meaning of this section: In re Murray, 8 CC(NS) 498, 18 CD 652 [affirming 4 NP (NS) 233, 16 OD 612].

4. Under Ohio law the rules governing testamentary trusts and trustees are the same as those governing guardians and administration of estates: Boals v. Clingan, 6 NP(NS) 609, 16 OD 267.

5. The phrase "resident in such county" in this section is practically the same as "domicile"; hence, the domicile of a minor so long as both parents are living is that of the father, that of the surviving parent if one die, or if the grandparents stand in loco parentis, that of the grandparents: In re Clayton, 61 Bull 355.

Jurisdiction

6. To give the court jurisdiction over a minor, so as to authorize the appointment of a guardian for him, such minor must at the time of the appointment have an actual or constructive residence within the county; but the guardian derives his power from the appointment and giving bond, and letters of guardianship, need not, in fact, issue: Maxson v. Sawyer, 12 O 195, 25 Bull 250.

7. Probate court has exclusive jurisdiction: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455; Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1139.

8. Where a husband and wife are divorced and the court of common pleas granting the divorce also awards the custody and control of the children of the marriage, such children become the wards of that court, and the jurisdiction of the court over their custody and control is a continuing jurisdiction, and no other court can acquire jurisdiction over such children: In re Crist, 89 OS 33, 105 NE 71 [approving and following Hoffman v. Hoffman, 15 OS 427, and Rogers v. Rogers, 51 OS 1].

9. While a court of insolvency has continuing jurisdiction over a minor child, an order purporting to be made by another court appointing another guardian is void; and the guardian thus appointed cannot bring an action on behalf of the minor: Addams v. State ex rel Hubbell, 104 OS 475, 135 NE 667.

10. Any order of a court concerning the guardianship of a minor child is subject to be modified from time to time, as in the judgment of the court the best interests of the child may require: Addams v. State ex rel Hubbell, 104 OS 475, 135 NE 667.

11. During the continuing jurisdiction over minor children, other courts, whether inferior or superior, having concurrent jurisdiction of the custody of minor children, are by long and well-settled practice of this state denied the exercise of such jurisdiction: Addams v. State ex rel Hubbell, 104 OS 475, 135 NE 667.

12. Where a minor five years old leaves his grandfather's home where said minor is domiciled, with permission and consent, to live with his aunt in another county, the probate court of the latter county is without jurisdiction to appoint a guardian, while the grandfather has not changed domicile: In re Murray, 8 CC(NS) 498, 18 CD 652 [affirming 4 NP (NS) 233, 16 OD 612].

14. The probate court under this section has exclusive original jurisdiction to appoint and remove guardians, etc., and the orders of that court in such proceedings are not subject to collateral attack: Allen v. Lewis, 12 OD(NP) 81 [citing Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455; Heckman v. Adams, 50 OS 305].

15. Where a guardian has been appointed for a minor whose parents are living, and who are suitable to have custody of the minor, but not notified of the application and it further appears that the minor is about to be removed from the county, the common pleas court has jurisdiction by habeas corpus to require such minor to be returned to the custody and control of its parents: Fisher v. Madden, 12 OD (NP) 83.

16. Where a father before his death gave his child to the maternal grandparents in another state who kept him continuously until long after the father's death, the domicile of the child becomes that of the grandparents and a probate court in Ohio has no jurisdiction to appoint a guardian for such child: In re Clayton, 61 Bull 355.

For whom guardian may be appointed

17. To authorize the appointment of a guardian for a minor, the latter must, at the time of appointment, have an actual or constructive residence within the county: Lessee of Maxom v. Sawyer, 12 O 195.

18. Where the ward was both an infant and of unsound mind at the time a guardian was appointed and the record is silent as to the grounds for the appointment, but the guardian continued to act as such after the ward became of age, and was still recognized by the courts as guardian, the presumption is that the appointment covered both grounds: King v. Bell, 36 OS 460.

19. The right to society and possession of minor child may be taken from the parent for misuse, or something that will justify a court of chancery in interfering, and for the protection of the child; but first there must have been an adjudication: Boescher v. Boescher, 7 NP 418, 5 OD 184.

20. Appointment of guardian over a person, not of sufficient mentality to care for his property, is within the sound discretion of probate court; and an appointment will be affirmed when manifestly not against the weight of evidence: In re Wilson, 23 App 390, 155 NE 654.

Guardian of person

21. Relatives of agreed religious faith, other things being equal, should be appointed under antenuptial agreement as to religion, unless children's happiness will be risked by the change: In re Minors of Luck, 7 NP 49, 10 OD 1.

22. A court has no right to appoint a guardian for the person of a child who has a parent, without proof and finding, on notice to the parent, of the parent's unfitness. The right to the child is a property right and cannot be taken away without due process of law: Boescher v. Boescher, 7 NP 418, 5 OD 184.

23. Where one of the parents survives, a trust company may not act as guardian of the children: Meyer v. Karp, 26 NP(NS) 192.

24. Probate court has no authority to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor who is without estate, and where the record discloses affirmatively that the minor is without estate the appointment is void: In re Baier, 8 NP 107, 11 OD 47.

Order appointing guardian

25. An order of court appointing a guardian, made in the exercise of such jurisdiction cannot be collaterally impeached; and when the record shows nothing to the contrary, it will be conclusively presumed, in all collateral proceedings, that such order was made upon full proof of all the facts necessary to authorize it: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455.

Notice

26. In an application for the appointment of a guardian for a child who has one or more parents living, notice must be given to the parents of such child: In re Gerbig, 11 NP(NS) 529, 57 Bull 77.

27. It is not necessary to notify a minor of the application for guardianship; but the parents of the infant if living, unless they themselves are the applicants, should be notified: Fisher v. Madden, 12 OD(NP) 83.

Construction

1. This section, making physical disability or infirmity a ground for the appointment of a guardian of the property of a person mentally competent, but physically incompetent, is invalid: Schafer v. Haller, 108 OS 322, 140 NE 517, 30 ALR 1378.

2. Legal residence means continuous residence for twelve months: In re Canady, 4 NP 403, 7 OD 285.

Jurisdiction

3. Under existing legislation the probate courts of this state have power to appoint guardians for deaf and dumb persons of full age, whom they find to be incapable of managing their affairs, without submitting the question of incapacity to a jury of any kind: Shroyer v. Richmond, 16 OS 455.

4. The idiot must have resided within the county continuously for a period of at least twelve months, or come into the county with his father or some one having legal control over him, with the intention of making this his residence, before a guardian can be appointed for him by the probate court: In re Canady, 4 NP 403, 7 OD 285.

5. If a guardian of the estate of an insane person is appointed, and the insane person changes his domicile to another county, the former court has no jurisdiction over an application for a guardian for his person: In re Greer, 24 NP(NS) 46.

6. Before the probate court can appoint guardians for imbeciles the judge must be satisfied that the subject is an imbecile and a resident of this county: In re Shelleig, 8 NP 399, 11 OD 81.

Idiot, imbecile and lunatic

7. Mere fact that an aged woman shows infirmities of age, or peculiar conduct, is not sufficient to authorize the appointment of a guardian: In re Emswiler, 8 NP 132, 11 OD 10.

8. One who for some years has been wasting his property, making disadvantageous contracts, spending large sums of money in which he had only a life estate, for property which was not worth, when the money was invested, half the sum expended for it, is an imbecile within the meaning of the statute: In re Emswiler, 8 NP 132, 11 OD 10.

9. A person may be an imbecile, though able to govern himself so as not to need a guardian for his person. Therefore, when a person has become so infirm mentally that he cannot manage his affairs with sufficient capacity to preserve his property, a guardian may be appointed: In re Emswiler, 8 NP 132, 11 OD 10.

Appointment

10. Appointment may be made either for person or estate: Heckman v. Adams, 50 OS 305, 34 NE 155.

11. A conveyance by an incompetent, made on the day that entry of the appointment of a guardian is made on the docket, to one who knows that such proceedings are pending, will be set aside: Goss v. Fiorni, 108 OS 115, 140 NE 324 [affirming judgment of court of appeals, which on appeal reached similar conclusion as Fiorni v. Goss, 23 NP(NS) 303].

12. From a decision of the probate court, refusing to appoint a guardian for a person alleged to be incompetent by reason of advanced age, an appeal lies to the common pleas court: Romell v. Romell, 18 App 31.

13. The fact that a person who has been committed to a state hospital for the insane has been discharged therefrom, does not operate as a vacation of an order of the probate court which appointed a guardian for such person, which appointment cannot be attacked collaterally by reason of such discharge, and such insane person cannot bring an action in his own name: Reno v. Love, 26 CD 296, 60 Bull 497 (Ed) [affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 623].

14. Appointment of guardian is conclusive evidence of ward's incapacity to make or ratify a contract, pending the guardianship; as to ward's capacity to marry, to make a will or commit a crime, it is only prima facie evidence of incompetency: Jordan v. Dickson, 10 DecRep 147, 19 Bull 64 [for later opinion, see 10 DecRep 332, 20 Bull 360].

15. What must appear to justify appointment: In re Tempest, 21 Bull 301; France v. Frantz, 4 NP 278, 6 OD 555.

Notice

16. Before the amendment of 1889, a guardian for an insane wife could be appointed at any time without notice to the husband: Heckman v. Adams, 50 OS 305, 34 NE 155.

17. Before the amendment no notice was required on application for appointment of guardian for imbecile: In re Dickson, 10 DecRep 6, 18 Bull 37.

18. In hearing of application for appointment of guardian, failure to give notice to the alleged imbecile can be complained of only in a direct proceeding to set aside the appointment in probate court or reverse it on error: Jordan v. Dickson, 10 DecRep 332, 20 Bull 360 [for former opinion, see 10 DecRep 147, 19 Bull 64].

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 11011

1. The fact that no provision is made for a trial by jury does not render a statute for the appointment of a guardian invalid. Art. I, § 5 of the Ohio constitution does not apply: Hagany v. Cohnen, 29 OS 82.

2. Such guardianship is not conclusive evidence of want of capacity to form a valid marriage: McCleary v. Barcalow, 6 CC 481, 3 CD 548.

4. Guardianship on the ground of intemperance does not raise the same presumption of testamentary incapacity as would be the case if the guardianship rested upon the ground of insanity or imbecility: Fagan v. Welsh, 19 CC(NS) 177, 32 CD 409.

5. The probate court has no jurisdiction to find one an intemperate and appoint a guardian for him under this section, where the application for the appointment of a guardian alleges imbecility and is made under former GC § 10989 (see now RC § 2111.02): Urban v. Urban, 21 CC(NS) 458, 33 CD 387.

§ 2111.03 Application for appointment as guardian.

A person applying for appointment as guardian shall file in the office of the probate court an application verified by affidavit containing a statement of the whole estate of the ward, its probable value, the probable annual rents of the ward's real estate, and also the following:

(A) The application of the guardian of a minor shall contain:

- (1) Name, age, and residence of the minor;
- (2) Name and residence of each parent;
- (3) Name, degree of kinship, age, and address of next of kin if no parent is living or if the parent is absent, under disability, or for other reason cannot be notified;

(4) Name and residence of person having custody of minor.

(B) The application of the guardian of an incompetent shall contain:

- (1) Name, age, and residence of person for whom such appointment is sought;
- (2) Facts upon which the application is based;
- (3) Name, degree of kinship, age, and address of next of kin.

The court shall, of its own motion, proceed as provided in sections 2111.01 to 2111.48, inclusive, of the Revised Code, upon suggestion by the industrial commission that any person who has made application for or been awarded compensation or death benefits as an employee or the dependent of a killed employee is a minor, or incompetent. In such event no application need be filed and the commission shall furnish the court with the name and residence of such person and the name, degree of kinship, age, and address of the father, mother, or next of kin so far as is known to the commission.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. A proceeding of this kind is not an ordinary civil proceeding in which there is a party plaintiff and a party defendant, and in which a judgment is to be asked against any person. No pleadings are provided for except that the statute provides that an application for the appointment of a guardian shall contain allegations of certain facts. In re Joyce, 19 OO 506, 32 OLA 553.

2. Two applications attached together as one instrument, and containing all necessary information, were properly held to meet statutory requirement: In re Kollmeyer, 64 OLA 578, 113 NE(2d) 122.

3. An application for appointment as guardian for an incompetent, which is filed pursuant to RC §§ 2111.02 and 2111.03 raises a matter for determination by the probate court, i.e., the question as to whether the person for whom a guardian is sought is incompetent: In re Hill, 29 OO(2d) 60, 196 NE(2d) 816 (PC).

4. Where the probate court appoints a guardian for an incompetent, either on its own motion or pursuant to an application made in accordance with this section there is no statutory requirement for a hearing on every other application which may have been filed pursuant to this section: In re Hill, 29 OO(2d) 60, 196 NE(2d) 816 (PC).

§ 2111.04 Notice of appointment.

No guardian of the person, the estate, or both shall be appointed until at least three days after the probate court has caused written notice, setting forth the time and place of the hearing, to be served upon the following persons:

(A) In the appointment of the guardian of a minor, notice shall be served:

(1) Upon the minor, if over the age of fourteen years, by personal service;

(2) Upon each parent of the minor whose name and address are known or can with reasonable diligence be ascertained, provided the parent is free from disability other than minority;

(3) Upon the next of kin of the minor known to reside in the county in which application is made, if there is no living parent, the name and address of the parent cannot be ascertained, or the parent is under disability other than minority;

(4) Upon the person having the custody of the minor.

(B) In the appointment of the guardian of an incompetent, notice shall be served:

(1) Upon the person for whom appointment is sought by personal service;

(2) Upon the next of kin of the person for whom appointment is sought known to reside in the county in which application is made.

Notice may not be waived by the person for whom the appointment is sought.

From the service of notice until the hearing, no sale, gift, conveyance, or encumbrance of the property of the incompetent shall be valid as to all persons having notice of the proceeding.

Comment

The provision for notice in case of minors was new in the 1931 amendment to GC § 10507-4, as the former statutes contained no requirement of notice. General Code § 10507-4 was based upon the fundamental plan of the three former statutes which are here consolidated, viz., former GC § 10989, as to idiots, imbeciles, lunatics and incompetents; former GC § 10989-1, as to confined persons; and former GC § 11012, as to habitual drunkards.

2. Former GC § 11012 (see now RC § 2111.04), with reference to the appointment of guardians of habitual drunkards, did not prohibit the drunkard from buying necessities after service of notice: Brockway v. Jewell, 52 OS 187, 139 NE 470.

3. Statutory provisions are made for the appointment by the probate court of guardians of the estates of minors, but before this can be done, notice to the parents of the filing of the application and the time of hearing thereon must be given: In re Moyer, 68 App 319, 22 OO 483, 40 NE(2d) 695.

4. The provision of this section, that from the service of notice of a hearing for appointment of a guardian for an incompetent person until the hearing, no gift of property of the incompetent shall be valid as to persons having notice of such proceeding, is inapplicable where the evidence does not disclose that the named person received notice of the proceeding prior to delivery of the key: In re Stevenson, 79 App 315, 35 OO 78, 69 NE(2d) 426.

4.1 In a proceeding for an adjudication of incompetency, statutory requirements must be strictly adhered to, and, in the matter of service of process, compliance therewith is mandatory before the court acquires jurisdiction: In re Koenigshoff, 99 App 39, 58 OO 114, 119 NE(2d) 652.

4.2 The filing of a motion to vacate an adjudication of incompetency does not constitute an entry of appearance relating back to the time of notice of the original adjudication such as could, in effect, give the court jurisdiction over the person of the alleged incompetent even though he was not personally served: In re Koenigshoff, 99 App 39, 58 OO 114, 119 NE(2d) 652.

4.4 A daughter is a next of kin to a parent; and, under this section that written notice shall be served upon the next of kin before a guardian of the person, the estate, or both shall be appointed, a next of kin is an interested person: In re Tillman, 100 App

291, 60 OO 254, 136 NE(2d) 291.

4.5 In a proceeding for the appointment of a resident guardian for a nonresident confined person, compliance with this section, with respect to notice to such confined person is requisite before the court acquires jurisdiction, and a judgment, without notice to such person as required by such section, finding such person confined in a hospital as a mentally ill person and appointing a resident guardian of the Ohio estate of such person, is void for lack of due process. Whether substituted service be sufficient compliance with the statute, not decided: In re Reynolds, 103 App 102, 3 OO(2d) 175, 144 NE(2d) 501.

4.6 A judgment of the probate court appointing a guardian for a minor is a nullity and may be directly attacked in any court in any proceeding, where the provision of this section, having to do with notice, was not complied with and the hearing mentioned therein was set prior to the passing of the required three days: Horn v. Childers, 116 App 175, 22 OO(2d) 34, 187 NE(2d) 402.

4.7 The phrase, "known to reside in the county," as used in this section has reference to the knowledge had by those whose duty it is to give the notice in the first place—either the person applying for appointment as guardian or the court: In re Kelley, 1 OApp(2d) 137, 30 OO(2d) 159, 204 NE(2d) 96.

4.8 It will be presumed that a probate court, in the exercise of its constitutional jurisdiction as a court of general jurisdiction in the appointment and removal of guardians, in rendering a judgment terminating a guardianship, found all facts necessary for it to do so, including those facts having to do with service of notice and next of kin. Such presumption may be rebutted and overcome only by recitals in the record affirmatively showing a lack of jurisdiction: In re Kelley, 1 OApp(2d) 137, 30 OO(2d) 159, 204 NE(2d) 96.

4.9 The payment of a debt is not a sale, gift, conveyance or incumbrance prohibited by this section: Beach v. Baker, 79 OLA 136, 151 NE(2d) 677 (App).

6. This section, providing for notice in guardianship proceedings, requires notice only upon the next of kin of the person for whom appointment is sought known to reside in the county in which application is made and next of kin residing outside the county are not entitled to notice: In re Titington, 82 OLA 563, 162 NE(2d) 628 (PC).

6.1 The only notice which a person who is charged with being incompetent is entitled to under this section is simply a notice that an application has been filed for the appointment of a guardian, and this notice must be served upon him personally at least three days before the date of the hearing: In re Joyce, 19 OO 506 (PC).

6.2 Revised Code § 2111.04 provides that no sale, gift, conveyance, or encumbrance of the property of an [alleged] incompetent shall be valid as to any party having notice of the incompetency proceeding. Knowledge on the part of either party to a contract of sale will void the contract: Arledge v. Arledge, 72 OO(2d) 152 (CP) (1974).

6.3 A deed conveying land from a father to his daughter, which was executed after they had received notice of a hearing on an application to have the grantor adjudged an incompetent and for the appointment of a guardian, is void under this section, and a recitation in the deed that it was in confirmation of a warranty deed previously signed by the grantor and left in escrow does not avoid the application of the statute: Willis v. Peffers, 29 OLA 299.

7. "Heirs at law" designated in probate court under

GC § 10503-12 (RC § 2105.15) are not, during the lifetime of the person who designated them, "next of kin" entitled to written notice of the time and place of hearing of an application for appointment of a guardian for such person under this section, subsec. (B)2: Jones v. Jones, 30 OLA 499.

8. Under former GC § 10989 (see now RC §§ 2111.01, 2111.02 and 2111.04) it was held that on the hearing of the application for the appointment of a guardian of an alleged imbecile, failure to give notice to the alleged imbecile can be complained of only in a direct proceeding to set aside the appointment in the probate court or reverse it on error: Jordan v. Dickson, 10 DecRep 332, 20 Bull 360 [for former opinion, see 10 DecRep 147, 19 Bull 64].

§ 2111.05 [Estates not more than three thousand dollars.]

When the whole estate of a ward, or of several wards jointly, under the same guardianship, does not exceed three thousand dollars in value, the guardian may apply to the probate court for an order to terminate the guardianship. Upon proof that it would be for the best interest of the ward to terminate the guardianship, the court may order the guardianship terminated, and direct the guardian, if the ward is a minor, to deposit the assets of the guardianship in a depository authorized to receive fiduciary funds, payable to the ward when he attains majority, or the court may authorize the delivery of the assets to the natural guardian of the minor, to the person by whom the minor is maintained, to the executive secretary of children services in the county, or to the minor himself.

If the ward is an incompetent, and the court orders the guardianship terminated, the court may authorize the deposit of the assets of the guardianship in a depository authorized to receive fiduciary funds in the name of a suitable person to be designated by the court, or if the assets do not consist of money, the court may authorize delivery to a suitable person to be designated by the court. The person receiving the assets shall hold and dispose of them in the manner the court directs.

If the court refuses to grant the application to terminate the guardianship, or if no such application is presented to the court, the guardian shall only be required to render account upon the termination of his guardianship, upon order of the probate court made upon its own motion, or upon the order of the court made on the motion of a person interested in the wards or their property, for good cause shown, and set forth upon the journal of the court.

If the estate is three thousand dollars or less and the ward is a minor, the court may, without the appointment of a guardian by the court, or the giving of bond, authorize the deposit in a depository authorized to receive fiduciary funds, payable to the guardian when appointed, or to the ward when he attains majority, or the court may authorize delivery to the natural guardian of the minor, to the person by whom the minor is maintained, to the executive secretary who is responsible for the administration of children services in the county, to the division of mental retardation or to the administrator of an agency under contract with the division for the provision of protective service under sections 5119.85 to 5119.89 of the Revised Code, or to the minor himself.

If the whole estate of a person over eighteen years of age, who has been adjudged mentally ill or mentally retarded, does not exceed three thousand dollars in value, the court may, without the appointment of a guardian by the court or the giving of bond, authorize the deposit of the estate in a depository authorized to receive fiduciary funds in the name of a suitable person to be designated by the court, or if the assets do not consist of money, the court may authorize delivery to a suitable person to be designated by the court. The person receiving the assets shall hold and dispose of them in the manner the court directs.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Probate court has no authority to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor who is without estate; and where the record discloses affirmatively that the minor was without estate, the appointment was void, and parents are entitled to a writ of habeas corpus to obtain custody of such child: In re Baier, 8 NP 107, 11 OD 47.

2. A child welfare board when its executive secretary has been duly designated by the probate court under this section and RC § 5153.18, as trustee of funds of one of its wards, is not empowered to make disposition of said funds except as authorized or approved by the probate court who has jurisdiction in the matter: 1958 OAG No.1990.

3. Pursuant to this section and RC § 5153.18, the executive secretary of a county welfare board, acting as trustee of an estate of a ward which is less than one thousand dollars, may use those assets for medical and dental care of such child subject to the approval of the probate court: 1959 OAG No.826.

4. Pursuant to this section and RC § 5153.18, the executive secretary of a county welfare board, acting as the trustee of a minor's estate of less than one thousand dollars, may administer those assets without being appointed guardian of such minor: 1959 OAG No.826.

5. The executive secretary of the Lucas County child welfare board may be appointed legal guardian of a minor when said minor's funds, originally deposited under the provisions of RC § 2111.05, have increased to over one thousand dollars: 1968 OAG 68-036.

§ 2111.06 Guardian of the person.

If the powers of the person appointed as guardian of a minor or incompetent are not limited by the order of appointment, such person shall be guardian both of the person and estate of the ward. In every instance the court shall appoint the same person as guardian of the person and estate of any such ward, unless in the opinion of the court the interests of the ward will be promoted by the appointment of different persons as guardians of the person and of the estate.

A guardian of the person of a minor shall be appointed as to a minor having neither father nor mother, or whose parents are unsuitable persons to have the custody and tuition of such minor, or whose interests, in the opinion of the court, will be promoted thereby. A guardian of the person shall have the custody and provide for the maintenance of the ward, and if the ward is a minor, such guardian shall also provide for the education of such ward.

Comment

General Code § 10507-6 was similar to former GC § 10916 relative to the appointment of guardians of minors. It also expressly provided that a guardian may be appointed of the person even though there is no estate. It was held under the former section that the probate court had no authority to appoint a guardian of the person of a minor who had no estate, and where the record disclosed affirmatively that the minor had no estate the appointment was void: In re Baier, 8 NP 107, 11 OD 47.

§ 2111.07 Powers of guardian of person and estate. (GC § 10507-7)

Each person appointed guardian of the person and estate of a minor shall have the custody and tuition of his ward and the management of such ward's estate during minority, unless such guardian is removed or discharged from such trust or the guardianship terminates from any of the causes specified in Chapters 2101. to 2131., inclusive, of the Revised Code.

§ 2111.08 Parents are natural guardians. (GC § 10507-8)

The wife and husband are the joint natural guardians of their minor children and are equally charged with their care, nurture, welfare, and education and the care and management of their estates. The wife and husband have equal powers, rights, and duties and neither parent has any right paramount to the right of the other concerning the custody of the minor, the control of the services or the earnings of such minor, or any other matter affecting the minor; provided that if either parent, to the exclusion of the other, is maintaining and supporting the child, such parent shall have the paramount right to control the services and earnings of the child. Neither parent shall forcibly take a child from the guardianship of the parent entitled to its custody.

In case the wife and husband live apart, the court may award the guardianship of a minor to either parent, and the state where the parent having the lawful custody of the minor resides has jurisdiction to determine questions concerning the minor's guardianship.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. This section makes parents the natural guardians of their minor children and equally charges them with their care, etc., and "the care and management of their estates": In re Moyer, 68 App 319, 22 OO 483, 40 NE(2d) 695.

2. In a controversy as to the custody of the child, the paramount object which governs the court is the benefit to the child, and all rights must yield to that consideration. But when all else is equal, and no present reason exists for departure from the rule, the right of the father to the custody of his minor child is superior to that of any other person: Ex parte Coons, 11 CD 208.

3. In the exercise of its continuing jurisdiction, the court is not bound by the custody provisions of a separation agreement incorporated into a divorce decree: Bastian v. Bastian, 81 OLA 408, 13 OO(2d) 267, 160 NE(2d) 133.

4. There is a presumption that the best interests of a bastard child require it to be in its mother's custody, and the burden is upon the person disputing such mother's right to custody to prove that such child should not be in its mother's custody: In re Gary, 112 App 331, 14 OO(2d) 431, 167 NE(2d) 509.

5. A parent has a right to the custody of his child against all other persons unless and until it is shown that the parent has relinquished this right by contract, forfeited it by abandonment, or lost it because of his unfitness or inability to provide a suitable home for the child: Baker v. Rose, 57 OO(2d) 57, 28 OMisc 200, 270 NE(2d) 678 (1970).

§ 2111.09 Eligibility as administrator or executor.

Unless expressly appointed or designated to act both as guardian and executor by a last will in writing, no person who is or has been an administrator or executor of a last will shall, prior to the approval of his final account as such executor or administrator, be appointed a guardian of the person and estate or of the estate only of a ward who is interested in the estate administered upon or entitled to an interest under such will, except that a surviving spouse may be executor or administrator of the deceased spouse's estate and also guardian of the person and estate or of the estate only of a minor child of such surviving spouse, whether or not such minor child is interested in the estate of the deceased spouse. But an executor or an administrator may be appointed a guardian of the person only of a ward.

Comment

Such an appointment is regarded as void in a collateral proceeding: Scobey v. Gano, 35 OS 550. Compare Easton v. Wittekind, 27 NP(NS) 525, wherein it is held that the proceedings of a guardian to sell the minor's real estate, which are carried on in good faith and confirmed, are not a nullity because the guardian was also executor of the estate contrary to former GC § 10917.

It was formerly the law that a married woman could not be a guardian. Later, this was a subject of considerable controversy, but now the law is settled that a married woman occupies the same status as a single woman, and therefore there is no legal impediment to her appointment.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The proceedings of the guardian of a minor, to sell the minor's real estate, which are carried on in good faith and confirmed by probate court, are not a mere nullity notwithstanding the guardian held office illegally by reason of the fact that he was also executor of an estate in which the minor was interested, contrary to the provisions of GC § 10917: Easton v. Wittekind, 27 NP(NS) 525.

2. Under GC § 10917, in effect prior to January 1, 1932, no person who at the time was or had been an administratrix or executrix of a last will prior to the approval of her final account as such executrix or administratrix might be appointed a guardian of the estate of a minor who was interested in the estate administered upon or entitled to an interest under and by virtue of such will: In re Zimmerman, 141 OS 207, 25 OO 326, 47 NE(2d) 782.

A minor over the age of fourteen years may select a guardian who shall be appointed if a suitable person. If such minor fails to select a suitable person, an appointment may be made without reference to his wishes. The minor shall not select one person to be the guardian of his estate only and another to be the guardian of the person only, unless the court which appoints is of the opinion that the interests of such minor will thereby be promoted.

A surviving parent by last will in writing may appoint a guardian for any of his children, whether born at the time of making the will or afterward, to continue during the minority of the child or for a less time.

When the father or mother of a minor names a person as guardian of the estate of such minor in a will, the person named shall have preference in appointment over the person selected by such minor. A person named in such will as guardian of the person of such minor shall have no preference in appointment over the person selected by such minor, but in such event the probate court may appoint the person named in the will, the person selected by the minor, or some other person.

Whenever a testamentary guardian is appointed, his duties, powers, and liabilities in all other respects shall be governed by the law regulating guardians not appointed by will.

1. A minor may select one guardian for its estate and another for its person if the interest of such minor will be promoted by such choice: Fisher v. Madden, 12 OD(NP) 83.

7. Mother divorced and awarded custody of child, cannot appoint a guardian by her will: In re Coons, 20 CC 47, 11 CD 208.

Testamentary guardian to have preference

17. A decree of divorce which gives the custody of a minor child to one of the parents does not clothe that parent with authority to appoint a testamentary guardian for the child, and as between the testamentary guardian and the surviving parent, the court will consider only the best interests of the child in choosing its guardian: In re Gerbig, 11 NP(NS) 529, 57 Bull 77.

 (B) To provide suitable maintenance for his ward when necessary, which must be paid out of the estate of such ward upon the order of the guardian of the person of such ward;
 (C) To provide such maintenance and education for such ward as the amount of his estate justifies when the ward is a minor and has no father or mother, or has a father or mother who

Divorce action by guardian on behalf of insane ward. (Case note.) 2 OO 221.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. When the estate of the child is sufficient for its support and exceeds that of the parent, the child should be maintained out of its own estate. This statute does not fix the rule that the parent is bound to support the ward absolutely, no matter what the relative size of their respective estates may be: Wing v. Hibbert, 20 CC 404, 11 CD 192 [on appeal from 7 NP 124, 8 OD 65].

3. While this section provides that "no part of the ward's estate shall be used for the support, maintenance, or education of such ward unless ordered and approved by the court," the statute does not require that the order of the court for payment be made prior to the rendition of the services, and the court may consider the matter when it is brought before it on exceptions to an accounting, the question then being whether or not the payments made were reasonable under the circumstances: In re Tillman, 73 OLA 534 (PC).

4. Where there was no order for the payment of a claim made and approved by the court in a guardianship proceeding, it could not be maintained against the administration of the ward's estate and if that part of services represented by nursing was not included within the coverage of the statute, it could not be separated from the other items claimed. The court went on to say that the word "maintenance" used in this section includes all necessary and requisite service conducive to the physical, moral or mental well-being of the ward, including nursing: In re Burns, 52 OLA 134, 79 NE(2d) 234 [affirming In re Burns, 79 NE(2d) 711].

5. This section does not require that the court's order for payment be made prior to rendition of the service; an order made subsequent thereto would be a compliance therewith: In re Burns, 52 OLA 134, 79 NE(2d) 234 [affirming In re Burns, 79 NE(2d) 711].

6. Under RC §§ 2111.07, 2111.13 and 2111.14 a guardian may make expenditures for the ward's support, maintenance and education: Faber v. United States, 309 FSupp 818, 53 OO(2d) 246, 26 OMisc 277.

7. It is the duty of the guardian of a minor, when necessary, to provide for the maintenance and education of his ward, and the cost thereof may be paid from the estate of the minor to the extent his estate justifies, but no part of the estate may be used for these purposes unless approved by the court: 1932 OAG No. 4864.

8. In the event the probate court has appointed a guardian for an applicant for an old age pension, and if by virtue of GC § 1359-6 (repealed, 124 v 471 [475]) the division requires as a condition precedent to the granting of a pension a transfer of his real estate, the probate judge has authority to authorize the guardian to transfer real estate in trust to the division: 1935 OAG No.4338.

§ 2111.14 Duties of guardian of estate.

In addition to his other duties, every guardian appointed to take care of the estate of a ward shall have the following duties:

(A) To make and file a full inventory verified by oath, within three months after his appointment, of the real and personal estate of his ward with its value and the value of the yearly rent of the real estate, provided that if the guardian fails to file such inventory for thirty days after he has been notified of the expiration of the time by the probate judge, such judge shall remove him and appoint a successor;

(B) To manage the estate for the best interest of his ward;

(C) To pay all just debts due from such ward out of the estate in his hands, collect all debts due to the ward, compound doubtful debts, and appear for and defend, or cause to be defended, all suits against his ward;

(D) To obey all orders and judgments of the courts touching the guardianship;

(E) To bring suit for his ward when such suit is for the best interests of such ward;

(F) To settle and adjust, when necessary or desirable, the assets which he may receive in kind from an executor or administrator to the greatest advantage of his ward. Before such settlement and adjustment is valid and binding, it must be approved by the probate court and such approval entered on its journal. Such guardian must also have the approval of the court to hold the assets as received from the executor or administrator or to hold what may be received in the settlement and adjustment of such assets.

No guardian appointed to take care of the estate of a ward may open a safety deposit box held in the name of the ward, until the contents of the box have been audited by an employee of the county auditor in the presence of the guardian and a verified report of the audit has been filed by the county auditor with the probate court which shall then issue a release to the guardian permitting the guardian to have access to the safety deposit box of the ward.

1. Under RC §§ 2111.07, 2111.13 and 2111.14 a guardian may make expenditures for the ward's support, maintenance and education: Faber v. United States, 309 FSupp 818, 53 OO(2d) 246, 26 OMisc 277.

1.1 A guardian is liable to account to his ward for any part of the ward's estate lost or wasted through the failure of the guardian to exercise reasonable diligence and that care which a reasonable man would have used in the conduct of his own affairs: In re Zimmerman, 141 OS 207, 25 OO 326, 47 NE(2d) 782.

1.2 Where a person, now deceased, created during her lifetime a joint and survivorship bank account for the benefit of the survivor, and the trial court finds that the deceased intended to create a joint and survivorship account, and the evidence and the record support that finding, the fact that the decedent, after she had created the account, was declared to be an incompetent and a guardian was properly appointed for her, does not, as a matter of law, terminate the joint and survivorship nature of the account: Miller v. Yocum, 21 OS(2d) 162, 50 OO(2d) 372, 256 NE(2d) 208 (1970) [affirming 18 OApp(2d) 52, 47 OO(2d) 37].

2. Where reasonable grounds for contest of a will exist, it is "for the best interests of the ward," within the meaning of this section, for the guardian to contest any will under which the ward receives substantially less than he would receive as an heir-at-law, had there been no will: In re Kowalke, 80 App 515, 36 OO 305, 76 NE(2d) 899.

3. An action instituted by a duly appointed guardian of an incompetent, in which personal rights of the guardian are asserted against the incompetent antagonistic to his interests, should be suspended until a successor guardian has been appointed by the court making the original appointment and made a party to the action instituted by the original guardian: *Murphy v. 4. Where a husband has entered into contracts of insurance in which his wife is named beneficiary, in which contracts he has reserved the right to change the beneficiary provisions, and, after agreeing with the insurance company upon a plan for the payment of the proceeds of the policies in the event of his

5. This section and GC § 10507-26 (RC § 2111.23) are in pari materia, and are the only sections which control defenses made by ward under the disability of incompetency: Hasty v. Weller, 19 OO 304 (PC).

6. Under this section, a guardian has the duty to manage the estate for the best interests of his ward, and where it appears to the probate court that it would be to the best interests of the ward to elect to purchase the mansion house under RC § 2113.38, such court has the inherent power to permit and direct the guardian to make the election to purchase the mansion house at the appraised value: Dorfmeier v. Dorfmeier, 69 OLA 15, 123 NE(2d) 681 (PC).

7. It was the duty of a guardian to pursue his ward's workmen's compensation claim: In re Moore, 79 OLA 112, 154 NE(2d) 675.

Scope

1. The language of this section is very comprehensive, and includes whatever may be part of an estate, whether derived from personality or realty. Liability of substituted surety for previous sale of real estate by guardian, see Tuttle v. Northrup, 44 OS 178, 1 NE 581.

Jurisdiction

2. Jurisdiction of the probate court under this section is exclusive: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1139.

3. If the probate court could compel an accounting without notice, still the jurisdiction would at some time become lost, and when this is so, an action in equity might be maintained on the bond without that accounting: Gilbert v. Gilbert, 13 CC 29, 7 CD 58.

4. It is the duty of the probate court, either with or without complaint being first made, to enforce the performance of the duties required by this section, and all other requirements relating to the duties of guardians, to preserve the estate of minors: In re Strickland, 7 NP 233, 1 OD 702.

5. The probate court has authority to pass upon all questions of investment and reinvestment: Guthrie v. Cincinnati Gas &c. Co., 2 NP(NS) 117, 15 OD 23.

6. The exclusive jurisdiction of the probate court extends to matters omitted from the account, as well as those included in it: State v. Beatty, 33 Bull 109.

Management

7. Guardian having control over estate of insane ward need not have authority to dictate what her residence should be (former GC § 10991 [see now RC § 2111.14]): Bishop v. Bishop, 40 App 493, 179 NE 142.

8. Where a guardian for the purpose of paying for improvements to land, in the possession of or claimed by his ward, gave a lien on the accruing rents, it was held that if the guardian had power to encumber the land, the ward could not overreach the lien by purchasing a paramount and better title than he had when the lien was created; for the contract of the guardian, made within the extent of his power, binds the ward the same as if it were his own: Este v. Strong, 2 O 401.

9. Guardian may answer for ward: Ewing v. Higby, 7 O (pt1) 198; Ewing v. Hollister, 7 O (pt2) 138.

10. Where the trustees act within the scope of their authority, and exercise such prudence, care and diligence as men of ordinary prudence, care and diligence in like matters of their own, they should not be held accountable for losses happening from their management of the trust funds: Miller v. Proctor, 20 OS 442.

11. Guardian is charged with the duty of listing ward's estate for taxation, and payment, as well as the general management of such estate. He is not responsible for an abuse of such power: Campbell v. Park, 32 OS 544.

12. Where an action is prosecuted by A, guardian for B, on an instrument payable to "A, guardian of B," the fact that the ward becomes of age, pending the suit, affords no grounds to abate it: Gard v. Neff, 39 OS 607.

13. Summons on the ward cannot be waived by the guardian. The minor may prosecute error for such defect, upon arriving at majority: Roberts v. Roberts, 61 OS 96, 55 NE 411.

14. Consent of a guardian, if authorized by a statute, is probably not warranted in a proceeding commenced by himself in his own interest, and where his position is adverse to his ward: Ream v. Wolls, 61 OS 131, 55 NE 176.

15. It is the duty of a guardian for a lunatic to appear and defend, or cause to be defended, all suits against his ward, citing this statute: Stuard v. Porter, 79 OS 1, 85 NE 1062.

16. The provision of former GC § 10933 (see now RC § 2111.14), to the effect that the guardian may appear for his ward, does not authorize him to enter into a contract to bind his ward's estate for services rendered in litigation: Payne v. Rech, 6 App 327, 27 OCA 60, 28 CD 258.

17. A qualified guardian may be substituted for a disqualified one as a party to a suit: Weiland v.

Muntz, 2 CC(NS) 71, 15 CD 185.

18. A letter from the probate judge of the county in which the guardian was appointed, stating she has moved to another state with her wards, and has been reappointed in that state, and that a transfer of the Ohio securities belonging to the wards having become necessary, the sale of the securities to the party to whom the letter is addressed is thereby ratified, merely carries the information that the entire management of the estate of the wards has been transferred to the courts of such other state, and is without significance in so far as the question of authority for the sale and transfer of the securities may be concerned: Merchants &c. Sav. Bank v. Schirk, 5 CC (NS) 569, 17 CD 125.

19. The right to draw upon the principal of the ward's estate, if the income proves inadequate for the needs of the ward, see In re Hough, 2 NP 382, 1 OD 699.

20. Where a fund is given to a guardian, the principal to be divided among the wards when they become of age, and in the meantime the interest and income from such principal to be paid to a third person, the guardian will hold the principal as guardian for his wards, and the interest thereon as trustee for such third person: In re Kaufman's Estate, 7 NP 552, 5 OD 407.

21. It is the duty of a guardian to keep real estate belonging to his ward in reasonable repair, and where the property is occupied by the guardian, he is chargeable with a fair rental therefor, and he may deduct from the rental the cost of reasonable and necessary repairs made by him upon the property during his tenancy: In re Connell, 12 NP(NS) 311, 56 Bull 142.

23. Where upon a guardian's sale of ward's property, the purchaser fails to make payments as the terms of the sale require, necessitating a resale, the guardian or the administrator of the estate may sue for the difference in price realized at the second sale and the costs of such sale: Clawson v. Beatty, 36 Bull 214 [supreme court, without report].

Accounts

24. A guardian may, in his account filed for settlement in the probate court, charge all proper debts due from his ward, although accruing prior to guardianship; for he cannot bring an action against himself or his ward while the relationship continues. The probate court has no discretion to refuse or settle them, though he should disallow items which are improper charges: Davis v. Ford, 7 O (pt2) 104.

25. When a guardian closes his account with his ward by filing a final account in the probate court, an amount being due his ward, for which he induces her to sign a receipt as for money paid, he agreeing to be responsible to her for the amount, with interest, an action may be maintained upon such agreement by the ward, and the sum actually due recovered from the guardian without in any way opening or reviewing the accounts which had been settled in the probate court: Lindsay v. Lindsay, 28 OS 157.

26. No limitation of time exists which will bar the issuing of a citation requiring a guardian to file an account of his trust (Phillips v. State ex rel Harter, 5 OS 122, disapproved and overruled: McClelland v. State ex rel Clark, 101 OS 42, 127 NE 409 [affirming State ex rel Clark v. McClelland, 30 OCA 522]).

27. Action to reopen account of guardian within two years after ward becomes of age is authorized by statute: Read v. Marty, 6 OLA 199.

28. Where a former ward, many years after he became of age, asks for an accounting by his former guardian, some legal notice must be given the guardian before the accounting may be had, and where upon an action on the bond the surety alone depends, the surety cannot be met with the objection that there had been an accounting in the probate court without notice to the former guardian or surety, and almost twenty years after the bond had been given: Gilbert v. Gilbert, 13 CC 29, 7 CD 58.

29. Approval by the probate court on exceptions by guardian to the allowance and payment by a former guardian of a claim against the ward in favor of an estate in which he was executor, is conclusive against the present guardian suing such executor to get back the money, although the court believes such claim was unfounded: Lynch v. Cogswell, 18 CC 641, 7 CD 12.

30. The administrator of a deceased guardian should file the account of the deceased guardian and turn over the money in his hands to the newly appointed guardian, immediately after his appointment: In re Estate of Bruckmann, 1 NP(NS) 7, 48 Bull 637.

31. A long delay in filing exceptions to his guardian's account, there being no excuse for such delay, is laches, especially where the filing is delayed until after the death of the guardian, thus depriving the sureties of their main witness: In re Streit, 12 OD (NP) 158.

32. Money which the guardian had no right to receive, being paid him by an executor under an order of court without jurisdiction, and belonging in fact to other persons, must be accounted for as assets by him and his sureties, and they are estopped to set up the illegality or the title of others: In re Cloud, 20 Bull 455.

Payment on discharge

33. Mere delay of a ward, on his arriving of age, to compel his guardian to settle his accounts in the probate court, does not discharge the sureties, notwithstanding the guardian may, in the meantime, have become insolvent: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1139.

34. The duty of guardian to pay over funds to ward arises expressly by reason of this section, without any order of distribution: Lamkin v. Robinson, 10 NP(NS) 1, 21 OD 13 [appealed, 15 CC(NS) 126, 24 CD 91, which was affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 603, and Stevens v. Robinson, 88 OS 603; for a later opinion, see Lamkin v. Robinson, 16 App 440, 32 OCA 401, 35 CD 767; motion to certify record overruled, 20 OLR 367].

35. Receipt by ward, on coming of age, to the guardian for the balance due, filed in court, but not seen by or influencing the sureties, is no defense for them if it was without consideration or payment: Meier v. Herancourt, 8 Bull 29.

Claims against ward

36. A guardian cannot sustain an action against his ward, while the relation of guardian and ward subsists, for advances made to his ward, as evidenced by a balance due to him on settlement with the court: Davis v. Ford, 7 O (pt2) 104.

37. Action to recover any balance that may be due him from his late ward must be brought in the proper court after such balance is declared in probate court, and after the relation between them ceases to subsist: Davis v. Ford, 7 O (pt2) 104.

39. The rule which permits a widowed mother, without means or income other than that resulting from her own labor, to charge the estate of her child for support and education, is applicable to one who, by her own exertions, supported a stepson until he was sixteen years of age: Peters v. Scoble, 7 CC (NS) 417, 18 CD 541; see Spink v. Spink, 7 CC(NS) 89, 18 CD 94.

40. A demurrer will lie against a count in an action for recovery from a ward, or money advanced by her guardian, if there is no averment of an express promise to pay: Fourth Nat. Bank v. Hopple, 8 NP 473, 11 OD 483 [affirmed, Hopple v. Fourth Nat. Bank, Hosea, 428; for a later opinion in same case, see Fourth Nat. Bank v. Hopple, 8 NP 473, 11 OD 483].

41. Where a guardian surrendered possession of his ward's estate by operation of law, and without opportunity to make himself whole, an equitable action may be maintained in his favor against the ward's general estate for indemnification: Fourth Nat. Bank v. Hopple, 8 NP 473, 11 OD 483 [affirmed, Hopple v. Fourth Nat. Bank, Hosea, 428; for a later opinion in same case, see Fourth Nat. Bank v. Hopple, 8 NP 473, 11 OD 483].

42. A parent cannot, in the absence of disparity between the means of the minor and the parent, and where he is earning sufficient to support himself and child, reimburse himself out of the minor's estate: In re Gould's Estate, 2 OD(NP) 398.

Payment of debts

43. Where one as guardian, employed counsel to bring suit against a railroad for wrongful death, a suit for fees against the guardian in his representative capacity cannot be maintained: Hurd v. Wheeling & Co. R. Co., 4 NP 404, 6 OD 545.

44. The cost of repairs of property of a ward should be made from the income of the ward's estate, or if the income is insufficient, from the principal, leave so to do having been first obtained from the probate court: In re Connell, 12 NP(NS) 311, 56 Bull 142.

Investments

45. A guardian is bound to employ money of an infant so as to make interest if practicable, and he is chargeable with interest if he fails to do so: Armstrong v. Miller, 6 O 118.

47. One who buys notes bearing on their face the marks of a trust fund, is put upon inquiry: Strong v. Strauss, 40 OS 87.

48. Where a guardian has had the opportunity to show, by his own oath or otherwise, his inability to invest, and does not, inability to invest will not be presumed to excuse him from interest: Armstrong v. Miller, W 562.

50. A guardian holding purchase money, notes and a mortgage received on sale of the vendor's land, sold them before maturity by representing that the proceeds were to be used to pay debts of the ward, but he appropriated part of the proceeds. Held: As to such part, the buyers could not recover on foreclosure: McFarland v. Harper, 33 Bull 87.

Settlements and compromises

51. Where a guardian appointed in Pennsylvania, received the assets of the ward, and then removed with his ward to Ohio, and died without settlement with his ward, it was held the ward could maintain an action against the personal representative of the guardian's estate: Pedan v. Robb, 8 O 227.

52. Guardians must make final account in the probate court when their wards arrive at full age: Newton v. Hammond, 38 OS 430; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1148.

53. Sureties are concluded by settlement in probate court, and will not be heard, in absence of fraud and collusion, to question its correctness or demand a rehearing of the accounts: Braiden v. Mercer, 44 OS 339, 7 NE 155; see also Gardner v. Ashbrook, 53 OS 678, 44 NE 1136.

54. A ward's written settlement with his guardian, made six years after his becoming of age, in which he states that the guardian's account is correct and satisfactory in all respects, and asks the court to confirm same, concludes the ward, in the absence of fraud, in obtaining the settlement: In re Streit, 12 OD(NP) 158.

Expiration of trust

55. The trust of a guardian expires, within the meaning of clause four of the above section [former GC § 10933], at the date of his removal, by the probate court, for cause: Gorman v. Taylor, 43 OS 86, 1 NE 227; see also State v. Beatty, 52 OS 656, 44 NE 1139.

Appeal

56. The issue of fraud in obtaining judgment is triable to the court, and not to a jury, and from the judgment rendered either party may appeal to the circuit court: Gantz v. Gease, 82 OS 34, 91 NE 872.

57. An order of the probate court striking exceptions to the account of a guardian from the files, is a final order, and the time to appeal therefrom cannot be prolonged by a later motion to set aside such order: In re Streit, 12 OD(NP) 158.

§ 2111.17 Suits by guardians.

A guardian may sue in his own name, describing himself as guardian of the ward for whom he sues. When his guardianship ceases, actions or proceedings then pending shall not abate, if the right survives. His successor as guardian, the executor or administrator of the ward, or the ward himself, if the guardianship has terminated other than by the ward's death, shall be made party to the suit or other proceeding as the case requires, in the same manner as executor or administrator is made a party to a similar suit or proceeding where the plaintiff dies during its pendency.

§ 2111.18 Claim for injury to ward or damage to property; settlement.

When personal injury, damage to tangible or intangible property, or damage or loss on account of personal injury or damage to tangible or intangible property is caused to a ward by wrongful act, neglect, or default which would entitle the ward to maintain an action and recover damages therefor, the guardian of the estate of the ward may adjust and settle the claim with the advice, approval, and consent of the probate court. In the settlement, if the ward is a minor, the parent or parents may waive all claim for damages on account of loss of service of the minor, and such claim may be included in the settlement; provided, that when it is proposed that the claim involved be settled for three thousand dollars or less, the court may, upon application by any person whom the court may authorize to receive and receipt for the settlement, authorize the settlement without the appointment of a guardian and authorize the delivery of the moneys to the natural guardian of the minor, to the person by whom the minor is maintained, or to the minor himself. The court may authorize the minor or person receiving the moneys to execute a complete release on account thereof. The payment shall be a complete and final discharge of any such claim.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. In the absence of a showing of prejudicial error in the proceedings or of fraud or collusion on the part of those involved, a settlement of an injured minor's claim for damages by his guardian in conformity with the provisions of GC § 10507-19 (now RC § 2111.18), is valid and binding on the minor and may not be set aside: In re Kelley, 172 OS 177, 15 OO(2d) 327, 174 NE(2d) 244 [affirming 113 App 180, 15 OO(2d) 431, 168 NE(2d) 587].

2. It was not necessary for the probate court to appoint a guardian or guardian ad litem where the action was properly brought by the injured party's father and next friend: In re Noie, 87 OLA 276, 179 NE(2d) 536 (App).

3. The issue whether a release of a negligence claim executed in the probate court is void may be determined by a common pleas court in an action therein to recover for personal injury damages caused by such negligence: Carpenter v. Pontius, 119 App 383, 28 OO(2d) 12, 200 NE(2d) 682.

When personal injury, damage to tangible or intangible property, or damage or loss on account of personal injury or damage to tangible or intangible property is caused to a minor, who claims to be emancipated, by wrongful act, neglect, or default which would entitle such minor to maintain an action and recover damages therefor, such minor, who claims to be emancipated, may file an application in the probate court in the county where he then resides, praying for a finding by such court that such minor is in fact emancipated, and authorizing, approving, and consenting to the settlement of such claim by such minor without the appointment of a guardian. Upon hearing on such application, after five days["] written notice of the time and place of such hearing has been given to each of the living parents of such minor, whose name and address is known, provided such parent is free from disability other than minority, or, if there is no living parent, after such notice to the next of kin of such minor known to reside in the county, the court may find such minor to be emancipated and may authorize, approve, and consent to the settlement of such claim by such minor without the appointment of a guardian and may authorize such minor to receive and receipt for such settlement and, upon such minor executing and delivering a full and complete release for such injuries and damages, may authorize the delivery and payment of such moneys to such minor, to a trustee or guardian of the estate of such minor appointed by the court for the benefit of such minor, or to a depository authorized to receive fiduciary funds to hold said moneys payable to the ward when he attains majority, or for the benefit of said minor as the court may direct.

Upon the finding of the probate court that such minor was, at the time of such injury and damage, an emancipated minor, and provided such notice has been given to each living parent, whose name and address is known, then such release executed by such emancipated minor shall be a full and complete discharge and release of any claim which either or both of such parents might have by reason of such personal injury, or damage to tangible or intangible property, or damage or loss on account of personal injury or damage to tangible or intangible property of such minor.

1. A purchaser dealing fairly, takes good title to personal property belonging to the ward sold by a guardian, though the sale is made without order of the court and the guardian misappropriates the proceeds: Strong v. Hope, 4 Bull 1034.

2. Where one buys of a guardian notes bearing on their face the marks of a trust fund, he is put upon inquiry; and if he buys under circumstances fairly indicating that they were sold against the interests of the ward, he gets no title from the guardian who misappropriates the proceeds of the sale: Strong v. Strauss, 40 OS 87.

§ 2111.21 Sale, compromise, adjustment, or mortgage of dower. (GC § 10507-23)

The guardian of a ward who has or is claimed to have a right of dower, or a contingent right to it, in lands or tenements of which the spouse of such ward was or is seized as an estate of inheritance, where the dower has not been assigned, may sell, compromise, or adjust such dower or may release such contingent right of dower in the event the spouse of such ward desires to mortgage such property upon such terms as such guardian deems for the interest of such ward and upon such terms as the probate court of the county in which the guardian was appointed approves, or if such guardian was appointed in a foreign state, upon such terms as the probate court of the county wherein the land is situated approves. After such approval, the guardian may execute and deliver all the necessary deeds, mortgages, releases, and agreements for the sale, compromise, assignment, or mortgage of such dower or contingent right to dower. As a basis for computing the value of an inchoate dower right in any sale, compromise, or adjustment pursuant to this section, the value of the lands or tenements may be considered to be the sale price or, if there is no sale, the appraised value. Such sale, compromise, adjustment, or mortgage may be made upon application and entry in the pending proceedings.

When a ward has title to real estate by tax title only, the guardian, by deed of release and quitclaim, may convey such ward's interest or title to the person entitled to redeem such real estate, upon receiving from such person the amount paid for such tax title with the forfeiture and interest allowed by sections 319.52, 5719.17, and 5719.18 of the Revised Code. CASE NOTES AND OAG

See also Civil Rule 17(B), and case notes thereunder.

1. The gist of this section is that a guardian of the person and estate of a ward shall act as guardian ad litem for such ward in any proceeding in the probate court, except suits or proceedings in which the guardian is personally interested: Plessinger v. Bireley, 76 App 183, 31 OO 477, 62 NE(2d) 720.

1.1 Although it might be contended that the third sentence of this section which reads "In a suit or proceeding in which the guardian has an adverse interest, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent such minor or other person under legal disability," authorizes the probate court to appoint a guardian ad litem in any action pending in another court, the import of the section as a whole deals with proceedings in the probate court and should not be construed to apply or extend to actions in the common pleas court. In re Reynolds, 106 App 488, 7 OO(2d) 222, 155 NE(2d) 686.

1.2 The provisions of this section, providing for the appointment of a guardian or a guardian ad litem for a minor interested in a proceedings for whom no guardian of the estate or of the person and estate has been appointed, are directory and not mandatory, and the probate court may appoint a guardian for such minor when it is necessary to bring an action in the probate court, but it is not compelled to do so and in a proper case the action may be properly brought by the minor petitioner through her next friend: In re Noie, 87 OLA 276, 179 NE(2d) 536 (App).

5. Where the only interest which the guardian has in proceedings to sell the ward's real estate is the bringing of the action in an official capacity as guardian, the latter is not "personally interested" within the meaning of this term as used in this section: Hasty v. Weller, 19 OO 304 (PC).

6. Failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant renders the judgment erroneous as against the minor: Smith v. Merkle, 74 OLA 33 (PC).

7. In a suit or proceeding against a minor in which the guardian of such minor has an adverse interest, the court must appoint a guardian ad litem to represent such minor: Smith v. Merkle, 74 OLA 33 (PC).

8. In all suits in which infants are parties defendant, it is the duty of the court to carefully safeguard the rights and interests of such infants and it is also the duty of a guardian ad litem to ascertain the legal and equitable rights of his ward and to bring those rights to the attention of the court for consideration and decision: Smith v. Merkle, 74 OLA 33 (PC).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER GC § 10782

1. It is sufficient if infant heirs appear by their general guardian: Ewing v. Hollister, 7 O 138.

2. Under the act of 1824 the practice was general to serve the process upon the general guardian, or a guardian ad litem, or to permit an appearance without process, by either: Sheldon's Lessee v. Newton, 3 OS 496.

3. The law of 1824 did not prescribe the mode of making the heirs defendants, and such proceedings having, before the statute, been ex parte, the court might direct the mode, and an appearance and answer made by their guardian ad litem, appointed by the court in the case, was a reasonable and proper mode under that statute: Biggs v. Bickel, 12 OS 49.

5. A guardian cannot enter appearance for his ward unless authorized by statute. Summons on the ward cannot be waived by the guardian. The minor, on attaining majority, may prosecute error to the judgment for such defects: Roberts v. Roberts, 61 OS 96, 55 NE 411.

6. Consent of a guardian, if authorized by a statute, is probably not warranted in a proceeding commenced by himself and in his own interest, and where his position is adverse to his ward: Ream v. Wolls, 61 OS 131, 55 NE 176.

7. It is the duty of a guardian ad litem to ascertain the legal and equitable rights of his ward and to bring those rights to the attention of the court for consideration and decision: Bennett v. Fleming, 105 OS 352, 137 NE 900 [motion to vacate order remanding cause to common pleas court and to remand it to the court of appeals allowed, 20 OLR 611; judgment of court of appeals for defendant; motion to certify record overruled, 21 OLR 315].

8. Heirs who are idiots are made parties to the record by the filing of an answer and cross-petition by their guardian, wherein the allegations of the petition are admitted, service of summons waived, and the court is asked to grant the prayer of the petition: Segal v. Eagle Bldg. Co., 11 CC(NS) 481, 21 CD 519.

§ 2111.24 Insolvency of ward. (GC § 10507-30)

If the probate court finds that the estate of a ward is insolvent or will probably be insolvent, such estate shall be settled by the guardian in like manner as for the settlement of the insolvent estate of a deceased person under section 2117.15 of the Revised Code.

[LEASE OF REAL ESTATE]

§ 2111.25 Lease for not more than three years. (GC § 10507-31)

A guardian, of the person and estate or of the estate only, without application to the probate court, may lease the possession or use of any real estate of his ward for a term not exceeding three years, provided such term does not extend beyond the minority, if the ward is a minor. If the lease extends beyond the death of the ward or beyond the removal of the disability of a ward other than a minor, such lease shall terminate on such death or removal of disability, unless confirmed by the ward or his legal representatives. In the event of such determination, the tenant shall have a lien on the premises for any sum expended by him in pursuance of the lease in making improvements for which compensation was not made in rent or otherwise.

§ 2111.26 Lease for term of years. (GC § 10507-32)

A guardian may lease the possession and use of the real estate of his ward or any part of it for a term of years, renewable or otherwise, by perpetual lease, with or without the privilege of purchase, or may lease upon such terms and for such time as the probate court approves any lands belonging to the ward containing coal, gypsum, petroleum oil, natural gas, gravel, stone, or any other mineral substance for the purpose of drilling, mining, or excavating for and removing any of such substances, or such guardian may modify or change in any respect any lease previously made.

Such lease, or modification or change in a lease previously made, may be made when the guardian of the person and estate or of the estate only applies to the court by which he was appointed and such court finds that the lease or modification or change is necessary for the support of the ward or of his family, for the payment of the just debts of the ward, for the ward's education, if a minor, to secure the improvement of the real estate of the ward and increase the rent, to pay any liens or claims against said real estate, or if such court finds that such real estate is suffering unavoidable waste, or that in any other respect it will be for the best interests of the ward or those persons for whom the ward is required by law to provide.

Where application has been made for trusteeship of a lunatic, adjudged insane in another state (former GC § 11014 [see now RC § 2111.37]), and also by the foreign guardian to possess the property of the lunatic in this state (former GC § 11009 [see now RC § 2111.42]), it is within the discretion of the probate court, in the interest of the lunatic, to grant the trusteeship and deny the application of foreign guardian: *George v. § 2111.38 Bond and duties. (GC § 10507-48, 10507-49, 10507-50)

The resident guardian of a nonresident ward shall give bond and be bound and controlled by all the statutes of Ohio as though he were a guardian of a ward resident in this state, and shall have all of the authority of a guardian of a resident ward including the authority to lease or sell real state belonging to the ward.

Unless removed by the probate court, a resident guardian of a nonresident minor shall hold his appointment until such minor dies or arrives at the age of majority, whether or not such minor is over fourteen years of age at the time of appointment. A resident guardian of any other nonresident ward shall hold his appointment until the death of the ward or until the court is satisfied that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists.

All moneys due to such nonresident ward while such resident guardianship continues shall be paid over to his foreign guardian so far as necessary or proper for the ward's support and maintenance. If the ward dies, such moneys shall be paid to his ancillary administrator or other legal representative, provided that the court which appointed such resident guardian has satisfactory proof, as provided by section 2111.39 of the Revised Code, of the authority of such foreign guardian, administrator, or other legal representative to receive the moneys or estates of such nonresident ward, that the security given by such foreign guardian, administrator, or other legal representative is sufficient to protect such ward's interest or estate, and provided such court deems it best for him or his estate.

§ 2111.41 When ward removes from the state and has a foreign guardian.

When a ward for whom a guardian has been appointed in this state removes to another state or territory, and a guardian of the ward is there appointed, the guardian in this state may be removed and required to settle his account.

Such a removal shall not be made unless the guardian appointed in another state or territory applies to the probate court in this state that made the former appointment, and files an exemplification from the record of the court making the foreign appointment containing all the entries and proceedings relating to his appointment, his giving bond, with a copy thereof, and of the letters of guardianship, all authenticated as required by the act of congress. Before such an application is heard or action taken by the court, at least thirty days' written notice shall be served on the guardian appointed in this state specifying the object of the application, and the time it is to be heard.

No such removal shall be made in favor of a foreign guardian, unless at the time of the hearing the state or territory in which he was appointed has a similar provision as to wards removing from that state or territory. The court shall grant the application unless it makes an affirmative finding that the removal of the guardian appointed in this state would not be in the interest of the ward.

If on such a hearing the court removes the guardian, it shall make all suitable orders for discharging the guardian and shall deliver to the foreign guardian all moneys and other property in the hands of the resident guardian after his settlement.

3. In hearing of application for trusteeship of lunatic adjudged insane in foreign state, and application of foreign guardian to possess property of lunatic, probate court has discretion, in view of former GC §§ 10942, 10944, 10991 and 11020 (see now RC §§ 2109.04, 2111.13, 2111.14, 2111.26, 2111.41, 2111.42 and 2111.48), in best interests of lunatic, to grant application for trusteeship and deny foreign guardian's application: George v. § 2111.42 Foreign guardians may receive property.

In any case in which a guardian is appointed by a court of another state or territory or by a foreign country for a nonresident ward, and the ward is entitled to money or other property in the custody of an executor, administrator, or other person in this state, the foreign guardian may file an application in the probate court in which the executor or administrator was appointed, or in the court of the county in which the other person holding the property resides, asking authority to demand, receive, or recover by suit the money or other property, and remove it. With the application, the foreign guardian shall file a copy of his appointment and bond, and a copy of any entries and proceedings in the cause in which he was appointed concerning the property in this state, authenticated as required by the act of congress or by the law applicable to proceedings in the courts of the foreign country. Due notice of the filing and time of hearing on the application shall be given to the resident executor, administrator, or custodian. If the limitations upon which the ward is entitled to the money or other property do not conflict with the removal, and unless the court makes an affirmative finding that the removal would not be in the best interest of the ward, the court shall grant the application, and authorize the guardian to demand, receive, or recover by suit the money or other property, and remove it from this state.

The provisions relating to procedure have been clarified. The application may be filed in the probate court of the county in which the executor or administrator was appointed, or of the county in which the holder of the property resides. The application must be accompanied by copies of the guardian's appointment, his bond, and any entries or proceedings concerning the property. If the application is made by a guardian appointed in another state or territory, the copy must be authenticated as required by the act of congress. See U. S. Code, Title 28, § 687. If the application is made by a guardian appointed in a foreign country, the copy must be authenticated as required by the law applicable to proceedings in courts of such foreign country.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The authority in former GC § 11009 (see now RC § 2111.42) for a foreign guardian of a lunatic to possess property of his ward in this state, is limited to similar power possessed by guardians appointed by the state courts under former GC § 10991 (see now RC §§ 2109.04, 2111.13, 2111.14, 2111.26 and 2111.48): George v. Cleveland Trust Co., 22 App 1, 153 NE 914.

2. A foreign guardian is not entitled to receive or receipt for money due the ward from an executor until he complies with this section, by filing an exemplification of the record, etc., and the probate court may refuse to order the payment of the money if detrimental to the ward. Payment without such order is unauthorized and will not protect the person making it: Banning v. Gotshall, 62 OS 210, 56 NE 1030; see also Knedler v. Doster, 69 OS 573, 70 NE 1125.

3. 1. This section provides an adequate remedy for the removal of a guardian and the exclusive method for the exercise of original jurisdiction in such a proceeding: In re Clendenning, 145 OS 82, 30 OO 301, 60 NE(2d) 676.

2. A proceeding to terminate the guardianship of an incompetent is governed by the provisions of this section which place upon the ward the duty of producing "satisfactory proof that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists": In re Breece, 173 OS 542, 20 OO(2d) 155, 184 NE(2d) 386.

3. The sole issue before the court in a proceeding to terminate the guardianship of an incompetent is whether the ward has presented "satisfactory proof that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists," and, where such "satisfactory proof" is presented, the court is under a mandatory duty to terminate the guardianship: In re Breece, 173 OS 542, 20 OO(2d) 155, 184 NE(2d) 386.

4. The presumption that a person adjudicated an incompetent continues to be incompetent is rebuttable, and will not prevail where, in a proceeding pursuant to this section to terminate the guardianship of an incompetent, there is substantial and overwhelming evidence that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists: In re Breece, 173 OS 542, 20 OO(2d) 155, 184 NE(2d) 386.

4.1 A guardian of a mentally incompetent ward does not have a right of appeal, under RC § 2101.42, from an order of the probate court terminating the guardianship pursuant to the provisions of RC § 2111.47 upon satisfactory proof that the ward has regained his mental competency and the necessity for the guardianship has ceased to exist, where the record does not reflect any interest of the guardian adverse to the ward in such order of termination, or show that the guardian has been aggrieved in any manner by the order of termination: In re Love, 19 OS(2d) 111, 48 OO(2d) 107, 249 NE(2d) 794.

5. The next friend of an incompetent adult may initiate the proceedings provided in this section for the termination of the guardianship of such ward on the ground that the letters of appointment were improperly issued: In re Kelley, 1 OApp(2d) 137, 30 OO(2d) 159, 204 NE(2d) 96.

6. The provisions of this section, which allow the termination of a guardianship "upon satisfactory proof that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists," are mandatory and, upon a proper showing being made, the guardianship shall be terminated: In re Tillman, 100 App 291, 60 OO 254, 136 NE(2d) 291.

7. In a proceeding under this section, to terminate guardianship of an incompetent, the probate court shall, after proper notice and upon satisfactory proof that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists, order that the guardianship of the incompetent terminate and make an appropriate entry upon the journal: In re Nitschke, 113 App 243, 17 OO(2d) 223, 177 NE(2d) 628.

7.1 The probate court's finding that a ward has been restored to reason, in an action to terminate the guardianship, is not absolutely binding upon another court in another proceeding: In re Appropriation for Highway Purposes, 47 OO(2d) 420, 19 OMisc 81, 246 NE(2d) 626 (1969).

8. The constitutional rights of one who has voluntarily consented to the appointment of a guardian under the statutes providing for such appointment are protected by this section, wherein provision is made for the court to determine in a proper hearing whether the necessity for the guardianship continues to exist: In re Williams, 78 OLA 98, 151 NE(2d) 602 (App).

9. When one has voluntarily consented to the appointment of a guardian under the statutes providing for such appointment and the court has acted upon the matter and made the appointment, the ward cannot terminate the guardianship by merely withdrawing his consent: In re Williams, 78 OLA 98, 151 NE(2d) 602 (App).

10. To terminate a guardianship under the provisions of this section there must be satisfactory proof that the necessity for the guardianship no longer exists or that the letters of appointment were improperly issued: In re Barr, 80 OLA 488, 156 NE(2d) 357 (PC).

11. This section, providing for the termination of a guardianship, is the exclusive method whereby a guardianship may be terminated and control of a ward's property restored: In re Titington, 82 OLA 563, 162 NE(2d) 628 (PC).

12. Any other kind of attack upon the validity of a guardianship other than the statutory methods provided under RC §§ 2101.42 and 2111.47 may be regarded as collateral and as such cannot succeed: In re Titington, 82 OLA 563, 162 NE(2d) 628 (PC).

13. The services of an attorney who acts in good faith on an unsuccessful motion to terminate the guardianship of an incompetent at his request, are in the nature of necessities and are proper charges against the estate of the incompetent: In re Wolfe, 14 OO 525 (PC).

14. In an action to contest a will it is proper to instruct the jury that the law provides that an entry terminating a guardianship shall have the force and effect of a determination by the court that such person is restored to sanity (this section), so long as the court also instructs that there still remains for the jury a duty to determine whether or not the decedent was capable of making a will: Eikenberry v. McFall, 33 OLA 525.

1. Testimony by applicant which was clear and definite as to age, dates, children and property, together with lack of testimony of any acts or omissions indicating applicant was not able to take care of his property, showed applicant was mentally qualified and should be restored to estate: Rhoads v. Rhoads, 29 App 449, 163 NE 724.

2. The foregoing case contains an excellent discussion as to what testimony may be given by lay witnesses in such a proceeding.

3. There is no appeal from the overruling, by the probate court, of a motion made by a lunatic to have his guardian's letters revoked, on the ground that they had been improperly issued: Messenger v. Bliss, 35 OS 587.

4. An appeal will lie from an order of the probate court overruling a motion of an imbecile ward to determine the guardianship: Hiett v. Nebergall, 45 OS 702, 17 NE 558.

5. An imbecile ward may, under former GC § 11010 (RC § 2111.47), file an application or motion in the court for a termination of the guardianship upon the ground that he has been restored to reason, or that the letters of guardianship have been improperly issued, and an appeal will lie to the court of common pleas from the order of the probate court made upon the hearing of such motion: Robinson v. Wagner, 95 OS 300, 116 NE 514 [for former opinion, see In re Robinson, 18 NP(NS) 286, 30 OD 433, which was reversed, 25 CC(NS) 26, 35 CD 156; motion to certify record overruled, 13 OLR 499].

6. Where upon the hearing of the cause in the court of common pleas on appeal, judgment is rendered against the imbecile ward, he may in his own name file a petition in error in the court of appeals to have such judgment reviewed: Robinson v. Wagner, 95 OS 300, 116 NE 514 [for former opinion, see In re Robinson, 18 NP(NS) 286, 30 OD 433, which was reversed, 25 CC(NS) 26, 35 CD 156; motion to certify record overruled, 13 OLR 499].

7. Death of the ward terminates all duties and powers upon the part of the guardian: Simpson v. Holmes, 106 OS 437, 140 NE 395 [approving and following Sommers v. Boyd, 48 OS 648].

8. Unpaid debts of the ward or guardian must be redressed through the personal representative of the ward's estate: Simpson v. Holmes, 106 OS 437, 140 NE 395.

8.1 Where it appears that a ward's consent to the appointment of a guardian on the ground of physical incompetency was given under an apparent misapprehension of the ward's rights, the guardianship should be terminated: In re Luft, 91 App 409, 45 OO 333, 59 OLA 33.

9. The fact that a person who has been committed to a state hospital for the insane has been discharged therefrom, does not operate as a vacation of an order of the probate court which appointed a guardian for such person: Reno v. Love, 26 CD 296, 60 Bull 197 (Ed) [affirmed, without opinion, 88 OS 623].

10. In a proceeding to terminate a guardianship over an imbecile, the sole question is whether the ward was properly declared to be an imbecile at the time the appointment was made, or whether since the making of the appointment he has been restored to reason: In re Kramer, 8 NP(NS) 217, 19 OD 444.

11. While the order of termination ipso facto disposes of the guardian, it is not an order based upon the qualification of the guardian, as in the case of the guardian of a minor ward, but of capacity of ward: In re Kramer, 8 NP(NS) 217, 19 OD 444.

[§ 2111.47.1] § 2111.471 Transfer of court having jurisdiction.

If the ward for whom a guardian has been appointed removes to another county within this state and acquires a new residence or legal settlement therein, the probate court having jurisdiction over the guardian and the ward, may, on its own motion, or on motion of the guardian or any interested party, with the consent of the probate court of the county to which such ward has removed, transfer the jurisdiction over said guardian and ward to such probate court, provided it appears that such transfer would be in the best interest of the ward.

Thereupon, the original probate court shall prepare certified copies of the appointment, letters of guardianship, bond, inventory, the last account, if any, a full and complete transcript of its docket and journal entries up to and including the order of transfer and copies of such other papers as may be requested by the receiving court, and shall cause the same to be filed in the probate court accepting jurisdiction, all costs to be paid by the guardian out of the assets of the estate of the ward.

Upon the filing of the certified copies of the original papers and the transcript, and the payment of costs, the probate court to which the proceedings have been transferred may assign a case number and by journal entry, accept jurisdiction. A copy of the entry accepting jurisdiction shall be returned to the court of original jurisdiction. Thereupon, the probate court to which the proceedings have been transferred shall acquire jurisdiction over the guardian and the ward as though such probate court had jurisdiction and appointed the guardian in the first instance, and the jurisdiction of the probate court from which the proceedings have been transferred shall cease.

[APPOINTMENT]

- § 2113.01 What court shall grant letters.
(GC § 10509-1)

Upon the death of a resident of this state intestate, letters of administration of his estate shall be granted by the probate court of the county in which he was a resident at the time he died.

If the will of any person is admitted to probate in this state, letters testamentary or of administration shall be granted by the probate court in which such will was admitted to probate.

HISTORY: GC § 10509-1; 114 v 320 (400); 120 v 649 (654), § 1. EF 10-1-53.

Comment

The 1943 revision of this section was made necessary by reason of the amendment of GC § 10504-15 (RC § 2107.11), permitting original probate in this state of the will of a nonresident decedent.

Scope

1. As to the necessity of administration, see McBride v. Vance, 73 OS 258, 76 NE 938, 112 AmSt 723, 4 AnnCas 191, and In re Heinz, No.99585, Probate Court, Franklin County.

2. The act of March 23, 1840, to provide for the settlement of estates of deceased persons, does not extend to estates in the course of settlement when it took effect: McGovney v. State, 20 O 93.

3. Our statutes provide for administration in this state, of the estate of a nonresident leaving an estate in Ohio: Williams v. Welton, 28 OS 451. But under the present probate code, see RC §§ 2129.01 to 2129.24.

4. Whether former GC § 10511 (see now RC § 2107.09), which authorizes the probate of a will in a county in which is located property which passes by such will, whether testator lives in such county or not, is repealed by former GC § 10604 (see now RC §§ 2113.01, 2129.04), which provides that letters testamentary should be granted by the county of which the deceased was a resident when he died, was discussed but not decided: State ex rel Barbee v. Allen, 96 OS 10, 117 NE 13.

5. This section is not in conflict with GC § 10504-15 (RC § 2107.11). The term "resident," as used in this section, is not synonymous with the term "domiciled" in either GC § 10504-10 (RC § 2107.09) or GC § 10504-15 (RC § 2107.11): State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE(2d) 84.

6. For the history of the law of the administration of decedent's estates, see Yarian v. Stouffer, 14 App 306.

Jurisdiction

12. In Ohio the jurisdiction of equity in the administration of estates is entirely auxiliary and can be exercised only when the remedy conferred upon the probate court is either imperfect or inadequate: McDonald v. Aten, 1 OS 293; Taylor v. Huber, 13 OS 288 [followed, Fleming v. McGuffey, 12 NP(NS) 19, 21 OD 387; distinguished, Davis v. Corwine, 25 OS 668; Arbaugh v. Millet, 5 CC 295, 3 CD 146]; Piatt v. Longworth, 27 OS 159; Yarian v. Stouffer, 14 App 306.

13. By the provisions of Const., Art. IV, § 8 and former GC § 10492 (see now RC § 2101.24), plenary jurisdiction is conferred on the probate court to grant and revoke letters testamentary and of administration, to direct and control the conduct and settle the accounts of executors and administrators, and order the distribution of estates: Trumpler v. Royer, 95 OS 194, 115 NE 1018 [affirming Royer v. Trumpler, 7 App 312, 27 OCA 117, 28 CD 186; for a later report, overruling motion to certify record, see Trumpler v. Royer, 16 OLR 108, 63 Bull 223].

14. The jurisdiction over a decedent's estate acquired by the probate court of one county by the appointment of an administrator under this section is not exclusive of the jurisdiction over the same estate later acquired by the probate court of another county by virtue of proceedings under GC §§ 10504-10, 10504-15 and 10504-35 (RC §§ 2107.09, 2107.11, 2107.26): State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE(2d) 84.

15. The power of the probate court over the administration of the estate of decedents is said to be so broad and complete that the general jurisdiction over the estates of decedents which originally belonged to equity has been taken away from the common pleas court and transferred to the probate court: Fleming v. McGuffey, 12 NP(NS) 19, 21 OD 387 [for former opinion, see 8 NP(NS) 430, 19 OD 521].

16. A court of probate has inherent power, without specific statutory authority, to grant administration limited to the defense of a particular suit: McArthur v. Scott, 113 US 340, 28 LEd 1015, 5 Sct 652.

—Domicile

21. The jurisdiction of a probate court, acquired under this section, to appoint an administrator for the estate of an intestate who was a resident of the county of such court at the time he died, is terminated and superseded by the admission to probate of a will of the same decedent by the probate court of another county in which such decedent was domiciled at the time of death: State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE(2d) 84.

22. When a person moves from one county to another with the intention of making that his permanent residence, the probate court of the latter county has jurisdiction to grant letters of administration upon his death: In re Welch, 15 OO 189 (PC).

23. Whether a testator was an inhabitant of Ohio at the time of his death is one of the jurisdictional facts upon which the court is required to pass, upon application for original probate of a will: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming, on rehearing, Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43; which was modified in memorandum opinion, Wilberding v. Miller, 88 OS 609; and was on appeal from Miller v. Miller, 13 NP(NS) 1].

24. Whether the adjudication of the probate court that decedent was domiciled within its jurisdiction was conclusive, was avoided in Hoffman v. Fleming, 66 OS 143, 64 NE 63 [for holding below that such adjudication was void, see Fleming v. Hoffman, 8 NP 86, 10 OD 560], the court holding that the sureties on the executor's bond were estopped to deny jurisdiction.

25. It is now held that such judgment is final as against collateral attack: Wilberding v. Miller, 90 OS 28, 106 NE 665 [modifying and affirming, on rehearing, 88 OS 609, which modified in memorandum opinion, Miller v. Miller, 15 CC(NS) 481, 24 CD 43, the executor's bond were estopped to deny jurisdiction]; State ex rel Barbee v. Allen, 96 OS 10, 117 NE 13; Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86 OS 350].

27. A person can have more than one legal residence at a given time, but can have only one legal domicile. The probate court of the county in Ohio where a decedent had a legal domicile has jurisdiction to appoint an administrator of his estate notwithstanding such decedent may have had, for some purposes, a residence without Ohio: Hill v. Blumenberg, 19 App 404.

29. A court of another state is not bound by an adjudication of a court of Ohio as to the domicile of intestate: Hine v. Cowles, 18 CC(NS) 518, 33 CD 175 [affirmed, without opinion, Cowles v. Cowles, 86

OS 350].

30. Personal property of a deceased inmate of Ohio reformatory for women should be administered by the probate court of the county in which such inmate resided at the time of her death: 1921 OAG vol.1, p.63.

31. Jurisdiction of probate court to administer estate of one who died at Ohio soldiers' home: 1927 OAG p.1745.

—Property

37. Appointment of administrator gives the probate court jurisdiction not only of the estate but also of the administrator's person, until his accounts are settled. That jurisdiction is not ousted by the fact that the court makes an order requiring him to make settlement, and at the same time orders his removal and appoints a successor: In re Morrison, 68 OS 252, 67 NE 567.

38. The probate court has no jurisdiction under this section to appoint an administrator for the estate of a decedent not "an inhabitant of this state" at the time of his death. But under Art. IV, § 8 of the constitution of Ohio, the probate court of Crawford county has jurisdiction of the subject matter of the administration of decedent's estate, and having such jurisdiction, may, by virtue of the provisions of the treaty of the United States with Austria-Hungary by force of the second clause of Art. VI of the constitution of the United States, without any statutory provision therefor, appoint an administrator of the estate of a subject of that empire, not "an inhabitant of this state," but who died here leaving an estate in this county: Steel Castings Co. v. Farkas, 15 NP(NS) 609, 27 OD 220.

—Federal courts

43. The administration of the estates of deceased inhabitants of the state is a state and not a federal matter: Pagano v. Cerri, 93 OS 345, 112 NE 1037, LRA 1917A, 486.

Necessity of administration

48. As a general rule, administration is a prerequisite to the devolution of the personal estate of a decedent. Such personal property does not vest in the heirs but is in abeyance until administration is granted and is then vested in the administrator: McBride v. Vance, 73 OS 258, 79 NE 938, 112 AmSt 723; Davis v. Corwine, 25 OS 668; Porter v. Doppes, 12 App 391; McCord v. Central Trust & Co., 13 App 26, 31 OCA 494 [motion to certify record overruled, 18 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278].

49. In the absence of special circumstances, the next of kin cannot maintain an action in his own name to recover the unadministered personal estate of the decedent or collect debts or other choses of action due him. Such action can be maintained only by the personal representative of the deceased: Davis v. Corwine, 25 OS 668; McBride v. Vance, 73 OS 258, 76 NE 938, 112 AmSt 723; McCord v. Central Trust & Co., 13 App 26, 31 OCA 494 [motion to certify record overruled, 18 OLR 112, 65 Bull 278].

50. On the death of the owner of personal property, it passes to his administrator or executor: McBride v. Vance, 73 OS 258, 76 NE 938, 112 AmSt 723 [distinguished, Meister v. Feuerstein, 19 CC(NS) 460, 32 CD 525]; Rogers v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 24 NP(NS) 49 [for former opinion in court of appeals, see 15 App 333].

51. Unpaid debts of the ward or guardian must be redressed through the personal representative of the ward's estate: Simpson v. Holmes, 106 OS 437, 140 NE 395.

52. Only where there is collusion between the administrator and defendants may the heir or next of kin of the deceased bring an action to recover assets of the estate, joining the administrator as a party defendant: Porter v. Doppes, 12 App 391.

55. Where there is any personal property to distribute, or any debts owing to the decedent, there must be an administration of the estate, unless estates not exceeding in value one hundred dollars be exempted by former GC § 10617 (see now RC §§ 2109.-48, 2113.06, 2113.07): Barreille v. Bettman, 199 Fed 838.

56. If a trust is created and successive beneficiaries die, the next of kin may sue in his own name as beneficiary without successive administrations: Taylor v. Huber, 13 OS 288.

Relation back of powers of administrator

61. Where administration is granted upon the estate of a deceased ward, the assets vest immediately in the administrator whose title dates back to the time of the decease. He, and not the former guardian, is the proper person to list the personal estate for taxation: Sommers v. Boyd, 48 OS 648, 29 NE 497.

62. Due qualification of an administrator relates back to the time of his appointment as regards acts done by him in the interim which are for the benefit of the estate: Archdeacon v. Cincinnati Gas & C. Co., 76 OS 97, 81 NE 152.

Other questions

67. Where a married woman, domiciled in Ohio, dies intestate, leaving children, and her surviving husband afterward obtains letters of administration in Pennsylvania, and a report is made on his final settlement there, and his children except, they cannot maintain a suit here for distribution while the settlement in Pennsylvania is pending: Adams v. Adams, 7 OS 83.

68. One claiming the estate of a decedent may challenge the appointment of an administrator if made in a county wherein the decedent was not an inhabitant or resident at the time of his death, as required by former GC § 10604 (see now RC §§ 2113.-01, 2129.04): In re Gingery, 103 OS 559, 134 NE 449.

69. A claim for wrongful death is part of decedent's estate, and an administrator can be appointed to recover it, even though deceased left no other assets: In re Arduino, 9 NP(NS) 369, 20 OD 461.

70. Under the treaty with Italy, the consul of that government has the right to intervene in the administration of the estate of a decedent who was a citizen of that country: In re Arduino, 9 NP(NS) 369, 20 OD 461.

71. A presumption of death arising from long continued absence is not conclusive, and if the person who is supposed to be dead is not so in fact, the administration of his estate is a nullity: Oglesby v. Rose, 11 NP(NS) 188, 21 OD 291.

72. There is no requirement that notice be given to the Italian consul of application for administration on the estate of a deceased Italian subject, where the applicant for letters is a brother of decedent and a minor son of the decedent is in court consenting thereto: In re Balbo, 16 NP(NS) 9, 29 OD 603.

73. Executors or administrators de son tort are no longer recognized in Ohio: In re Pollock, 17 NP(NS) 490, 60 Bull 273.

§ 2113.02 Limitation for granting original administration. (GC § 10509-13)

Administration shall not be originally granted as of right after the expiration of twenty years from the death of the testator or intestate. But, within his county, each probate judge may grant letters of original administration upon the estate of a deceased person after the expiration of twenty years upon the petition of interested persons or their agent and on good cause shown therefor. Before allowing the prayer of such petition, such judge may direct notice thereof to be given by publication, for a period not exceeding thirty days, in one or more of the newspapers printed in the county where such petition is filed.

HISTORY: GC § 10509-13; 114 v 320 (403). EF 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC § 10626.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. This section gives to the probate court authority to appoint an administrator more than twenty years after decedent's death where the statutory procedure is followed: Thornberry v. Freudiger, 28 OLA 142.

§ 2113.03 Release from administration.

(A) Upon the application of any interested party, after notice of the filing of the application has been given to the surviving spouse and heirs at law in the manner and for the length of time the probate court directs, and after three weeks' notice to all interested parties by publication once each week in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, unless the notices are waived or found unnecessary, the court, when satisfied that the assets of an estate are fifteen thousand dollars or less in value, and that creditors will not be prejudiced, may make an order relieving the estate from administration and directing delivery of personal property and transfer of real estate to the persons entitled to them.

For the purposes of this section, the value of an estate that can reasonably be considered to approximate fifteen thousand dollars, and that is not composed entirely of money, stocks, bonds, or other property the value of which is readily ascertainable, shall be determined by an appraiser selected by the applicant, subject to the approval of the court. The appraiser's valuation of the property shall be reported to the court in the application to relieve the estate from administration. The appraiser shall be paid in accordance with section 2115.06 of the Revised Code.

For the purposes of this section, the amount of property to be delivered or transferred to the surviving spouse or minor children of the deceased as the allowance for support, shall be established in accordance with section 2117.20 of the Revised Code.

When a delivery, sale, or transfer of personal property has been ordered from an estate that has been relieved from administration, the court may appoint a commissioner to execute all necessary instruments of conveyance. The commissioner shall receipt for the property, distribute the proceeds of the conveyance upon court order, and report to the court after distribution.

When the decedent died testate the will shall be presented for probate, and if admitted to probate, the court may relieve the estate from administration, and order distribution of the estate under the will.

An order of the court relieving an estate from administration shall have the same effect as administration proceedings in freeing land in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value from possible claims of unsecured creditors.

(B) An application to relieve an estate from administration shall be in writing and shall contain the following information:

- (1) The name, date, and place of death of the decedent;
- (2) The names, ages, and addresses of the persons entitled to the next estate of inheritance under the statutes of descent and distribution, and their respective degrees of relationship to the decedent;

(3) A summary statement of the character and value of the property comprising the estate;

(4) A list of all known creditors of the decedent, and the amount of their claims;

(5) If the decedent died intestate, a statement to that effect.

(C) The application shall be in the following form, and this form shall be used exclusively by the probate courts in this state:

CASE NOTES AND OAG
[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145
AMENDMENT]

1. Where a decedent died leaving a spouse surviving and leaving as an only asset a bank deposit of six hundred thirty-three dollars, the probate court can exempt such estate from administration as an estate having less than five hundred dollars, under this section, by ordering five hundred dollars delivered direct to the surviving spouse as property not deemed assets of the estate: In re McMillen, 8 OO 433 (PC).

1.1 There is no other provision for informal administration: In re McKenzie, 74 OLA 106, 139 NE(2d) 505.

2. A probate court may relieve an estate of less than five hundred dollars from administration as provided by this section. The necessary affidavit provided for in GC § 2768 (RC § 317.22) may be made by one or more of the next of kin and the county auditor and county recorder should accept such affidavit in transferring the title to the real estate from the deceased to the next of kin or heirs entitled to the real estate, in estates in which administration has been dispensed with: 1933 OAG No.910.

2.1 Where the real property of a deceased person passes by the laws of descent and there is no administration of the estate, the title to real property may be transferred through the probate court under this section and RC § 2113.61: 1935 OAG No. 4793.

3. A probate judge had permissive power to grant an application for the certificate to transfer real estate in an estate consisting of real estate only, exceeding five hundred dollars in value, and where no administration of the estate is had or intended, providing the application is made by an heir or devisee, or a successor in interest, in accordance with GC § 10509-102 (RC § 2113.61): 1936 OAG No.5193.

4. Where property, other than moneys, clothing and personal effects, is found in connection with or pertaining to the body of a deceased person, in a case where death resulted in circumstances requiring action by the county coroner, and where such property is taken in custody by the coroner, it becomes his duty, under RC § 309.17, to "deposit" such property with the probate court. Such "deposit" should be accomplished by making application to the court either for the appointment of an administrator or for relief of the estate of such deceased person from administration as provided in this section: 1958 OAG No.2153.

§ 2113.04 Payment of wages of deceased employee without administration.

Any employer, including the state or a political subdivision, at any time after the death of his or its employee, may pay all wages or personal earnings due to the deceased employee to: (A) the surviving spouse; (B) any one or more of the children eighteen years of age or older; or (C) the father or mother of the deceased employee, preference being given in the order named, without requiring letters testamentary or letters of administration to be issued upon the estate of the deceased employee, and without requiring an Ohio estate tax release where the wages or personal earnings do not exceed one thousand dollars. The payment of wages or personal earnings is a full discharge and release to the employer from any claim for the wages or personal earnings. If letters testamentary or letters of administration are thereafter issued upon the estate of the deceased employee, any person receiving payment of wages or personal earnings under this section is liable to the executor or administrator for the sum received by him.

1. There is no provision in law for the compensation of state employees in money for unused vacation leave except that in the case of the death of any such employee a money payment with respect to unused vacation leave to which such employee was entitled in the year of his death shall be made, as provided in RC § 121.16.1, to his surviving spouse, his children eighteen years of age or older, or his parents, as provided in this section, or to his estate: 1956 OAG No.6580.

1.1 The survivors or personal representatives of the estate of an employee of a county after his death have no right to receive pay for unused vacation time accumulated by the employee before his death: 1958 OAG No. 2374.

2. Pursuant to RC § 121.16.1 as effective November 4, 1959, a state employee may accumulate vacation leave earned, but not used during his state service; and in case of the death of a state employee the monetary value of all such unused vacation leave, if not exceeding $300.00, should be paid in accordance with this section and, if exceeding $300.00, to his estate: 1960 OAG No.1575.

3. Neither RC § 121.16.1 nor this section authorizes the payment of any amount of money to survivors or personal representatives of the estate of a deceased employee of a school district for unused vacation time accumulated by the employee before his death: 1961 OAG No.2579.

4. A public officer, such as a county auditor, is not an employee as such word is used in RC § 325.19; and, upon the death of such officer, no amount may be paid for earned but unused vacation leave under this section to his estate: 1962 OAG No.3239.

§ 2113.05 Letters testamentary shall issue.

When a will is approved and allowed, the probate court shall issue letters testamentary to the executor named in the will, if he is suitable, competent, accepts the trust, and gives bond if that is required. The court may issue letters testamentary to a surviving spouse or one of the next of kin, even though a nonresident of the county or of this state.

If no executor is named in a will, or if the executor named dies, fails to accept the trust, resigns, or is otherwise disqualified, letters of administration with the will annexed shall be granted to a suitable person or persons, named as devisees or legatees in the will, who would have been entitled to administer the estate if the decedent had died intestate, unless the will indicates an intention that the person or persons shall not be granted letters of administration. Otherwise, the court shall grant letters of administration with the will annexed to some other suitable person.

Appointment of executor

1. If the executor named in the will does not accept the trust, he is not the representative of the beneficiaries, and notice to him of proceedings to probate the will should not be, by construction, extended to them: Feuchter v. Keyl, 48 OS 357, 27 NE 860.

1.1 An order of the probate court appointing an executor is void, if made without jurisdiction, and it may be disregarded in any other court; but if made in the exercise of proper jurisdiction over the subject matter and estate, although based upon erroneous conclusions of law or fact, it cannot be collaterally attacked: Union Sav. Bank &c. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 79 OS 89, 86 NE 478, 128 AmSt 675 [reversing Western Union Tel. Co. v. Union Sav. Bank

&c. Co., 20 CD 380, and affirming Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 7 NP(NS) 609, 19 OD 537].

2. An order by the probate court appointing as administrator of the estate of a decedent a person other than the one named in the will is not subject to review by appeal, where there is a finding by the probate court that the applicant for appointment designated in the will is not a suitable person to administer the estate: Miller v. Miller, 3 App 143, 19 CC(NS) 243, 26 CD 195.

2.1 A party named in a will as executrix, admittedly otherwise competent, is not entitled to the trust, as a matter of right, if she is not, because of conflicting interests, a suitable person under the circumstances, and the determination of such question rests in the sound discretion of the probate court: In re Bowman, 76 OLA 597, 143 NE(2d) 150 (App).

2.2 Revised Code § 2113.05, vests discretion in the probate court to determine whether the person named in the will as executor or executrix is not only a competent person but also a suitable person: In re Bowman, 76 OLA 597, 143 NE(2d) 150 (App).

2.3 A person does not become the executor of an estate until he has qualified for the office under the statute, and has been appointed to the trust by the court: Hermann v. Crossen, 81 OLA 322, 160 NE(2d) 404 (App).

2.4 A probate court has authority to exercise reasonable discretion in determining if an applicant for letters testamentary is a competent and suitable person, and an order granting or refusing letters of appointment is reviewable for a determination of whether there has been an abuse of discretion: In re Young, 4 OApp(2d) 315, 33 OO(2d) 357, 212 NE(2d) 613.

2.5 A "suitable" person, qualified for appointment as an executor under the provisions of this section means a person who is reasonably disinterested in the estate and the legatees and beneficiaries under the will: In re Young, 4 OApp(2d) 315, 33 OO(2d) 357, 212 NE(2d) 613.

2.6 The appointment by a probate court of an executor who is not in a position to reasonably fulfill the obligations of a fiduciary, and, therefore, not a "suitable" person to act in a fiduciary capacity, constitutes an abuse of discretion: In re Young, 4 OApp(2d) 315, 33 OO(2d) 357, 212 NE(2d) 613.

2.7 The fact that to act as executor would be a disservice to the person named is not to be considered by the court in determining suitability: In re Ruggles, 39 OApp(2d) 39, 68 OO(2d) 177, 315 NE(2d) 486 (1973).

2.8 Where a testator nominates one to be the executrix of his estate, such nominee is not disqualified merely because she was financially indebted to the decedent at the time of his death. A person nominated in a will to be the executrix of an estate is entitled to such appointment unless she is clearly disqualified under RC § 2113.05: In re Estate of Nagle, 40 OApp(2d) 40, 69 OO(2d) 22, 317 NE(2d) 242 (1974).

3. Where a testator names a trust company as co-executor of his will, the trust company is purchased and taken over by another trust company, and the latter company makes application to be appointed as co-executor, a denial of the application is not an abuse of discretion on the part of the court, where the new company is both a debtor and a creditor of the estate: First-Central Trust Co. v. Dunn, 19 OLA 496.

4. There is no irreconcilable inconsistency between this section, which makes the appointment of the executor named in the will mandatory, and former GC § 10629 (see now RC §§ 2109.24, 2113.18), which confers a discretion upon the court to remove for non-residence: Seasongood v. Seasongood, 23 CC(NS) 369, 27 CD 200.

5. If testator names two executors in his will, and one of them dies before testator, the court should appoint the survivor as sole executor of the will, if he is legally competent: In re March, 60 Bull 5.

—Suitable and competent

8. In determining the suitability of a person named in a will as executor, the lack of complexity of the estate is a factor to be considered by the trial court: In re Ruggles, 39 OApp(2d) 39, 68 OO(2d) 177, 315 NE(2d) 486 (1973).

9. An executor named in a will who has some physical disability, but whose mental alertness and capacity are demonstrated by extensive examination, in the absence of any medical testimony that his physical condition has some effect on his mental condition, is suitable within the meaning of RC § 2113.05: In re Ruggles, 39 OApp(2d) 39, 68 OO(2d) 177, 315 NE(2d) 486 (1973).

10. A person is "legally competent" if he is of legal age, of sound mind, and if he has not been convicted of a crime which renders him infamous: Seasongood v. Seasongood, 23 CC(NS) 369, 27 CD 200.

11. If a person who is named as executor in a will is not of sufficient business ability to manage the estate to the best interest of the parties, such lack of ability may be grounds for removing such executor, after he is appointed, but it does not authorize the court to refuse to appoint him: In re March, 60 Bull 5.

§ 2113.06 To whom letters of administration shall be granted.

Administration of the estate of an intestate shall be granted to persons mentioned in this section, in the following order:

(A) To the surviving spouse of the deceased, if resident of the state;

(B) To one of the next of kin of the deceased, resident of the state.

If the persons entitled to administer the estate fail to take or renounce administration voluntarily, they shall be cited by the probate court for that purpose.

If there are no persons entitled to administration, or if they are for any reason unsuitable for the discharge of the trust, or if without sufficient cause they neglect to apply within a reasonable time for the administration of the estate, their right to priority shall be lost, and the court shall commit the administration to some suitable person who is a resident of the state. Such person may be a creditor of the estate.

This section applies to the appointment of an administrator de bonis non.

1. Under the provisions of this section the resident surviving spouse is entitled to priority in the appointment as administrator of the estate of an intestate unless such spouse is incompetent or is for any reason unsuitable for the discharge of the trust or has without sufficient cause neglected to apply within a reasonable time for the administration of the estate: In re Golembiewski, 146 OS 551, 33 OO 41, 67 NE(2d) 328.

2. Where such incompetency exists by reason of minority, a guardian of the spouse is not eligible, as such, for appointment as administrator: In re Golembiewski, 146 OS 551, 33 OO 41, 67 NE(2d) 328.

3. The provisions of this section are mandatory, and when a surviving spouse is a minor, one of the next of kin of the deceased, resident of the county, is entitled to appointment as administrator in the absence of incompetency, unsuitability or neglect: In re Golembiewski, 146 OS 551, 33 OO 41, 67 NE(2d) 328.

4. The right of priority of such next of kin is not dependent upon the extent of his interest in the assets of the estate: In re Golembiewski, 146 OS 551, 33 OO 41, 67 NE(2d) 328.

4.1 Where one has a claim against an estate, it is incumbent upon him, if no administrator has been appointed, to procure the appointment of an administrator against whom he can proceed: Wrinkle v. Trabert, 174 OS 233, 22 OO(2d) 248, 188 NE(2d) 587.

4.2 When an action is brought by the filing of a complaint, within the statute of limitations, complainant has one year thereafter in which to cause the appointment of a suitable personal representative and obtain service of summons against him. [Paragraphs 5 and 6 of Wrinkle v. Trabert, 174 OS 233, 22 OO(2d) 248, supplanted by CivR 3(A) and 4(A)(B) and (C)]: Hayden v. Ours, 44 OMisc 62, 73 OO(2d) 224, 337 NE(2d) 183 (CP 1975).

4.3 In a negligence action for the recovery of damages, instituted under RC § 2117.07 against an administrator seeking to recover only from the decedent's liability insurer, where the administrator of the estate of the decedent has been discharged and the estate closed, the probate court may reappoint the administrator for the purpose of accepting service of summons: In re George, 24 OS(2d) 18, 53 OO(2d) 10, 262 NE(2d) 872 (1970) [reversing 20 OApp(2d) 87, 49 OO(2d) 110, 252 NE(2d) 176 (1969)].

5. There is no provision of this section that requires the probate court to follow the line of inheritance in the appointment of an administrator for the estate of a decedent where there is no surviving spouse or next of kin capable of appointment: Shannon v. Hendrixson, 4 OO 517 (App).

5.1 The term, "next of kin," as used in GC § 10509-3 (RC § 2113.06), means only those persons who are entitled to inherit all or some portion of the estate of the deceased, and a person who is entitled to inherit nothing from the estate has no priority in appointment as administrator of the estate and has no capacity to attack the appointment of another person: In re Kelly, 102 App 518, 3 OO(2d) 56, 144 NE(2d) 130.

5.2 A constructive waiver of her statutory priority to act in administering her husband's estate could reasonably be deduced from the surviving spouse's unreasonable delay in seeking the right to administer her husband's estate and her disinterested conduct as to the affairs thereof after his death: Troha v. Sneller, 108 App 153, 9 OO(2d) 195, 151 NE(2d) 595.

5.3 The duty to cite a surviving spouse whose waiver does not accompany an application for appointment as administrator of an estate by one lower in priority is, by both RC §§ 2113.06 and 2113.07, placed upon "the probate court." Failure to issue such citation cannot be charged to an applicant for letters of administration, where all the facts have been disclosed: Troha v. Sneller, 108 App 153, 159, 9 OO(2d) 195, 151 NE(2d) 595.

5.4 A surviving spouse became an unsuitable person to carry out the trust of administering her husband's estate, in which she had no interest by the terms of a prenuptial agreement, where she delayed an unreasonable time before she sought the right to administer the estate, showed by her conduct that she was disinterested therein and made an adverse claim against those legally entitled thereto: Troha v. Sneller, 108 App 153, 9 OO(2d) 195, 151 NE(2d) 595; 79 OLA 74, 151 NE(2d) 595 (App).

5.5 This section, setting forth the persons to whom, and the order in which, letters of administration shall be granted, is mandatory and requires the probate court to appoint an administrator of an estate from the preferred class therein described: In re Vickers, 110 App 499, 13 OO(2d) 274, 170 NE(2d) 85.

6. When the defendant in an action dies intestate the "proper person" for purposes of substitution pursuant to Civil Rule 25(A)(1) is the person appointed by the Probate Court pursuant to RC § 2113.06 to administer the estate of such deceased defendant: Highland View Hosp. v. Dempsey, 62 OO(2d) 367, 33 OMisc 209, 294 NE(2d) 925 (MC 1972).

7. The surviving spouse of a common-law marriage may be a suitable person under the provisions of RC § 2113.06 to be granted letters of administration: In re Hammonds, 67 OO(2d) 27, 39 OMisc 96 (CP 1973).

8. A person who renounces his right to administer an estate may not nominate one to serve in his stead: In re Welch, 15 OO 189 (PC).

9. The surviving spouse of a common law marriage is not a suitable person under the provisions of this section to be granted letters of administration: In re Woods, 21 OO 98, 6 OSupp 236 (PC).

10. This section, prescribing to whom letters of administration shall be granted, primarily pertains to administrators of estates, and not to executors named in wills: In re Evans, 27 OLA 550.

11. The appointment of an administrator is required to be made from the preferred class described in this section, unless the court finds that the persons in the preferred class are incompetent or unsuitable for the discharge of the trust, in which case a person not coming within the class prescribed may be appointed: In re Froebe, 27 OLA 594.

12. Under this section and GC § 10509-4 (RC § 2113.07), where an application for appointment as administrator is made by a daughter of deceased, a presumption of competency must be indulged in unless and until it appears that the applicant is incompetent to act as administratrix: In re Campbell, 39 OLA 513 (App).

15. Under the provisions of this section, a grandchild of an intestate decedent who is a resident of the county is entitled to preference over a child of such decedent who is not a resident of the county, for appointment as administrator of the estate of such decedent: In re Fields, 44 OLA 284 (App).

16. This section and GC § 10509-4 (RC § 2113.07) are in pari materia; therefore, an affidavit that the applicant has no knowledge of a last will and testament of the deceased must be filed by a person seeking appointment as administrator de bonis non as well as by an administrator: In re Cassell, 53 OLA 65, 83 NE(2d) 72 (PC).

17. In the application of this section, where the probate court found that there was no surviving spouse, no next of kin resident of the county, and the next of kin resident of the state were minor grandchildren of the decedent, the court thereby acquires jurisdiction to commit the administration of decedent's estate to some suitable person or persons resident of the county: In re Cassell, 53 OLA 65, 83 NE(2d) 72 (PC).

18. Where the probate court appoints a suitable person to administer an estate, in the exercise of its jurisdiction under this section, no notice or citation to or waiver or renunciation of blood relatives is required: In re Cassell, 53 OLA 65, 83 NE(2d) 72 (PC).

19. Where administratrix, wife of decedent, filed her application in behalf of her minor children, next of kin of decedent, and who was appointed as a "suitable person . . . resident of the county," and not under her priority as surviving spouse, her waiver in a separation agreement of her right to administer her husband's estate was merely a waiver of her priority under this section, and did not operate as a complete bar to her being appointed administrator: In re Williams, 79 OLA 592, 153 NE(2d) 727 (PC).

20. The law favors the placing of administration of estates, by virtue of this section, first in the hands of the family of the decedent, and an eligible member of decedent's family who has signed a waiver and consent to the appointment of one not a member of the family may renounce and withdraw such waiver and consent where there has been no action in the estate other than the naked appointment: In re Garvin, 85 OLA 560, 175 NE(2d) 551 (PC).

21. The secretary of state has no duty to accept for filing the articles of incorporation of a corporation other than a trust company, the purpose of which is to engage in the business of serving, for hire, as executor, administrator and guardian: 1956 OAG No.6200.

Scope and construction

1. Laws of Ohio do not recognize an administrator de son tort: Dixon v. Cassell, 5 O 533; Bustard v. Dabney, 4 O 68.

2. The qualifications of an administrator provided for by this section apply to an administrator with the will annexed, who is appointed under the provisions of former GC § 10612 (see now RC § 2113.12): Seasongood v. Seasongood, 23 CC(NS) 369, 27 CD 200.

5. "Unsuitable," as used in the third clause, is defined in former GC § 10629 (see now RC §§ 2109.24, 2113.18), which should be read with this section for that purpose: Long v. Bowersox, 8 NP(NS) 249, 19 OD 494.

Right to administer

10. Where a subject of the kingdom of Italy died intestate in this state, leaving a widow and two minor children residents and subjects of the kingdom of Italy, the Italian consul is not entitled to the prior paramount and exclusive right of administration, but is eligible to such appointment under the fourth subdivision of this section, subject to the exercise of the discretion of the probate court of such county: Pagano v. Cerri, 93 OS 345, 112 NE 1037, LRA 1917A, 486; see also Cerri v. Montalto, 93 OS 482, 113 NE 1069.

11. Notwithstanding this section, under the treaty with Italy, the consul of that government has the right to intervene in the case of the death of a citizen of Italy in this country: In re Arduino, 9 NP(NS) 369, 20 OD 461.

12. Where the accredited representative of the Austro-Hungarian government appoints a representative to act, in his absence, as administrator of a deceased citizen of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, and the appointment is made a matter of record in the probate court of the county in which the death of the decedent occurred, it becomes the duty of the probate court to appoint such accredited representative as administrator of the estate of the said decedent, statutory provisions to the contrary notwithstanding: In re Stingacs, 12 NP(NS) 107, 22 OD 88.

13. Where an heir of the decedent is eligible to appointment as administrator of the estate of a deceased Italian, his claim thereto is superior to that of the Italian consul, and letters must of necessity be issued to him: In re Costanzo, 15 NP(NS) 225, 60 Bull 413.

14. The provisions of this section are not controlled by a provision in a treaty to the effect that the consular agent or some similar official appointed by the state of which the decedent was a citizen shall have the right to be appointed as administrator of such estate so far as the laws of each country will permit, but the consular agent is a member of the third class which consists of such persons as the court shall deem fit: In re Costanzo, 15 NP(NS) 225, 60 Bull 413.

15. A consular agent of the kingdom of Italy has neither an exclusive nor a naked right, under treaty stipulations or within the class designated in this section, to appointment as administrator of the estate of an Italian subject dying intestate in this state, where one of the next of kin is a resident of the state; nor is he entitled to notice of the death of a subject of the king of Italy, unless there are no known heirs in this country and he is himself a resident of the county in which the appointment is to be made or has a representative in such county who has been duly certified to the court: In re Todarello, 15 NP(NS) 593, 62 Bull 201.

16. Article XIV of the treaty between the United States and Sweden, which provides that the representative of a consul shall be appointed administrator of the estate of a citizen of his country dying without will or testament in the territory of the other contracting party "so far as the laws of each country will permit," merely requires that the court shall consider the consul in selecting from the fourth class named in this section, having always the best interests of the estate in view: In re Todarello, 15 NP(NS) 593, 62 Bull 201.

17. An Italian consul has no paramount and exclusive right to appointment to administer the estate of a deceased subject of his government, dying intestate and without next of kin in the jurisdiction of the court, but on the contrary, he is relegated to the fourth class by the provisions of this section: In re Balbo, 16 NP(NS) 9, 29 OD 603.

18. The procuring of an alien consul to act as the administrator of a deceased resident of Ohio does not, in an action against other residents of Ohio, present such a case of diverse citizenship as to give jurisdiction to a federal court. The appointment of such alien consul will be regarded as having been procured collusively and fraudulently if the testimony discloses that the sole purpose in having the said consul named as administrator was to give the federal court jurisdiction of the action for wrongful death thereafter brought by him: Cerri v. Akron-Peoples Tel. Co., 219 Fed 285, 13 OLR 425.

—Husband or widow

23. A widow has priority in the administration of her husband's estate, unless she comes within the provisions of the third clause of this section: Long v. Bowersox, 8 NP(NS) 249, 19 OD 494.

24. It is improper to issue letters to a surviving partner without citing the widow or next of kin, if residents of the county, for the purpose of accepting or rejecting the appointment, although thirty days have gone since the partner's death and no application for administration has been made by any of them: Warnock v. Page, 14 OD(NP) 278 [affirmed, Page v. Warnock, 15 CD 695, 2 OLR 528].

—Next of kin

29. The next of kin are entitled to a reasonable time within which to apply for letters of administration; and an application made within eighteen days after intestate's death, by next of kin residing in another county, is made within a reasonable time. When, without allowing such reasonable time, the probate court appointed a stranger as administrator, the appointment is illegal, and should be revoked on application of the next of kin: Todhunter v. Stewart, 39 OS 181.

30. If next of kin file an application for appointment of a stranger as administrator, which is refused, it is not a waiver of right of next of kin to the appointment: In re Patterson, 26 NP(NS) 579.

—Creditor

35. The right of creditors of one who dies seized of lands in Ohio, but whose heirs are nonresidents, to take out letters of administration on the estate, continues, even if there is a foreign will, for unless the will is produced and duly recorded, the probate court of the county in which the land is situated has the right to, and upon application must, grant letters of administration, and if the will be produced, letters may be granted with the will annexed: Bustard v. Dabney, 4 O 68.

Discretion of court

40. A proceeding for the appointment of an administrator is a proceeding in rem, and if the court has jurisdiction its decision binds the whole world: Ewalt v. Ames, 6 App 374, 27 OCA 465, 29 CD 133, 62 Bull 389 (Ed) [citing Cross v. Armstrong, 44 OS 613].

41. As between parties of equal suitability and statutory rights, the court may well choose the one possessing the confidence of and desired by a majority of the beneficiaries, and the fact that another court, on the same showing, might have made a different selection, is not proof of abuse of discretion, nor ground for review: Sargent v. Corbley, 7 CC(NS) 226, 18 CD 125.

42. Where the applicants for appointment as administrator of the estate of a deceased Italian are the Italian consul on the one hand, and on the other a stranger who is acceptable to ineligible heirs of the decedent who are residents of this country, the choice is entirely a matter of discretion on the part of the probate judge: In re Costanzo, 15 NP(NS) 225, 60 Bull 413.

Effect of appointment

47. Where a debtor becomes the administrator of his creditor's estate, that extinguishes the debt, which becomes assets in the hands of the debtor as administrator: Bigelow v. Bigelow, 4 O 138.

Error

53. The common pleas court has jurisdiction to review an order of the probate court denying the right to administer the estate of a deceased person, which this section confers upon the next of kin, if a suitable person: Schumacher v. McCallip, 69 OS 500, 69 NE 986.

54. Although error may be prosecuted to an order denying the right of certain persons to administer an estate, under this section, this cannot be done on an order removing an administrator under former GC § 10629 (see now RC §§ 2109.24, 2113.18): In re Ferguson, 3 NP(NS) 549, 16 OD 486.

55. Any person having a right to be heard on the question of an appointment of an administrator under this section may have an adverse judgment reviewed for error under GC § 12241 (see now RC § 2505.24): McCallip v. Sharp, 13 OD(NP) 650.

Other questions

60. The statute of limitations does not begin to run against a debt based upon a contract not in writing, which becomes due by reason of the decease of the debtor, until the appointment of an administrator or executor of the estate of such debtor, and due notice thereof: Hoiles v. Riddle, 74 OS 173, 78 NE 219, 113 AmSt 946.

61. No presumption arises that the administrator of an estate is not beneficially interested. The presumption is rather the other way, especially where he is of the same name as deceased, for this section prefers the husband or widow, next of kin, etc., over strangers: In re Arkenberg, 1 NP(NS) 9, 13 OD 656.

62. If the personal property of one who has been wrongfully killed amounts to about one hundred dollars, the court will appoint an administrator for his estate without considering whether such appointment should be made if decedent had left no property, and the sole object of such appointment had been to enforce the claim for damages for such wrongful death: In re Costanzo, 15 NP(NS) 225, 60 Bull 413.

63. Where there is any personal property to distribute, or any debts owing to the decedent, there must be an administration of the estate, unless estates not exceeding in value one hundred dollars be exempted by former GC § 10617 (see now RC §§ 2109.-

21, 2113.06, 2113.07): Barrielle v. Bettman, 199 Fed 838.

§ 2113.07 Application for appointment as executor or administrator.

Before being appointed executor or administrator, every person shall make and file an application under oath, which must contain the names of the surviving spouse and all the next of kin of the deceased known to the person, their post-office addresses if known, a statement in general terms as to what the estate consists of and its probable value, and a statement of any indebtedness the deceased had against the person making the application.

The application may be accompanied by a waiver signed by the persons who have priority to administer the estate, and in the absence of a waiver those persons shall be cited by the probate court for the purpose of ascertaining whether they desire to take or renounce administration.

Letters of administration shall not be issued upon the estate of an intestate until the person to be appointed has made and filed an affidavit that there is not to his knowledge a last will and testament of the intestate.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. The making and filing of an affidavit by the person to be appointed administrator, that there is not to his knowledge a last will and testament of the intestate, is a condition precedent to the granting of letters of administration of such estate: State ex rel Overlander v. Brewer, 147 OS 386, 34 OO 338, 72 NE(2d) 84.

2. The appointment by the probate court of an executor or administrator of an estate, without the latter filing a statement of any indebtedness owed by him to the estate, as required by GC § 10509-4 (RC § 2113.07), is voidable and not void: McKelvey v. McKelvey, 90 App 563, 48 OO 207, 107 NE(2d) 555.

3. The person or persons resident of the county entitled to administer the estate, referred to in this section, are defined in GC § 10509-3 (RC § 2113.06) as the next of kin of the deceased, resident of the county: In re Applegate, 45 OO 24 (PC).

§ 2113.08 Notice of appointment.

Within one month after appointment of an executor or administrator, the probate judge shall cause notice of the appointment to be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the letters were issued for three consecutive weeks, but the notice shall not be necessary when there is no estate, except a right of action for wrongful death.

An affidavit of the publisher or agent of the newspaper making publication that is filed and recorded, together with a copy of the notice, in the probate court within four months after the appointment shall be admitted as evidence of the time, place, and manner in which notice was given.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

[DECISIONS UNDER LAW PRIOR TO SB 145 AMENDMENT]

1. A notice of appointment is good, though the fact of the appointment is not expressly and explicitly stated therein, and the notice consists merely of a demand, officially signed by the administrator, that all persons indebted to the estate come forward and make payment, and that all persons having claims against the same are notified to present the same: Gilbert v. Little, 2 OS 156.

1.1 The filing of the affidavit herein provided is a mode of perpetuating the evidence of the publication of notice of appointment, and is for the convenience and protection of the executor or administrator. It forms no part of the notice and is not for the benefit of creditors. [But see case note 6, this section.] Hence, although such proof of publication of notice is not filed until a year after the giving of bond, the two years' limitation within which actions may be brought will begin to run from the date of the giving of the bond: Ardrey v. Shell, 77 OS 218, 82 NE 1075.

2. Statutes relating to administration of estates must, if possible, be construed together and so as to harmonize and give effect to their various provisions: Beck v. Schmidt, 38 App 476, 176 NE 595.

3. Whatever power administrator possesses with respect to administration of estate is derived from statute: Beck v. Schmidt, 38 App 476, 176 NE 595.

3.1 When a domiciliary or ancillary administrator is appointed in Ohio, notice is published as provided by this section, but until there has been a proceeding under RC chapter 2129, an Ohio claimant receives no notice of appointment in another state: Kibbey v. Mercer, 11 OApp(2d) 51, 40 OO(2d) 223, 228 NE(2d) 337.

4. This section places the duty of publishing notice of the appointment of an executor or administrator upon the probate judge, and in the absence of countervailing evidence it must be presumed that the probate judge published the notice according to law: Swearingin v. Rendigs, 53 App 221, 5 OO 457, 4 NE(2d) 695.

5. The object of requiring notice of the appointment of an executor or administrator is to be for the benefit of the creditors alone so that they may know within what time their claims must be presented: Croxton Mining Co. v. Hubbard, 8 App 105, 28 OCA 249, 30 CD 150 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 107, 63 Bull 223].

6. The fact that under former GC § 10712 (see now RC § 2113.08) the probate judge is to cause the notice of the appointment of the administrator to be published, does not prevent the operation of the express provision of former GC § 10757 (see now RC § 2113.10) to the effect that if the new administrator does not give such notice he shall not have the benefit of the period of limitations: Croxton Mining Co. v. Hubbard, 8 App 105, 28 OCA 249, 30 CD 150 [motion to certify record overruled, 16 OLR 107, 63 Bull 223].

§ 2113.09 Effect of failure to give notice. (GC § 10509-158)

If notice is not given of the appointment of an executor, an original administrator, or an administrator de bonis non within the one month prescribed for that purpose by section 2113.08 of the Revised Code, or the evidence thereof is not perpetuated as provided by such section, and such notice cannot be made and a period of twenty-one years or more has elapsed since the appointment of such executor, administrator, or administrator de bonis non, the required notice of appointment and the proof of publication of such notice shall be deemed to have been given and filed, so as to be an absolute bar to any claim of creditors against the estate represented by such executor, administrator, or administrator de bonis non. Where a period of less than twenty-one years has elapsed since the appointment of such executor, administrator, or administrator de bonis non, on the petition of the executor or administrator or on the petition of any person having an interest in real estate the title to which is adversely affected by the omission of publication of such notice of appointment and proof of same, the probate court shall order such notice to be given at any time afterwards, in which case the periods of time limited for the commencement of actions against executors and administrators and for other purposes, which begin to run from the date of the appointment, shall begin to run respectively from the time such order of court is made, if notice is published in accordance therewith.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. This section treats the filing of proof of notice as a method of perpetuating evidence, that is, it forms no part of the notice itself: Ardrey v. Shell, 77 OS 218, 82 NE 1075.

2. In order that a lapse of time may bar a claim against an estate, it is necessary that notice of the appointment of an administrator or executor must be given in accordance with the provisions of GC § 10509-158 (this section): Swearingin v. Rendigs, 53 App 221, 5 OO 457, 4 NE(2d) 695.

2. Former GC § 10757 (see now RC § 2113.10) requires notice to be given of the appointment of a new administrator, and where there is a failure to give such notice the limitation provided by former GC § 10722 (see now RC § 2117.12) will not avail as a defense to an action brought more than six months after the rejection of the claim: *Croxton Mining Co. v. 3. An order of the probate court directing that "notice of appointment of a new administrator," as provided in this section, be given "in the same manner prescribed with respect to an original administrator," which order fixes the period of four months following such appointment wherein creditors shall present their claims to the new administrator, falls within the general rule that every act of a court of competent jurisdiction, having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter, is presumed valid, and this presumption cannot be overcome in a collateral proceeding unless it is made to appear that the action by the court is void for want of authority: Haag v. Meffley, 89 App 471, 46 OO 274, 103 NE(2d) 37.

§ 2113.11 Notice when deceased was an alien. (GC § 10509-8)

Upon the filing of an application for appointment as executor or administrator of the estate of a deceased alien with surviving heirs residing in a foreign country, or as soon thereafter during the administration of the estate as the probate court ascertains that the deceased was an alien, the court shall cause notice of the proceedings to be forwarded by registered mail to the nearest consular representative of the country of which the deceased was a citizen. The executor or administrator shall inform the court that the deceased was an alien as soon as such fact is ascertained by such executor or administrator, but failure to inform the court of such fact or to notify such consular representative as provided in this section shall not delay nor invalidate the administration proceedings or any part thereof.

When there is delay granting letters testamentary or of administration, the probate court may appoint a special administrator to collect and preserve the effects of the deceased.

Such special administrator must collect the chattels and debts of the deceased and preserve them for the executor or administrator who thereafter is appointed. Necessity of appointment

1. There is no such thing in Ohio as an executor de son tort: Benjamin v. Le Baron, 15 O 517.

2. Though the administrator may have disposed of all the estate of an intestate, yet, if he die, no legal proceeding can be had to charge that estate without appointing an administrator de bonis non: Piatt v. St. Clair, 5 O 555.

3. The probate court is without authority to appoint an administrator de bonis non of an estate of one who leaves no personal property, even though the attorneys agreed that the appointment should be made: Hopkins v. Barger, 21 OLA 386.

4. Where there is no personal property and no debts, there can be no appointment under this section: Gurley v. Armentraut, 6 CC(NS) 156, 17 CD 199.

Validity of appointment

9. A mortgagee, by verbally agreeing to accept a release of the equity of redemption in settlement of a mortgage obligation, and a tender of deed, cancels the mortgage debt and the mortgagee ceases to be a creditor of the estate entitled to make application for the appointment of an administrator de bonis non under this section: Cooney v. Orth, 20 OLA 570.

10. Whether or not the court has authority to appoint a successor to an administrator on the latter's death cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding: Carr v. Hall, 65 OS 394, 62 NE 439, 87 AmSt 623, 58 LRA 641 [followed, Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 7 NP(NS) 609, 19 OD 537].

11. The probate court having, on application made therefor, refused to appoint an administrator de bonis non, and the court of common pleas, after a hearing on the merits on appeal, having made such appointment, the parties cannot thereafter contest the validity of the appointment by contending for the first time that appeal would not lie from the judgment of the probate court: Ewalt v. Ames, 6 App 374, 27 OCA 465, 29 CD 133, 62 Bull 389 (Ed).

12. The qualification of the successor to an administrator is not a jurisdictional fact, and such fact need not affirmatively appear in the journal entries to sustain its regularity in proceedings on error: Ferguson v. Ferguson, 3 NP(NS) 549, 16 OD 486.

13. Where a widow received the balance remaining in the hands of the administrator after settlement of her husband's estate without making any claim for an allowance for her first year's support, it is not competent for the probate court after the lapse of nearly forty years to grant an application for the appointment of an administrator de bonis non for the sole purpose of setting off said allowance to her: Evans v. Evans, 9 NP(NS) 589, 20 OD 676.

Powers of administrator de bonis non

18. At common law, no action could be sustained by an administrator de bonis non against the representatives of a deceased administrator or the sureties on his official bond: Blizzard v. Filler, 20 O 479.

19. An administrator de bonis non cannot, without legislative aid, maintain an action against the representatives of a deceased administrator, or sureties on his bond. Is it the duty of an administrator de bonis non to render account of the administration of deceased administrator; and if so, what is the effect of the finding of probate court: Curtis v. Lynch, 19 OS 392.

20. Without legislative aid, an administrator de bonis non, whose predecessor's powers have ceased by death, can have recourse only to the administration bond of the deceased administrator: Douglas v. Day, 28 OS 175.

21. Administrator de bonis non has the right and power to sue for and recover assets of the estate wherever found: Jelke v. Goldsmith, 52 OS 499, 40 NE 167, 49 AmSt 730.

22. Where an executor dies or resigns without filing any account of the administration of his trust, it is the duty of his successor in the trust to compel an accounting and payment to him of any balance due from such executor to said estate: Hocking Val. R. Co. v. White, 87 OS 413, 101 NE 354, AnnCas 1914A, 190.

23. A trustee, eo nomine, should be appointed to administer the trust created under a will creating a trust for the testator's widow's life in property devised to a son and a daughter, and directing "the same to be parted and divided between them share and share alike as they may agree; said division not to be made until after the decease of my said wife Matilda, but the property to remain intact until that event, and until then the rents of the real property shall go into my estate for the purpose of paying the eight hundred dollars per year to my said wife," etc., "and in case either my son or daughter should die before a division of my estate, leaving no heir or heirs, that in that case the whole of said property shall go to the survivor of them." An administration de bonis non will include the administration of the testamentary trust until a trustee for the purpose is appointed: Peoples Sav. Bank v Gardner, 18 CC(NS) 204, 32 CD 692.

Remedy

28. The remedy for the erroneous refusal of a probate court to appoint an administrator de bonis non is error and not mandamus: State ex rel Voight v. Lueders, 101 OS 259, 128 NE 72.

§ 2113.20 Will proved after administration as of an intestate. (GC § 10509-21)

If a will of a deceased is proved and allowed after letters of administration have been granted as of an intestate estate, the first administration shall be revoked, unless before such revocation a petition contesting the probate of such will is filed in the court of common pleas. If such a petition is filed, the probate court may allow the administration to be continued in the hands of the original administrators until the final determination of such contest. If the will is sustained, the first administration must be revoked. In either case, upon the revocation of the first administration and the appointment of an executor or administrator with the will annexed, such executor or administrator shall be admitted to prosecute or defend any suit, proceeding, or matter begun by or against the original administrator, in like manner as an administrator de bonis non is authorized to prosecute or defend a suit commenced by a former executor or administrator.

HISTORY: GC § 10509-21; 114 v 320 (405). EF 10-1-53.
Analogous to former GC § 10632.

Comment

Under the above section where the power of an administrator has been extinguished by the establishment of a will, then an executor is appointed under the will. Such former administrator would be required to settle his accounts the same as if removed or resigned, and the original executor would in some respects occupy the position of an administrator de bonis non with the will annexed. His relation to the previous administrator would be similar to that of an administrator de bonis non. If the case is appealed, the court may in its discretion continue the administration in the hands of the first administrator until the final proceedings of the contest have been accomplished. This section particularly confers upon the new executor or administrator with the will annexed, power to prosecute and defend any suit, proceeding, or matter commenced by or against the original administrator. Distinction between the administrator originally appointed under the above section, and that of a special administrator, is that he was regularly appointed for the purpose of accomplishing the full administration of the estate, and not for a special purpose, but his administration was terminated by the fact that a valid will of the testator was established in court. If the will is contested, a verdict rendered setting aside the will, and proceedings in error commenced, the court will not appoint a receiver.

§ 2113.21 Powers of executors, administrators, and testamentary trustees during a will contest. (GC § 10509-22)

When a will is contested, the executor, the administrator de bonis non, with the will annexed, or the testamentary trustee may, during the contest, do the following:

(A) Control all the real estate which is included in the will but not specifically devised and all the personal estate of the testator not administered before such contest;

(B) Collect the debts and convert all assets into money, except those which are specially bequeathed;

(C) Pay all taxes on such real and personal property and all debts;

(D) Repair buildings and make other improvements if necessary to preserve the real property from waste;

(E) Insure such buildings upon an order first obtained from the probate court having jurisdiction of such executor, administrator, or testamentary trustee;

(F) Advance or borrow money on the credit of such estate for such repairs, taxes, and insurance which shall be a charge thereon;

(G) Receive and receipt for a distributive share of an estate or trust to which such testator would have been entitled, if living.

The court may require such additional bonds as from time to time seems [seem] proper.

1. An executor is not bound to resist the contest of a will: Andrews v. Andrews, 7 OS 143; McCord v. McCord, 104 OS 274, 135 NE 548 [see also McCord v. McCord, 91 OS 441, and 7 App 129, 28 OCA 137, 29 CD 429].

2. Although a fiduciary acting under a will has the right to defend the will, he has no duty so to do and may cast that burden upon the legatees and devisees: Hecker v. Schuler, 12 OS(2d) 58, 41 OO(2d) 277, 231 NE(2d) 877 (1967).

4. This section has for its purpose provisions that the executor named in the will may, during a contest to have the will declared invalid, perform certain functions as executor and pay the costs of such administration: In re Hendrick, 71 App 247, 26 OO 67, 49 NE(2d) 106.

5. The effect of a contest of a will upon the powers of executors during the contest is defined in this section, which is to clothe the administrator or executor with authority to carry on the mandatory obligations of the estate, but to hold distribution in abeyance: Adams v. Gurklies, 88 App 225, 40 OO 393, 91 NE(2d) 706.

6. Substantially by virtue of the provisions of this section the functions of the administrator as to the distribution of the estate are suspended. He has power to proceed to collect the debts and to convert all the assets into money, except such as are specifically bequeathed. Likewise he is to have control of the real estate included in the will, but not specifically devised; if specifically devised, it would be under the control of the legatee. Likewise, if not at all devised, it would be under the control of the heirs, unless an application would be made by the executor or administrator to sell the real estate to pay debts. For a contest of the will will not suspend the right of an executor to file a petition to sell real estate to pay debts. As to the property under his control, both real and personal, he has the power to preserve the same; and whenever it is necessary to preserve the real estate from waste, or repair the buildings, he may insure the same, and may borrow money for that purpose. For it must be remembered that generally no administrator or executor can borrow money upon the responsibility of the estate; if he borrows money for a proper purpose he may credit himself with it in his account, but it is done upon his own responsibility. Even under this statute, if made a charge upon the estate, it must be done with the approbation of the probate court. He cannot sell real estate to make distribution: Smith v. Hayward, 5 NP 501, 5 OD 462 [affirmed, 45 Bull 228]; Welsh v. Perkins, 5 O 52.

7. The court of common pleas cannot appoint a receiver of real estate specifically devised, in an action to contest a will devising the same. As soon as a will is probated the devisee is entitled to control the same. This case does not decide that there might not be a receiver, but the mere fact of a contest will not be sufficient; no receiver can be appointed afterward: Burgess v. Sullivan, 2 NP(NS) 327, 14 OD 712.

8. The fact that the executor represents the testator in giving effect to his wishes as embodied in his last will, does not justify the executor, as a matter of law, in undertaking the defense of a contest of such will at the expense of the estate: In re Curry, 20 NP(NS) 49, 27 OD 485.

9. In a case where the attack on the will was chiefly due to the fact that a large special bequest was made to the executor, such an allowance is not permissible, the hardship cast upon the legatee in making the defense against an attack which was perhaps not justified being only one of the burdens incident to the acquisition and ownership of property: Weir v. Weir, 7 CC(NS) 289, 18 CD 199.

10. An executor has authority to make needed repairs on a building specifically devised with the direction to turn the property over to the devisee at any time after one year from the death of the testator, but such repairs should only go to the extent of keeping the property in as good condition as the executor found it. If an executor defends in an action to set the will aside, and the action results in sustaining the will, he may be allowed a reasonable amount for counsel fees in that behalf, and where his contract with counsel was on the basis of a contingent fee the allowance will be made more liberal because of that fact: In re Ullman, 12 CC(NS) 340, 21 CD 370.

14. Under a will giving to an executor and trustee power to sell and lease real estate belonging to the testatrix, suspension of that power for the time being, pending a contest of the will, did not preclude the trustee from entering into an agreement for the sale or lease of property, contingent upon the validity of the said will being established, where the contracting purchaser knew of the existence of proceedings involving the validity of the will; and the termination of such a suit in a judgment upholding the will leaves the trustee clothed with all the power and authority conferred by the will as and from the date of his appointment. An executor and trustee, having authority under the will to sell or lease property, is at liberty to enter into an agreement whereby a purchaser is to pay for the property in part and take a lease for a period of years with a privilege of purchase for the amount remaining due under the agreement, interest on said amount to be paid at a stipulated rate during the term of the lease: Bernheim v. Stark, 29 OCA 17, 30 CD 452.

15. When a will is contested the executor, the administrator de bonis non with the will annexed, or the testamentary trustee not only may, during the contest, perform the acts outlined in this section, but also must, during such contest, perform those acts which he is commanded to perform by statute: In re Kehoe, 27 OO(2d) 35, 199 NE(2d) 29 (PC).

§ 2113.22 Proceedings against former executor or administrator.

An administrator or executor appointed in the place of an executor or administrator who has resigned or been removed, whose letters have been revoked, or whose authority has been extinguished is entitled to the possession of all the personal effects and assets of the estate unadministered, and all other funds collected and unaccounted for by such executor or administrator, and may maintain a suit against the former executor or administrator and his sureties on the administration bond to recover such effects, assets and funds and for all damages arising from the maladministration or omissions of the former executor or administrator.

Action against representative of deceased administrator

6. Neither at common law, nor by the above statute, nor upon general chancery principles, could an action be sustained by an administrator de bonis non against the representatives of a deceased administrator, or the sureties in his official bond: Blizzard v. Filler, 20 O 479.

7. Where a cause of action has arisen under this section, it shall not cease to exist upon the death of the former executor or administrator, but shall survive against his representatives: Tracy v. Card, 2 OS 431 [distinguishing Blizzard v. Filler, 20 O 479].

9. Where an administrator died, and his account having been filed by his administrator, and exceptions having been filed to same by the administrator de bonis non, the court found that he was indebted to the estate, the administrator de bonis non cannot maintain an action on such finding against the representative of the deceased administrator, but he must seek his remedy, under the statute, on the administration bond of the decedent: Curtis v. Lynch, 19 OS 392.

10. The personal representative of an executor who died in office, before an account was due or filed in reference to the trust, is not liable under this section to the administrator de bonis non of the testator in an action brought against him alone as such personal representative, to recover for unadministered assets of the estate of such testator, where none of such assets came into the possession or under the control of such personal representative: Jones v. Willis, 66 OS 114, 63 NE 605; 72 OS 189, 74 NE 166 [see also Holcomb v. Willis, 72 OS 684].

11. Where an executor dies or resigns without filing any account of the administration of his trust, it is the duty of his successor in the trust to compel an accounting and payment to him of any balance due from such executor to said estate: Hocking Val. R. Co. v. White, 87 OS 413, 101 NE 354, AnnCas 1914A, 190.

12. Where an executor dies without filing any account of the administration of his trust, it is the duty of his personal representative to file such an account for him and pay over to the successor in the trust any balance that may be found due the estate from the deceased executor: Hocking Val. R. Co. v. White, 87 OS 413, 101 NE 354, AnnCas 1914A, 190.

Action against former administrator

17. An administrator de bonis non can maintain an action against a former executor or administrator for assets of the estate which have come to his hands and are not accounted for. The judgment obtained against such former administrator on such claim is evidence against him and his sureties in an action on his administration bond, and can only be impeached by the sureties by proving fraud or mistake: O'Conner v. State, 18 O 225.

18. Administrator de bonis non can sue former administrator and his sureties on bond to recover for default in administering money received in action for wrongful death: United States Fidelity &c. Co. v. Decker, 122 OS 285, 171 NE 333.

Action against sureties

24. Where a removed administrator has settled with the court, and the balance in his hands is ascertained, suit may be sustained against his sureties without obtaining a separate judgment against him: Treasurer of Franklin County v. McIlvain, 5 O 200.

26. Where an executor gives a new bond under the provisions of former GC § 10861 (see now RC § 2109.18) et seq, the sureties thereon are liable to a succeeding administrator, cum testamento, for assets embezzled by the executor before the new bond was given: Foster v. Wise, 46 OS 20, 16 NE 687, 15 Am St 542 [Slagle v. Entrekin, 44 OS 637, followed, and Eichelberger v. Gross, 42 OS 549, distinguished]; see also Gardner v. Ashbrook, 53 OS 678, 44 NE 1136; Smith v. Worley, 12 App 367.

Finding of probate court of amount due

31. Unless an appeal has been taken, or the judgment reversed, the amount found due by the probate court is conclusive, in the settlement of the administrator's account, as against the bondsmen: Slagle v. Entrekin, 44 OS 637, 10 NE 675; see also Gardner v. Ashbrook, 53 OS 678, 44 NE 1136.

Jurisdiction

36. The common pleas court is without jurisdiction over an action brought by an executor against his co-executor for an accounting. Such an issue must be to and finally determined by the probate court: Loney v. Walker, 8 App 256, 27 OCA 543, 29 CD 418.

§ 2113.23 Sales of former executor or administrator valid. (GC § 10509-24)

When letters of administration are revoked, when an executor or administrator, or administrator with the will annexed, is removed, resigns, or dies, when a will is declared invalid, or when an election to take under section 2105.06 of the Revised Code is made by or for a surviving spouse, all previous sales, leases, encumbrances, whether of real or personal property, made lawfully and in good faith by the executor or administrator, or administrator with the will annexed, and with good faith on the part of the purchasers, and all lawful acts done in the settlement of the estate or execution of the will shall be valid as to such executor, administrator, administrator with the will annexed, purchasers for value in good faith, lessees for value in good faith, encumbrancers for value in good faith, all other parties dealing with said fiduciary for value in good faith, and all parties lawfully claiming by, through or under any of them. But the sums paid out or distributed to legatees or other distributees, when necessary for the proper execution of a will or administration of an estate, may be recovered from the persons receiving them.

4. [COLLECTION OF ASSETS]

§ 2113.25 Assets to be collected. (GC §§ 10509-85, 10509-86)

So far as he is able, the executor or administrator of an estate shall collect the assets and complete the administration of such estate within nine months after the date of his appointment.

Upon application of the executor or administrator and notice to the interested parties, if the probate court deems such notice necessary, the court may allow further time in which to collect assets, to convert assets into money, to pay creditors, to make distributions to legatees or distributees, to file partial, final, and distributive accounts, and to settle estates. The court, upon application of any interested party, may authorize the examination under oath in open court of the executor or administrator upon any matter relating to the administration of the estate.

HISTORY: GC §§ 10509-85, 10509-86; 114 v 320 (420); 119 v 394 (406), § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC §§ 10684, 10685.

Comment

While the executor or administrator is required to complete the administration of the estate within nine months, there is no requirement that the administration remain open for the full period of nine months. Under RC § 2113.53, the executor or administrator may complete the administration of the estate at the end of six months, if he can comply with the conditions enumerated therein. He cannot fully protect himself, however, if he makes distribution to the legatees or distributees prior to the expiration of six months.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. Where a testator provides that the amount of a legacy shall be invested in government bonds at all times and the maximum rate of interest paid on such bonds is two and one-half per cent per annum, it is not error to require the executor to pay interest at that rate instead of the statutory rate during delay in paying the legacy beginning nine months after the notice of the executor's appointment: In re Shanafelt, 164 OS 258, 58 OO 7, 129 NE(2d) 816.

2. In this state a general legacy bears interest at the statutory rate beginning nine months after the notice of the appointment of the executor unless it be clearly apparent that the testator did not so intend: In re Shanafelt, 164 OS 258, 58 OO 7, 129 NE(2d) 816; In re Rothschild, 66 OLA 237, 114 NE(2d) 143.

3. A petition filed by an administrator, alleging that plaintiff's decedent, without consideration and under undue influence exercised by the grantees, conveyed certain real property, that the conveyance was not decedent's voluntary act, and that the personal property of decedent is insufficient to pay the debts of the estate, consisting of medical and funeral expenses and costs of administration, and praying that the conveyance be set aside and the realty sold to pay debts of the estate, states a cause of action and is warranted by this section which requires an executor or administrator to collect the assets of an estate: *Miller v. Scope and effect

1. This section seems to recognize that an executor should have at least one year in which to collect assets and to ascertain the condition of the estate: Gray v. Case School, 62 OS 1, 56 NE 484.

Assets—domestic

6. Where a man eighty-three years of age, having a wife and young children, desired on account of his infirm condition to give up his farm, which had a value of about eight thousand dollars, and was persuaded to exchange it for city property, which could be occupied by himself and family and some income derived from the renting of rooms, the fact that in the exchange he received a consideration of perhaps two thousand dollars less than he gave, does not constitute such gross inadequacy as would warrant a court in giving judgment for the difference in an action brought therefor by his administrator: Lepps v. Bryson, 13 NP(NS) 33, 30 OD 571.

7. After satisfying a lien upon a seat in the New York Stock Exchange, the proceeds thereof are assets in the hands of the administrator: Bank v. Andrews, 24 NP(NS) 361.

8. For the powers and duties of an administrator of a broker with reference to stock belonging to customers, debts due from customers, etc., see Bank v. Andrews, 24 NP(NS) 361.

9. An administrator of an insolvent estate may maintain a suit in equity to recover personal property transferred by the decedent in fraud of his creditors. "Assets" means property, real or personal, tangible or intangible, legal or equitable, which can be made available for the payment of debts: Insurance Co. v. Bank, 173 Fed 398.

—Foreign

14. An action cannot be maintained by an administrator appointed under the laws of this state, to recover money, the proceeds of lands lying in Pennsylvania (the property of the intestate), which were sold by a guardian as the property of his wards, on the order of the orphans' court of that state, for as the administrator could not reach the lands there, he cannot reach the proceeds: Donley v. Shields, 14 O 359; see also Meehan v. Burr, 58 OS 689, 51 NE 1099.

15. An administrator appointed in this state cannot maintain an action in this state, under the laws of the state of Illinois, authorizing the personal representative of a person who comes to his death by the wrongful act, neglect or default of another, to maintain an action against such other for damages, for the benefit of the widow or next of kin of such deceased person: Woodward v. Michigan, S. &c. R. Co., 10 OS 121.

Collection

20. It is the administrator's duty to collect a note and mortgage due the estate (former GC § 10684 [see now RC § 2113.25] et seq), and he cannot accept conveyance of realty in satisfaction thereof; he cannot credit his account with expenses of transaction nor list the realty conveyed as part of the estate: In re Tredway, 29 App 265, 163 NE 223.

21. An action by an administrator to recover of a railroad company compensation and damages for wrongful taking and appropriating lands of the decedent during his lifetime, cannot be maintained for the reason that such wrongful taking did not divest the decedent of his title to the land, and the land, therefore, descended at his death to his heirs: Lawrence R. Co. v. O'Harra, 50 OS 667, 36 NE 14.

22. A collection of assets means that the personal property shall be reduced to money, and after the payment of all debts and the collection of all assets, then the estate is ready for distribution. The only thing that the statute contemplates as assets for distribution is money: Young v. Roberts, 7 CC 105, 3 CD 685 [affirmed, without report, 54 OS 622].

23. Only when there is collusion between the administrator and defendants may the heir or next of kin of the deceased bring an action to recover assets of the estate, joining the administrator as a party defendant: Porter v. Doppes, 12 App 391.

Procedure

28. If a clause in a will authorizes the executor "to safely invest all monies," and such executor is shown to have received assets of greater value than the property which he owns at the time of his death, it will be presumed that he acted lawfully and in pursuance of his authority, and that he held such property in trust for the beneficiaries under such will: Hoehn v. Hoehn, 17 CC(NS) 113, 32 CD 53.

29. Probate courts being courts of plenary and exclusive jurisdiction in the matter of appointing administrators, their records cannot be collaterally impeached; hence, in an action by an administrator of a deceased partner for an accounting of partnership property by the surviving partner, the right of plaintiff to maintain the action cannot be raised: Peters v. Firestone, 12 NP(NS) 609, 22 OD 296.

§ 2113.26 Contents of application. (GC § 10509-87)

An application made by an executor or administrator under section 2113.25 of the Revised Code shall set forth the grounds of the application, the amount of money in the hands of the executor or administrator applicable on the debts of the deceased, and that he has used due diligence in performing the duties enumerated therein. Such application shall be supported by the affidavit of the executor or administrator.

§ 2113.27 Extension of time limited. (GC § 10509-88)

The probate court shall not at any one time grant an extension of more than six months from the date of application under sections 2113.25 and 2113.26 of the Revised Code, except that in cases where the estate is subject to estate or inheritance taxes which cannot be determined and paid within six months, the court may grant an extension for such longer period as it deems proper. The office of the executor or administrator shall not cease with the time allowed by law or the court for the performance of the duties enumerated in such sections.

HISTORY: GC § 10509-88; 114 v 320 (420); 119 v 394 (406), § 1. Eff 10-1-53. Analogous to former GC §§ 10688, 10689.

Comment

The court may grant an extension of more than six months if the estate is subject to estate or inheritance taxes which cannot be determined and paid within such period. As the final determination of liability for the federal estate tax usually requires from one to two years, and frequently more than two years, the committee was of the opinion that an executor or administrator in such case should not be required to seek an extension of time every six months.

The former requirement (prior to August 22, 1941) that the time shall not be extended beyond three years has been eliminated.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

1. The time allowed for the collection of assets may be extended for a period of five years from and after the date of the administration bond: Bray v. Darby, 82 OS 47, 91 NE 861; see also Royer v. Hall, 82 OS 453, 92 NE 1122.

2. The authority of an executor or administrator to represent the estate, unless terminated in one of the modes provided by statute, continues until the estate is fully settled. The probate court, for good cause, may remove him, or accept his resignation. But while assets of the estate remain in his hands unadministered, his authority to administer the same is not extinguished by an order, made upon what purports to be the settlement of his final account, directing that he be discharged from his trust: Weyer v. Watt, 48 OS 545, 28 NE 670.

3. Though an administrator has filed his final account, and though the estate has been finally settled and closed, the title to stocks, bonds, and securities belonging to the intestate and fraudulently concealed from the administrator remains in the administrator, and the intestate's sole heir cannot sue for their recovery, where they have not been distributed to him by the probate court, or filed in court for his benefit with the right to sue thereon, as is permitted by former GC § 10701 (repealed, 114 v 320, 475): Puder v. Agler, 242 Fed 95, 15 OLR 433, 62 Bull 410.

4. Where an administrator collected all the assets that were then collectible and more than twenty years thereafter assets became collectible, he was still administrator of the estate and could collect the assets: Taylor v. Thorn, 29 OS 569.

§ 2113.28 Time allowed to collect assets not to defer account. (GC § 10509-171)
